U. S. Congress.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 79th CONGRESS SECOND SESSION

VOLUME 92—PART 8

JULY 19, 1946, TO AUGUST 2, 1946
(PAGES 9397 TO 10792)

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE, WASHINGTON, 1946

DEPOSITED BY THE
UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
2-28-47

United States of America

Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 79th CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

SENATE

FRIDAY, JULY 19, 1946

(Legislative day of Friday, July 5, 1946)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

Very Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., Ph. D., LL. D., Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

Almighty and omniscient God, inspired by a realization of Thy sovereignty and guided by the noblest traditions of our Republic, we place ourselves before Thee in humble adoration and in earnest supplication. We thank Thee, beneficent Lord, for Thy manifold kindness to our land and to our people, and we beg Thee to keep us ever mindful of Thy divine providence. We penitently ask Thy forgiveness of our defections from Thy law and beg Thee to keep us attentive and submissive to Thy holy will. We confidently hail Thee for help in these serious days of national and international readjustment. Continue, dear God, to bless with enlightenment and courage this most august legislative body in this world. Bestow on its Members Thy heavenly grace, strength, and light, that they may exalt right above might, justice above greed, love above hatred, trust above suspicion, and sacrifice above selfishness. To these honorable legislators we of this Republic have entrusted our earthly security and happiness. To Thee, O God of men and of nations, we entrust them and the complete fulfillment of their unparalleled responsibility. Guide them, bless them, and protect them, dear God our Father, in the work of this day and forever.

All this we ask Thee in the name of Thy Divine Son Jesus. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Thursday, July 18, 1946, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries.

EQUAL RIGHTS FOR MEN AND WOMEN

The Senate resumed consideration of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 61) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relative to equal rights for men and women.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair reads the following unanimous-consent agreement:

Ordered, by unanimous consent, That the Senate on Friday, July 19, 1946, at 1 o'clock p. m., proceed to vote upon Senate Joint Resolution 61, without the intervention of any other legislative matter, the time of debate to be equally divided and controlled by the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. RADCLIFFE], for the proponents, and the junior Senator from Utah [Mr. MURDOCK], for the opponents.

The Senator from Maryland.

Mr. RADCLIFFE. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes of my time to the Senator from Delaware.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Delaware is recognized.

Mr. TUNNELL. Mr. President, I desire to express myself with reference to the pending equal-rights amendment, as it is called. In one form or another, I have been connected with this amendment since the time of my nomination for the Senate. At that time it was a part of the platform on which I ran for election to the Senate, and it was stressed at the convention. Later on it was a part of the platform adopted by two other State conventions. In 1944 it was a part of the Democratic platform at Chicago. I was a member of the committee on platform which wrote that plank. So I have been connected with this amendment in one form or another since 1940.

The language of this proposed amendment is worthy of note:

> Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex.

The amendment does not refer to any increase of rights, but prohibits the denial or cutting short of the equality of rights. So it seems to me that in the debate we have in a sense gotten away from the idea which is expressed in the amendment itself, the argument being largely directed toward the idea that it cuts down rights. We have heard it said that women would lose the rights they now have. On the contrary, the amendment would prevent the cutting down or reduction of the equality of rights, as I understand it. I think some persons, perhaps, entertain a wrong idea as to its purpose. I believe that there is nothing in the suggested amendment which would have the effect which many sincere people fear it might have.

Mention has been made of what organizations favor this amendment, and what do not. I do not think any large organization is unanimous either in its approval or disapproval of this proposal. It is a resolution that was endorsed by both the Republican and Democratic parties in their national platforms, and yet, I dare say, both Republicans and Democrats in the United States will be found on each side of this issue. So when we say that a certain organization favors it, we do not mean that; we mean that it has by some formal resolution placed itself on that side; but there are exceptions and there are those who disagree with the formal resolution. I think it can be pretty generally stated the women that have endorsed it are actually in favor of it, and I think that the national platforms of the two great political parties place those parties in a position where they cannot deny their support of the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator from Delaware has expired.

Mr. RADCLIFFE. Mr. President, I will yield 3 minutes further to the Senator from Delaware, as I should like very much indeed to have him follow out the argument he is making in such an interesting manner.

Mr. TUNNELL. I thank the Senator. It seems to me that when the two great political parties endorse a proposition of this kind there is at least some ground of agreement between them. So through the 1944 campaign this question was not an issue, having been agreed upon by the two great parties in the only way they have of expressing their position.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TUNNELL. I yield.

Mr. MURDOCK. Does not the Senator think that, so far as the Republican Members are concerned, the people completely released them from the pledge at the last Presidential election?

Mr. TUNNELL. They might have been released. At the same time, they were themselves in the position of having expressed themselves, so that, while the people might not have very much complaint against them, their own membership might have a ground for complaint if they did not follow their own pronouncement to the country of what they actually believed or would do. After all, what are party platforms for, if not for the purpose of indicating what the party would do if placed in power? The people certainly did not release the Democratic Party, and the Democratic Party is bound to the people. The Republican Party is bound to its own members, at least, and to those who supported the Republican Party in the election. I think we take in pretty nearly the Nation when we include the Democratic and the Republican Parties.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TUNNELL. I yield.

Mr. BREWSTER. The Senator realizes that there were some of us who were not elected on that platform, does he not?

Mr. TUNNELL. I never knew what the Republicans were elected on, to tell the truth.

Mr. BREWSTER. I think the Senator from Delaware must be misinformed, because he came to my State in 1940, when I was a candidate, and he made very clear to the people why I should not be elected; but they did not accept his suggestion. However, in the platform at that time there was no provision on the subject now before us. So I want it to be clear, as to those of us who were in that class, but, unfortunately perhaps, survived the Senator's attack, that we are not subject to the embarrassment which he alleges of having been elected on a platform that pledged this action.

Mr. TUNNELL. I do not know whether the Senator supported the Republican ticket in 1944 or not. I do not know whether he was one of those who endorsed the platform of the Republican Party in 1944, though it was generally supposed that he was leaning that way. Certainly that platform was specific enough so that even the people of Maine, I think, understood what was meant by the Republican platform.

Mr. President, I believe pledges in platforms have some effect in all parts of the Nation, and, indeed, have a binding effect on those of us who ally ourselves with these organizations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator from Maryland yield to me a moment?

Mr. RADCLIFFE. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD, in connection with the debate on the pending question, several communications I have received on the subject.

There being no objection, the communications were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS,
MINIMUM WAGE COMMISSION,
Boston, September 26, 1945.

Hon. DAVID I. WALSH,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR WALSH: A letter has just reached me stating that a hearing on the proposed equal-rights amendment will be held on Friday, September 28, before the subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The proposed equal-rights amendment has been of real concern to me, since I foresee the nullification of our protective State labor legislation covering women employees. It is quite likely that an amendment of this kind would nullify the State minimum-wage law, maximum-hour law, night-work limitations, lunch periods, and other such beneficial legislation, which the women of the Commonwealth have enjoyed over a period of years.

I have been keenly opposed to this legislation, and last spring accepted the chairmanship of the Massachusetts Committee Opposed to the Equal Rights Amendment. A list of the officials of organizations who are members of the executive committee of our State organization is attached.

I am enclosing a copy of a letter which I have sent to Senator CARL HATCH, chairman, subcommittee on the equal-rights amendment, which states reasons for my opposition, and I am also enclosing a copy of an editorial which appeared in the Boston Herald on Sunday, September 16, opposing the amendment.

I trust that we may depend upon your assistance in helping us to preserve the protective legislation which has been secured for the benefit of our women in this State during the past 30 years.

Sincerely yours,

HATTIE H. SMITH,
Assistant Commissioner.

SEPTEMBER 25, 1946.

Senator CARL HATCH,
Chairman, Subcommittee on the Equal-Rights Amendment,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR HATCH: The Massachusetts committee opposed to the equal-rights amendment urges the subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee to vote against the favorable report of the Joint Resolutions Committee, Senate Joint Resolution 61, which proposes an equal-rights amendment to the Constitution. We request this action because:

1. The proposed equal-rights amendment will not help our working women, since it will eliminate the protective measures which many of the industrial States now have. Sweatshops would prosper, and unsatisfactory health conditions would prevail. Massachusetts would find its protective labor laws covering women unlawful. The minimum-wage law, the maximum-hour law, night-work limitations, lunch-period requirements, and other such beneficial legislation would automatically be canceled.

2. The equal-rights amendment would nullify the present laws designed to protect women as mothers and potential mothers and thereby threaten the fundamental structure of the family.

3. It would cause confusion in regard to many of the Federal laws, such as those applying to the old-age and survivors' insurance benefits of the Social Security Act. The Massachusetts workmen's compensation law would also be affected, since there would be a question as to whether or not wives would receive benefit as at the present time.

4. The amendment would prevent the enactment of any future State or Federal legislation which would not apply equally to men and women.

In our opinion, it is not possible to legislate legal equality between the sexes, since men and women are not identical, and their needs, therefore, cannot be equal.

Officials of the following list of organizations are members of the executive committee of our State organization. These include Boston College School of Social Work, Dorothy Book, dean; Boston YWCA, Mrs. Claire Brightman, industrial secretary; Boston Women's Trade Union League, Mrs. Rose Norwood, president; Consumers League of Massachusetts, Margaret Wiesman, executive secretary; League of Catholic Women, Mrs. John J. Hickey; Massachusetts League of Women Voters, Mrs. Ruth Lurie, president; Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, Thomas Wilkinson, acting secretary; National Council of Negro Women, Mrs. Harriet Hall; United Electrical, Radio, and Machine Workers of America, Richard Linsley, interstate representative.

Many of these groups, over a period of 25 years, have been vitally interested in the extension of protective labor legislation for women, and they feel that the equal-rights amendment would be detrimental rather than progressive.

Your cooperation in bringing about an unfavorable report to the Joint Judiciary Committee is urgently sought.

Yours very truly,

HATTIE H. SMITH,
Assistant Commissioner.

[From the Boston Herald of September 16, 1945]

EQUAL RIGHTS AGAIN

A decision of the Senate Judiciary Committee to remove its wartime ban against consideration of constitutional amendments may invite renewed activity from the champions of "equal rights for women." Seldom has any measure attracted such staunch support and at the same time such fierce antagonism from the very persons it is designed to aid.

This amendment proclaims that "equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States nor by any State on account of sex." In this form it amounts to a two-edged sword. Without doubt, it would remove certain undesirable discriminations against women in some States. At the same time, it would invalidate legislation enacted after great struggles to give women certain merited preferences.

"What are 'equal rights'?" ask five members of the House Judiciary Committee in offering their minority views on this proposal. "How will 'rights' be distinguished from 'duties', and 'duties' from 'obligations'? Do 'equal rights' mean accepting men's standards in everything? Or women's? Would the amendment itself abrogate existing laws? Will Congress have to legislate further so that the respective States conform to what the Federal notion of 'equality of rights' may be?"

One defect of this well-intentioned proposal is that it is too broad. It advances a worthy but poorly defined principle in many wide and different fields. It lumps social, economic, and legal problems together. Equal rights may mean the receipt of a man's wages, or it may mean the privilege of paying alimony. It may concern the legality of working at certain hours or the transfer of real property.

There has been so much trouble, particularly in the last few years, with blanket legislation, that the practice is properly frowned upon. Certainly the proposal for an equal rights amendment falls within this category. As minority members of the House Judiciary Committee have said: "Using the Constitution for a broom with which to sweep away indiscriminately the good with the bad is neither sound law nor sane behavior."

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR,
Washington, D. C., March 11, 1946.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I note that Senate Joint Resolution 61 was reported on March 5, 1946, by the Judiciary Committee.

This is the equal-rights amendment to the Constitution.

The American Federation of Labor has been actively opposing the equal-rights amendment since its 1922 convention, which adopted the following:

"The enactment of laws granting the right of suffrage to women does not carry with it in all States all other political rights, and there are on the statute books various laws discriminating against women as to property rights, guardianship rights, naturalization rights and other rights now guaranteed to men. The A. F. of L. hereby declares itself in favor of the removal of all discriminations against women and advocates specific laws to this end. We disapprove and oppose the blanket legislation for this purpose because such legislation is necessarily drawn in general terms which must be subject to judicial construction and therefore place in jeopardy labor laws for women."

Succeeding conventions took similar action and at the most recent convention of the American Federation of Labor (1944) the following was adopted:

"Whereas, There has developed during the last two decades a movement which through a so-called equal-rights amendment to the Constitution has sought to deny to women homemakers and to women industrial workers the benefit of the laws which seek to assure to the child the support of his father, and to the workers the social protection of much needed labor legislation: Therefore be it

"Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled does reaffirm its support of every move which would afford women actual political and economic equality, and does therefore oppose the so-called equal-rights amendment which would vitiate family support laws and destroy all social protection now afforded to women and to the family, under the laws of the several States and the Federal Government * * *."

We have consistently fought for State and Federal legislation giving special protection for women such as minimum wage laws, social and physical protective laws, special leave at maternity, etc.

We do not feel such laws discriminate against women and realize that the equal-rights amendment will wipe out all such protective laws.

We therefore oppose it and solicit your support in opposition to it.

Sincerely yours,

W. GREEN,
President, American Federation of Labor.

MASSACHUSETTS LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS,
Boston, September 27, 1945.

Hon. DAVID I. WALSH,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR WALSH: We understand the equal-rights amendment is to be heard before the Senate Subjudiciary Committee on Friday. The Massachusetts League of Women Voters, while seeking every opportunity to remove legal discriminations against women, is unalterably opposed to this blanket method of removing them.

We hope that when opportunity offers, you will vote against the amendment.

Sincerely yours,

Mrs. W. LEE USTICK,
Chairman, Structure and Administration of Government.

BOSTON, MASS., September 26, 1945.

Senator DAVID I. WALSH,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

On behalf of 60,000 members in Massachusetts we urge your opposition to the so-called equal-rights amendment (S. J. Res. 61). Kindly record our organization's opposition with the Senate subcommittee which meets Friday, September 28. Would appreciate your support and cooperation and notification from you for presentation to our membership.

PAUL E. SEYMOUR,
President, New England District Council, U. E. R. & M. W. A., CIO.

LABOR,
Washington, D. C., September 7, 1944.

Senator DAVID I. WALSH,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: I am sending you a marked copy of this week's issue of Labor, so you may have a chance to examine an article on the so-called equal-rights amendment. I believe the article expresses the convictions of members of organized labor and also of those outside the labor movement who are interested in the welfare of working women.

With a world of good wishes, I remain,

Sincerely,

EDWARD KEATING,
Manager.

MASSACHUSETTS CONFERENCE OF SOCIAL WORK,
Boston, Mass., October 4, 1945.

Senator DAVID I. WALSH,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR WALSH: We know you will be interested in the opposition of the Massachusetts Conference of Social Work to the so-called equal-rights amendment.

The members of the conference are in touch with the families of our State and we believe this amendment, if passed, would negate protective legislation already in operation for the protection of women.

Enclosed is a copy of our bulletin with the recommendation of the Social Action Committee to the membership last November. This was adopted at the annual meeting of the conference.

Very truly yours,

MARENDA E. PRENTIS.

CAMBRIDGE LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS,
Cambridge, Mass., January 10, 1945.

The Honorable DAVID I. WALSH,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR WALSH: The Cambridge League of Women Voters continues to oppose passage of the equal-rights amendment.

This amendment threatens family support and labor legislation for which we have worked many years.

We favor the removal of discrimination against women, where it exists, by specific legislation rather than by blanket amendment which in the opinion of many experts would create confusion as to the interpretation of many of our existing laws.

Very truly yours,

PEARL K. WISE
(Mrs. Henry Wise),
President.

RUTH H. ROMER
(Mrs. Alfred S. Romer),
Chairman, Government and Its Operation.

WOMEN'S TRADE UNION LEAGUE OF WORCESTER,
Worcester, Mass., October 22, 1944.

Hon. DAVID I. WALSH,
Clinton, Mass.

DEAR SENATOR WALSH: The Women's Trade Union League of Worcester are very much opposed to the so-called equal-rights amendment bill, and sincerely hope we may rely on you to use all in your power to defeat this measure when it comes up for action. Enclosed find copy of our Bulletin which explains in full our stand on this measure.

Sincerely yours,

CECELIA NICHOLSON,
President, and also Legislative Chairman.

SOMERVILLE LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS,
Somerville, Mass., January 3, 1945.

Hon. DAVID I. WALSH,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: The Somerville League of Women Voters urges you to vote against the proposed equal-rights amendment which we understand is to come up for action soon.

We feel that this amendment threatens family support and labor legislation to protect women and children for which the league has worked for many years.

Yours truly,

SUSAN MANLY
(Mrs. L. F. Manly),
Secretary.

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF JEWISH WOMEN,
Worcester, Mass., June 26, 1945.

Senator DAVID I. WALSH,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We believe the proposed equal-rights amendment is a misnomer and that if adopted would have practically no constructive value and would completely destroy protective legislation for women.

We oppose such a bill and feel that equal opportunities for women can be promoted by removing discriminations against women by specific bills for specific ills in each State.

Very truly yours,

HELENE Z. OSTROW,
Chairman of Social Legislation.

MASSACHUSETTS STATE CIO,
INDUSTRIAL UNION COUNCIL,
Boston, March 21, 1945.

Hon. DAVID I. WALSH,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

HONORABLE SIR: Massachusetts has always been foremost among the States protecting women and children against overlong hours of labor and unfavorable working conditions that would be detrimental to the health of its citizens.

If the so-called equal-rights amendment to the Constitution is passed it will wipe protective legislation for women off the statute books. The CIO opposes this amendment as harmful to the health and well-being of working women. We feel that the proponents of this legislation are either misguided or are deliberately trying to destroy the labor standards of our Nation.

We therefore ask that you vote against this constitutional amendment when and if it reaches the floor of the Senate.

Respectfully yours,

JOSEPH SALERNO,
President.
SIDNEY S. GRANT,
Legislative Agent.

BOSTON, MASS., September 27, 1945.

Hon. DAVID I. WALSH:

The Massachusetts League of Women Voters wishes to register opposition to the equal-rights amendment.

Mrs. MOSES H. LAURIE,
President.

Mr. RADCLIFFE. Mr. President, so much has been said in regard to the pending question that it is not likely anything new will be presented which will throw any fresh light upon it. I wish, however, to emphasize the fact that the subject has been discussed very fully, that many organizations have taken action in regard to it, that the platforms of the Democratic Party and the Republican Party in 1944 came out flat-footedly and unqualifiedly for the submission of the amendment, and that the President of the United States is in favor of it. Many leading clergymen—Catholics, Protestants, and Jews—have endorsed it. The governors of many States are in favor of it. For instance, let me cite the fact that the Legislature of the State of New York, by unanimous vote, has approved the submission of the amendment to the people.

I refer to these facts now, not because they represent all the expressions or views of the people in regard to the proposal, but merely to indicate that when a proposed constitutional amendment has received the attention this has received, certainly its submission to the people is justified. That is all the joint resolution calls for. Such support not only prompts but requires that the people of the United States should have the right to express their views upon it.

Irrespective of whether one is in favor of equal rights for women or is opposed, I think we must all feel that if we are to give adherence to what has been the custom and practice throughout the country, certainly, at any rate, the people are entitled to have an opportunity to express their views on this subject. As I have said, that is all the joint resolution calls for, and certainly it is a most reasonable expectation.

Mr. President, much has been said with regard to the fact that women might lose certain privileges which they now possess. I do not know how anyone can make a categorical statement on that subject. Let us assume that possibly they may lose something. The question we must consider is whether they will gain more than they will lose. There are some, whose opinions justly have great weight and force, who believe that what the women would lose, granting they would lose anything at all, would be outweighed, and outweighed heavily, by what they would gain.

Mr. President, I have been asked by the Senator from Florida to yield to him, and I yield 5 minutes to him.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, in the limited time we have available, it is not possible to do more than make a concluding suggestion about the pending measure.

I think everyone understands substantially what the issue is. The question is whether the United States Senate is willing to let the people of this country, through their legislatures, vote on this proposed constitutional amendment. As Senators have already said on this floor, I think all of us should indulge the presumption in favor of our people having a chance to vote on this issue. After all, the legislatures are capable of making an intelligent decision on the question. They will speak for the people. They are close to the people. The people in the several States will have an opportuity to express their views to their legislatures. They could make it an issue in the State legislative campaigns all over the Nation, and three-fourths of the States, through their legislatures, will have to vote favorably upon the amendment before it can be incorporated in the Federal Constitution.

Mr. President, surely with those safeguards around it, since it will not become effective until ratified by the people through their legislatures in three-fourths of the States, the appeal made to one's sentiment of justice and fair play, to give the women, to the mothers of America an equal status before the law with men, should encourage the Members of the Senate to vote favorably upon the amendment.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Aside from its merits, the people have a right to act on the proposed amendment, and it could not be effective until three-fourths of the legislatures adopted it. The fact that the Senate passed the joint resolution would not make the amendment effective.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. CHAVEZ. It still would have to be submitted.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, the Senator is correct.

Mr. CHAVEZ. All we are doing is to let the people in the several States pass judgment on whether the amendment should be made a part of the Constitution.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator is absolutely correct. The contrary is that the States shall not have an opportunity to vote upon it. The contrary is that the legislatures of the Nation shall not have a voice in this important matter.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. MURDOCK. It seems to me that the Senator from Florida in the argument he now makes, that the legislatures of the country should be given an opportunity to pass on this question, overlooks entirely the provisions of the Constitution that a constitutional amendment may be initiated "on the application of the legislatures of two-thirds of the several States." Is that not provided?

Mr. PEPPER. That is a possible way of initiating a constitutional amendment.

Mr. MURDOCK. We have an area of marital relations, we have an area of property rights, we have several legislative areas involving the relations between men and women which have supposedly been within the province of the States ever since the Union was created. The fathers of our country wrote into the Constitution a provision allowing the States, if ever they saw fit, by their legislatures, to initiate amendments to the Constitution.. They have not seen fit to do that on this subject. Now when the Senator deplores the fact that the legislatures will not even be given a chance to act on this proposal, in my opinion, he fails to take cognizance of the fact that if the State legislatures thought that the legislative area here involved was one which the States wanted to give up and turn over to the Federal Government, they themselves could initiate the proposal rather than to depend upon the Congress to do it for them.

Mr. PEPPER. I thank the able Senator from Utah for the suggestion, but I think he will notice also, if he examines the constitutional provision to which he refers, that the procedure by which the State may initiate a constitutional amendment is far more tedious, laborious, and lengthy than the procedure of the Congress itself submitting the matter to the States.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. While it is true that the Consitution provides that method for initiating an amendment to the Constitution, it has never been adopted or used in regard to any amendment that has ever been proposed to the Constitution.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HOEY in the chair). The time of the Senator from Florida has expired.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President the point made by the Senator from Kentucky was the point I wanted to make.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. President, in answer to the distinguished Senator from Kentucky, our able majority leader, I suppose the fact that the States have never resorted to the initiation of constitutional amendments is used here as an argument that they never will or that they should not, because as the Senator from Florida has indicated, it is a rather complicated procedure. To me the situation seems to be that the States are rather jealous of their rights. They do not like to relinquish them voluntarily without being sure that they need the help of the Federal Government. I have heretofore stated, Mr. President, that ever since the establishment of the Federal Union, ever since the States have been members of that Union, the area into which we are now trying to intrude the Federal Government has been looked upon as an area of legislation that the States could very well take care of.

The Senator from Florida yesterday made a very significant statement when he said that the States have seen fit in their legislative processes to make certain distinctions. How right and true the Senator's statement is. Mr. President, I want to say a word further about the Senator. I have heard him debate on this floor time and again. I am always impressed with the eloquent lucidity of the distinguished Senator, with his ability to point out persuasively the crux of any question. I have never seen him on the floor of the Senate in any serious trouble in debate until yesterday on this proposition. This indicated to me that for once at least the distinguished and liberal Senator from Florida was advocating the wrong side of the question.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MURDOCK. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. I am grateful for the kindliness of the comment of my distinguished friend from Utah. I want to ask the able Senator this question: If the principle argument against this proposed constitutional amendment is that it invades a domain of the States in respect to marital relations and kindred matters, is not the fact that the amendment will never become effective until ratified by three-fourths of the States, through their State legislatures, and is not that an adequate safeguard against our invading the States in this field without their approval and without their acquiescence?

Mr. MURDOCK. In answer to that question, Mr. President, I will say that if the argument that adequate safeguard is provided by the mere fact that three-fourths of the States must ratify, either by their legislatures or by conventions, is carried to its logical conclusion, then every proposition that is brought before the Senate and proposed as a constitutional amendment should be adopted by the Senate and by the House and submitted to the States, and the Congress by so doing would absolutely absolve itself from any responsibility, because, as the Senator states, the legislatures or the conventions, whichever mode of ratification is adopted, would have the final say.

In my opinion, Mr. President, the writers of the Constitution did not intend that that should be done. The writers of the Constitution intended that the Congress itself should be reasonably sure that the proposition had merit before it should be submitted to the States following a two-thirds vote of the Congress.

Mr. President, I again state that the areas of legislation that are involved here, that is, marital relations, property rights, the responsibility of men for the family and for the children, are areas which in my opinion can be best taken care of by the State legislatures and not by the Federal Government.

Mr. RADCLIFFE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MURDOCK. I will yield in a moment. In the debates on OPA, Mr. President, we have heard statements made that the Federal Government is constantly intruding itself into affairs that should be handled by the States. Then we find the same Senators who are constantly taking that position, now taking the position that here is another area, a new area, into which the Federal Government should intrude itself in derogation of the rights of the several States of the Union.

I now yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. RADCLIFFE. I am sure the Senator from Utah must have had a distinction in mind. He asked a little while ago if every proposition that is put up to the Congress must be submitted to the people? I call attention to the fact that this situation is a very unusual one. The platforms of both political parties have endorsed the proposed constitutional amendment, and the governors of numerous States, and many State legislatures have endorsed it. It is not analogous to the usual proposition that comes before the Congress, for it has a warrant, almost a mandate, from both political parties and from other responsible sources.

Mr. MURDOCK. My answer to the distinguished Senator is that if he can find anything in the platform of either political party to which he refers that supports the amendment that is now proposed, then I shall be very much surprised. That question was very well debated here last evening, and I thought the Senators who took the position that they were not bound by the platforms because the proposed amendment does not conform to the provisions of the respective platforms, were absolutely correct in their position. I think the Senator from Maryland must be rather hard put to find an argument to support his position, when he has to advert to the party platforms instead of the merits of the proposition itself.

Mr. RADCLIFFE. Not at all, Mr. President.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. President, I desire to refer to a statement made by Mr. Justice Frankfurter in 1923, which in my opinion very well puts the proposition that we now have before us. I shall not take time to read it all; but, quoting from his statement, we find this:

> Nature made man and woman different.

I believe even the proponents of the amendment will agree to that statement, that Nature made man and woman different—

> The law must accommodate itself to the immutable differences of nature. For some purposes men and women are persons, and the law should, for these purposes, treat them as persons, subjecting them to the same duties and conferring upon them the same rights. But for other vital purposes men and women are men and women—and the law must treat them as men and women and, therefore, subject them to different and not the same rules of legal conduct.

That is the statement of Mr. Justice Frankfurter, pointing out to us something we all know, that men and women are different. In my State we have gone a long way, not only toward giving women equality with men, but going far beyond that, giving women equality and then giving the mother and the daughter the protections and privileges which are absolutely essential in our American life to enable them to fulfill the functions ordained by Nature and God.

Some Senators have the idea that by a constitutional amendment we can do away entirely with the differences between men and women as we find them created and endowed by Nature. Mr. President, we cannot do that by legislation. In my opinion, our States have done a good job in legislatively treating the difference between men and women. In my State woman has her protection as a mother; woman has her protection as a wife, as she should have; and I am unwilling, in the name of equality of rights under the Federal Constitution, to repeal all those protections and privileges so necessary to womanhood.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MURDOCK. I yield.

Mr. GUFFEY. Does not the Senator's argument tend to prove that the female sex is inferior to the male?

Mr. MURDOCK. My answer is emphatically no. Such a position is wholly foreign to my thinking and philosophy and I am sure nothing I have said could be so construed.

Mr. GUFFEY. That is what the Senator said.

Mr. MURDOCK. Of course, the Senator has the privilege of construing my remarks in any way he sees fit, but I challenge his construction as obviously inaccurate, incorrect and unfounded.

Mr. GUFFEY. I cannot see any other construction of the Senator's remarks.

Mr. MURDOCK. I am not responsible for the Senator's inability to construe my remarks correctly and as they are intended.

All I am saying is that God made a difference between man and woman. Our State legislatures have recognized the difference; and I now tell the Senator that even if we adopt this amendment and it is ratified by three-fourths of the States, the Congress cannot eliminate or eradicate the differences between man and woman which are ordained by Nature.

In my State women are precluded from going underground to work. Some women may wish to go underground. If we adopt this constitutional amendment, in my opinion those laws and all similar laws for the protection of women are repealed. In the amendment itself we provide that it shall not take effect upon ratification. Not only must it be ratified, but the States are given 3 years after ratification—to do what? To conform their laws to this amendment. So when Senators rise on this floor and say that the protections and privileges which are granted to mothers and other women by our State legislatures will not be affected at all, I cannot understand that argument.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks a statement made by Mrs. Roosevelt and certain other prominent and distinguished women.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

> A joint statement, headed by the name of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, was today issued by 10 national women leaders opposing the approval by Congress of the proposed equal-rights amendment.
>
> Following is the statement which is signed by Mrs. Roosevelt and by Frances Perkins, Virginia Gildersleeve, Carrie Chapman Catt, Susan B. Anthony II, Anna Lord Strauss, Mary Anderson, Mary McLeod Bethune, Rose Schneiderman, Cornelia Bryce Pinchot:
>
> "We believe in equality of opportunity for women, but we oppose the so-called equal-rights amendment. The adoption of this amendment would wipe out all State legislation which has established minimum wages and maximum hours for women workers and improved their working conditions; it would invalidate provisions of the Social Security Act benefiting women as wives and mothers, and veterans' and workmen's compensation laws providing allowances for widows and wives of aged or disabled workers.
>
> " 'Equal rights' is a deceptive slogan. The proposed amendment would not accomplish the purposes for which it is intended. It will not, for instance, remove differences in wage rates between men and women doing the same work. We look to Congress to oppose submission to the States of the misconceived and misleading equal-rights amendment."
>
> In addition, three outstanding women Members of Congress—HELEN GAHAGAN DOUGLAS, CHASE GOING WOODHOUSE, and EMILY TAFT DOUGLAS—also joined in opposing the proposed amendment and issued the following declaration:
>
> "We are opposed to an equal-rights amendment. It will not bring about the equality of opportunity for women which we all desire, but will cause chaos in 48 States in the status of all laws relating to women. It will make it posible to wipe out the legislation which has been enacted in many States for the special needs of women in industry."

Mr. MURDOCK. I now yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON].

Mr. OVERTON. I thank the Senator. Mr. President, the proponents of this amendment are driven in their desperation to the threadbare argument that a constitutional amendment should be submitted to the people in order that the people may vote upon it, and that we ought to trust the people. That argument is used in State legislatures as well as before the Congress.

Under the Constitution we have an independent duty to perform. Both Houses of Congress must act independently and determine independently, by a two-thirds vote, that the legislation is sound. When the amendment shall have been submitted to the States for ratification, the proponents of the amendment will go before the legislatures of the States and say, "We ought to follow the advice and recommendation of the Congress of the United States, which has proposed the adoption of this amendment."

Mr. President, I have listened to as much of this debate as I could when not attending committee hearings. From what I can gather, even the proponents of this amendment entertain the view that it will result in a multiplicity of litigation. Its immediate effect is to strike with nullity all constitutional provisions, all statutory enactments, and the jurisprudence of the States and of the United States where there is any discrimination in equality of rights on account of sex.

In order, apparently, to escape this conclusion, the very able Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN] yesterday made this startling declaration in his remarks on the floor of the Senate:

> In conclusion, let us not become confused about what the proposed constitutional amendment provides. Let us not undertake to argue that it changes any law. It does not strike down any existing law, either Federal or State.

How could such an interpretation be placed upon a provision which declares the principle that equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged on account of sex? When that principle becomes a part of our Constitution any existing law or any law which may be enacted in the future contravening the provisions of the constitutional amendment is immediately and forthwith stricken with nullity.

Continuing, the able Senator from Vermont said:

> It declares a policy. It can be called a principle when it appears in the Constitution of the United States. The principle is equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex.

That is correct. Further in his remarks, he made this observation:

> The object of the proposed amendment is to provide that no law shall be passed prohibiting the principle of equal rights to a man and a woman.

I gather from such observation that the able Senator from Vermont entertains the view that the purpose of the amendment is to prohibit future discrimination by State legislatures or by the Congress; but that it matters not how much discrimination now prevails in existing law, State or Federal, such discrimination remains untouched by this amendment if it is adopted.

The able Senator from Vermont continued:

> The amendment is not self-executing.

Of course, it is self-executing. If adopted, it strikes down with nullity anything that contravenes it.

> It does not lift up anything. It does not operate itself. In order to be operative, it requires such action within the State of Vermont, for example, as its legislature may see fit to take, and within the District of Columbia such action as the Congress may take.

That deals with future legislation.

> In each instance the facts will have to be scrutinized with reference to whether the action to be taken will deny equal rights to any person on account of sex.

The able Senator from Vermont indicated very strongly in his remarks that there would be no end of litigation because, as one case after another was given to him as an illustration, he stated that he was incapable of expressing any opinion because each case would have to stand on its own bottom, and that all the facts would have to be presented to him before he reached a conclusion. It might be that under his theory a State law would be unconstitutional as it affected a particular woman and a particular man in certain relations, but it might be constitutional as it affected another woman and another man in other relations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. OVERTON. I ask the Senator from Utah whether he will yield to me 3 minutes more.

Mr. MURDOCK. Yes; I yield 3 minutes more to the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. OVERTON. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, a very clear case was presented to the Senator from Vermont in regard to maximum hours of work. In that case, the maximum hours of labor for men, under a State law, would be fixed, let us say, at 40 hours a week, and the maximum hours of work for women would be fixed, let us say, at 30 hours a week. The Senator was asked whether that would come within the inhibitions of the constitutional amendment, if adopted. He answered, "I do not know. I would have to have more facts."

But, Mr. President, what other facts is it necessary to have? The discrimination would be made because of sex, because the hours for women would be fixed at a lesser number than the hours which would be fixed for men, and obviously the discrimination would be made between the two sexes.

In answer to the argument made by the Senator from Florida that the State legislatures should have a right to pass on this question, let me say that the State legislatures are not now prohibited from enacting legislation providing equality between the sexes. They have full and untrammeled authority in that regard. If they have not followed the principle proposed by the amendment, it is because in their judgment it should not be followed in their States. Each State should have the right to determine what distinction should be made between the sexes in respect to legislative rights. The States exercise that right now. There is nothing in the Constitution of the United States that prohibits the States from exercising that sovereign right of statehood.

Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Utah for yielding to me.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 7 minutes remaining.

Mr. MURDOCK. I yield 4 minutes to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I submit the proposition that the amendment now under consideration involves a very material increase in the power of the Federal Government over the State governments. As will be recalled, the amendment provides that—

> Congress and the several States shall have power, within their respective jurisdictions, to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

There has been no other amendment to the Constitution of the United States, save only the eighteenth amendment, which by its terms, has involved the use of both the power of the States and the power of the National Government in the enforcement thereof. The eighteenth amendment provided, in that respect—

> The Congress and the several States shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Mr. President, yesterday afternoon, I read the analysis by Professor Willoughby, in his work on the Constitution of the United States, in reference to the case of Rhode Island v. Palmer (253 U. S. 250), as to the meaning of that language of the eighteenth amendment. Professor Willoughby pointed out that the Court in its majority opinion apparently accepted the view—

> (3) That Congress and the State legislatures were empowered to act independently, but, of course, under the condition that State action should not conflict or interfere with that of the National Government.

The amendment now before us omits the word "concurrent." It obviously gives to the States and to the Federal Government, each, the right to act. It inserts the words "within their respective jurisdictions." Yesterday I understood that the distinguished Senator from Maryland [Mr. RADCLIFFE] said he was inclined to the view that the words "within their respective jurisdictions" might change the effectiveness of the argument made yesterday.

Mr. President, let me call attention to the fact that in the opinion in the Minnesota Railroad Rate case, decided in 1913, Mr. Chief Justice Hughes used precisely the language, "within their respective jurisdictions," and then proceeded to show that when Congress does act, even after the States have acted, the exercise of congressional authority overrides all conflicting State legislation.

I quote again the particular portion of the opinion of Mr. Chief Justice Hughes:

> In other matters, admitting of diversity of treatment according to the special requirements of local conditions, the States may act within their respective jurisdictions until Congress sees fit to act; and, when Congress does act, the exercise of its authority overrides all conflicting State legislation.

Mr. President, I submit that under that decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, it certainly is a permissible and, I think, a logical conclusion that if the amendment now before us were to be adopted, in the whole field involving the question of denial and abridgment of rights on account of sex, although the States might legislate in that field, if the Congress did not like their legislation, Congress would be expressly vested with power to override, to use the language of Chief Justice Hughes, all conflicting State legislation."

So, Mr. President, I rise to oppose this amendment, not because of any unwillingness to recognize the merits and the importance and the tremendous power for good of womanhood, but because I think there is very great doubt whether the amendment will ultimately conduce to the good of womanhood, for the reason that in instances in which women are today possessed of greater rights than men are, under the amendment they will be reduced to an equality with them; and second, on the fundamental proposition that by the amendment now before us there would be brought about a vast increase in the field in which the Federal Government would have the power to override conflicting State legislation.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. President, I yield 1 minute to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President, 1 minute is all I desire. I wish to say that when I first came to the Senate I was asked if I favored the equal-rights amendment. Offhand, I said "Yes," because I do favor equal rights for women. But upon investigation I have found to my satisfaction, at least, that the adoption of this amendment will grant women anything but equal rights. It is impossible to grant women special privileges and at the same time to require by law that they shall have equal rights. Although I may be old fashioned, I still believe that women are entitled to special consideration in many instances.

Therefore, not being a lawyer, I have had to base my decision on the arguments which have been presented by the legal brains in this body, and for that reason I shall vote against the proposed constitutional amendment.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. President, the Senator from Maine previously asked me if I would be able to yield to him 1 minute. Does the Senator from Maine desire to speak now?

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I think I shall have trouble enough in determining how I shall vote, and so I refrain from speaking now.

Mr. MURDOCK. I still have 2 minutes to yield to any Senator who desires to speak on this side of the question.

Mr. RADCLIFFE. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. I can say all I have to say in that time.

I realize that one of the methods by which the Constitution may be amended is by a direct petition on the part of two-thirds of the legislatures of the States for Congress to submit an amendment. I imagine that provision was put into the Constitution in order to give the people, through their legislatures, an opportunity to bring to the attention of Congress desired amendments to the Constitution. That method has never been pursued. Amendments have always been submitted by the Congress, subject to the ratification of the State legislatures, or by convention, whichever Congress decided to provide for. Therefore, I do not believe that the former method of amending the Constitution, judging by the history of this country for 150 years, is a practical method of bringing about amendments to the Constitution.

Congress cannot always be certain that the States will ratify an amendment after it has been submitted. It is impossible for Congress to know in advance what the action of the States will be. After the Constitution was ratified and the United States Government was organized, at the very next session of Congress 12 amendments were submitted. Ten of them were adopted by the legislatures of the States, those amendments constituting the Bill of Rights as we now know it. The other two amendments were never adopted. There was no way by which the First Congress could know whether all 12 of the amendments would be adopted when submitted.

It is true that this is an important and far-reaching amendment. It is a controversial subject. The Senator from Missouri has called attention to the fact that if the amendment were adopted it would confer on the Federal Government power to intervene in certain matters pertaining to the rights of women in the several States. That statement is true. But if the States, under the Constitution, desire to yield that authority to the Federal Government, they may do so if three-fourths of them ratify the amendment. So I do not regard the argument of the Senator from Missouri against the submission to the people of an amendment to the Constitution as being very forceful.

In effect, there is an element of good faith involved in this amendment. Both political parties in 1944 pledged themselves to submit this amendment to the people. They did not pledge themselves to go out and seek its ratification by the State legislatures, but both political platforms, as Senators will see from perusing them, made an unequivocal pledge that, so far as they could bind their members, Senators and Representatives, such an amendment would be submitted to the approval or disapproval of the people of this country. I personally feel that the Democratic Party is under obligation to give the States an opportunity to pass on this matter. We do not know how the States will react to it. We did not know how the States would react to the child-labor amendment which has been pending before them ever since it was submitted. It has not yet been ratified. The States had a right to pass on the matter. It was an important matter when submitted.

Of course, I cannot speak for the other side of the aisle, but the plank in the Republican platform concerning this subject is as unequivocal as the one in the Democratic platform. If we who were elected on that platform, which includes myself, are to say that platforms are made to get in on and not to stand on after getting in, I am not willing to adopt such a policy.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. WHITE. The Senator has looked at the minority side and I thought at me in particular. I wish to interrupt him long enough to say that I think there is something of mutuality in connection with platforms. They offer a course of action proposed by a party, and the people of the United States indicate by their action whether they disapprove or approve the recommendation or the offer. So far as I am concerned personally, I do not consider myself bound by a platform which the people of the country have rejected, and upon which the Republican candidates who were defeated, stood.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, that statement, to me, is an ingenious argument. In other words, the identical platforms of both political parties, on one of which one party tried to be elected to power but failed, are to be repudiated. Because the Republican Party was unsuccessful, even though running on a platform which was identical in some respects to the platform of the Democratic Party, the Republican Party does not believe that it should be bound by the pledge contained in its platform.

Mr. WHITE. I do not accept Democratic platforms as my text books nor do I admit obligation to Republican platforms repudiated not by Republicans but by the people of the country.

Further, Mr. President, I wish to deny that I ran for office on a platform which was the same as that of the Democrats.

Mr. BARKLEY. Whether the Senator did or did not, I think he is just as morally bound by that platform, even though he ran on it and his party lost, as I am bound by the platform on which I ran for office and was elected.

Mr. President, I hope the amendment will be submitted to the States and that the people will be allowed to pass upon it.

Mr. RADCLIFFE. Mr. President, this is one of the most important matters that has come before the Senate in a long time. However, a situation has developed of which I think cognizance should be taken. Many Members of the Senate who have expressed an interest in the matter are absent from the Chamber today. It seems unfortunate that we must press for further consideration of the matter during their absence. Therefore I ask unanimous consent that consideration of the joint resolution be laid aside.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, the Senator is asking, as I understand, to have the pending business laid aside before the vote is taken?

Mr. RADCLIFFE. Yes.

Mr. MURDOCK. Or is he asking unanimous consent to have the joint resolution recommitted to the Judiciary Committee?

Mr. RADCLIFFE. No; I thought the best plan would be to have the pending business laid aside. It may be that the absent Senators will be present in the near future.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. President, I have no objection to recommitting the joint resolution to the Judiciary Committee. I was contacted on that basis by some of the proponents of the amendment. I was asked if I would have any objection to a recommittal of the joint resolution to the Judiciary Committee, and I said that I would not object to it. However, I see no reason, after the debate has been concluded and we have almost reached the hour of voting on the matter, for laying it aside. If the Senator wishes to have the joint resolution recommitted to the Judiciary Committee, I shall not object, but I do object to laying the pending business aside.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard.

Mr. RADCLIFFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the joint resolution be recommitted to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. MURDOCK. I have no objection.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. What is the present parliamentary situation? I object to laying the pending business aside.

Mr. BARKLEY. An objection has already been made.

Mr. CAPEHART. I object to a recommittal of the pending joint resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BARKLEY. In view of the unanimous-consent agreement to vote at 1 o'clock today, it is not in order to move to recommit, and it can be done only by unanimous consent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is correct.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, may we have the benefit of the observation of the Senator from Kentucky? We could not hear him on our side of the Chamber.

Mr. BARKLEY. I stated that inasmuch as the Senate had reached an agreement to vote at 1 o'clock today, a motion to recommit the bill would not be in order, and it could be done only by unanimous consent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is correct.

Mr. PEPPER obtained the floor.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. CAPEHART. I feel very strongly that we should vote on this matter, but I am now informed that many Senators prefer to have the joint resolution recommitted, and, therefore, I withdraw my objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the recommittal of the joint resolution to the Committee on the Judiciary?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, I wish to make this statement: During this whole session of Congress, proponents of the pending joint resolution have been urging me to arrange for a time when it could be voted upon. I have been sympathetic to the request, and I have tried to arrange a time accordingly, but the condition of the calendar has been such that it has been impossible to bring the matter to a vote earlier than today. We may as well understand that if the joint resolution is recommitted to the Committee on the Judiciary the chances are very remote that it will be brought up again during this session of the Congress.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request to recommit the joint resolution to the Committee on the Judiciary?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator from Maryland a question. Is the suggested recommittal made at the request of the proponents of the amendment?

Mr. RADCLIFFE. Mr. President, it developed that many Senators are not here today.

Mr. VANDENBERG. That is not my question.

Mr. RADCLIFFE. I will answer the Senator's question. It is their request that action be not taken on the joint resolution today.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection——

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the distinguished Senator from Maryland give us again the answer to the question propounded by the senior Senator from Michigan?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The hour of 1 o'clock having arrived, Senate Joint Resolution 61, proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relative to equal rights of men and women, is before the Senate, and——

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. PEPPER. We understood that the unanimous-consent request was not objected to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question was being discussed until the time expired.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, a further parliamentary inquiry. Until a vote is actually had the Senate still has the matter in its power to act on the unanimous-consent request, has it not?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Of course. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request that the joint resolution be recommitted to the Committee on the Judiciary?

Mr. ANDREWS. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears none, and, without objection——

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, the Senator from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS] objected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has been informed that there was objection. Is that correct? The Chair will inquire whether the Senator from Florida objected?

Mr. ANDREWS. I objected to the joint resolution being recommitted to the committee. Many months have been spent on this matter and we might just as well have it out here today, and be through with it. That is the reason why I objected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator object?

Mr. ANDREWS. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Then, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and was read the third time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, Shall the joint resolution pass? There has been no request for the yeas and nays.

Mr. MURDOCK. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. WHITE. Is it not true that a unanimous consent request was made that the joint resolution be recommitted to the Judiciary Committee and was not that request put and did not the Chair announce that there was no objection?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair did, but he was informed by the clerk that the Senator from Florida was on his feet and had objected, and the Chair was obliged to take that into consideration.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. I desire to know the precise status of the question we are about to vote on. It is on the question of the recommital of the proposed constitutional amendment to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. No; the question is on the passage of the joint resolution. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. HILL. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. GOSSETT] are absent because of illness.

The Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] is absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] is absent because of a death in his family.

The Senator from Virginia [Mr. BURCH] is necessarily absent.

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS] is unavoidably detained.

The Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON] is detained on official business at one of the Government departments.

The Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS] is detained at an important committee meeting, and is therefore necessarily absent.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. BRIGGS], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KILGORE], the Senator from Arizona [Mr. MCFARLAND], and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. STEWART] are detained on public business.

The Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCMAHON] are absent on official business.

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER], and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are absent on official business, having been appointed to the commission on the part of the Senate to participate in the Philippine independence ceremonies.

On this question the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KILGORE], who, if present, would vote "yea," and the Senator from Arizona [Mr. MCFARLAND], who, if present, would vote "yea," are paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL], who, if present, would vote "nay."

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator from Delaware [Mr. BUCK] is absent by leave of the Senate. If present, he would vote "yea."

The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BUTLER] is absent on official business, being a member of the Commission appointed to attend the Philippine independence ceremonies.

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. BROOKS] is absent on official business.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a member of the Special Committee on Atomic Energy. If present, he would vote "yea."

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] is necessarily absent.

The yeas and nays resulted—yeas 38, nays 35, as follows:

YEAS—38

Aiken	Gurney	Robertson
Austin	Hawkes	Smith
Ball	Knowland	Stanfill
Barkley	Langer	Thomas, Okla.
Bushfield	McCarran	Tobey
Capehart	McClellan	Tunnell
Capper	McKellar	Vandenberg
Chavez	Myers	Wherry
Cordon	O'Daniel	Wiley
Ferguson	O'Mahoney	Willis
Fulbright	Pepper	Wilson
George	Radcliffe	Young
Guffey	Reed

NAYS—35

Andrews	Hill	Murdock
Bilbo	Hoey	Murray
Brewster	Huffman	Overton
Carville	Johnson, Colo.	Revercomb
Connally	Johnston, S. C.	Shipstead
Donnell	La Follette	Swift
Downey	Maybank	Taft
Eastland	Mead	Taylor
Gerry	Millikin	Wagner
Green	Mitchell	Walsh
Hart	Moore	White
Hayden	Morse

NOT VOTING—23

Bailey	Ellender	Magnuson
Bridges	Gossett	Russell
Briggs	Hatch	Saltonstall
Brooks	Hickenlooper	Stewart
Buck	Kilgore	Thomas, Utah
Burch	Lucas	Tydings
Butler	McFarland	Wheeler
Byrd	McMahon

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On this question the yeas are 38, the nays 35. Two-thirds of the Senate not having voted in the affirmative, the joint resolution fails of passage.

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, I have received a statement from Nina Horton Avery, chairman of the joint legislative committee for equal rights urging me to support the equal rights amendment, which I ask to have printed in the RECORD. I am in full accord with the request made by this organization.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 18, 1946.

Hon. ARTHUR CAPPER,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Our committee, representing over 30 national organizations of women and representing over 6,000,000 women, earnestly calls upon you to vote favorably on equal rights amendment. We respectfully remind you that support of amendment is in harmony with your party's platform pledge and in harmony with United States ratification of United Nations Charter calling for equal rights for women throughout the world. We hope our Government will take a position of leadership today in world-wide movement for equality of rights for women.

NINA HORTON AVERY,
Chairman of Joint Legislative Committee for Equal Rights.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House still further insisted upon its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 39 to the bill (H. R. 6739) making appropriations for the Department of Labor, the Federal Security Agency, and related independent agencies, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes; agreed to the still further conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. HARE, Mr. TARVER, Mr. ROONEY, Mr. NEELY, Mr. ENGEL of Michigan, Mr. KEEFE, and Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message also announced that the House had severally agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the following bills of the House:

H. R. 1151. An act for the relief of James Lemuel Muzzall and James M. Muzzall;

H. R. 1754. An act for the relief of Edwin Doyle Parrish;

H. R. 4616. An act for the relief of the Maryland Sanitary Manufacturing Corp. of Baltimore, Md.;

H. R. 5063. An act for the relief of the estate of Jasper A. Mealer; and

H. R. 6689. An act to extend, for an additional year, the provisions of the Sugar Act of 1937, as amended, and the taxes with respect to sugar.

The message further announced that the House had severally agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills of the House:

H. R. 5025. An act for the relief of Mrs. Opal Riley and Robert R. Riley; and

H. R. 6532. An act to provide a method for payment in certain Government establishments of overtime, leave, and holiday compensation on the basis of night rates pursuant to certain decisions of the Comptroller General, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House insisted upon its amendment to the bill (S. 78) for the relief of the estate of William Edward Oates, disagreed to by the Senate; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. COMBS, Mr. HEDRICK, and Mr. PITTENGER were appointed managers on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3748) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the recognition of the services of the civilian officials and employees, citizens of the United States, engaged in and about the construction of the Panama Canal," approved May 29, 1944; asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. PETERSON of Florida, Mr. BONNER, and Mr. HERTER were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4497) to create an Indian Claims Commission, to provide for the powers, duties, and functions thereof, and for other purposes; asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. JACKSON, Mr. FERNANDEZ, Mr. STIGLER, Mr. MUNDT, and Mr. ROBERTSON of North Dakota were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4718) to amend the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, to provide annuities for certain officers and employees who have rendered at least 25 years of service; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. JACKSON, Mr. MANASCO, Mr. RAYFIEL, Mr. REES of Kansas, and Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message also announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 7052) to amend the Internal Revenue Code, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The PRESIDENT pro tempore announced that on today he signed the following enrolled bills, which had previously been signed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives:

S. 141. An act to clarify the law relating to the filling of the first vacancy occurring in the office of district judge for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, and to provide for the appointment of an additional United States district judge for the eastern, middle, and western districts of Pennsylvania;

S. 1516. An act to amend section 12 of the Bonneville Project Act, as amended; and

H. R. 6777. An act making appropriations for Government corporations and independent executive agencies for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

The Secretary of the Senate reported that on July 18, 1946, he presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 661. An act for the relief of Harold H. Rhodes;

S. 704. An act to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to continue administration of and ultimately liquidate Federal rural rehabilitation projects, and for other purposes;

S. 706. An act to amend Veterans Regulation No. 9 (a), as amended, so as to increase the limit of amounts payable thereunder in connection with the funeral and burial of deceased veterans;

S. 1132. An act for the relief of Aeronautical Training Center, Inc.;

S. 1748. An act for the relief of Ivor E. Nichols; and

S. 2291. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to transfer a vessel to the American Antarctic Association, Inc.

DISPOSITION OF EXECUTIVE PAPERS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a letter from the Archivist of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a list of papers and documents on the files of several departments and agencies of the Government which are not needed in the conduct of business and have no permanent value or historical interest, and requesting action looking to their disposition, which with the accompanying papers, was referred to a Joint Select Committee on the Disposition of Papers in the Executive Departments.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore appointed Mr. BARKLEY and Mr. BREWSTER members of the committee on the part of the Senate.

PETITIONS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following petitions, which were referred, as indicated:

A resolution adopted by the City Council of the City of Chicago, Ill., favoring the restoration of the authorized number of personnel on duty at life-boat stations of the Chicago operating base of the United States Coast Guard; to the Committee on Commerce.

A resolution adopted by the Quota Club International, Inc., St. Louis, Mo., favoring the enactment of legislation to provide Federal aid to education; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. DOWNEY, from the Committee on Civil Service:

H. R. 4720. A bill to amend the act of December 7, 1944, relating to certain overtime compensation of civilian employees of the United States; without amendment (Rept. No. 1744).

By Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado, from the Committee on Finance:

H. R. 6811. A bill relating to veterans' pension, compensation, or retirement pay during hospitalization, institutional or domiciliary care, and for other purposes; with amendments (Rept. No. 1745).

By Mr. O'MAHONEY (for Mr. HATCH), from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys:

S. 147. A bill to provide for the establishment of the Russel-Majors-Waddell National Monument; with amendments (Rept. No. 1746).

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

S. 2404. A bill to amend section 502 (a) of the Department of Agriculture Organic Act of 1944; without amendment (Rept. No. 1747); and

H. R. 6097. A bill to amend the act of March 10, 1934, entitled "An act to promote the conservation of wildlife, fish, and game, and for other purposes"; with an amendment (Rept. No. 1748).

By Mr. CORDON, from the Committee on Commerce:

S. 2358. A bill to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Columbia River in Clatsop County, Oreg., and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1749).

By Mr. RADCLIFFE, from the Committee on Commerce:

H. R. 4842. A bill to amend the act of April 29, 1943, so as to afford a preference for veterans in acquiring certain vessels; without amendment (Rept. No. 1750); and

H. R. 6644. A bill to increase the efficiency of the Coast and Geodetic Survey; without amendment (Rept. No. 1751).

By Mr. OVERTON, from the Committee on Commerce:

H. R. 2033. A bill authorizing Federal participation in the cost of protecting the shores of publicly owned property; with amendments (Rept. No. 1752);

H. R. 5537. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Susquehanna River at a point between the borough of Plymouth, in Plymouth Township, and Hanover Township, in the county of Luzerne, and in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; without amendment (Rept. No. 1753);

H. R. 5932. A bill providing for the conveyance to the town of Ipswich, in the State of Massachusetts, of lighthouse property at Castle Neck, for public use; without amendment (Rept. No. 1754);

H. R. 6023. A bill providing for the conveyance to the city of Atlantic City, in the State of New Jersey, of lighthouse property at Atlantic City, for public use; without amendment (Rept. No. 1755);

H. R. 6223. A bill to authorize the highway departments of the States of Kentucky and West Virginia to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Tug Fork of the Big Sandy River at or near Williamson, W. Va. without amendment (Rept. No. 1756);

H. R. 6406. A bill authorizing the State of Texas, acting through the State highway commission of Texas, or the successors thereof, to acquire, construct, maintain, and operate a free bridge across the Rio Grande at or near Del Rio, Tex.; without amendment (Rept. No. 1757);

H. J. Res. 366. Joint resolution authorizing and directing the Director of the Fish and Wildlife Service of the Department of the Interior to investigate and eradicate the predatory sea lampreys of the Great Lakes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1758); and

H. J. Res. 370. Joint resolution granting certain property to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and relinquishing jurisdiction therein; without amendment (Rept. No. 1759).

By Mr. McCLELLAN, from the Committee on Commerce:

H. R. 6057. A bill to amend the act of July 11, 1919 (41 Stat. 132), relating to the interchange of property between the Army and the Navy, so as to include the Coast Guard within its provision; without amendment (Rept. No. 1760).

By Mr. WALSH, from the Committee on Finance:

S. 334. A bill for the relief of the Trust Association of H. Kempner; with amendments (Rept. No. 1761).

By Mr CHAVEZ, from the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs:

H. R. 3361. A bill to amend paragraph (1) of section 73 of the Hawaiian Organic Act, as amended; without amendment (Rept. No. 1762);

H. R. 6610. A bill to waive certain restrictions of the Hawaiian Organic Act, relating to land exchanges, for the acquisition of certain lands at Hilo, Hawaii; without amendment (Rept. No. 1763); and

H. R. 6918. A bill to provide emergency relief for the victims of the seismic waves which struck the Territory of Hawaii, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept No. 1764).

REPORT ON DISPOSITION OF EXECUTIVE PAPERS

Mr. BARKLEY, from the Joint Select Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers, to which was referred for examination and recommendation a list of records transmitted to the Senate by the Archivist of the United States that appeared to have no permanent value or historical interest, submitted a report thereon pursuant to law.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and by unanimous consent the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. THOMAS of Utah:

S. 2457. A bill to promote the welfare of the people by establishing a publicly supported adult labor extension program and for other purposes; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado:

S. 2458. A bill for the relief of the estate of Ellsworth E. Bilstein; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PEPPER:

S. 2459. A bill to extend the maturity for mortgages under the National Housing Act in the case of property owned by veterans of World War II; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. THOMAS of Utah (for himself and Mr. WALSH):

S. 2460. A bill to provide additional inducements to citizens of the United States to make a career of the United States military or naval service, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

AMENDMENT OF RAILROAD RETIREMENT ACTS

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to submit an amendment in the nature of a substitute to House bill 1362, to amend the railroad retirement acts, the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, and subchapter B of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code; and for other purposes, and request that it be printed and lie on the table. I also request that the amendment be printed at this point in the RECORD, as a part of my remarks, and that there be printed in the RECORD following it an explanation of the bill and amendment and a statement by me which appears in the newspaper Labor of May 11, 1946.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the amendment will be received and lie on the table, and the amendment, together with an explanation of the bill and amendment, and the statement will be printed in the RECORD.

The amendment in the nature of a substitute submitted by Mr. CAPEHART is as follows:

Amendment (in the nature of a substitute) intended to be proposed by Mr. CAPEHART to the bill (H. R. 1362) to amend the railroad retirement acts, the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, and subchapter B of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code, and for other purposes, viz: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

TITLE I—AMENDMENTS TO RAILROAD RETIREMENT ACT OF 1937

ADDITION OF CERTAIN DEFINITIONS

SECTION 1. Section 1 of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(o) An individual has 'a current connection with the railroad industry' on a particular date if, in any 30 consecutive calendar months before the month in which such date occurs, he was in service as an employee in not less than 12 calendar months and, if such 30 calendar months do not immediately precede such month, he was not engaged in any regular employment other than employment for an employer in the period before such month and after the end of such 30 calendar months.

"(p) The term 'occupational injury or disease' means (1) accidental injury arising out of and in the course of employment as an employee, (2) such occupational disease or infection as arises out of such employment or as naturally or unavoidably results from such accidental injury, or (3) injury caused by the willful act of a third person directed against an individual because of his employment as an employee.

"(q) The term 'wages' (except when used in section 5 (d) (1)) means all compensation earned by an employee after December 31, 1936, excluding that part of such compensation which, after compensation equal to $3,000 had been earned by an employee during any calendar year, was earned by such employee during such calendar year; but in computing such compensation no part of any month's compensation in excess of $300, earned before January 1, 1947, shall be recognized.

"(r) The term 'survivor benefit credit' means an amount equal to the sum of the following—

"(1) (A) Forty percent of the amount of an individual's average monthly wage if such average monthly wage does not exceed $50, or (B) if such average monthly wage exceeds $50, 40 percent of $50, plus 10 percent of the amount by which such average monthly wage exceeds $50 and does not exceed $250, and

"(2) an amount equal to 1 percent of the amount computed under paragraph (1) multiplied by the number of years in which $200 or more of wages were earned by such individual.

Where the survivor benefit credit thus computed is less than $10, such credit shall be $10.

"(s) The term 'average monthly wage' means the quotient obtained by dividing the total wages earned by an individual before the quarter in which he died, became entitled to receive an annuity under paragraph 1 of section 2 (a), or attained the age of 65 if he became entitled to receive an annuity under section 2 (a) before attaining the age of 65, whichever first occurred, by three times the number of quarters elapsing after 1936 and before such quarter in which he died, became so entitled, or so attained the age of 65, excluding any quarter prior to the quarter in which he attained the age of 22 during which he earned less than $50 of wages.

"(t) The term 'completely insured individual' means any individual with respect to whom it appears to the satisfaction of the Board that—

"(1) He had not less than one quarter of coverage for each two of the quarters elapsing after 1936, or after the quarter in which he attained the age of twenty-one, whichever quarter is later, and up to but excluding the quarter in which he attained the age of sixty-five, or died, whichever first occurred, and in no case less than six quarters of coverage; or

"(2) He had at least forty quarters of coverage.

As used in this subsection, and in subsections (s), (u), and (v) of this section, the term 'quarter' and the term 'calendar quarter' mean a period of three calendar months ending on March 31, June 30, September 30, or December 31. When the number of quarters specified in paragraph (1) of this subsection is an odd number, for purposes of such paragraph such number shall be reduced by one. In any case where an individual has earned in a calendar year $3,000 or more in wages, each quarter of such year following his first quarter of coverage shall be deemed a quarter of coverage, excepting any quarter in such year in which such individual dies or (having attained the age of sixty-five) is or becomes entitled to receive an annuity under section 2 and any quarter succeeding such quarter in which he died or was or became so entitled.

"(u) The term 'partially insured individual' means any individual with respect to whom it appears to the satisfaction of the Board that he earned wages of not less than $50 in each of not less than six of the twelve calendar quarters immediately preceding the quarter in which he died.

"(v) The term 'quarter of coverage' means a calendar quarter in which the individual earned not less than $50 in wages; except that for each calendar year during the period beginning January 1, 1937, and ending December 31, 1946, an individual's number of quarters of coverage shall be determined in accordance with the following table:

If during the calendar year the individual earned wages in the following number of calendar months—	And the total wages earned during such calendar year is—
	$50 but less than $100	$100 but less than $150	$150 but less than $200	$200 or more
	Then the quarters of coverage for such calendar year shall be—
1 but not more than 3	1	1	1	1
4 but not more than 6	1	2	2	2
7 but not more than 9	1	2	3	3
10 or more	1	2	3	4

For the purposes of subsections (s) and (u) of this section if an individual's quarters of coverage in any calendar year before 1947, as determined from the table—

"(1) is one, his wages for such year shall be deemed to have been earned in the last calendar quarter of such year;

"(2) are two, one-half of his wages for such year shall be deemed to have been earned in each of the last two calendar quarters of such year;

"(3) are three, one-third of his wages for such year shall be deemed to have been earned in each of the last three calendar quarters of such year; and

"(4) are four, one-fourth of his wages for such year shall be deemed to have been earned in each calendar quarter of such year.

"(w) The term 'widow' (except when used in section 4 (e)) means the surviving wife of an individual who either (1) is the mother of such individual's son or daughter, or (2) was married to him prior to the beginning of the twelfth month before the month in which he died.

"(x) The term 'child' (except when used in section 4 (e)) means the child of an individual, and the stepchild of an individual by a marriage contracted prior to the date upon which he attained the age of 60 and prior to the beginning of the twelfth month before the month in which he died, and a child legally adopted by an individual prior to the date upon which he attained the age of 60 and prior to the beginning of the twelfth month before the month in which he died.

"(y) In determining whether an applicant is the widow, child, or parent of a completely insured or partially insured individual, the Board shall apply such law as would be applied in determining the devolution of intestate personal property by the courts of the State in which such insured individual was domiciled at the time of his death, or if such insured individual was not so domiciled in any State, by the courts of the District of Columbia. Applicants who according to such law would have the same status relative to taking intestate personal property as a widow, child, or parent shall be deemed such.

"(z) A widow shall be deemed to have been living with her husband at the time of his death if they were both members of the same household on the date of his death, or she was receiving regular contributions from him toward her support on such date, or he had been ordered by any court to contribute to her support."

AMENDMENT TO SECTION 2 OF RAILROAD RETIREMENT ACT OF 1937

SEC. 2. Section 2 of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"ANNUITIES

"SEC. 2. (a) The following-described individuals, if they shall have been employees on or after August 29, 1935, shall, subject to the conditions set forth in subsections (b), (c), (d), and (e), be eligible for annuities after they shall have ceased to render compensated service to any person, whether or not an employer as defined in section 1 (a) (but with the right to engage in other employment to the extent not prohibtied by subsection (e)):

"1. Individuals who on or after August 29, 1935, shall be 65 years of age or over.

"2. Women who on or after January 1, 1947, shall be 60 years of age or over and have completed 30 years of service.

"3. Individuals (other than those covered by paragraph 2) who on or after August 29, 1935, shall be 60 years of age or over and have completed 30 years of service, but the annuity of such an individual shall be reduced by one one-hundred-and-eightieth for each calendar month that such individual is under age 65 when the annuity begins to accrue.

"4. Individuals who on or after August 29, 1935, shall be either 60 years of age or over or shall have completed 30 years of service, and whose permanent physical or mental condition is such that they are unable to engage in any regular employment for hire.

"5. Individuals who on or after January 1, 1947, have completed 10 years of service and whose permanent physical or mental condition, as the result of occupational injury or disease, is such that they are unable to engage in any regular employment for hire.

"6. Individuals who on or after January 1, 1947, have, on the date as of which the annuity begins to accrue, a current connection with the railroad industry and, on such date, either have completed 20 years of service or have attained the age of 60, and whose permanent physical or mental condition, as the result of occupational injury or disease, is such as to be disabling for work in their regular occupation as employees. The Board, with the cooperation of employers and employees, shall secure for purposes of this paragraph the establishment of standards determining the physical and mental conditions which are permanently disabling for work in the several occupations in the railroad industry, and the Board, employers, and employees shall cooperate in the promotion of the greatest practicable degree of uniformity in the standards applied by the several employers. An individual's condition shall be deemed to be disabling for work in his regular occupation as an employee if he has been disqualified by his employer because of disability for service in his regular occupation as an employee in accordance with the applicable standards so established; but if the employee has not been so disqualified by his employer, the Board shall determine whether his condition is disabling for work in his regular occupation as an employee in accordance with the standards generally established; and, if the employee's regular occupation as an employee is not one with respect to which standards have been established, the standards relating to a reasonably comparable occupation shall be used. If there is no such comparable occupation, the Board shall determine whether the employee's condition is disabling for work in his regular occupation as an employee by determining whether under the practices generally prevailing in industries in which such occupation exists such condition is a permanent disqualification for work in such occupation. For the purposes of this section, an employee's 'regular occupation' shall be deemed to be the occupation in which he has been engaged as an employee in more calendar months than the calendar months in which he has been engaged in any other occupation as an employee during the last preceding 5 calendar years, whether or not consecutive, in each of which years he has earned compensation, except that, if an employee establishes that during the last 15 consecutive calendar years he has been engaged in another occupation as an employee in one-half or more of all the months in which he has earned compensation, he may claim such other occupation as his regular occupation as an employee.

"(b) Such satisfactory proof shall be made, as prescribed by the Board, of the physical or mental condition referred to in paragraph 4, 5, or 6 of subsection (a), and from time to time, of the continuance of such condition (determined in accordance with the tests applied in the original determination of such condition) until the employee attains the age of 65. If the individual fails to comply with the requirements prescribed by the Board as to proof of the continuance of such condition until he attains the age of 65 years, his right to an annuity by reason thereof shall, except for good cause shown to the Board, cease, but without prejudice to his rights to have subsequently awarded to him any annuity to which he may be entitled. If before attaining the age of 65 an individual in receipt of an annuity under paragraph 4, 5, or 6 of subsection (a) is found by the Board to be no longer in the physical or mental condition referred to in such paragraph his annuity shall cease upon the last day of the month in which such condition is found by the Board to have ceased to exist, but without prejudice to his rights to have subsequently awarded to him any annuity to which he may be entitled.

"(c) An annuity shall be paid only if the applicant has relinquished such rights as he may have had to return to the service of an employer and of the person by whom he was last employed; but this requirement shall not apply to the individuals mentioned in paragraphs 4, 5, and 6 of subsection (a) prior to attaining the age of 65.

"(d) An annuity shall begin to accrue as of a date to be specified in a written application (to be made in such manner and form as may be prescribed by the Board and to be signed by the individual entitled thereto), but—

"(1) not before the date following the last day of compensated service of the applicant, and

"(2) not more than 60 days before the filing of the application.

"(e) No annuity shall be paid with respect to any month in which an individual in receipt of an annuity hereunder (1) renders compensated service to an employer, (2) renders compensated service to the last person by whom he was employed prior to the date on which the annuity begins to accrue, or (3) in the case of an annuity under paragraph 6 of subsection (a), earns more than $75 in service for hire or in self-employment. Individuals receiving annuities shall report to the Board immediately all such compensated service and earnings."

PROVISION RELATING TO MINIMUM ANNUITIES

SEC. 3. Subsection (e) of section 3 of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(e) If an individual entitled to an annuity—

"(1) was an employee when he attained age 65 and has completed 20 years of service, or

"(2) had, on the date as of which such annuity began to accrue, a current connection with the railroad industry and had, on such date, completed 5 years of service, the minimum annuity payable shall, before any reduction pursuant to paragraph 3 of section 2 (a), be whichever of the following is the least: (1) $3 multiplied by the number of his years of service, (2) $50, or (3) his monthly conpensation."

REPEAL OF SECTIONS 4 AND 5; ADDITION OF SECTIONS PROVIDING FOR SURVIVOR BENEFITS

SEC. 4. The Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, as amended, is amended by striking out sections 4 and 5 thereof, and by inserting in lieu of such sections the following:

"SURVIVOR BENEFITS

"Child's insurance benefits

"SEC. 4. (a) (1) Every child (as defined in section 1 (x)) of an individual who died a completely or partially insured individual (as defined in section 1 (t) and (u)) after December 31, 1946, if such child (A) has filed application for child's insurance benefits, (B) at the time such application was filed was unmarried and had not attained the age of 18, and (C) was dependent upon such individual at the time of such individual's death, shall be entitled to receive a child's insurance benefit for each month, beginning with the month in which such child becomes so entitled to such insurance benefits, and ending with the month immediately preceding the first month in which any of the following occurs; such child dies, marries, is adopted, or attains the age of 18.

"(2) Such child's insurance benefit for each month shall be equal to one-half of the survivor benefit credit (as defined in section 1 (r)) of the individual with respect to whose wages the child is entitled to receive such benefit, except that, when there is more than one such individual such benefit shall be equal to one-half of whichever survivor benefit credit is greatest.

"(3) A child shall be deemed to have been dependent upon a father or adopting father at the time of the death of such individual unless, at the time of such death, such individual was not living with or contributing to the support of such child and—

"(A) such child is neither the legitimate nor adopted child of such individual, or

"(B) such child has been adopted by some other individual, or

"(C) such child was living with and supported by such child's stepfather.

"(4) A child shall be deemed to have been dependent upon a mother, adopting mother, or stepparent at the time of the death of such individual only if, at the time of such death, no parent other than such individual was contributing to the support of such child and such child was not living with its father or adopting father.

"Widow's insurance benefits

"(b) (1) Every widow (as defined in section 1 (w)) of an individual who died a completely insured individual after December 31, 1946, if such widow (A) has not remarried, (B) has attained the age of 65, (C) has filed application for widow's insurance benefits, (D) was living with such individual at the time of his death, and (E) is not entitled to receive an annuity under section 2, or is entitled to receive an annuity under section 2 which is less than three-fourths of the survivor benefit credit of her husband, shall be entitled to receive a widow's insurance benefit for each month, beginning with the month in which she becomes so entitled to such insurance benefits and ending with the month immediately preceding the first month in which any of the following occurs: She remarries, dies, or becomes entitled to receive an annuity under section 2 equal to or exceeding three-fourths of the survivor benefit credit of her husband.

"(2) such widow's insurance benefit for each month shall be equal to three-fourths of the survivor benefit credit of her deceased husband, except that, if she is entitled to receive an annuity under section 2 for any month, such widow's insurance benefit for such month shall be reduced by an amount equal to the annuity under section 2 to which such widow is entitled.

"Widow's current insurance benefits

"(c) (1) Every widow (as defined in section 1 (w)) of an individual who died a completely or partially insured individual after December 31, 1946, if such widow (A) has not remarried, (B) is not entitled to receive a widow's insurance benefit, and is not entitled to receive an annuity under section 2, or is entitled to receive an annuity under section 2 which is less than three-fourths of the survivor benefit credit of her husband, (C) was living with such individual at the time of his death, (D) has filed application for widow's current insurance benefits, and (E) at the time of filing such application has in her care a child of such deceased individual entitled to receive a child's insurance benefit, shall be entitled to receive a widow's current insurance benefit for each month, beginning with the month in which she becomes so entitled to such current insurance benefits and ending with the month immediately preceding the first month in which any of the following occurs: no child of such deceased individual is entitled to receive a child's insurance benefit, she becomes entitled to receive an annuity under paragraph 1 or 2 of section 2 (a) equal to or exceeding three-fourths of the survivor benefit credit of her deceased husband, she becomes entitled to receive a widow's insurance benefit, she remarries, she dies.

"(2) Such widow's current insurance benefit for each month shall be equal to three-fourths of the survivor benefit credit of her deceased husband, except that, if she is entitled to receive an annuity under section 2 for any month, such widow's current insurance benefit for such month shall be reduced by an amount equal to the annuity under section 2 to which such widow is entitled or by an amount equal to such current insurance benefit, whichever amount is less.

"Parent's insurance benefit

"(d) (1) Every parent (as defined in this subsection) of an individual who died a completely insured individual after December 31, 1946, leaving no widow and no unmarried surviving child under the age of 18, if such parent (A) has attained the age of 65, (B) was wholly dependent upon and supported by such individual at the time of such individual's death and filed proof of such dependency and support within 2 years of such date of death, (C) has not married since such individual's death, (D) is not entitled to receive any other insurance benefits under this section or any annuity under section 2, or is entitled to receive one or more of such benefits or annuity for a month, but the total for such month is less than one-half of the survivor benefit credit of such deceased individual, and (E) has filed application for parent's insurance benefits, shall be entitled to receive a parent's insurance benefit for each month, beginning with the month in which such parent becomes so entitled to such parent's insurance benefits and ending with the month immediately preceding the first month in which any of the following occurs: such parent dies, marries, or becomes entitled to receive for any month an insurance benefit or benefits (other than a benefit under this subsection) or an annuity under section 2 in a total amount equal to or exceeding one-half of the survivor benefit credit of such deceased individual.

"(2) Such parent's insurance benefit for each month shall be equal to one-half of the survivor benefit credit of such deceased individual, except that, if such parent is entitled to receive an insurance benefit or benefits for any month (other than a benefit under this subsection) or an annuity under section 2, such parent's insurance benefit for such month shall be reduced by an amount equal to the total of such other benefit or benefits or annuity for such month. When there is more than one such individual with respect to whose wages the parent is entitled to receive a parent's insurance benefit for a month, such benefit shall be equal to one-half of whichever survivor benefit credit is greatest.

"(3) As used in this subsection, the term 'parent' means the mother or father of an individual, a stepparent of an individual by a marriage contracted before such individual attained the age of 16, or an adopting parent by whom an individual was adopted before he attained the age of 16.

"Lump-sum death payments

"(e) Upon the death, after December 31, 1946, of an individual who died a completely or partially insured individual leaving no surviving widow, child, or parent who would, on filing application in the month in which such individual died, be entitled to a benefit for such month under subsection (a), (b), (c), or (d) of this section, an amount equal to six times the survivor benefit credit of such individual shall be paid in a lump-sum to the following person (or if more than one, shall be distributed among them) whose relationship to the deceased is determined by the Board, and who is living on the date of such determination: To the widow or widower of the deceased; or, if no such widow or widower be then living, to any child or children of the deceased and to any other person or persons who are, under the intestacy law of the State where the deceased was domiciled, entitled to share as distributees with such children of the deceased, in such proportions as is provided by such law; or, if no widow or widower and no such child and no such other person be then living, to the parent or to the parents of the deceased, in equal shares. A person who is entitled to share as distributee with an above-named relative of the deceased shall not be precluded from receiving a payment under this subsection by reason of the fact that no such named relative survived the deceased or of the fact that no such named relative of the deceased was living on the date of such determination. If none of the persons described in this subsection be living on the date of such determination, such amount shall be paid to any person or persons, equitably entitled thereto, to the extent and in the proportions that he or they shall have paid the expenses of burial of the deceased. No payment shall be made to any person under this subsection, unless application therefor shall have been filed, by or on behalf of any such person (whether or not legally competent), prior to the expiration of 2 years after the date of death of such individual.

"Application

"(f) (1) An individual who would have been entitled to a benefit under subsection (a), (b), (c), or (d) for any month had he filed application therefor prior to the end of such month, shall be entitled to such benefit for such month if he files application therefor prior to the end of the third month immediately succeeding such month.

"(2) No application for any benefit under this section filed prior to 3 months before the first month for which the applicant becomes entitled to receive such benefit shall be accepted as an application for the purposes of this section.

"(3) An application for any payment or benefit under this section shall be made and filed in such manner as the Board may by regulation prescribe.

"Family payments

"(g) The Board may, in its discretion, certify to the Secretary of the Treasury any two or more individuals of the same family for joint payment of the total benefits and annuities payable to such individuals under this act.

"Benefits due but not paid at death

"(h) The amount of any monthly benefit or lump sum due any individual under this section but not paid to such individual before his death shall be paid to the same persons, and subject to the same conditions and limitations, as though (1) such amount constituted a lump sum payable under subsection (e) by reason of the death of the individual with respect to whose wages such amount was payable, and (2) the individual with respect to whose wages such amount was payable had died on the date of the death of the individual to whom such amount was due.

"Assignment

"(i) The right of any individual to any future payment under this section shall not be transferable or assignable at law or in equity, and none of the moneys paid or payable or rights existing under this section shall be subject to execution, levy, attachment, garnishment, or other legal process, or to the operation of any bankruptcy or insolvency law.

"When an individual is deemed entitled to receive an annuity

"(j) For the purposes of this section and subsections (s) and (t) of section 1, an individual shall be deemed to be entitled to receive an annuity for any month if an annuity is, or thereafter becomes, payable to him for the accrual during such month.

"REDUCTION AND INCREASE OF INSURANCE BENEFITS

"SEC. 5. (a) Whenever the total of benefits under section 4, payable for a month with respect to an individual's wages, is more than $20 and exceeds (1) $5, or (2) an amount equal to twice the survivor benefit credit of such individual, or (3) an amount equal to 80 percent of his average monthly wage (as defined in section 1 (s)), whichever of such three amounts is least, such total of benefits shall, prior to any deductions under subsection (d), be reduced to such least amount or to $20, whichever is greater.

"(b) Whenever the benefit or total of benefits under section 4, payable for a month with respect to an individual's wages, is less than $10, such benefit or total of benefits shall, prior to any deductions under subsection (d), be increased to $10.

"(c) Whenever a decrease or increase of the total of benefits for a month is made under subsection (a) or (b) of this section, each benefit shall be proportionately decreased or increased, as the case may be.

"(d) Deductions, in such amounts and at such time or times as the Board shall determine, shall be made from any payment or payments under section 4 to which an individual is entitled, until the total of such deductions equals such individual's benefit or benefits for any month in which such individual:

"(1) rendered services for wages (as defined in section 209 (a) of the Social Security Act, as amended) of not less than $15; or

"(2) if a child under 18 and over 16 years of age, failed to attend school regularly and the Board finds that attendance was feasible; or

"(3) if a widow entitled to a widow's current insurance benefit, did not have in her care a child of her deceased husband entitled to receive a child's insurance benefit.

"(e) If more than one event occurs in any one month which would occasion deductions equal to a benefit for such month, only an amount equal to such benefit shall be deducted.

"(f) Any individual in receipt of benefits subject to deduction under subsection (d) (or who is in receipt of such benefits on behalf of another individual), because of the occurrence of an event enumerated therein, shall report such occurrence to the Board prior to the receipt and acceptance of an insurance benefit for the second month following the month in which such event occurred. Any such individual having knowledge thereof, who fails to report any such occurrence, shall suffer an additional deduction equal to that imposed under subsection (d)."

"RETURNS OF COMPENSATION AND CONCLUSIVENESS OF EMPLOYEES

SEC. 5. Section 8 of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"RETURNS OF COMPENSATION AND CONCLUSIVENESS OF RECORDS OF COMPENSATION

"SEC. 8. Employers shall file with the Board, in such manner and form and at such times as the Board by rules and regulations may prescribe, returns under oath of compensation of employees, and, if the Board shall so require, shall furnish employees with statements of their compensation as reported to the Board. The Board's record of the compensation so returned shall be conclusive as to the amount of compensation earned by an employee during each month covered by the return, and the fact that the Board's records show that no return was made of the compensation claimed to be earned by an employee during a particular calendar month shall be taken as conclusive that no compensation was earned by such employee during that month, unless the error in the amount of compensation in the one case, or failure to make or record return of the compensation in the other case, is called to the attention of the Board within 4 years after the last date on which return of the compensation was required to be made."

CHANGES IN EXISTING LAW MADE NECESSARY BY PRECEDING AMENDMENTS

SEC. 6. (a) The third sentence of paragraph (h) of section 1 of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, as amended, is amended by striking out "for the purposes of subsections (a), (c), and (d) of section 2 and subsection (a) of section 5" and inserting in lieu thereof "for the purposes of subsections (a), (d), and (e) of section 2, and for the purposes of section 4,".

(b) Subsection (f) of section 3 of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(f) Annuity payments due any individual but not paid to such individual before his death shall be paid to the same persons, and subject to the same conditions and limitations, as though such payments constituted a lump sum payable under section 4 (e) with respect to the death of such individual."

(c) Subsection (h) of section 3 of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, as amended, is amended by striking out "except as provided in subdivision 3 of section 2 (a)" and inserting in lieu thereof "except that if, under subsection (b) of section 2, an individual's annuity ceases the provisions of this subsection shall not apply with respect to any annuity subsequently awarded to which such individual may be entitled."

(d) Subsection (m) of section 3A of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, as amended, is hereby repealed.

(e) (1) Subsection (n) of section 3A of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, as amended, is amended by striking out the phrase "annuities, pensions and death benefits" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "annuities, pensions, death benefits, insurance benefits, and lump sum payments."

(2) Section 9 of such act is amended by striking out the phrase "annuities, pensions, or death benefits" wherever it appears in such section, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "annuities, pensions, death benefits, insurance benefits, or lump sum payments."

(3) Subsection (b) (1) of section 10 of such act is amended by striking out the phrase "pensions, annuities, or death benefits" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "annuities, pensions, death benefits, insurance benefits, or lump sum payments."

(4) Subsection (b) 5 of section 10 of such act is amended by striking out the phrase "annuities or death benefits" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "annuities, death benefits, insurance benefits, or lump sum payments."

(5) The third sentence of section 11 of such act is amended by striking out the phrase "annuity, pension, or death benefit" wherever it appears in such sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "annuity, pension, death benefit, insurance benefit, or lump sum payment."

(6) Subsections (a) and (b) of section 15 of such act are amended by striking out the phrase "annuities, pensions, and death benefits" wherever it appears in such subsections, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "annuities, pensions, death benefits, insurance benefits, and lump sum payments."

SAVING PROVISIONS

SEC. 7. (a) The provisions of paragraphs 2 and 4 of section 2 (a), and of section 3 (e), of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, as in force after this title takes effect, shall be applicable to individuals who became eligible for annuities before January 1, 1947, without further application therefor, but such provisions shall not result in the payment of any annuity, with respect to any calendar month prior to January 1, 1947, in a higher amount than would be payable under the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937 as in force prior to the date on which this title takes effect. If an annuity increased pursuant to such provisions is a joint and survivor annuity, the increase shall be in the same form, the actuarial value being computed as of the date the increase begins, unless on that date there is no spouse living for whom the election was made, in which case the increase shall be awarded on a single life basis. If the increase affects a survivor annuity only, the increase shall be so determined as to bear the same ratio to the survivor annuity as the increase in the basic annuity would bear to such basic annuity if the employee annuitant were living and had made no joint and survivor election. For the purposes of section 3 (e) of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, as amended by this act, an individual to whom an annuity began to accrue before January 1, 1947, if such annuity was based on not less than 5 years of service, shall be deemed to have had a current connection with the railroad industry on the date as of which such annuity began to accrue.

(b) Notwithstanding the amendment by this act of section 3 (f) of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, in any case in which the individual referred to in such section died before January 1, 1947, such section shall continue in effect as though this act had not been enacted.

(c) Notwithstanding the repeal by this act of section 4 of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, in any case where an election was made under such section 4 prior to January 1, 1947, the election shall be given effect as though this act had not been enacted; except that—

(1) If the annuity of the individual who made the election did not begin to accrue before January 1, 1947, the election shall be considered not to have been made unless the individual, prior to January 1, 1948, reaffirms such election in such manner as the Railroad Retirement Board shall by regulations prescribe.

(2) If the annuity of the individual who made the election began to accrue, but was not awarded, before January 1, 1947, the election shall be considered not to have been made if such individual, prior to January 1, 1948, revokes such election in such manner as the Railroad Retirement Board shall by regulations prescribe.

(d) Notwithstanding the repeal by this act of section 3A (m) and section 5 of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, such section 3A (m) and such section 5 shall continue in effect with respect to compensation earned after December 31, 1936, and before January 1, 1947, by an individual as an employee, as though this act had not been enacted, in the following cases:

(1) If such individual dies before January 1, 1947.

(2) If such individual dies on or after January 1, 1947, and died neither completely nor partially insured within the meaning of subsection (t) or (u) of section 1 of the Railroad Retirement Act, as amended by this act.

(3) If such individual dies on or after January 1, 1947, and a lump-sum death payment under section 4 (e) of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, as amended by this act, is payable, except that the death benefit shall be reduced by the amount of such lump-sum death payment.

(4) If such individual dies on or after January 1, 1947, leaving a surviving widow, child, or parent who would, on filing application in the month in which such individual died, be entitled to a benefit for such month under subsection (a), (b), (c), or (d) of section 4 of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, as amended by this act, except that (A) the death benefit, if any, shall not be due before (i) the first day of the month next following the last month with respect to which any benefits under such subsection (a), (b), (c), or (d), based on an application filed in the month in which such individual dies, would be payable, or (ii) the first day of the month next following the month of the death of a spouse entitled to a survivor annuity pursuant to an election made under the provisions of section 4 of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937 before its amendment by this act, whichever is later; and the two-year period within which an application for the death benefit, if any, must be filed pursuant to the provisions of such section 5, shall not begin before such first day of the month described in clauses (i) and (ii) above, and (B) the death benefit shall be reduced by the aggregate amount of benefits paid, or due but not paid, under section 4 of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, as amended by this act, on the basis of such individual's death.

(e) Notwithstanding the amendment made by this act to section 8 of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, as amended, a return made in accordance with such section, covering monthly compensation of an employee, with respect to any period before January 1, 1947, shall be conclusive (in the same manner and to the same extent as provided under such section 8 prior to its amendment by this act) as to the amount of compensation earned by such employee during each month covered by the return; except that after March 31, 1951, the Railroad Retirement Board's record of the amount of the compensation earned by such employee during each month covered by any such return shall be conclusive.

TITLE II—AMENDMENTS TO RAILROAD UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT

TERMINATION OF PERIOD WITH RESPECT TO WHICH CONTRIBUTIONS SHALL BE PAYABLE

SEC. 201. So much of the first sentence of subsection (a) of section 8 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, as amended, as precedes the proviso is amended to read as follows: "Every employer shall pay a contribution, with respect to having employees in his service, equal to 3 percent of so much of the compensation as is not in excess of $300 for any calendar month payable by him to any employee with respect to employment after June 30, 1939, and before January 1, 1947:".

AMENDMENTS RELATING TO RAILROAD UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACCOUNT

SEC. 202. (a) Subsection (a) of section 10 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(a) The Secretary of the Treasury shall maintain in the unemployment trust fund established pursuant to section 904 of the Social Security Act an account to be known as the railroad unemployment insurance account. This account shall consist of (i) 90 percent of all contributions collected pursuant to section 8 of this act, together with all interest collected pursuant to section 8 of this act, and 90 percent of all taxes (together with all interest, civil fines, civil penalties, additional amounts, and additions to the tax) collected pursuant to the Railroad Unemployment Tax Act (pt. II, subch. B, ch. 9, Internal Revenue Code); (ii) all amounts transferred or paid into the account pursuant to section 13 or section 14 of this act; (iii) all additional amounts appropriated to the account in accordance with any provision of this act or with any provision of law now or hereafter adopted; (iv) a proportionate part of the earnings of the unemployment trust fund, computed in accordance with the provisions of section 904 (e) of the Social Security Act; (v) all amounts realized in recoveries for overpayments or erroneous payments of benefits; (vi) all amounts transferred thereto pursuant to section 11 of this act; (vii) all fines or penalties collected pursuant to the provisions of this act and all criminal fines or criminal penalties collected with respect to the tax imposed under the Railroad Unemployment Tax Act; and (viii) all amounts credited thereto pursuant to section 2 (f) or section 12 (g) of this act. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, all moneys at any time standing to the credit of the account shall be mingled and undivided, and are hereby permanently appropriated to the Board and to the Bureau of Internal Revenue to be continuously available to the Board and to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, without further appropriation, for the payment of benefits provided for by this act, and for the payment of refunds (including interest thereon) pursuant to this act or the Railroad Unemployment Tax Act, and no part thereof shall lapse at any time, or be carried to the surplus fund or any other fund other than as provided by section 11 (e) of this act."

(b) Subsection (b) of section 10 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(b) All moneys in the account shall be used solely for the payment of the benefits provided for by this act, for the payment of refunds (including interest thereon) pursuant to this act or the Railroad Unemployment Tax Act, and for the transfer of amounts to be credited to the fund pursuant to section 11 (e) of this act. The Board shall, from time to time, certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the name and address of each person or company entitled to receive benefits or a refund payment under this act, the amount of such payment, and the time at which it shall be made. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall, from time to time, furnish to the Secretary of the Treasury a schedule of overpayments in respect of the tax (or any interest, penalty, additional amount, or addition to the tax) under the Railroad Unemployment Tax Act for the purpose of causing refunds under such act to be made from the account. Prior to audit or settlement by the General Accounting Office, the Secretary of the Treasury, through the Division of Disbursement of the Treasury Department, shall make payments from the account directly to such person or company of the amount of benefits or refund so certified by the Board and to the person or company shown to be entitled thereto of the amount of the refund under the Railroad Unemployment Tax Act so scheduled by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue: Provided, however, That if the Board shall so request, the Secretary of the Treasury, through the Division of Disbursement of the Treasury Department, shall transmit benefit payments to the Board for distribution by it through employment offices or in such other manner as the Board deems proper."

(c) The second sentence of subsection (a) of section 904 of the Social Security Act, as amended, is amended by inserting after the word "Board" the words "or the Bureau of Internal Revenue."

(d) Subsection (f) of section 904 of the Social Security Act, as amended, is amended by striking out the last sentence thereof and by inserting in lieu thereof the following sentence: "The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to make out of the fund such payments as the Railroad Retirement Board may duly certify, such refunds under the Railroad Unemployment Tax Act (pt. II, subch. B, ch. 9, Internal Revenue Code) as may be duly scheduled for payment by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and such transfers as may be required pursuant to section 11 (e) of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, not exceeding the amount standing to the credit of the railroad unemployment insurance account at the time of such payment, refund, or transfer."

AMENDMENTS RELATING TO THE RAILROAD UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ADMINISTRATION FUND

SEC. 203. (a) The second sentence of subsection (a) of section 11 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, as amended, is amended by inserting immediately before the semicolon at the end of clause (i) of such sentence the following: ", 10 percent of all taxes (exclusive of all interest, fines, penalties, additional amounts, and additions to the tax) collected pursuant to the Railroad Unemployment Tax Act (p. II, subch. B, ch. 9, Internal Revenue Code), and all amounts transferred to the fund pursuant to subsection (e) of this section."

Page 95, after line 17, insert the following:

"(b) Section 11 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, as amended, is amended by adding after subsection (d) thereof the following new subsection:

"'(e) If the aggregate amount credited to the fund during any calendar year pursuant to the Railroad Unemployment Tax Act and section 8 of this act is less than $3,000,000 there shall be transferred from the account and credited to the fund, on or before January 31 of the next calendar year, an amount equal to the amount by which $3,000,000 exceeds such aggregate amount.'"

CHANGES IN EXISTING LAW MADE NECESSARY BY PRECEDING AMENDMENTS

SEC. 204. (a) Subsection (g) of section 2 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(g) Benefits accrued to an individual but not yet paid at death shall, upon certification by the Board, be paid, without necessity of filing further claims therefor, to the same person or persons, and subject to the same conditions and limitations, as though such benefits constituted a lump sum payable under the provisions of section 4 (e) of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, as amended, with respect to the death of such individual."

(b) Subsection (g) of section 5 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, as amended, is amended by inserting after the word "refund" where it first appears in such subsection the words "under this act."

(c) Subsection (h) of section 8 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(h) All provisions of law, including penalties, applicable with respect to any tax imposed by section 1800 or 2700 of the Internal Revenue Code, and the provisions of section 3661 of such code, insofar as applicable and not inconsistent with the provisions of this act, shall be applicable with respect to the contributions required by this act and the payments required by the second sentence of section 2 (f) of this act: Provided, That all authority and functions conferred by or pursuant to such provisions upon any officer or employee of the United States, except the authority to institute and prosecute, and the function of instituting and prosecuting, criminal proceedings, shall, with respect to such contributions and payments, be vested in and exercised by the Board or such officers and employees of the Board as it may designate therefor."

(d) Subsection (d) of section 9 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(d) All fines and penalties imposed by a court pursuant to this act and all criminal fines and criminal penalties imposed by a court with respect to the tax imposed under the Railroad Unemployment Tax Act (pt. II, subch. B, ch. 9, Internal Revenue Code) shall be paid to the court and remitted from time to time by order of the judge to the Treasury of the United States to be credited to the account."

(e) Subsection (e) of section 12 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, as amended, is amended by inserting after the word "refunds" where it first appears in such subsection, the words "under this act."

SAVING PROVISION

SEC. 205. Notwithstanding the amendment made by this act to subsection (g) of section 2 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, in any case in which the individual referred to in such subsection died before January 1, 1947, the accrued benefits referred to in such subsection shall be paid in accordance with the provisions of that subsection as it was in effect before it was amended by this act; and the references in that subsection, as it was in effect before such amendment, to sections 3 (f) and 5 of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937 shall be considered to be references to such sections as they were in force before the date on which title I of this act takes effect.

TITLE III—AMENDMENTS TO INTERNAL REVENUE CODE

INCREASE IN RAILROAD RETIREMENT TAX RATES

Rate of employees' tax

SEC. 301. (a) Section 1500 of the Internal Revenue Code is amended by striking out clauses Nos. 4 and 5 and by inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"4. With respect to compensation earned during the calendar year 1946, the rate shall be 3½ percent.

"5. With respect to compensation earned after December 31, 1946, the rate shall be 6 percent."

Rate of employee representatives' tax

(b) Section 1510 of the Internal Revenue Code is amended by striking out clauses Nos. 4 and 5 and by inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"4. With respect to compensation earned during the calendar year 1946, the rate shall be 7 percent.

"5. With respect to compensation earned after December 31, 1946, the rate shall be 12 percent."

Rate of employers' tax

(c) Section 1520 of the Internal Revenue Code is amended by striking out clauses Nos. 4 and 5 and by inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"4. With respect to compensation paid to employees for services rendered during the calendar year 1946, the rate shall be 3½ percent.

"5. With respect to compensation paid to employees for services rendered after December 31, 1946, the rate shall be 6 percent."

RAILROAD UNEMPLOYMENT TAX

Technical amendments

SEC. 302. (a) Subchapter B of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended, is further amended:

(1) By striking out the words and figures "Part I", "Part II", "Part III", and "Part IV" in the subheadings in such subchapter and by inserting in lieu thereof "Subpart I", "Subpart II", "Subpart III", and "Subpart IV", respectively;

(2) By striking out the word "Subchapter" in the heading of section 1537 of such subchapter and by inserting in lieu thereof "Part";

"(3) By striking out the words 'this subchapter' and 'This subchapter' wherever they appear in such subchapter and by inserting in lieu thereof 'this part' and 'This part', respectively."

(4) By inserting immediately after the heading of such subchapter the following new subheading:

"PART I—RAILROAD RETIREMENT TAX ACT"

(5) By adding at the end of such subchapter the following:

"SEC. 1538. Title of part.

"This part may be cited as the 'Railroad Retirement Tax Act'."

Railroad Unemployment Tax Act

(b) Subchapter B of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended, is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"PART II—RAILROAD UNEMPLOYMENT TAX ACT

"SEC. 1550. Rate of tax on employers:

"In addition to other taxes, every employer shall pay an excise tax, with respect to having individuals in his service, equal to the percentages set forth in the following table of so much of the compensation as is not in excess of $300 for any calendar month payable by him to any employee for services rendered to him after December 31, 1946: Provided, however, That if compensation is payable to an employee by more than one employer with respect to any such calendar month, the tax imposed by this section shall apply to not more than $300 of the aggregate compensation payable to said employee by all said employers with respect to such calendar month, and each such employer shall be liable for that proportion of the tax with respect to such compensation which the amount payable by him to the employee with respect to such calendar month bears to the aggregate compensation payable to such employee by all employers with respect to such calendar month:

If the balance to the credit of the account as of the close of business on Sept. 30 of any year, as determined by the Secretary, is:	The rate with respect to compensation payable to employees for services rendered during the next succeeding calendar year shall be:
$350,000,000 or more	½ percent.
$300,000,000 or more but less than $350,000,000	1 percent.
$250,000,000 or more but less than $300,000,000	1½ percent.
$200,000,000 or more but less than $250,000,000	2 percent.
$150,000,000 or more but less than $200,000,000	2½ percent.
Less than $150,000,000	3 percent.

On or before December 31, 1946, and on or before December 31 of each succeeding year, the Secretary shall determine and proclaim the balance to the credit of the account as of the close of business on September 30 of such year.

"SEC. 1551. Adjustments:

"If more or less than the correct amount of the tax imposed by section 1550 is paid with respect to any compensation, then, under regulations made by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, proper adjustments with respect to the tax shall be made, without interest, in connection with subsequent payments of tax under this part made by the same employer.

"SEC. 1552. Overpayments and underpayments:

"If more or less than the correct amount of the tax imposed by section 1550 is paid with respect to any compensation and the overpayment or underpayment of the tax cannot be adjusted under section 1551, the amount of the overpayment shall be refunded, or the amount of the underpayment shall be collected, in such manner and at such times (subject to the statute of limitations properly applicable thereto) as may be prescribed by regulations under this part as made by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary.

"SEC. 1553. Collection and payment of tax:

"(a) Administration: The tax imposed by this part shall be collected by the Bureau of Internal Revenue and shall be deposited by it with the Secretary, 90 percent thereof to the credit of the account and 10 percent thereof to the credit of the fund; except that 100 percent of the interest, civil fines, civil penalties, additional amounts, and additions to the tax, collected pursuant to this part, shall be credited to the account.

"(b) Time and manner of payment: The tax imposed by this part shall be collected and paid quarterly or at such other times and in such manner and under such conditions not inconsistent with this part as may be prescribed by regulations made by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary.

"(c) Addition to tax in case of delinquency: If the tax imposed by this part is not paid when due, there shall be added as part of the tax (except in the case of adjustments made in accordance with the provisions of section 1551) interest at the rate of 1 percent per month or fraction of a month from the date the tax became due until paid.

"(d) Fractional parts of a cent: In the payment of any tax under this part, a fractional part of a cent shall be disregarded unless it amounts to one-half cent or more, in which case it shall be increased to 1 cent.

"SEC. 1554. Definitions.

"As used in this part—

"(a) Employer: The term 'employer' means any carrier (as defined in subsec. (b)), and any company which is directly or indirectly owned or controlled by one or more such carriers or under common control therewith, and which operates any equipment or facility or performs any service (except trucking service, casual service, and the casual operation of equipment or facilities) in connection with the transportation of passengers or property by railroad, or the receipt, delivery, elevation, transfer in transit, refrigeration or icing, storage, or handling of property transported by railroad, and any receiver, trustee, or other individual or body, judicial or otherwise, when in the possession of the property or operating all or any part of the business of any such employer: Provided, however, That the term 'employer' shall not include any street, interurban, or suburban electric railway, unless such railway is operating as a part of a general steam-railroad system of transportation, but shall not exclude any part of the general steam-railroad system of transportation now or hereafter operated by any other motive power. The Interstate Commerce Commission is hereby authorized and directed upon request of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, or upon complaint of any party interested, to determine after hearing whether any line operated by electric power falls within the terms of this proviso. The term 'employer' shall also include railroad associations, traffic associations, tariff bureaus, demurrage bureaus, weighing and inspection bureaus, collection agencies, and other associations, bureaus, agencies, or organizations controlled and maintained wholly or principally by two or more employers as hereinbefore defined and engaged in the performance of services in connection with or incidental to railroad transportation; and railway labor organizations, national in scope, which have been or may be organized in accordance with the provisions of the Railway Labor Act, as amended, and their State and National legislative committees and their general committees and their insurance departments and their local lodges and divisions, established pursuant to the constitution and bylaws of such organizations. The term 'employer' shall not include any company by reason of its being engaged in the mining of coal, the supplying of coal to an employer where delivery is not beyond the mine tipple, and the operation of equipment or facilities therefor, or in any of such activities.

"(b) Carrier: The term 'carrier' means an express company, sleeping-car company, or carrier by railroad, subject to part I of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended.

"(c) Company: The term 'company' includes corporations, associations, and joint-stock companies.

"(d) Employee: The term 'employee' means any individual in the service of one or more employers for compensation: Provided, however, That the term 'employee' shall not include any individual in the service of a local lodge or division defined as an employer in subsection (a). The term 'employee' includes an officer of an employer. The term 'employee' shall not include any individual while such individual is engaged in the physical operations consisting of the mining of coal, the preparation of coal, the handling (other than movement by rail with standard railroad locomotives) of coal not beyond the mine tipple, or the loading of coal at the tipple.

"(e) Service: An individual is in the service of an employer whether his service is rendered within or without the United States if he is subject to the continuing authority of the employer to supervise and direct the manner of rendition of his service, which service he renders for compensation: Provided, however, That an individual shall be deemed to be in the service of an employer, other than a local lodge or division or a general committee of a railway-labor-organization employer, not conducting the principal part of its business in the United States only when he is rendering service to it in the United States; and an individual shall be deemed to be in the service of such a local lodge or division only if (1) all, or substantially all, the individuals constituting its membership are employees of an employer conducting the principal part of its business in the United States; or (2) the headquarters of such local lodge or division is located in the United States; and an individual shall be deemed to be in the service of such a general committee only if (1) he is representing a local lodge or division described in clauses (1) or (2) immediately above; or (2) all, or substantially all, the individuals represented by it are employees of an employer conducting the principal part of its business in the United States; or (3) he acts in the capacity of a general chairman or an assistant general chairman of a general committee which represents individuals rendering service in the United States to an employer, but in such case if his office or headquarters is not located in the United States and the individuals represented by such general committee are employees of an employer not conducting the principal part of its business in the United States, only such proportion of the remuneration for such service shall be regarded as compensation as the proportion which the mileage in the United States under the jurisdiction of such general committee bears to the total mileage under its jurisdiction, unless such mileage formula is inapplicable in which case such other formula as the Railroad Retirement Board may have prescribed pursuant to subsection (e) of section 1 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, as amended, shall be applicable: Provided further, That an individual not a citizen or resident of the United States shall not be deemed to be in the service of an employer when rendering service outside the United States to an employer who is required under the laws applicable in the place where the service is rendered to employ therein, in whole or in part, citizens or residents thereof.

"(f) Compensation: The term 'compensation' means any form of money remuneration earned by an individual for services rendered as an employee to one or more employers, including remuneration for time lost as an employee, but remuneration for time lost shall be deemed earned on the day on which such time is lost. Such term does not include tips, or the voluntary payment by an employer, without deduction from the remuneration of the employee, of the tax imposed on such employee by section 1500.

"(g) Account: The term 'account' means the railroad unemployment insurance account established pursuant to section 10 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, as amended, in the unemployment trust fund.

"(h) Fund: The term 'fund' means the railroad unemployment insurance administration fund established pursuant to section 11 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, as amended.

"(i) United States: The term 'United States,' when used in a geographical sense, means the States, Alaska, Hawaii, and the District of Columbia.

"(j) State: The term 'State' means any of the States, Alaska, Hawaii, or the District of Columbia.

"SEC. 1555. Penalties:

"(a) Prohibition on deduction of tax: The tax imposed by this part shall not be deducted by the employer, in whole or in part, from the compensation of employees in his employ. Any employer, or officer or agent of an employer, who violates any provision of this subsection shall, upon conviction, be punished for each such violation by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding 1 year, or both.

"(b) Prohibition on requiring employee to bear tax: Any agreement by an employee to pay all or any portion of the tax imposed on his employer by this part shall be void, and it shall be unlawful for any employer, or officer or agent of an employer, to make, require, or permit any employee to bear all or any portion of such tax. Any employer, or officer or agent of an employer, who violates any provision of this subsection shall, upon conviction, be punished for each such violation by a fine of not more than $10,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding 1 year, or both.

"SEC. 1556. Rules and regulations:

"The Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall make and publish such rules and regulations as may be necessary for the enforcement of this part.

"SEC. 1557. Other laws applicable:

"All provisions of law, including penalties, applicable with respect to any tax imposed by section 2700 or section 1800, insofar as applicable and not inconsistent with the provisions of this part, shall be applicable with respect to the tax imposed by this part.

"SEC. 1558. Title of part:

"This part may be cited as the 'Railroad Unemployment Tax Act'."

DEPOSIT OF COLLECTIONS

SEC. 303. Section 3971 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following paragraph:

"'(4) Tax collected under Railroad Unemployment Tax Act.—All taxes (including all interest, civil fines, civil penalties, additional amounts, and additions to the tax) collected pursuant to the Railroad Unemployment Tax Act shall be deposited directly with the Secretary, or with any Federal Reserve bank, or with any other bank designated by the Secretary, pursuant to section 10 of the act of June 11, 1942 (56 Stat. 356; 12 U. S. C., Supp. IV, 265) or pursuant to the act of June 19, 1922 (42 Stat. 662; 31 U. S. C., 1940 ed., 473), to receive such deposits, but the officer receiving or collecting the same, to be credited in accordance with section 1553 (a).'"

TITLE IV—EFFECTIVE DATES OF TITLES I AND II

SEC. 401. Titles I and II of this act shall take effect January 1, 1947.

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to amend the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937 and the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, and for other purposes."

The explanation of the bill and amendment submitted by Mr. CAPEHART is as follows:

H. R. 1362—AN AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE

EXPLANATION OF THE BILL

In its present form the bill proposes numerous and substantial changes in the existing railroad retirement and unemployment insurance statutes, and in related provisions of the internal-revenue laws, the major proposals, stated briefly, being as follows:

Extension of coverage to freight forwarders not controlled by railroads, to railroad-controlled trucking companies, and to certain companies whose services are used by railroads.

New definition of employment relation which both lessened and broadened the class of individuals who could claim prior-service credit.

Disability annuities payable without reduction to individuals of age 60 or over regardless of length of service, and to those with 10 years of service regardless of age; in each instance with respect to permanent disability preventing the employee from engaging in any regular employment for hire.

Disability annuities payable to individuals with a "current connection with the railroad industry" if (1) having 20 years of service, regardless of age, or (2) if 60 years of age, regardless of length of service; in each instance with respect to permanent disability preventing the employee from engaging in his regular occupation.

Survivor benefits corresponding in general to those under social security but at approximately a 25-percent higher level as to amount and coordinated with social-security benefits in a manner raising difficult administrative problems; these benefits to be payable to all survivors of employees, annuitants, and pensioners regardless of whether death occurred before the effective date.

Minimum annuity provisions, on a more liberal basis than the existing minimum, for those having 5 years of service and a "current connection with the railroad industry."

Increase in the retirement tax rate to 11½ percent until 1949, 12 percent from 1949 to 1951, and 12½ percent thereafter.

Proposal that the function of collecting the retirement taxes (now exercised by the Bureau of Internal Revenue) be transferred to the Railroad Retirement Board; and that the retirement taxing provisions be removed from the Internal Revenue Code and made a part of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937.

Larger unemployment-insurance benefits for those with high base-year earnings and longer duration of benefits for all.

Sickness and maternity benefits on the same basis as the unemployment insurance system. No change was proposed in the present rate of unemployment insurance contributions by the carriers, the assumption being that the present rate would be sufficient to finance the proposed new sickness and maternity benefits as well as unemployment insurance.

A change in the wage basis for taxes and benefits, so that, instead of excluding amounts in excess of $300 earned in any month, amounts in excess of $300 earned in a month and could be counted up to an aggregate, for a calendar year, of $300 multiplied by the number of months of service in the year.

EXPLANATION OF THE PROVISIONS OF THE AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE

This amendment proposes to amend the existing Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, and subchapter B of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code. These statutory provisions now embody the law in reference to benefits receivable and taxes and contributions payable by railway employees, as well as taxes and contributions payable by carriers.

While the amendment proposed does not grant all of the new benefits proposed by the bill, it takes away no present benefits now existing in favor of the employees which the introduced bill would not have taken away, it preserves certain of such benefits which the introduced bill would have taken away, and adds several new benefit provisions to existing law. The proposed amendment provides, in substance, for:

CREATING A BENEFICIAL RIGHT IN BEHALF OF SURVIVING DEPENDENTS OF EMPLOYEES TO SPECIFIED MONTHLY BENEFITS

Under this amendment the new survivor benefits to be paid operate in favor of the same dependents as under the Social Security Act. The time and amount of payments to the surviving beneficiaries are likewise computed, so far as is practicable, in the same manner as under the Social Security Act.

Under the present law, the employee beneficiary has an optional right to allot a percentage of his retirement benefits to his surviving widow, in which case his own annuity is reduced. Under the plan proposed the surviving dependents would be entitled to benefits in their own right. The benefits so provided are granted without reducing the benefit available to the employee.

In addition to making provision for new survivor benefits, the amendment preserves the death benefit provided for under present law, so far as it has accrued to an individual up to January 1, 1947, reduced by such amounts as may be paid under the new survivor-benefit provisions.

NEW CLASSES OF BENEFICIARIES ON ACCOUNT OF OCCUPATIONAL DISABILITY, AND LIBERALIZATION OF PRESENT DISABILITY ANNUITY PROVISIONS

This amendment adds new provisions to present law, providing for payment of full retirement annuities to employees permanently disabled as a result of occupational injury or disease if they meet either of the following specifications:

(a) Disabled for any regular employment for hire and having 10 or more years of service;

(b) Disable for employment in their regular railroad occupation, having 20 or more yeas of sevice or being 60 years of age or over, and having a current connection with the railroad industry.

Under the present law, annuities are paid to employees who are totally and permanently disabled from any cause and who are unable to perform any regular employment. In order to qualify, they must either have 30 years of service or be 60 years of age or over. For those qualifying with 30 years of service the full annuity is paid, but for those qualifying only by being age 60 or over, a reduction is provided. The proposed amendment allows these provisions to remain as at present, execpt that the reduction for those qualifying only by reason of age is eliminated both for existing annuitants and for future ones.

REDUCTION OF RETIREMENT AGE FOR WOMEN

Under this amendment, female employees who have had 30 years of service may retire at age 60 on a full annuity. Under the present law, women have the same retirement provisions as men, namely, that the full annuity is not payable until age 65, although optional retirement between 60 and 65 can take place for those with 30 years of service, but with a reduction in the annuity.

LIBERALIZATION OF MINIMUM ANNUITY PROVISIONS

This amendment provides for increased minimums, applicable with respect to all types of annuities for those having 5 or more years of service and a current connection with the railroad industry, or for those who have completed 20 years of service and were railroad employees when they attained age 65. Provision is made that the annuities of those now on the rolls will be increased if the new minimum provisions apply.

Under the present law, the minimum annuities payable are on a smaller basis than under the proposal and, moreover, apply only to annuities payable upon retirement at age 65 or later where the individual was an employee when he attained age 65 and had completed 20 years of service.

AN INCREASE IN THE TAX AS TO RETIREMENT BENEFITS IN ORDER TO FINANCE THE PROPOSED BENEFIT CHANGES

The actuary retained by the House committee estimates that the amendments listed above will require additional income equivalent to approximately 1½ percent of pay roll, itemized as follows:

	Cost as percentage of pay roll	Cost on basis of $4,000,000,000 pay roll
Survivor benefits [1]	1.2	$48,000,000
New occupational disability benefits [2]	.2	8,000,000
Women retiring at age 60 with 30 years of service	.02	800,000
New minimum annuity provisions	.3	12,000,000
Total additional	1.72	68,800,000

[1] Net total after allowing for cost savings due to partial elimination of present death benefits.

[2] Including additional cost for paying full annuities, rather than reduced ones, to present disability annuitants qualifying at age 60 with less than 30 years of service.

NOTE.—The figures shown above for estimated costs are single values on a "most probable" basis and do not indicate the range of variation inherent in such estimates.

INCREASE IN THE TAX AS TO RETIREMENT BENEFITS IN ORDER TO PUT THE PRESENT RAILROAD RETIREMENT SYSTEM ON A SOUND ACTUARIAL LEVEL-PAYMENT BASIS

This is accomplished by a proposal to add 3 percent to the existing ultimate tax of 7½ percent, half payable by the employers and half by the employees. The actuarial advisory committee, under the railroad retirement system, in its latest report for the 3-year period ending December 31, 1941, found that an additional tax of 3.32 percent was desirable at that time to place the retirement system on a sound actuarial level-payment basis. The actuary retained by the House committee estimates that an additional 3-percent tax would substantially assure a sound basis for the railroad-retirement system.

The total necessary increase in the ultimate tax rate of 7½ percent in 1949 and thereafter provided under the present act is thus determined to be 4½ percent, making a total tax rate of 12 percent. It is recommended that this tax rate be adopted effective January 1, 1947, which is the effective date provided in this amendment for the various benefit changes. Under the present act the combined tax schedule is 7 percent until 1949 and 7½ percent thereafter. It is desirable to have the taxes on a level-payment basis after 1946 rather than having a slight increase in 1949 and level thereafter.

REDUCTION IN THE UNEMPLOYMENT-INSURANCE TAX RATE

Under this amendment, the tax rate for unemployment insurance will be reduced from the existing 3 percent to varying amounts going as low as one-half percent, depending on the size of the unemployment-insurance account. On the basis of its present size of over $700,000,000 the tax rate would be one-half percent. Under the present law, no provision for tax-rate reduction is made when the experience is favorable and a large fund has been built up.

COLLECTION OF UNEMPLOYMENT-INSURANCE TAX

This amendment provides for the collection of the unemployment-insurance tax after January 1, 1947, by the Bureau of Internal Revenue rather than by the Railroad Retirement Board as at present. Amendments to the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act and the Internal Revenue Code are included to effect this change. The taxes for the support of the railroad-retirement system are now collected by the Bureau of Internal Revenue under provisions of the Internal Revenue Code.

The newspaper statement presented by Mr. CAPEHART is as follows:

On May 11, 1946, the newspaper Labor, which is the official organ of the Railway Labor Executives Association, who are, in turn, sponsors of the bills H. R. 1362 and S. 293, had this to say:

"The extremely modest amendments proposed by the railroad unions are very briefly, but accurately, stated:

"1. Widows of railroad workers are to have pensions as a matter of right. Such a provision is to be found in practically all modern social-security legislation. Nothing revolutionary about that.

"2. A minimum pension of $50 a month is fixed for low-paid railroad workers who have devoted their lives to the industry. Thousands of them are now getting pensions of less than $50 a month.

"3. The totally disabled railroad worker—the man who, because of what he gave to the industry, is no longer able to hold a job in the industry—is treated somewhat more generously than at present.

"4. Finally, the tax is increased so as to make the railroad retirement system, as well as the railroad unemployment-insurance system, absolutely sound. The figures in every instance are based on the advice of the most competent actuaries in this country.

"These are the essential amendments. There are other slight changes, but they are not important."

Again, in the issue of Labor of May 18, 1946, the same newspaper repeated the statement on page 3, in the following language:

"As Labor has pointed out on a dozen occasions, the amendments may be stated very briefly.

"Widows of rail workers are to have pensions as a matter of right. A minimum pension of $50 a month is fixed for low-paid railroad workers. Those disabled for further railroad work are treated a little more generously than at present. Finally, the tax is increased to make the retirement system absolutely sound.

"This is practically all there is to the legislation which the railroad lobby and its supporters say is 'very complex.'"

Both of these articles appeared during the time that the bill was under consideration in the House of Representatives.

Mr. CAPEHART. The substitute bill that I am offering today gives to labor the four features which their official paper says is what they want, and I urge the Senate to consider the substitute.

AMENDMENT OF RAILROAD RETIREMENT ACTS—AMENDMENTS

Mr. REED and Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma each submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them, respectively, to the bill (H. R. 1362) to amend the Railroad Retirement Acts, the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, and subchapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code; and for other purposes, which were severally ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

CONFLICTING INTERPRETATIONS OF TRANSPORTATION POLICY—EDITORIAL FROM MORNING NEWS, OF WILMINGTON, DEL.

[Mr. TUNNELL asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "To End a Dilemma," published in the Morning News of Wilmington, Del., of the issue of July 15, 1946, which appears in the Appendix.]

PRICE CONTROL—EDITORIAL COMMENT

[Mr. MYERS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "Ignoring the Facts," published in the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin of July 15, 1946; and an editorial entitled "Work Together To Curb Food Prices," published in the Philadelphia Inquirer of July 18, 1946, which appear in the Appendix.]

WITHOUT A SONG—EDITORIAL BY OSCAR RAPPAPORT

[Mr. PEPPER asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "Without a Song," written by Oscar Rappaport, and printed in the July 3 edition of the Summer Gator, a newspaper published by the summer-school students of the University of Florida, Gainesville, Fla., which appears in the Appendix.]

CLAIMS OF CONFEDERATED SALISH AND KOOTENAI TRIBES

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, when the calendar was called on Wednesday last the Senate passed, without objection, Senate 2428, a bill which came from the Committee on Indian Affairs, conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to adjust the claims of the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes of Indians on the Flathead Reservation. The bill was unanimously reported by the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The House has passed a bill which is practically identical, except for an amendment which the Senate committee, in conformity with a suggestion of the Department of Justice, reported to the Senate bill. The House bill is now on the table here, and I ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the Senate bill was passed be reconsidered, and that the House bill be taken up and amended in order to conform to the bill passed by the Senate. That will obviate a conference.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, has the amendment to which the Senator refers been seen by the minority members of the committee, and does it have their approval?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The amendment was seen by all the members of the committee, and it has the approval of the entire committee. I have just consulted with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. LANGER].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the bill (H. R. 6983) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render judgment in any and all claims which the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes of Indians of the Flathead Reservation in Montana, or any tribe or band thereof, may have against the United States, and for other purposes, which was read twice by its title.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Wyoming? The Chair hears none, and the vote by which Senate bill 2428 was passed is reconsidered, and House bill 6983 is before the Senate and open to amendment.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I move that on page 2, line 3, after the name "United States," the remainder of the paragraph down to and including the word "Indians", in line 19, be stricken out.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, line 3, after the name "United States", it is proposed to strike out the words, "including, but not limiting the generality of the foregoing, claims arising under or growing out of the treaty of July 16, 1855 (12 Stat. 975; 2 Kappler 722), or any subsequent treaty or agreement, act of Congress, or Executive order, or by reason of any lands taken from said Indians by acts of Congress or otherwise, including lands lost to them by erroneous surveys, or lands opened to settlement, or used for dam, power, and reservoir sites and irrigation projects, or loss of lands by submergence by erection of reservoirs, without compensation and without their consent given in the usual manner, or for the failure or refusal of the United States to protect the interests of any of said Indians in lands as to which they had or claimed possessory right of use and occupancy, or because of any mismanagement or wrongful handling of any of the funds, lands, properties, or business enterprises belonging to or held in trust for said Indians."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, Senate bill 2428 will be indefinitely postponed.

REPORT ON SECOND PARIS MEETING OF COUNCIL OF FOREIGN MINISTERS

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, on June 15, there met in Paris the Council of Foreign Ministers to consider and undertake the drafting of peace treaties for Italy, Bulgaria, Rumania, Hungary, and Finland. At the request of the President of the United States and the Secretary of State, the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] and I attended the conference as advisers to the Honorable James F. Byrnes, the Secreary of State.

After a session of 4 weeks, the Council recessed to await the meeting of a peace conference of the 21 nations who participated in military operations against the Axis Powers affected and who are therefore proper parties to the treaties.

In the month's deliberations, Secretary of State Byrnes ably and aggressively represented the views and the interests of the United States. The Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] performed his duties with great ability, zeal, and energy. The Secretary of State and the Senator from Michigan have already made eloquent and comprehensive reports on the actions of the Council. On the whole, the Secretary of State and his advisers were in agreement upon all of the issues which the United States delegation urged before the Conference.

The Council of Foreign Ministers was established at the Potsdam Conference, where the following agreement was reached:

II. Establishment of a Council of Foreign Ministers: The conference reached an agreement for the establishment of a Council of Foreign Ministers representing the five principal powers to continue the necessary preparatory work for the peace settlement and to take up other matters which from time to time may be referred to the Council by agreeement of the governments participating in the Council.

Later, at the Moscow conference, attended by the Foreign Ministers of the United States, Russia, and Great Britain, it was agreed that the Council of Foreign Ministers should prepare treaties of peace with Italy, Rumania, Bulgaria, Hungary, and Finland. It was further agreed that when the preparation of these drafts had been completed, the Council of Foreign Ministers would convoke a peace conference for the purpose of considering the treaties of peace with these five countries, and that the conference should consist of the five members of the Council of Foreign Ministers, together with the members of the United Nations which actively waged war with substantial military force against the European Axis states. These states are as follows: Australia, Belgium, Brazil, White Russia, Canada, China, Czechoslovakia, Ethiopia, France, Great Britain, Greece, India, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, the Ukraine, the Union of South Africa, the Soviet Union, the United States, and Yugoslavia.

It was also agreed that after the conclusion of the deliberations of the conference and upon consideration of its recommendations, the states signatory to the terms of the armistice with such nations will draw up the final texts of the peace treaties. These treaties, when signed by the appropriate states, will be submitted for ratification and will come into force immediately after such ratification by the Allied states signatory to the respective armistices.

It was under these authorizations that the Council of Foreign Ministers met in London in September 1945, where their labors were carried on for many months through their deputies. It was under this same authority that the first Council of Foreign Ministers to be convened at Paris met on April 15, 1946. It will be recalled that this conference was attended by Secretary of State Byrnes, together with the Senator from Michigan and the senior Senator from Texas, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations. It will also be remembered that few positive or definite results were obtained at the conference. It was then determined that the Council of Foreign Ministers should again convene in Paris on June 15, 1946. The Council labored diligently for 4 weeks. During its sessions, substantial progress was achieved toward the agreement upon and the drafting of peace treaties for the five nations already mentioned.

Apart from Germany and Austria, the following were among the more important problems receiving the consideration of the Council:

First. The calling of a peace conference to be participated in by the 21 nations who fought against the Axis and who are to be affected by the final five treaties;

Second. The settlement of the difficult and explosive question of Trieste and its status for the future;

Third. The disposition of the Italian colonies;

Fourth. The permanent status of the Dodecanese Islands;

Fifth. The disposition of the Italian Navy and merchant vessels;

Sixth. The issue of Russian reparations against Italy;

Seventh. The territorial settlement relating to the South Tyrol;

Eighth. Territorial readjustments between France and Italy with respect to Briga and Tenda;

Ninth. The preparation of treaties with Finland, Hungary, Rumania, and Bulgaria.

According to my view the outstanding achievement of the Council was the calling of a peace conference to be attended by representatives of the 21 nations who were at war with the Axis Powers and who are vitally concerned with the treaties. It is so fundamental that the nations who made war and shed their blood as comrades in the mighty holocaust and whose wounds we are undertaking to heal, should in fact and in truth determine the terms of peace, that no argument is required to establish the soundness or the justice of such a procedure. Under the leadership of Secretary Byrnes, the American demand for the calling of a peace conference was put clearly and firmly before the Council. At first it met with resistance. However, as the sessions progressed and problems were gradually solved, the resistance lessened and finally agreement was reached to convene the conference in Paris on July 29. In the Moscow agreement it had been stipulated that a peace conference would be called by May 1, 1946. This pledge, which it had been impossible to keep, was strongly urged and pressed before the Council by the Secretary of State. It was felt that the Council could not break faith with the 21 nations involved and that its solemn pledge should be redeemed.

We may therefore look forward with hope and expectation to the convening in Paris of the accredited representatives of the 21 nations involved. There, in a free and open forum, the views and attitudes of the various nations may be made known and the various political, economic, and territorial aspects of the peace settlement shall be given full and complete consideration. It is contemplated that the peace conference will express its views upon all the issues involved, including both those which have been agreed upon by the Council of Foreign Ministers as well as those remaining undetermined by the Council. The convening of the peace conference is entirely consistent with the historic practice among free nations. The peoples of the nations who furnished armies with which to fight the war are entitled to write the terms of the peace by which they are to be governed.

It is inconceivable that the Council of Foreign Ministers will arbitrarily disregard the recommendations and decisions of the peace conference. The 21 nations represented there will make their own rules of procedure and will not be hampered by any rule of unanimity or veto. The conference should, and I feel hopeful, constitute a truly democratic assembly with freedom of expression and debate. The peace treaties, unless they reflect the real views and wishes of the nations affected, can never form the basis for a permanent and satisfactory peace. The Council of Foreign Ministers have furnished and will continue to furnish leadership and direction. The final determination, however, must rest with the peoples of the nations affected. In their judgment alone, in their decision alone, in their wishes alone, can properly be constructed lasting genuine treaties of peace.

The disposition of Trieste was a most difficult and perplexing problem. It was not without long and stubborn controversy that it was resolved. The city of Trieste has a long and historic background. In A. D. 948 it received an independent existence under Count-Bishops and this position was maintained down to its capture by Venice in 1202. For the next 180 years its history consisted chiefly of a series of conflicts with Venice, which were finally ended by Trieste placing itself in 1382 under the protection of Leopold of Austria. This overlordship developed into actual possession and except in the Napoleonic period Trieste remained an integral part of the Austrian dominions until 1918, when, at the end of World War I, it and the Istrian Peninsula were awarded to Italy. Trieste is a prosperous seaport with shipbuilding and other industries. It is located on the Istrian Peninsula. Prior to World War I, it was the maritime gateway to Austria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, and the Danubian states. Its railway lines extended into this vast hinterland.

In 1915 prior to Italy's entrance into World War I, Italy had proposed to Austria that Trieste should be created an autonomous state. More than 80 percent of the people of the city of Trieste proper are of Italian blood. The immediately contiguous territories are largely Yugoslav. In the Istrian Peninsula there are other cities similarly populated by a majority of Italian blood. The population of the peninsula, however, outside of Trieste is predominately Yugoslav.

The Soviet Union strongly pressed the claims of Yugoslavia for the possession, not alone of the city of Trieste, but of the entire Istrian Peninsula and of portions of other territory under the dominion of Italy. Their arguments consisted of the claim that Yugoslavia was a comrade in the war against the Axis and fought valiantly, whereas Italy had made war upon the United Nations. It was further urged that geographically and commercially Trieste was essentially linked with Yugoslavia and the territories to the east.

At the London Conference of Foreign Ministers, it had been agreed that the deputies and experts should determine upon a so-called ethnic line across the Istrian Peninsula. The line was to be so drawn as to leave the smallest number of Italians within Yugoslavia and similarly, the smallest number of Yugoslavs under Italian dominion.

There were American, British, French, and Russian lines drawn by the respective states. The United States, Great Britain, and France supported the claims of Italy for Trieste. After long and zealous discussions, which were renewed from time to time, France proposed that the city of Trieste and the major territory west of the French line, which was the farthermost west of the lines, with the exception of that proposed by Russia, should be incorporated in a free territory and be awarded neither to Italy nor Yugoslavia. The proposal provided that the territory would be governed by its own elected legislature and by a governor appointed by the Security Council of the United Nations.

The United States insisted that the free territory should be protected by the Security Council rather than by Italy and Yugoslavia or by the four principal Allied Powers. Final acceptance of the French proposal was had in principle and the general principles of its government were determined. The plan adopted will contribute to the continued development of Trieste as a port and a commercial metropolis to serve, not alone Yugoslavia, but Austria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, and Danubian territories. To have awarded Trieste to either Italy or Yugoslavia would probably have precipitated a continuous political and racial agitation with accompanying bitterness and danger to the peace of that area.

It is the belief of the American delegation that the solution adopted is best for the future welfare of Trieste and its people and will contribute to the welfare of the world in preventing bitter and provocative controversy that might result in bloodshed and war. The placing of responsibility for the selection of the governor and for guaranteeing the protection and security of Trieste upon the Security Council of the United Nations will add greatly to the prestige and power of the United Nations. It will afford the Security Council a splendid opportunity to demonstrate its high functions of preserving the peace and in vetoing war before it engulfs innocent peoples in misery and blood. It will also enable the Security Council to work out and develop policies and methods with which it can deal with similarly troublesome and dangerous situations.

Final disposition of the Italian colonies—a problem that promised serious difficulty—was postponed on the suggestion of Secretary Byrnes. The Soviet Union abandoned its original claim for the trusteeship of territory in north Africa as a base for its merchant ships. It will be recalled that it had made such a claim as to Tripolitania or Libya. Agreement was eventually reached upon a plan whereby final disposition of the colonies should be determined by the four principal Allied Powers who were to take into account the desires and ultimate welfare of the peoples involved, as well as the situation of neighboring and other interested governments. If no agreement is reached by the four principal Allied Governments within a year after the effective date of the treaty, they are obligated to accept the recommendations of the General Assembly of the United Nations as to the final disposition of the colonies. Here again is invoked the power of the United Nations. Again its prestige and its possibilities for high service are enhanced and strengthened. The sanction of 51 nations is to approve and ordain international settlements in behalf of concord and peace. The crystallized public opinion of peace-loving nations of the world will impart dignity and respect and strength to such settlements.

The Dodecanese Islands were returned to Greece. The Soviet Union had theretofore made some claim upon those islands in order to secure a base; but the Soviet Union relinquished its claim for a base in the islands. It was also provided that the islands should be demilitarized so as to preclude the establishment of a naval or military base.

Slight rectifications of the French and Italian boundaries were also provided for in the Briga and Tenda districts. Strategic considerations were the primary purpose in these adjustments. However, the rights of Italy with respect to the water power and electric resources were fully protected and guaranteed.

There was no change made in the boundary between Austria and Italy as it affects the South Tyrol. This territory has been under Italian jurisdiction since World War I and it was regarded as inadvisable to make any change in its present status.

The Soviet Union made a claim for reparations against Italy in the sum of $100,000,000. While it was agreed that such reparations should be granted, there was sharp division of views respecting the sources from which they should be derived. It was finally agreed that Italian external assets, together with war plants not needed nor required for civilian production, should be applied to such reparations. Russia urged that the balance should be paid from current Italian production. Upon United States insistence it was provided, however, that Russia should supply to Italy the raw materials from which such production was to be manufactured, on commercial terms, and that the value of such raw materials should be deducted from the price of the finished products when delivered to Russia. It was further understood that such reparations should be extended over a period of 7 years with an initial moratorium of 2 years in the interest of the rehabilitation and reconstruction of Italy. The United States was successful in its views with respect to this controversy.

The size of the Italian Navy was limited and the warships above the allowed limit were awarded to the four principal Allied Nations for allocation. One of those warships will go to Greece, and probably one or two others to other Allied Nations.

The Council reached no agreement with regard to the German and Austrian questions. However, exhaustive discussion of the problems which took place was not without value. A better understanding of the various aspects of the questions with which the Council will be required to struggle at a later date was reached.

Secretary Byrnes submitted the draft of a treaty providing for the demilitarization and disarmament of Germany for a period of 25 years. Complaint was made by the Soviets that the proposals were inadequate and that the treaty did not provide for reparations for Russia. There were conflicting claims. On the one hand, the Soviets claimed that they had reports that in the British zone disarmament of the military forces had not been accomplished. On the other hand, the representative of Great Britain advised that he had reports that in the Soviet zone German war plants were being operated. Secretary Byrnes strongly urged that the Control Commission investigate all of these reports, but no definite agreement was reached.

It was then proposed by the Soviets that a special session of the Council on the German problem be held. Secretary Byrnes agreed, and urged the setting of a definite date and the appointment of deputies to begin a study of the German questions in order to ascertain the points of disagreement. It is likely that such a meeting of the ministers will be held later in the year.

Some of the issues involved in the German settlement are the Saar Basin, claimed by France, and the control and regulation of industry in the Ruhr. The Soviets also demanded $10,000,000,000 in reparations from Germany. It had been determined at Potsdam that Germany was to be administered as an economic whole. But in fact, under the present arrangement providing for four-power control, this plan is not being so administered. The present lack of cooperation among the four powers is not contributing to the reconstruction or the recovery of commerce and industry in Germany. It was not possible to reach an agreement for the rectification of this situation. However, Secretary Byrnes gave notice that the United States would cooperate with any one or more of the occupied zones as an economic unit and that such arrangement would be open on equal terms to the governments of the other zones. This was in an effort to make it possible for the people of the four zones to trade and carry on commerce without the handicaps and impediments which now face them. This proposal was intended to promote the rehabilitation of industry and the revival of normal commerce and business in Germany. The action of Secretary Byrnes is to be highly commended, and I feel certain that it will secure substantial results.

In the case of Austria, Secretary Byrnes advanced a proposed draft treaty recognizing the independence of Austria and directing the withdrawal of occupying armies. The Soviets submitted a counter proposition with regard to the denazification of Austria and introduced the claim that a large number of displaced persons in Austria should be removed on the ground that they were hostile to their interests. Unfortunately, no progress was made with respect to Austria and the problem will await further action by the Council of Foreign Ministers.

The peace treaties with the five nations provide that armies of occupation must be withdrawn from the respective territories 90 days after the ratification of the treaties, except where troops are necessary to protect a line of communications. This was particularly desirable as to Austria. If the armies could be withdrawn from Austria, there would be no necessity for the maintenance of troops and communication lines in some of the other countries. It was the objective of Secretary Byrnes to remove such armies of occupation at the earliest possible moment so that the people of these nations might devote their energies to the rebuilding of their industry and commerce and agriculture. It was further hoped that they might devote themselves to the reform of their governments and the establishment of free institutions.

Whatever success we may have had at Paris, we must remember that the 21-nation conference will be only one step down the long and rocky road to a final peace. Above all, we must never lose sight of the fact that Germany remains far and away the most important single element in the peace settlement. Thus far we have merely skirted the edges of Europe's major peace problem.

A number of other questions upon which agreement was reached must also be submitted to the peace conference to receive approval or rejection and appropriate recommendations to the Council by the conference. It is possible that the Council of Foreign Ministers will meet either contemporaneously with the peace conference or shortly thereafter to receive the recommendations of the conference and to make final draft of the treaties for submission to the various governments for their signature and ratification. These processes seem long and intricate. However, they possess valuable qualities. Through the interchange of views among the Foreign Ministers and at the peace conference, every phase of these difficult problems is illuminated and discussed. It makes for better understanding, and contributes toward agreement on the problems that vex so many nations of the world.

This fact was made apparent at the recent meeting of the Foreign Ministers. The April conference was disappointing and disheartening. When we left for Paris in June, there were those who felt that the signs pointed toward another rather dismal failure. We were determined to exhaust every resource to secure results. Our quest for peace must be persistent and continuous. The stakes are so important that even repeated rebuffs must not deter us. No effort must be relaxed as we struggle to find a workable compromise to enable us to project our gallant comradeship of war into a comradeship of peace.

This was the thought that was uppermost in our minds as we left for Paris. And our determination to do everything within our power to bring about peace was not without avail. Whereas the April meeting was practically without any satisfactory results, the meeting in June did secure favorable results in many particulars. This time we did not come home empty-handed. I quote Secretary Byrnes:

> Now the prospects for peace treaties with five nations is bright. We are on the road back to peace.

The Council did not reach agreement on all questions, but it did achieve substantial and important results and set in motion plans for the ultimate settlement of remaining problems. Peace conferences usually require much time. Notable examples are the Congress of Vienna and the lengthy negotiations of the American States with England following the War of the Revolution. Time is precious, but it is not too precious to be devoted to the cause of peace and the adjustment of quarrels that may disturb that peace.

What were the main achievements of the Council? They might be listed as follows:

First. The calling of the Peace Conference on July 29.

Second. The agreement to accord to the 21 nations at the Conference complete freedom of discussion and recommendation.

Third. The development of a better understanding among the great powers. That was most significant. There was a different spirit and a different attitude at the conference just adjourned than there was at the one preceding.

Fourth. The draft treaty with Italy, including the internationalization of Trieste, reparations, and agreements with respect to the disposition of the Italian colonies, and the award of the Dodecanese Islands to Greece.

Fifth. Real progress with respect to the treaties with the ex-satellite states—Hungary, Finland, Rumania, and Bulgaria.

Sixth. The decision to submit to the Peace Conference all questions upon which the Council of Foreign Ministers could not reach agreement.

Seventh. The tentative understanding that Austria and Germany shall be considered later in the year by the Council of Foreign Ministers.

I make no claim that the settlements reached were in each case the most desirable. They were not perfect, but they were settlements. It must be remembered that all of them were the result of compromise. The United States alone could not enforce its own views in each particular. There had to be negotiation and adjustment. Different views had to be reconciled, and they could be reconciled only through the process of compromise.

During the Paris sessions, my thoughts frequently were carried back to the Constitutional Convention which met during the summer of 1787. Seemingly insuperable differences of opinion among the delegates arose. The contentions of the big States and the small States, sectional differences, political and industrial questions, vexed and harassed the participants. However, through compromise and the supreme will to agree, the Constitution emerged from the Convention as the result of compromise and the adjustment of views. One hundred and fifty years of history have nobly demonstrated the sublimity of the Constitution of the United States as a charter of government.

The Council of Foreign Ministers has traveled a hard road. Representing the nations which played the dominant part in the war and upon whose resources the world must depend for the maintenance of peace, they had at the same time to mediate among the conflicting claims of the nations affected by any settlement and to make that settlement just and fair in the interests of world peace and security. Europe was still torn by hunger and strife, and some of the countries had no representative government. A beginning at peacemaking had to be made wherever it could be made.

The United States delegation will pursue the consideration by the peace conference of all the issues coming before that body, and will aid in their adjustment. We shall cooperate in the Council of Foreign Ministers in drafting the final treaties and submitting them to the interested states for their signatures and ratification.

We shall then undertake to aid in the solution of the Austrian and German problems, with the complex and difficult questions involved. We want to see the state of war brought to an end. We want the peoples, even of the enemy states, to have an opportunity to rebuild their shattered fortunes and to restore their economy. We want to take arms out of their hands, and replace them with implements and tools of industry and agriculture. We want to drive from their minds dreams of aggression and conquest, and turn them to the adoption of free and democratic institutions and to respect for the rights of other nations and their peoples.

We do not want to impose cruel and brutal terms of peace, but we mean to impose terms that shall mean real and enduring peace and the extirpation of armed aggression.

At the meetings in Paris the views of the United States were respected and given recognition. The other powers were convinced that the United States was serving no selfish purpose. They were aware that the United States was demanding no territories; that it was demanding no reparations; that it was seeking the peace of the world, and peace alone. This knowledge gave an eloquent and convincing appeal to the voice of the Secretary of State as he advanced the views of the United States.

The representatives of the other three governments knew that the United States had made the most tremendous financial sacrifices of all the Allied powers in waging the war against the Axis. They knew that the United States had generously, through lend-lease, sent arms, food, and supplies to the Allied armies. They knew of the huge armies which the United States had raised, armed, equipped and sent across the seas to wage war against the minions of aggression and conquest. They knew how the United States had spanned the oceans and sent its heroic fighting men from the far-flung Pacific to Europe, Africa, and the Middle East. They knew that these tremendous exertions, that these sacrifices greater than had ever been made in the history of warfare, were expended solely in the interest of world peace and the suppression of armed aggression and conquest, over the innocent and peace-loving peoples of the earth. They knew that we had sent hundreds of millions of dollars for food and relief in Europe and that many other millions will follow. The other nations know that the United States believes that Europe's recovery is necessary for the welfare of the world. They know that we do not believe this is any time for the assessment of monstrous and crushing reparations.

The fact that the program of the United States is not tinged with political partisanship gives us strength in the councils of the nations. I thank the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] for contributing to that end. The happy situation that our people are not divided on international issues by narrow and selfish partisanship drowns any hope among foreign interests that through division and schism our people can be weakened or undermined. This was made abundantly apparent at the Paris conference. Entire and complete unity made unassailable the American position.

And what shall be our course in the future toward our allies and associates—both the great powers and the small powers?

The United States must maintain and pursue its traditional and historical international policy toward all nations. Our rights must be asserted and enforced with firmness and resolution. We shall not tolerate any form of aggression, whether by armed might or more subtle infiltration or insidious attack upon our system of government and free institutions. Whether it be Russia or the Republic of Panama, whether it be Great Britain or New Zealand, we shall respect their rights and shall expect and demand that they recognize and respect ours. We shall court the friendship and good will of all nations.

We pray God that we shall never again be forced to draw the sword in defense of our security. All the world knows that we want to live in peace. All the world knows that we can wage war. All the world knows that we shall not refuse to fight when attacked or when our security is threatened. While tenaciously attached to peace we must not and shall not neglect our national defense.

The United States must maintain an adequate Army, highly trained and properly equipped. It now has the greatest and most powerful Navy on the planet. It must continue to possess such a Navy. The United States Air Forces are now superior to any in the world. These forces must be preserved and maintained.

These weapons on the land, on the sea, and in the air shall not be provided for aggression or conquest. They are to be provided for the national defense and the preservation of peace—to arrest aggression and to strike the sword from the hand of would-be conquerors.

It is not an easy task to reach agreement among the representatives of many foreign governments. Nations differ in historical background. They differ in language. They differ in customs. They differ in race. However, all peoples know the miseries of war. All of them know of bloodshed and disaster. All of them know of ravaged lands and violated homes. Therein lies our hope for restoring the peace of the world. Therein lies the strength of our position. If we may convince them—and we have convinced them—that our purposes are unselfish and that we seek alone the welfare and the happiness of peoples everywhere, we may succeed.

Someone may inquire why the United States should participate in a Council of Foreign Ministers concerning itself with Italian colonies in Africa, the settlement of the question of Trieste, and other questions in a distant continent. Someone may ask what difference does it make to us whether Trieste belongs to Italy or Yugoslavia. Why are our interests affected by the allocation of Italian colonies. What is our concern in all these matters that are not of primary interest to our people?

Our reply is that our interest is in peace alone. We have no direct interest in Trieste or the Italian colonies as such, but we do have an overpowering interest in preserving peace on the globe. We cannot forget that World War I had its beginning in a quarrel in Sarajevo, an obscure town in distant Yugoslavia. We do not fail to recall that the tragic war that has just come to an end had its beginning in a quarrel over Danzig on the Baltic. We are concerned in preventing the existence of any festering sore in Europe or elsewhere that may provoke another war and plunge the earth in blood. These are the reasons for our action. These are reasons mightier than all the wealth of the territories affected. These are reasons more powerful than all of the nationalistic pleas of sections and areas.

The Council of Foreign Ministers recognized the influence and the power of the United Nations organization. It set an excellent precedent when it decided to place Treiste under the protective custody of the Security Council, and authorized the General Assembly to decide the fate of Italian colonies in case the four powers fail to come to agreement. We must never allow the machinery of the United Nations organization to fall into disuse. We must demonstrate our faith and our confidence in it by making it the very heart of our peace-keeping machinery.

As we look about us and observe the international problems that beset us on every hand, I am convinced that the United States must pin its faith and its hope on the United Nations. The United Nations must become, in fact, the overriding factor in our foreign policy.

In his Army Day address in New York City on April 6, President Truman stated clearly and simply the attitude of the United States. "The immediate goal of our foreign policy," he said, "is to support the United Nations to the utmost."

In order to demonstrate to the world that we stand wholeheartedly back of the United Nations Charter, we should proceed to do the following:

First. In our dealings with other nations we must stand firmly on those principles of law and justice expressed in the Charter. We should expect other nations to do the same.

Second. We should unhesitatingly make available to the Security Council our full quota of the troops, planes, and ships necessary for the maintenance of world peace.

Third. We must maintain a strong Army, Navy, and Air Force so that we may protect our land and our people and fulfill our obligations under the Charter.

Fourth. We must put into treaty form the inter-American machinery contemplated in the Act of Chapultepec and make it one of the permanent pillars in the temple of peace built at San Francisco.

Fifth. We should accept the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice over those strictly legal disputes which affect the United States and any other state which has accepted the compulsory jurisdiction of the court.

Sixth. We should do our utmost to secure at the earliest practicable time complete agreement with respect to the control of the atomic energy and other weapons of mass destruction.

Seventh. We should lend our full support to the economic, social, and humanitarian program of the United Nations and thus help establish those conditions in the world which are essential for enduring peace.

The United Nations Charter was erected upon the concept of the continuing cooperation and good will of the great powers. So long as these great powers desire the peace of the world so long will there be peace. It would be rank insanity for any one of the great powers to desert the high objectives and the noble concepts of the United Nations. We covet the friendship of Russia, Great Britain, France, China, and for that matter of all the members of the United Nations. We want, through union of purpose, to fortify and strengthen the United Nations. The rights of every nation are strengthened by the recognition of the rights of other nations.

While we are seeking to establish peace and repair the ravages of World War II, there are those who speak of the possibility of World War III. Such a tragedy is unthinkable. It cannot happen if the great powers cooperate in behalf of peace. We want no war with Russia. We want no war with Great Britain. We want no war with any other power on the earth.

In my opinion, no other responsible nation wants war. It will be remembered that Generalissimo Stalin and other Russian leaders have proclaimed that Russia stands back of the United Nations. It will be remembered that the Soviet Ambassador said in Washington on July 2, that there is no basis whatever for war between Russia and the United States, and that the Soviet Union will never start a war against the United States or any one else. Similar expressions of peaceful intent have been uttered by the leaders of Britain, France, China, and other nations.

So long as the great powers cooperate in support of the Charter, so long as they recognize and respect the rights of each other, so long will there be peace. Our purpose shall be to quicken and stimulate good relationships between the great powers of the earth, that their people and our people may enjoy the blessings of their respective systems of government and that their happiness and welfare may be promoted. These lofty aims can be attained only by mutual confidence, mutual respect and mutual trust. God give them the wisdom to see clearly the great blessings of peace. May God give them all the courage and fortitude to sustain and support these noble ends.

We shall not despair. We shall fight for peace with the weapons of reason and logic. We shall fight for it with all the bloody memories of the tragedy and misery in the centuries that have gone. We shall fight for it in high hope and trust in the years to come. At this moment there come ringing down to us today in this critical period of the world's affairs the words of Woodrow Wilson, uttered a few months before his death, "I am not one of those that have the least anxiety about the triumph of the principles I have stood for * * *. That we shall prevail is as sure as that God reigns."

I am today reminded of the familiar and often quoted words of Benjamin Franklin at the conclusion of the Constitutional Convention in 1787. Pointing to a figure of the sun painted on the chair of Washington, the presiding officer, he said that often during their deliberations, he had looked upon the figure of the sun and wondered if it were a rising or a setting sun, and that he was then happy to know that it was a rising sun.

Mr. President, as I contemplate the growing power and majesty of the United Nations supported by the solemn compact of 51 nations that they "shall settle their international disputes by peaceful means"; when I remember that the great powers, as well as the small states, have pledged their national honor and faith to the solemn provisions of the Charter; when I reflect upon the progress toward peace made by the Council of Foreign Ministers, I am happy to believe that today we may look into the years of the future with the satisfaction of knowing that the cause of peace—world peace—is a rising and not a setting sun. [Applause.]

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, the address and report of the distinguished senior Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations I am sure should be printed as a Senate document. I therefore ask unanimous consent that the address and report be printed as a Senate document in sufficient numbers for proper distribution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado in the chair). Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROMOTION AND DEVELOPMENT OF OIL AND GAS ON THE PUBLIC DOMAIN

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1236) to amend the Mineral Leasing Act of February 25, 1920, as amended, in order to promote the development of oil and gas on the public domain, and for other purposes, which were, on page 2, to strike out all after line 15, down to and including "act" in line 23; on page 4, line 3, strike out "fory" and insert "forty"; on page 7, line 13, after "not", insert "believed to be"; on page 7, line 13, strike out "known"; on page 7, line 15, after "limits", insert "are found by the Secretary to"; on page 7, line 16, strike out "field or deposit discovered" and insert "lease on which a discovery is made"; on page 7, line 18, strike out "approved"; on page 7, line 19, after "agreement", insert "approved prior to discovery"; on page 13, line 2, after "common", insert ", but the proportionate interest of each such person shall be charged against the total acreage permitted to be held by such person under this act"; on page 16, line 10, strike out "the required bond is so filed" and insert "such approval, however"; on page 16, lines 13 and 14, strike out "executed; and in the event that the" and insert "executed. The"; on page 16, line 15, after "sublease", insert "only"; on page 16, line 16, strike out all after "bond" down to and including "lease" in line 18, and insert ": Provided, however, That the Secretary may, in his discretion, disapprove an assignment of a separate zone or deposit under any lease, or of a part of a legal subdivision"; on page 16, line 20, strike out all after "and" down to and including "sentence" in line 21, and insert "as above"; on page 19, line 10, strike out "oil" and insert "coal, oil,"; on page 20, line 22, after "not", insert "believed to be"; on page 20, line 22, strike out "known"; on page 20, line 24, after "limits", insert "are found by the Secretary to"; on page 21, line 1, strike out "field or deposit discovered" and insert "lease on which a discovery is made"; on page 21, line 3, strike out "approved"; and on page 21, line 4, after "agreement", insert "approved prior to said discovery."

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, this is a Senate bill which was reported unanimously by the Senate Committee on Public Lands and Surveys and thereafter passed by the Senate without dissent. The House has made several substantial amendments. I therefore move that the Senate disagree to the amendments of the House, ask for a conference thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. O'MAHONEY, Mr. WAGNER, Mr. MURRAY, Mr. GURNEY, and Mr. ROBERTSON conferees on the part of the Senate.

AMENDMENT OF INTERNAL REVENUE CODE

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate House bill 7052.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the bill (H. R. 7052) to amend the Internal Revenue Code, and for other purposes, which was read twice by its title.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, this bill was passed by the House yesterday. The Senate Committee on Finance, however, considered the same matter, the identical text, and unanimously agreed to report it. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to consider the House bill.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, will the Senator explain what the bill provides?

Mr. GEORGE. I shall be glad to explain. The bill accomplishes only two things. It extends for 1 year a provision of the revenue law which permits all corporations to exclude, as income, gains, or losses arising from the discharge of their own indebtedness purchased by them. That is a provision in the present law, and it is thought, and the Treasury has agreed, that it should be extended for a period of 1 year.

The bill also extends for 1 year the time within which claims for war losses, that is, by taxpayers in the devastated areas of enemy-occupied countries, may be filed. It is a mere extension of existing law for a period of 1 year in each instance.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate consider the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 7052) was considered, ordered to third reading, read the third time, and passed.

USE BY INDUSTRY OF GOVERNMENT-OWNED SILVER—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. MURDOCK submitted the following conference report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4590) to authorize the use by industry of silver held or owned by the United States, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1 and 4, and the amendment of the Senate to the title of the bill, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 2: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "90.5"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 3: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: ": Provided further, That hereafter each United States coinage mint shall receive for coinage silver mined after July 1, 1946, from natural deposits in the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof, as provided in the Act of July 6, 1939 (Public Law 165, Seventy-sixth Congress), and tendered to such mint within one year after the month in which the ore from which it is derived was mined, except that the seigniorage to be deducted shall be 30 per centum instead of 45 per centum as provided in section 4 (b) of said Act"; and the Senate agree to the same.

ROBERT F. WAGNER,
ALBEN W. BARKLEY,
ABE MURDOCK,
ROBERT A. TAFT,
EUGENE D. MILLIKIN,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

BRENT SPENCE,
PAUL BROWN,
WRIGHT PATMAN,
JESSE P. WOLCOTT,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. MURDOCK. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the report.

Mr. WHITE. I inquire if the report represents a unanimous agreement by the conferees?

Mr. MURDOCK. It does.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, I should like to ask what the conference report is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is a conference report on House bill 4590.

Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Utah?

There being no objection, the report was considered and agreed to.

TITLE TO LANDS BENEATH TIDAL AND NAVIGABLE WATERS

Mr. McCARRAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 1284, House Joint Resolution 225, which is known generally as the tidelands bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be stated by title.

The CHIEF CLERK. A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 225) to quiet the title of the respective States and others, to lands beneath tidewaters and lands beneath navigable waters within the boundaries of such State and to prevent further clouding of such titles, reported with an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

Mr. BARKLEY. I wish to discuss the motion, and to bring to the attention of the Senate certain reasons why I do not think this measure ought to be taken up for consideration at this time.

House Joint Resolution 225 proposes to recognize the title and interest of the several States since 1776, or since their formation and admission to the Union, by disclaiming any right, title, interest, or claim of the United States in and to all lands beneath tidewaters and beneath navigable waters within the boundaries of each of the respective States, and to quit claim to the States, or persons holding under them, the title of the United States to all such land, both submerged and reclaimed.

Lands beneath tidewaters would be defined as all lands permanently or periodically covered by tidal waters up to, but not above, the line of mean high tide and oceanward to a line three geographical miles distant from the coast line and to the boundary line of each respective State where in any case such boundary line extends oceanward beyond three geographical miles.

The obvious purpose of this joint resolution is to nullify the original proceeding now pending in the United States Supreme Court between the United States and the State of California. The purpose of that litigation is to establish the rights of the United States in the bed of the Pacific Ocean adjacent to the coast of California beginning at low-water mark and extending seaward for three nautical miles. The suit does not involve any lands under bays, harbors, rivers, or other inland waters of California, nor does it involve the so-called tidelands, namely, those lands which are covered and uncovered by the daily flux and reflux of the tide. It is limited solely to that portion of the open sea embraced within the three-mile belt, sometimes referred to as the marginal sea.

All of the pleadings of the respective parties in this litigation have been filed with the Supreme Court, and the procedural preliminaries have been completed. The case is now set for argument and is scheduled to be heard early in the next term of the Court, probably in October or November. The issue involved is one of great importance and, notwithstanding certain statements to the contrary by proponents of this proposed legislation, is one which has never heretofore been decided by the Supreme Court of the United States.

It seems appropriate at this time to dispel certain misconceptions which have arisen regarding the submerged-lands controversy. In the first place, the suit in the Supreme Court is not a suit involving tidelands, although it has been frequently referred to as the "tideland controversy." It is surprising how many Members of Congress, at this late date, think that the suit covers tidelands. As heretofore stated, tidelands, which are lands between high and low tide, are not involved in any way in this litigation in the Supreme Court.

We must keep in mind three different kinds of land or territory covered. One, is the tidelands, which is merely that space between high and low tide due to the incoming and outgoing tide. They are not involved. The ownership of the lands beneath the water beyond the 3-mile limit, which is another category, are not involved in this litigation. The litigation involves the ownership and rights to the land or minerals in the land within that 3-mile marginal limit which has been established by international agreement over a long period of years, and negotiations and actions by different nations, which have established the 3-mile limit or the 3-mile margin, which is the reason why it is referred to as marginal area.

In the second place, proponents of the joint resolution have asserted, and apparently have persuaded the attorneys general of more than 40 States, that the United States is seeking in its suit against California to overturn the titles to vast areas of land, not only to tidelands, but to lands under bays, rivers and harbors, in both coastal and inland States, as well as to large areas in such cities as New York, Boston, Chicago, and San Francisco, which consist of reclaimed land. This is utterly untrue. The pending litigation is specifically limited by the pleadings to lands under the Pacific Ocean within the 3-mile belt outside of any rivers, bays, harbors, or arms of the sea.

In a press release dated October 19, 1945, explaining the suit, the Attorney General unambiguously announced:

To avoid misunderstanding, I wish to stress the fact that the Government is not seeking to overturn titles to tidelands or lands beneath bays, harbors, or other inland navigable waters. The legal controversy relates only to lands under the marginal sea, beyond tidelands.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. DOWNEY. Is not the Senator dodging the very obvious issue, and that is that clearly, we believe, and, we think, on good grounds, the same principles of law which apply to the decision in the Supreme Court in this instant case might very well be conclusive in the other class?

Mr. BARKLEY. No. In the first place, I should like to state to my friend that I am not dodging any issue. I am trying to state what is at issue in the suit which has been brought by the Government of the United States and is now pending in the Supreme Court. As to the merits of the proposition, I shall discuss them a little later, if the bill is taken up for consideration. I am now trying to outline what is involved in the law suit which has been brought by the Government of the United States.

Another misconception which has arisen stems from the assertion by certain proponents of the joint resolution that the Supreme Court has decided the issue involved in this legislation more than 50 times and that there is no reason to press the issue again. This is not so. The cases presented in support of this assertion are all cases involving lands under inland navigable waters——

Mr. MOORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. MOORE. Has the court ever rendered a decision that did not sustain the States' rights to these lands?

Mr. BARKLEY. That is a peculiar way to ask the question.

Mr. MOORE. The Senator spoke of cases having been decided 50 times.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is contended by the proponents of this joint resolution that the Supreme Court has in 50 decisions or more sustained their contentions.

Mr. MOORE. I do not know the number.

Mr. BARKLEY. I care not whether it be 50 or 40, the point is that all those decisions involved inland waters and not the tidelands, not the 3-mile limit which is in controversy in the Government's pending suit.

Mr. MOORE. No, not all of them.

Mr. BARKLEY. Well, practically all of them. We can argue that a little later.

Mr. MOORE. I merely wanted to know if there was ever a decision which did not sustain the States' rights to these lands.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the bill is to be considered I want to refer to some of the decisions of the Supreme Court in regard to that matter. I am trying now to limit what I say to the issue involved in the suit which is now pending in the Supreme Court.

The cases presented in support of the assertion that the Supreme Court in numerous cases has decided the issue involved in this litigation, are all cases involving lands under inland navigable waters, including bays, rivers, harbors, and lakes, but not parts of the ocean. Not one of these cases holds that the States rather than the United States owns the lands under the open ocean within the 3-mile belt. The Government contends that the State has never had and does not now have any proprietary interest in these lands. The issue is entirely novel and is one which the Supreme Court should decide.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Does the Senator contend that none of the original States nor any States that were subsequently admitted have title out to the 3-mile limit.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is the contention of the Government in this litigation, which later on I shall attempt to elucidate to the best of my ability, based upon the decisions of the Supreme Court.

The pending suit in the Supreme Court is the culmination of several years' study and consideration of this problem. In 1937—I think the Senate ought to keep this in mind—in 1937 the Senate Committee on Public Lands favorably reported and the Senate passed Senate Joint Resolution 208, which directed the Attorney General to institute proceedings to establish the title of the United States to the submerged lands along the coast beyond low-water mark and out to the 3-mile limit. That joint resolution was reported favorably by the House Judiciary Committee but was not acted upon by the House. A similar joint resolution was reported by the Senate Committee on Public Lands in 1939 (S. J. Res. 92), but was not favorably acted upon. On July 1, 1939, the President appointed an interdepartmental committee to make a study of the problem. The committee consisted of the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Attorney General. Upon the recommendation of the committee an intensive study of the legal problem involved was made by the Department of Justice, and it was decided that the proper solution would be reached only by litigation. The defense program, followed by the war, intervened, and delayed the institution of the proceedings.

On May 29, 1945, Attorney General Biddle filed a suit against a lessee in California, in the Federal district court of California. On October 19, 1945, Attorney General Clark, in order to expedite a determination of the issue, filed the pending original suit in the Supreme Court against the State of California, and dismissed the suit in the lower Federal court in California, because a more direct decision could be obtained from the Supreme Court by bringing suit there, which the Government had the right to do. The litigation has progressed to the point where only final argument remains before there will be a determination of the legal questions involved. A controversy so important as this should not be taken away from the court by legislative action.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. KNOWLAND. The fact of the matter is that the suit in the Supreme Court was filed subsequent to the introduction of legislation in the Congress of the United States. To contend that this is taking away jurisdiction from the Supreme Court, or from the courts, is not correct. On the contrary, the suit in the Court is an attempt to take away from the Congress of the United States jurisdiction to determine policy. If we admit the doctrine that the mere filing of a case in the courts when there is legislation pending in the Congress of the United States is sufficient to take jurisdiction from Congress, there is not a piece of legislation that has ever been proposed in the Congress of the United States that could not be blocked by such a theory.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not agree with the Senator. I do not agree with the statement that the litigation was filed for the purpose of taking away from Congress jurisdiction to pass upon a question of policy. The ownership of these lands is a legal question, based upon treaties and the customs of nations. According to the Department of Justice and the Government of the United States, and according to my own belief, after a study of the problem, it is not so much a question of policy as it is of legal ownership in the lands involved in the litigation.

The legal question was raised by the Senate, through a joint resolution introduced in 1937, long before the pending resolution was introduced. The joint resolution attempted to recommend to the Department of Justice that the Government bring a lawsuit to determine this question back in 1937. The joint resolution was not enacted. It was not passed by the House. If it had been passed by the House the suit would have been brought in 1937 instead of 1945, and long ago we might have had a determination of the legal question as to who owns these lands. But for one reason or another that effort was not successful. Again in 1939 the Senate brought forward another joint resolution, authorizing and directing the Government to bring suit to settle this question. The war came on, and, of course, everything was in suspense. But if the joint resolution introduced and passed in the Senate in 1937 had been passed in the House of Representatives, or if the joint resolution introduced in 1939 had been passed, the lawsuit would have been filed years ago, and no doubt before now the Supreme Court would have passed upon the question.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. Can the Senator state the date when the suit was started in the lower court?

Mr. BARKLEY. Suit was started in the lower Federal court in California on May 29, 1945, and on October 19, 1945, the same year, that suit was dismissed, and the present suit was instituted in the Supreme Court.

Mr. FERGUSON. I thank the Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. A controversy so important as this should not be taken away from the Court by legislative action, particularly when the issue is one which has not heretofore been determined by the Court, as the Department of Justice believes, and as I believe from an investigation of the decisions. My opinion does not amount to much, as compared with that of the Department of Justice, especially if our opinions are in conflict. But since my views coincide with those of the Department of Justice, I have grounds for concluding that I am right. At any rate, I believe that an examination of the decisions will show that there has never been a judicial decision by the Supreme Court upon the particular issue involved in the litigation.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. DOWNEY. I understand from what the Senator has said that the argument he has in mind has convinced him that the position of the Federal Government in this matter is right. Is that correct?

Mr. BARKLEY. I think so; but regardless of whether it is right or not, it is a question which ought to be passed on by the Supreme Court.

Mr. DOWNEY. Why does not the Senator have the same confidence in the judgment and logic of his colleagues that he has in his own judgment?

Mr. BARKLEY. For the same reason that I was unwilling to see a law enacted by Congress to take away from the Supreme Court the right to decide whether insurance was interstate commerce; and for the same reason that I am not willing now to see a law enacted by Congress taking the railroads of the country out from under the Antitrust Act in order to nullify a decision of the Supreme Court on the question of the determination of rates.

When the Government institutes litigation, which it has a right to do, to determine a legal question, Congress ought not be asked to cut the ground out from under the Supreme Court by enacting a law which seeks to declare the legality or the illegality of a particular situation without the Court having an opportunity to pass upon the question.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. DOWNEY. I may say that the Senator, in the statement which he has made, is seriously in conflict with the attorneys general of practically all the States of the Union.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; I understand——

Mr. DOWNEY. Will the Senator allow me to proceed?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes.

Mr. DOWNEY. I do not say that the distinguished Senator is not right, but what I am suggesting to him is this: Why not allow this matter to be submitted to the Senate, and not attempt to preclude the consideration of the Senate, after proper arguments and hearings? The distinguished Senator should have confidence in his colleagues. They can be trusted to consider the question and render a fair decision.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have no lack of confidence in my colleagues, but I do have a right to argue whether we should take this matter up and consider it. The motion is debatable. If the rules of the Senate had not made it debatable, it would be on the assumption that no Senator had the right to debate whether we should consider the matter or not. I want the Senate to understand my views with respect to this matter before it votes whether or not to consider the proposed legislation.

It is true that forty-odd attorneys general in various States have got together and recommended this joint resolution. My judgment is that the reason for that is that they have been convinced by someone that a decision in the Supreme Court would involve every river bed, every lake, and every little inlet within the boundaries of a State, which I contend is not true. Otherwise I do not see why they should be interested in a controversy between the United States Government and the State of California.

Mr. DOWNEY. I may say that I did not help to convince any of the attorneys general, but their very able and exhaustive brief, on that very point, which was carefully prepared, convinced me of the soundness of their position.

Mr. BARKLEY. I appreciate the Senator's viewpoint. He was convinced before the attorneys general got together, because very properly he seeks to represent the State of California. The very able attorney general from California has from the very institution of this matter been convinced that the Government of the United States had no right in this land within the 3-mile limit, or anything under it.

Mr. President, I shall not take further time of the Senate. I must go to a conference on the price control bill. I shall not be able to remain to hear the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN]. I hope he will excuse me for being absent. I did not want this matter to be brought before the Senate without the Senate understanding the issue involved. The issue does not involve the question of rivers, harbors, or lakes within a State, but lands within the 3-mile limit, not only with respect to California, but other States as well. The decision in the California case would be binding with respect to the same question in other States, unless there were some special circumstances connected with the history of a State, or treaties which might make an exception of certain cases. But under those circumstances, since the pleadings have already been completed and the case is to be argued before the Supreme Court in November or December, the proper and fair thing to do is to await the decision of the Supreme Court on the legal question involved.

Another reason why I feel as I do is that we know that under the Constitution we are charged with the duty of looking after our national defense and regulating commerce among the States and with foreign nations. We are rapidly exhausting our oil reserve supply in this country. We are now negotiating with the heads of governments in Arabia and Saudi Arabia, in the Mediterranean region, in order to obtain a share of the oil reserves there for the benefit of our Navy in the future, when we shall have exhausted our own oil resources. It seems to me that, as a matter of policy, and aside from the legal question involved, if the Government of the United States has a legal right to this 3-mile strip and the petroleum which may lie under it, we ought to conserve that supply of oil for whatever uses we may have for it in the future—for our Army, our Navy, or our people—rather than give up title to it if we are entitled to it. That is a legal question. We should not permit that oil to be dissipated and used up, and then cruise all around the world, trading with other nations in order to obtain a supply of oil thousands of miles from the United States.

So as a matter of legality, I think the Supreme Court should pass upon the question; and as a matter of policy, I think we should do all we can to conserve this oil for our future uses, rather than to permit it to be exploited and dissipated.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. As I view this picture, as presented now by the able Senator from Kentucky, it seems to me that the decision of the Supreme Court will legally determine the question whether the United States owns the land from the low-water mark for a distance of 3 miles out to sea. As the matter stands today, there is at least doubt as to the ownership of that land and all underneath it and all above it. But the Court's decision will decide that question.

Therefore, a different question is now presented to the Senate. The present question is whether we should quit-claim this land, which we would be doing by passing the joint resolution, not knowing whether the United States owns the land or not. But if the Supreme Court decides the question, then we shall know whether the United States owns it. When we then know who owns the land, the situation then will be that we can pass upon the question whether we wish to deed it to the States. Is that the situation, Mr. President?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I think that is a fair statement of the matter. When the Supreme Court determines who owns the land, then it will be a matter of policy for the United States to decide whether it wishes to deed it to the States or to lease it to citizens or corporations of the States or to anyone who might wish to drill and to bring out the oil. That would be a matter of policy to be determined after the legality of the question is determined by the Supreme Court.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. TOBEY. I thank the Senator for yielding to me.

Mr. President, I, also, must go to the conference committee on the OPA bill. But before leaving to go to that committee, I desire to add my endorsement to everything the Senator from Kentucky has stated on the floor on this subject. I think it would be untimely to bring up this matter at this time. The Supreme Court of the United States, the highest court in the land, has accepted jurisdiction of the case, and the case is pending before that Court. The Supreme Court will decide the case once and for all.

I was interested in the tidelands oil case in March or April; and, as Senators know, it ran 6 or 8 weeks. I predict that if the motion to have the Senate proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution is adopted, it will be only a very short time before lobbyists will be crowding about the Capitol, urging the Congress to take such action as they may favor. That is what I prophesy.

So, Mr. President, inasmuch as the question of the ownership of the land is now pending in the Supreme Court, it is obvious that we should let the Court decide this matter once and for all. In that way the matter will be decided as to each of the States. The whole is greater than any of its parts. The Supreme Court has the power to decide the case, and we should let it render its verdict.

Therefore, Mr. President, the Senate should vote down the motion for the consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. McCARRAN obtained the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I hope that when we vote on this motion, we may have a yea-and-nay vote. Therefore, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Nevada wish to have the Senate vote now on the question?

Mr. McCARRAN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Gurney	Myers
Andrews	Hart	Overton
Austin	Hawkes	Pepper
Ball	Hayden	Radcliffe
Barkley	Hill	Reed
Bilbo	Hoey	Revercomb
Brewster	Huffman	Robertson
Byrd	Johnson, Colo.	Smith
Capehart	Johnston, S. C.	Stanfill
Capper	Knowland	Swift
Carville	La Follette	Taft
Chavez	Langer	Taylor
Connally	McCarran	Thomas, Okla.
Cordon	McClellan	Tobey
Donnell	McMahon	Tunnell
Downey	Magnuson	Vandenberg
Eastland	Maybank	Walsh
Ferguson	Mead	Wherry
Fulbright	Millikin	White
George	Mitchell	Wiley
Gerry	Moore	Willis
Green	Morse	Young
Guffey	Murray

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. EASTLAND in the chair). Sixty-eight Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I shall not detain the Senate for any great length of time in connection with the question of taking up and considering House Joint Resolution 225. If the joint resolution is taken up and it comes properly before the Senate, I shall discuss it at some length.

So far as the pendency of the action in the court of last resort is concerned, that action was instituted after the House of Representatives had, by an overwhelming vote, passed this joint resolution. If it can be said that legislation, after it has passed one House by an overwhelming vote, can be stopped in the other House by the institution ad interim of litigation in the Supreme Court, or in any other court, then indeed this body and the body on the other side of the Capitol may never succeed in passing legislation.

Mr. President, this proposal deals largely with a matter of policy. The legislative branch of the Federal Government is the policy-making branch. It is not for the Supreme Court of the United States to make the policy. It is for this body and the body at the other end of the Capitol to make the policy. The question of whether or not we have the right to quit claim the lands which are beneath the tides within the limits claimed by the respective States is a matter for legislation. The question of whether or not this body cares to consider the vote which was cast in regard to this joint resolution by the House of Representatives is a matter for the Senate to determine, and it should determine it, and it should bring the entire matter before itself properly for full, fair, and impartial discussion.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. REVERCOMB. I heartily agree with the able Senator from Nevada that the matter we are now discussing is solely one of legislative policy to be determined by the Congress. He mentioned the fact that the joint resolution applies to tidewater lands. It applies still further. It affects the lands under the navigable streams of the country. In other words, the joint resolution presents an opportunity to declare or make effective the policy that title to the lands under the navigable streams shall remain in the States and shall not in any instance be placed in the Federal Government. I raise the point so that all may know that the joint resolution applies not only to tidelands but also to lands under the navigable streams in the inland States.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator is entirely correct, and I am glad that he has brought the fact to which he refers to the attention of the Senate.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. BREWSTER. There are two questions which trouble me. The first one is the statement of the Senator that the question before us is entirely one of policy as distinct from a question for the courts. The contention before the committees on which I have sat, although they did not consider this particular joint resolution, was that there have been approximately 50 Supreme Court and lower court decisions which were alleged to have settled the question.

Mr. McCARRAN. There are fifty-odd decisions in connection with the matter.

Mr. BREWSTER. If that be true, how can it be said at this time, after 150 years of the Nation's history, that the matter becomes one not suitable for the courts to settle, but is a matter of legislative policy affecting the question of title to lands which, according to the attorney general of the United States, properly belong to the Federal Government.

Mr. McCARRAN. Because, in each instance, as the Senator well knows, the court will decide the matter presented to it. In the California case now pending before the court, the court will decide the question of ownership of the lands involved in that suit, but it will not touch upon the question of title to the land involved in suits brought by the State of Florida, the State of Louisiana, or the State of Texas, all of which claim under different rights, under different conditions, and to a greater or lesser extent.

Mr. BREWSTER. Do I understand that the Senator's position is that all those 40 or 50 decisions do not necessarily determine the instant case?

Mr. McCARRAN. I do not believe that they determine the instant case.

Mr. BREWSTER. That statement is at variance with what others have alleged before our committee.

Mr. McCARRAN. I think that the court did determine the case presented to it in each instance. But while each case was somewhat analogous to the matter now presented to the Senate and, perhaps, to the matter now pending before the Supreme Court, the court decided the particular issue before it and nothing else.

Mr. BREWSTER. The second question which I have in mind is this: Assuming that legal title to those areas necessarily resides either in the State or in the Nation—and that seems to be the question—why is it that the question is not a suitable one for judicial determination?

Mr. McCARRAN. I do not know that it is not suitable for judicial determination. But were the question decided judicially it would not prevent the Congress—in fact, the Congress must do so—thereafter deciding with reference to the general policy. As stated by the Senator from West Virginia, the issue involves not only the tidelands 3 miles or 10 miles, as the case may be, from shore, but it involves the beds of all navigable streams, and lands beneath the bays. For example, the lands beneath New York Harbor and San Francisco Bay are all involved.

Mr. BREWSTER. Assuming that the Supreme Court should determine in due course that the title to those areas is in the Federal Government, there would be no reason for the Federal Government thereafter not renouncing title in favor of the State of California, for example.

Mr. McCARRAN. Certainly not.

Mr. BREWSTER. The Government would be at full liberty to divest itself of title even though millions upon millions of dollars' worth of property were involved.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator is correct. But allow me to say to him that so long as the matter is not decided, there will always be a cloud on the Government's title or on the title of the State. The States have been declared to be the owners of these lands in fifty-odd decisions. The only question is as to a cloud on the title raised by those who seem to claim that the lands belong to the Federal Government, and the Federal Government now acting through the Congress, which is the only body which has the right to act, seeks to clear the titles in the States.

Mr. BREWSTER. The next question is presented by what the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] said. As I understood him, he insisted very firmly that this did not involve any so-called tideland, that is, the land between low-water and high-water mark. Does the Senator from Nevada agree with that?

Mr. McCARRAN. I do not. That is all involved, and the beds of navigable streams are involved.

Mr. BREWSTER. Was I correct in the impression the Senator from Kentucky gave me—and I assumed he was being advised by the Department of Justice—that their position was that the suit now pending had no relation to either the so-called tidelands between low- and high-water mark or to the lands in bays and rivers? That was his statement, was it not?

Mr. McCARRAN. That was his statement, in substance.

Mr. BREWSTER. The Senator contends that is not correct?

Mr. McCARRAN. I contend that is not the correct position, and that they are involved.

Mr. BREWSTER. Will that be developed in the course of the Senator's discussion?

Mr. McCARRAN. I hope so, if the matter comes before the Senate.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. MOORE. I understood it to be indicated, by inference, that the pending suit presents a new question which is properly justiciable. That is not the fact. The same question has been decided, as I understand, by an unbroken line of decisions from the very beginning of our Government down to the present time.

Mr. BREWSTER. I think the Senator from Nevada, who is the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, and whose opinion would be entitled to some respect, stated that his position was that the other cases did not necessarily determine this one, that each of them must be decided upon the facts and circumstances surrounding the particular case presented.

Mr. McCARRAN. That has always been the position taken by the court, and I do not imagine the Supreme Court ever went outside of that rule, or intended to.

Mr. MOORE. It is a question of the ownership of the land, and that has been decided by an unbroken line of decisions.

Mr. McCARRAN. It was decided not only by an unbroken line of decisions, but it has also been decided over the signature of the Secretary of the Interior, who now takes a different position.

Mr. MOORE. That is correct.

Mr. McCARRAN. He, over his own signature, said that it was the settled law that these lands belonged to the abutting States. That was Mr. Ickes, who now seems to take a different position, which may be discussed during the course of the debate.

Mr. BREWSTER. The Senator from Nevada did not intend to indicate that he is now Secretary of the Interior?

Mr. McCARRAN. No, thanks be to God; no.

Mr. MOORE. There never has been a Secretary of the Interior in this country until now who has ever asserted that the Federal Government had any interest in these lands. Am I right?

Mr. McCARRAN. I have never heard of one.

Mr. President, I shall not detain the Senate longer, because the question now is on the motion to proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution. I certainly hope the Senate will take this matter up and decide it once and for all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House Joint Resolution 225. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. REED (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER]. Not knowing how he would vote on this question, I transfer that pair to the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BUSHFIELD], and let my vote stand.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I have a general pair with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES]. Not knowing how he would vote, I transfer that pair to the Senator from Missouri [Mr. BRIGGS]. I am not advised how the Senator from Missouri would vote on this question. Being at liberty to vote, I vote "nay."

Mr. HILL. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. GOSSETT] are absent because of illness.

The Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] is absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] is absent because of a death in his family.

The Senator from Virginia [Mr. BURCH] and the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS] is unavoidably detained.

The Senator from Texas [Mr. O'DANIEL] is detained on official business at one of the Government departments.

The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. MCKELLAR], the Senator from Utah [Mr. MURDOCK], the Sentor from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] are detained on official business at important committee meetings.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. BRIGGS], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KILGORE], the Senator from Arizona [Mr. MCFARLAND], and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. STEWART] are detained on public business.

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are absent on official business, having been appointed to the commission on the part of the Senate to participate in the Philippine independence ceremonies.

On this question the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] is paired with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY]. If present and voting, the Senator from North Carolina would vote "yea," and the Senator from New Hampshire would vote "nay."

If present and voting, the Senator from Texas [Mr. O'DANIEL] would vote "yea."

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY], who would vote "nay," is paired on this question with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], who would vote "yea."

The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BUTLER] is absent on official business, being a member of the commission appointed to attend the Philippine independence ceremonies.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a member of the Special Committee on Atomic Energy.

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] is necessarily absent. He has a general pair with the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS].

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. BROOKS], the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BUSHFIELD], the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD], and the Sentor from Iowa [Mr. WILSON] are detained on official business.

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. BUCK] is absent by leave of the Senate.

The result was announced—yeas 46, nays 21, as follows:

YEAS—46

Andrews	Hart	Reed
Austin	Hawkes	Revercomb
Ball	Hoey	Robertson
Bilbo	Johnston, S. C.	Smith
Brewster	Knowland	Stanfill
Byrd	McCarren	Swift
Capehart	McClellan	Taft
Capper	Magnuson	Vandenberg
Chavez	Maybank	Walsh
Connally	Millikin	Wherry
Cordon	Moore	White
Donnell	Morse	Wiley
Downey	Myers	Willis
Eastland	Overton	Young
Gerry	Pepper
Gurney	Radcliffe

NAYS—21

Aiken	Guffey	McMahon
Barkley	Hayden	Mead
Carville	Hill	Mitchell
Ferguson	Huffman	Murray
Fulbright	Johnson, Colo.	Taylor
George	La Follette	Thomas, Utah
Green	Langer	Tunnell

NOT VOTING—29

Bailey	Hatch	Saltonstall
Bridges	Hickenlooper	Shipstead
Briggs	Kilgore	Stewart
Brooks	Lucas	Thomas, Okla.
Buck	McFarland	Tobey
Burch	McKellar	Tydings
Bushfield	Murdock	Wagner
Butler	O'Daniel	Wheeler
Ellender	O'Mahoney	Wilson
Gossett	Russell

So the motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 225) to quiet the titles of the respective States, and others, to lands beneath tidewaters and lands beneath navigable waters within the boundaries of such States and to prevent further clouding of such titles, is as follows:

Resolved, etc., That in recognition of the title and interest in the several States, and in others as hereinafter mentioned, since July 4, 1776, or since their formation and admission to the Union, the United States of America hereby renounces and disclaims any right, title, interest, or claim, except as hereinafter excepted and retained, in and to all lands beneath tidewaters and all lands beneath navigable waters within the boundaries of each of the respective States; and in further recognition of such titles and interests, the United States of America hereby releases, remises, and quitclaims all right, title, interest, claim, or demand of the United States of America in and to all lands beneath tidewaters, and all lands beneath navigable waters within the boundaries of each of the respective States, unto each of such States or the persons lawfully entitled thereto under the law as established by the decisions of the courts of such State, and unto the respective grantees or successors in interest thereof, and unto the respective present lawful owners of such lands of which title has been confirmed by official action of the United States of America; excepting therefrom such lands beneath tidewaters and such lands beneath navigable waters as have been lawfully acquired by the United States of America from any State or from any person in whom title had vested under the decisions of the courts of such State, or their respective grantees, or successors in interest, by cession, grant, quitclaim, or condemnation, or from any other owner or owners thereof by conveyance or by condemnation, providing such owner or owners had lawfully acquired the right, title, or interest of any such State; and excepting therefrom such lands beneath tidewaters and such lands beneath navigable waters, and such interests therein, as the United States is lawfully entitled to under the law as established by the decisions of the courts of the State in which the land is situated, or as are held by the United States in trust for the benefit of any tribe, band, or group of Indians or for individual Indians; retaining, however, to the United States of America its present powers of regulation and control for the purposes of commerce, navigation, and the national defense.

As used in this joint resolution, the phrase "lands beneath tidewaters" shall include (1) all lands permanently or periodically covered by tidal waters up to but not above the line of mean high tide and oceanward to a line three geographical miles distant from the coast line and to the boundary line of each respective State where in any case such boundary line extends oceanward beyond three geographical miles, and (2) all lands formerly beneath tidewaters, as herein defined, which have been filled or reclaimed; the phrase "lands beneath navigable waters" shall include (1) all other lands covered by waters which are navigable under the laws of the United States, and (2) all lands formerly beneath navigable waters, as herein defined, which have been filled or reclaimed.

LIVESTOCK AND OTHER COMMODITY PRICES

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada yield to me?

Mr. McCARRAN. For what purpose, may I ask the Senator?

Mr. WHERRY. I should like to place in the RECORD certain market reports. It will take about 10 minutes.

Mr. McCARRAN. Very well.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, the American Meat Institute has telegraphed to me a report covering the 12 principal markets. I shall be as brief as I can. The report states:

A report on the livestock market this morning is summarized as follows: Cattle receipts at 12 markets today continued large for Friday, amounting to 24,900 head, up 53 percent from a week ago and more than three times the receipts for the same day a year ago. The total cattle supplies at these markets for the week were 25 percent larger than receipts a week ago and 77 percent larger than for the same period a year ago. This is the third consecutive week that cattle marketings have exceeded those of the preceding week. This confirms the contention made right along that, with price controls removed from livestock and meat, meat would become increasingly available for American consumers.

I shall not go into the prices in detail, because I shall later ask to have the whole telegram placed in the RECORD. But the prices on all grades of cattle today on the market run again from $1 to $1.50 lower, which is bringing the prices down to a point where they are comparable with the prices which were maintained during the last week in June, and they are now running even lower than the prices at that time including the subsidies.

At the 12 markets today 34,000 head of hogs were received. This is a small reduction from last Friday, but is 75 percent larger than Friday a year ago, with a heavy carry-over from yesterday at a number of markets, including Chicago. Four thousand hogs were reported carried over from yesterday because room could not be found for them in the slaughtering houses.

Last night I received a long-distance telephone call from Omaha which stated that in Omaha trucks loaded with hogs were backed up for 7 miles because they could not be unloaded. I received a long-distance telephone call from St. Joseph, Mo., last night in which I was informed that because of the heat it was necessary to call out the fire department to pour water on the hogs. Water was poured on them to cool them off, otherwise they might have died.

Mr. President, this great shipment of meat animals into the market shows what can be done without price ceilings and price controls. The prices on hogs are $2.50 lower than they were yesterday, and the bulk of the hogs are selling today at $19 a hundred in Chicago. That means about $18 in Nebraska, which compares very favorably with the prices before July 1.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I ask for order. I cannot hear the Senator from Nebraska, and I am sure he cannot hear what I am saying.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the Senator for his request. Some Senators are more interested in what I am reporting than are the three or four Senators who are conducting a separate Senate session with the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER]. I am anxious to proceed, because I do not want to detain the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. I hope the Senator will not proceed until we have order. I am much interested in his statement respecting hogs.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the Senator. I now wish to speak of the beef market in New York. We are now talking about dressed beef and what it sells for in New York. Prime beef sold this morning in New York at $46 a hundred pounds. That is 46 cents a pound. On Friday, July 5, prime beef was sold in New York for $55 a hundred pounds, or a decrease from Friday, July 5, of $9 a hundred. Of course, as I have said many times on the floor of the Senate, not much of that beef is sold to the individual consumer. That is hotel meat. It is only the AA prime cattle which come in that category.

The Good grade was sold today on the New York market at $44 a hundred. On July 5 it was sold for $55 a hundred, or for the same price as the AA. The price on "good" grade today is $11 lower than on Friday, July 5.

The Common grade was sold today in New York at $42 a hundred. That is the B grade. On July 5 it was sold for $50 a hundred. On that grade there is a decrease of $8.

For Utility cattle there has not been much change on the New York market. Utility cattle are the C grade cattle. The price today is $38 a hundred. On Friday, July 5, it was $40 a hundred. The decrease is $2 a hundred.

Mr. President, I ask that the complete telegraphic report may be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the report was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The free play of the natural law of supply and demand, unencumbered by unnecessary and restrictive price-control regulations, resulted in sharp price declines in yesterday's livestock market, with the United States Department of Agriculture reporting a "general cattle trade collapse" and hog prices dropping $3 per hundredweight from the previous day's top "in one of the sharpest price reactions in trade history."

The beneficial effect of increased meat supplies, coupled with strong consumer resistance to former black-market prices is shown by the fact that upper limit beef price quotations in New York City, as reported by the United States Department of Agriculture, yesterday dropped $11 per hundredweight from the peak for good grade beef carcasses. The United States Department of Agriculture reports in an early flash from the New York market today that another $4 to $6 drop on wholesaler dressed beef quotations has occurred from yesterday's close.

A spot check of retail meat prices, as advertised in newspapers in different parts of the country yesterday, indicates prices to consumers were well below old black-market prices. For example, consumers in Chicago were being offered ground beef at 35 cents a pound, beef short ribs at 25 cents, beef pot roast at 39 cents, bacon at 50 cents, and sirloin steak at 49 cents. In Cleveland pork loins were offered at 36 cents and beef rib roast at 40 cents. In St. Louis newspaper advertisements listed rolled beef sirloin at 45 cents, and lamb stew at 20 cents, rib roasts at 42 cents, ground beef at 39 cents and whole or half hams at 49 cents. In Cincinnati, legs of lamb were advertised at 41 cents, sirloin steak at 47 cents and hamburger at 33 cents.

A report on the livestock market this morning is summarized as follows:

Cattle receipts at 12 markets today continued large for Friday, amounting to 24,900 head, up 53 percent from a week ago and more than three times the receipts for the same day a year ago. Total cattle supplies at these markets for the week were 25 percent larger than receipts a week ago and 77 percent larger than for the same period a year ago; this is the third consecutive week that cattle marketings have exceeded those of the preceding week. This confirms the contention made right along that, with price controls removed from livestock and meats, meat would become increasingly available for American consumers.

The extent of the collapse of cattle prices yesterday is summarized by the United States Department of Agriculture for the Chicago market as follows:

"Today's general trade collapsed, even the top on choice steers dropped to $25.65, with the practical top at $25. However, none of these steers had the beef-yielding merits of the several loads at $26.25 and $26.35, paid Wednesday. Nevertheless, it was a 50 cents to $1 lower market on choice yearlings and weighty steers; with common, medium, and low good kinds not only $1 to $1.50 lower, but many medium to low good grassy and short-fed light kinds without bids at the close. Much the same condition featured medium and low good heifers: the supply that sold standing $1 or more lower, with even strictly good and choice kinds 75 cents to $1 down; average choice heifers sold at $21.50 and high choice mixed offerings stopped at $24. Strictly good beef cows and heiferettes lost 50 cents on top of crumbling declines on Wednesday. But this proved to be a relatively small loss compared with the $1 to $1.50 break on cutters and common and medium beef cows, a liberal proportion of which were without bids at the close. Most beef bulls dragged at $2 lower price than last week, with sausage offerings $1.50 lower."

Cattle prices this morning again dropped sharply with most grades quoted from 50 cents to $1 lower than the substantially reduced prices prevailing yesterday. The early top on cattle in Chicago this morning was $24 which was off $2.35 from the extreme top paid here for a few head Wednesday. The Government also reports this morning that indications are that there may be a considerable hold-over of cattle today unless further price reductions occur in the market.

Receipts of calves and sheep and lambs also were unusually large this week. Calf receipts were 18 percent larger than last week and 73 percent above a year ago.

Hog receipts at 12 markets today amounted to 34,000 head which is a reduction from last Friday but is 75 percent larger than Friday a year ago. The large salable supply of hogs today, however, will be augmented with a heavy carry-over from yesterday at a number of markets at Chicago, 4,000 hogs were reported carried over from yesterday, total hog receipts for the week were slightly smaller than the large receipts of the preceding week but were more than double the supply for the corresponding week a year ago.

Hog prices at Chicago this morning opened slow, steady with yesterday's close with sows selling about 50 cents lower. The top today at Chicago was $19.65 which compares with the top earlier this week of $22 per live hundredweight. The toboggan in hog prices yesterday was described by the United States Department of Agriculture as follows: "In one of the sharpest price reactions in trade history, hog values were off $1.50 to $2.50 today. The comparison is with the general trading Wednesday. Even at the decline buyers refused to take all offerings and at the close approximately 4,000 hogs remained unsold carrying bids at least $2.50 or more lower. The practical top of the market dropped to $20 after having reached $22 on Wednesday. Similar weight hogs had to sell late in the day at $19."

The following table compares the price of the upper-limit quotation for each grade of dressed beef at New York City on Thursday, July 18 with upper-limit quotations for Friday, July 5 (largely representing prices charged by former black-market operators):

Beef carcass prices, New York City

[Dollars per hundredweight dressed. Upper limit quotations reported by the U. S. Department of Agriculture]

	Thursday, July 18, 1946	Friday, July 5, 1946	Decreas
Choice	$46	$55	−9
Good	44	55	−11
Common	42	50	−8
Utility	38	40	−2

These upper limit quotations, of course, do not report the selling price of the bulk of sales but they do illustrate strikingly the extent of the slash of the black-market prices since price control was removed in the major meat-consuming centers of the country.

The experience of the first 3 weeks without price controls on livestock and meats is convincing proof that a tremendous increase in supplies of meat is being made available on a much more equitable basis and at reasonable, competitive prices which certainly are lower than black-market prices prevailing prior to the elimination of price controls. The industry is well on its way to returning to stable conditions notwithstanding the fact that it had to recover from "famine conditions" prevailing in the beginning of this month when controls were eliminated. Meat-distribution pipe lines, which were almost exhausted in the closing days of price controls, had to be replenished. This takes time, but it is being done.

AMERICAN MEAT INSTITUTE.
CHICAGO, ILL.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a report on the grain market situation, which is very relevant in connection with the livestock market. Yesterday I pointed out that wheat broke 5 to 6 cents a bushel, and that corn was down from 2 to 3 cents a bushel. The market today is weaker, and somewhat lower. The report gives a synopsis of the grain market, and I think will be of interest to the Senate.

There being no objection, the report was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FEED SHORTAGE NEARS END

In a relatively short time, the critical feed shortage in feed-deficit areas of the United States has been relieved. This sudden change was coincident with (1) the expiration of OPA price ceilings and regulations on farm products, (2) the progressive development of prospects for bumper feed-grain production this season and (3) some reduction in livestock.

The flow of feed through normal commercial channels is rapidly being reestablished. The return to free-market prices does not, of course, make any more total feed, but it does affect the distribution of it, both in place and time. Feed prices may be somewhat higher this summer, but the feed shortage is about over. If July 1 crop prospects materialize, the livestock and grain situations should reach reasonable adjustment by fall, although on a higher price level than a year ago. The high-protein feed situation shows less improvement than the grain situation.

LIVESTOCK REDUCED SOMEWHAT

Hogs: The 1946 spring pig crop of some 52,000,000 head, which is being carried along on old corn and which will be finished this fall and winter on new corn, is highly larger than the spring pig crop of 1945. The average slaughter weight of these hogs, however, is likely to be considerably lighter than that of a year ago because of a much less favorable hog-corn price ratio.

The 1946 fall pig crop, as indicated by farmers' reports in June on breeding intentions, will be about 17 percent smaller than a year earlier, and the smallest fall pig crop since 1938.

Pig crop

Year	Spring	Fall	Total
	Thous.	Thous.	Thous.
1945	51,570	35,144	86,714
1946	52,324	29,100	81,424
Percent change	+2	−17	−6

Poultry: In the period January to June of this year, the total number of chicks hatched by commercial hatcheries was down approximately 20 percent compared with a year ago. Most all of this reduction was in May and June. The reduction in chicks for broiler production was much greater than that for chickens to be raised. Consequently, the number of chicks and young chickens on farms on July 1 this year was 15 percent smaller than last year. Also, it appears that the number of chickens raised in 1946 will be some 15 percent smaller than the number raised in 1945.

Chickens raised

Period	Millions	Percent change from—
		Average	Preceding year
1937-41 average	657
1944	750	+14
1945	821	+25	+9
1946	[1]700	+7	−15

[1]Preliminary.

More old hens are expected to be held over so that the total number of layers next fall and winter is expected to be about 10 percent smaller than last year.

The number of turkeys raised during 1946 is expected to be about 15 percent smaller than the number raised in 1945.

In the Northeast, the number of chicks and young chickens on July 1 this year was 28 percent smaller than a year ago. In New England, the number of layers during June was down 23 percent. More layers were on hand than a year ago in New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, and for the three States the increase was 6 percent.

Dairy cattle: During 1945 the number of milk cows declined 3 percent, and the 7-percent reduction in the number of yearlings dairy heifers on hand January 1, 1946, as compared with a year ago indicated a continued downward trend in the milk-cow population during 1946.

The rate of grain feeding to milk cows this summer is materially lower than the high level last year. Because of the expected less favorable butterfat-feed price relationship, grain feeding per cow next fall and winter is likely to continue below that of a year ago.

Grain fed daily per milk cow

Year	Feb. 1	Apr. 1	June 1
	Pounds	Pounds	Pounds
1945	5.56	5.54	4.11
1946	5.55	5.48	3.56
Percent change	0	−1	−13

In New York State, grain feeding per cow on June 1 was 21 percent lower and on July 1 was 22 percent lower than on those dates a year ago.

Beef cattle: The total number of beef cattle continues at a relatively high level, but the feeding of cattle in the Corn Belt so far in 1946 has been on a reduced level. The number of stocker and feeder cattle shipped into the Corn Belt States during the first 5 months of 1946 was 6 percent smaller than in the corresponding period of 1945. Under recent price conditions, the feeding of beef cattle to a high finish has not been profitable. Dry-lot feeding operations in the Corn Belt this coming fall and winter are expected to be continued on a reduced scale as compared with former years.

Sheep and lambs: Sheep numbers have been been declining since 1942. This year, the early spring lamb crop was 13 percent less than in 1945 and the late crop also is expected to be smaller.

Horses and mules: The number of horses and mules continues to decline and the feed requirements for this class of livestock are much smaller than in former years.

All livestock: Both numbers and feeding rates per head in all classes of livestock, with the possible exception of feed per hen, will probably be lower during the coming fall and winter than a year ago. The reduction in feed requirements may be as much as 10 percent.

FEED SUPPLIES

Old crop stocks on July 1: Total farm stocks of corn, oats, and barley on July 1 were 21 percent smaller than a year ago. Oat stocks were about one-third larger, but corn stocks were 30 percent smaller and barley stocks 15 percent smaller.

Farm stocks of grains, July 1

Year	Corn	Oats	Barley	Total
	Mil. bu.	Mil. bu.	Mil. bu.	Mil. tons
1945	739	209	46	25.1
1946	515	278	39	19.8
Percent change	−30	+33	−15	−21

Grain production: Based on July 1 reports, prospects are bright for bumper feed grain production this season. The corn crop is indicated to be the largest on record. The small grain crops are of near-record size. The total production of corn, oats, and barley in 1946, based on July 1 indications will be even larger than the very high production in 1945. The 1946 corn crop is reported to be 11 percent larger than a year ago, the oat crop 5 percent smaller and the barley crop 13 percent smaller. The combined tonnage of these three grains this year is 6 percent larger than a year ago.

The 1946 planted acreage of sorghums is about 4 percent smaller than in 1945.

The total wheat crop this year of 1,090 million bushels is the fourth consecutive billion bushel crop, but is about 3 percent smaller than last year's crop.

Grain production

Year	Corn	Oats	Barley	Total	Wheat
	Mil. bu.	Mil. bu.	Mil. bu.	Mil. tons	Mil. bu.
1945	3,018	1,548	264	115.6	1,123
1946	3,342	1,471	230	122.6	1,090
Percent change	+11	−5	−13	+6	−3

High-protein feeds: The high-protein feed situation for next fall appears to be much less favorable than that for feed grains. The 1946 acreage of cotton, as reported on July 1, was 3 percent larger than the 1945 acreage, but the soybean acreage is down 13 percent, the flaxseed acreage down 37 percent and the peanut acreage down 2 percent. Although imports of oil meals will undoubtedly increase, oil meal supplies for next winter will be considerably smaller than those used during the past year.

Acreages of oil-bearing seeds

Year	Soybeans	Cotton	Flax	Peanuts
	Thous. acres	Thous. acres	Thous. acres	Thous. acres
1945	13,412	17,749	3,914	3,958
1946	11,614	18,316	2,465	3,882
Percent change	−13	+3	−37	−2

PRICE LEVEL RISING

The wholesale commodity price level of the country has been rising and is expected to continue to rise. This means prices of individual crops and livestock products fluctuate about a higher and higher base. During the past year prices of farm products in established wholesale markets have risen nearly 20 percent and commodities other than farm products have increased 8 percent.

Commodity prices in primary markets

[1926=100]

	Farm products	Commodities other than farm products
First week in July—
1945	129	101
1946	153	109
Percent change	+19	+8

SOME SUGGESTIONS

These facts indicate the following to be good business for northeastern farmers:

1. Don't buy much feed ahead.
2. Use up old supplies on hand.
3. Start making use of home-grown grains as soon as available.
4. Maintain cows and hens at normal levels for your farm.
5. Keep in mind that you are operating on a price level that is both relatively high and unstable.

Most of the figures in this report are from official releases of the United States Department of Agriculture. This report itself was prepared by Dr. L. C. Cunningham, of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

JULY 15, 1946.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, at this point in the RECORD I should like to have printed an article published in the Wall Street Journal of Friday, July 19, 1946, which contains a very fine analysis from the retail side of the picture respecting food products.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MORE MEAT—RETAIL STORES NOW HAVE THREE TO FIVE TIMES AS MUCH AS UNDER OPA—COAST-TO-COAST SURVEY FINDS SHORTAGE ENDED, FALLING RETAIL PRICES DUE SOON—LIVESTOCK FLOOD TO MARKET

The meat shortage is a dead duck.

Retail markets throughout the country now have from three to five times as much meat for sale as on June 30, the day the curtain went down for OPA.

Prices, already slumping on livestock as thousands of hogs and cattle continue pouring to market, are likely to fall substantially in your neighborhood meat store in a week to 10 days.

These two facts high light the findings of a Wall Street Journal survey of the meat picture in principal cities from coast to coast made yesterday.

SITUATION IN VARIOUS CITIES

Meat-trade spokesmen yesterday estimated that markets in New York City had five times as much meat as they did on June 30.

In Cleveland market operators declared they had about three times as much as at the end of last month. One independent chain in the city cut 59 sides of beef last week, more than in any 3 weeks since the war started, and expects to cut as much this week. Another Cleveland market says its supply is up 200 percent.

Detroit markets reported four times as much meat yesterday as the day OPA bowed out. An official of one big chain of stores, speaking gleefully of bountiful supplies, said his firm expects to have meat left over this week end for the first time in many moons.

Across the continent in San Francisco big meat markets declare they have three times as much meat as at the end of June. One manager says, "There's an unlimited supply."

"We have five times as much meat as 3 weeks ago," says the operator of seven supermarkets in Los Angeles.

PORK DEMAND DOWN AT PORTLAND

Up the coast in Portland, Oreg., meat markets say they have at least twice as much meat as on June 30. George P. Zenner, vice president of the Portland Food Merchants Association, declares "the pork supply is too big, and demand has fallen off 20 percent."

On the price front, the heavy movement of animals to market at weakening prices points clearly toward cheaper meat ahead in retail outlets.

Jack Kranis, president of the National Meat Industry Council, estimated that next week retail prices will drop 10 to 15 percent below the present level.

Choice beef carcasses in the New York wholesale market were already selling at 37 to 42 cents a pound yesterday, compared with 55 cents a week ago. Fowl which a week ago brought 50 cents a pound and higher were priced yesterday at 34 to 40 cents.

Back of the weakening in wholesale markets was increased supply and falling values in the big livestock-marketing centers.

CHICAGO BEEF PRICES DECLINE

On Wednesday prices on a few choice steers hit a record high of $26.35 a hundredweight in Chicago, and $26.50 at Omaha, but a decline of $1 to $1.50 was general in many grades of steers, cows, and heifers that provide most of the beef the average consumer buys. Added to Wednesday's drop was another decline of $2 yesterday.

Marketings have now reached a point where they are top-heavy, meat men say. Orders coming into Chicago from the East as well as from local slaughterers are being canceled because wholesale channels are filling up with meat. Packing houses are having to adopt a "selling" attitude in dealing with meat buyers for some cuts of both beef and pork.

Hog prices tumbled from $1 to $2.50 in many midwestern markets yesterday as farmers poured an endless flood of porkers to town. As long lines of trucks backed up at stockyards, pigs died in the heat waiting to be sold.

This heavy volume of hog movement has been progressing since OPA died, and prices have been climbing. But now the volume is swamping the price rise.

On July 1 the price of hogs in Chicago went up to $2 to $3.75 in one day to a top of $18.50, compared with the OPA ceiling of $14.85. Receipts rose sharply the first week of July, going as high as 25,000 hogs per day. Aside from Tuesday, the normally heavy marketing day for hogs, about 8,000 to 10,000 would be an average day's receipts at Chicago for this time of year.

Wednesday about that many hogs were sold, with 2,000 being held over as packers refused to pay the price of $22, the highest price since 1919. Thus yesterday's hogs coming to market joined the "backlog" of the day before.

"SEMIDEMORALIZED" MARKETS

Livestock men in Chicago say the break in stockyard prices will be reflected in further reductions in prices at the consumer level within the next 10 days. Wholesale prices, they emphasize, are already beginning to react sharply. In fact, one marketing authority says the entire hog and cattle marketing industry is "semidemoralized."

Department of Agriculture spokesmen in Chicago yesterday called the break in prices a "major" one, and said it was accompanied by a record Thursday movement of livestock.

Much of the heavy movement is attributed to the fact that farmers, sensing a price drop ahead, are rushing their animals to market to "get the gravy while the getting is good."

As more beef and pork become available, retailers in many instances have found themselves with a superplenitude of poultry on their hands at falling prices. In some instances poultry has sold below the old OPA ceilings. One San Francisco market reports its poultry sales have dropped 20 percent since June 30.

CONSUMERS "BALKING" AT PRICES

In all cities there are unmistakable indications that consumers, aware of sharply increased supplies, have reached the "balking" point on rising meat prices.

Market operators everywhere report them more "cagey," more "choosey," less susceptible to the take-it-or-leave-it sales attitude they bore patiently during the black-market era.

In one Los Angeles market hamburger meat was shoved at the customers for 75 cents a pound The customers just walked out. And now that market is selling hamburger meat for 39 cents—and glad to get buyers.

The fancy grades of meat bearing the superfancy prices are frequently passed up. A Chicago butcher trying to market a two-person serving of sirloin steak at $1.38 found housewives balked at buying it. Instead they snapped up stew meat at 45 cents a pound.

Some retail meat shops are doing some balking of their own by refusing to buy large amounts at exorbitant wholesale prices. One big market in Washington, D. C., has deliberately curbed its buying for this reason. The manager emphasizes his customers are folks of moderate income, and says he refuses to double prices on them. Until prices come down, he's buying just enough to keep his customers from patronizing competitors.

Mr. WHERRY. I also ask to have placed in the RECORD an advertisement by the American Meat Institute entitled "Your Meat, Now." The advertisement gives a rather complete report of what can be expected, not only today, but in the future, with respect to prices.

There being no objection, the advertisement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

YOUR MEAT, NOW

Without OPA, meat is coming back to you. You have probably already noticed that there is more meat in retail stores. The supply lines gradually are being filled.

Naturally, it takes a little time for the livestock and meat industry to work its way out of the chaos and shortages created in it by 4 years of OPA.

Nobody—and least of all the livestock and meat industry—wants this chaos and confusion brought back—and it will be brought back if OPA regulations ever again are imposed. The chiselers, who were able to get enormous profits in the black market, which flourished under the OPA, might want regulations restored—and they undoubtedly do. Certainly, consumers don't want to see empty meat counters again.

As for prices generally, consumers will be well advised if for a while they will discriminate in their purchases of meat by limiting them to those meats which are available in increasing quantities and at the more moderate price levels.

Meat prices today are higher than the old fictional OPA ceiling prices at which very little meat was available to the average consumer. But they are generally considerably below prices which prevailed in the black market.

We thank consumers for their patience. Men are at work—today and every day—all the way from the distant western cattle ranges to the retail meat counter to bring you more meat, and better selection of meat, just as quickly as possible. If the livestock and meat industry remains free of OPA regulations, this meat will come to you at prices established by the efficient operation and open competition upon which the American livestock and meat industry has been built.

AMERICAN MEAT INSTITUTE.

CHICAGO, ILL.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield ?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield.

Mr. LANGER. Does the report which the Senator placed in the RECORD deal with poultry?

Mr. WHERRY. Yes. I should say that poultry, milk, cheese, and butter are dealt with in the report which I previously placed in the RECORD.

Mr. LANGER. I understand that poultry went down 10 cents a pound in Washington.

Mr. WHERRY. Yes. The food survey which I placed in the RECORD includes all the principal cities of the United States. It is very comprehensive and I think very interesting. I know that it will be evidence which Senators will be glad to read.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield.

Mr. REVERCOMB. The Senator has placed in the RECORD some very interesting figures from the producing standpoint, that is from the standpoint of the cost of production. I should like to hear some figures on the situation from the consumers standpoint.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I spoke of dressed beef. The dressed-beef market, of course, is the wholesale market.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Yes. What about the retail market?

Mr. WHERRY. The only thing I have is what I have just placed in the RECORD, which is a survey of the principal cities throughout the United States.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Is the trend downward?

Mr. WHERRY. Yes; it is downward, and the pipe lines are filling up. Eighty-one carloads have come into Washington alone in the past week, and that pipe line is so full that it is impossible to take care of all the animals. Some must be carried over. Several of the wholesalers cannot dispose of all their meat. One wholesaler said that this is the first time in 3 years he will have a carry-over until Monday. Yesterday I placed in the RECORD several advertisements of stores in Philadelphia, Washington, and New York, and compared the prices yesterday with the prices of a week ago, and the prices of yesterday compared with the same day of the last week of OPA. If the Senator will read what I placed in the RECORD yesterday he will find that with the exception of meat, with respect to which the consumer now absorbs the subsidy, everything in the produce line, including poultry, is cheaper than it was the last day of June. There was one other exception, and that was oranges. I went down to the market yesterday and spoke to one of the market operators and he showed me what he had. There were cabbages, beans, everything one could think of in great quantities. He said to me, "You can tell the people that everything is cheaper than it was the last week of June, with the exception of oranges."

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield.

Mr. WILLIS. Did the Senator take into account the subsidy in speaking of the item of meat?

Mr. WHERRY. Yes, Mr. President. That is why meat is higher. The subsidy is not now being paid, therefore the price of meat is higher to the consumer. If Senators will compare the prices which I gave yesterday and today with the prices in the last week in June, and then subtract the subsidy from the present prices, they will find that meat has actually dropped in price.

Mr. President, there might be some humor in what I am now about to present. I hold in my hand a newspaper of today's issue which contains pictures which show that Nebraska is doing its share of the job in furnishing meat for the Nation. Here is a picture of a cow and a bull, the papa and the mama. The mama gave birth to quintuplets in Fairbury, Nebr. The five calves are going to be shown at the State fair. If any Senators would like to see them, they can go out there and see them at Lincoln, Nebr., in the first week of September. I ask to have the article which appears under the picture placed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the matter referred to was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

QUINTUPLET TIME—EI, EI, OH!

Father Time, the Papa Dionne of the pastureland, poses proudly with Old Glory, who is "expecting" again. Last February Old Glory really unfurled herself with quintuplet calves, which have been named Russia, United States, England, China, and France. Dr. L. J. Smith, Fairbury, Nebr., veterinarian, who delivered the calves, is attempting to lead Russia into a special trailer for a visit to the State fair. Agricultural observers believe that Old Glory may have another multiple birth—good news for everybody except the stork. He's still mumbling about that last trip.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD following the material inserted by the Senator from Nebraska a news dispatch from Boise, Idaho, entitled "End of OPA Boosts Bridge Costs in Idaho 40 Percent, Says Hally." Mr. T. Matt Hally is director of highways in Idaho.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

END OF OPA BOOSTS BRIDGE COSTS IN IDAHO 40 PERCENT, SAYS HALLY

BOISE, July 13.—Idaho highway director T. Matt Hally today blamed the ending of OPA price controls for bids on two highway projects that exceeded engineers' estimates by as much as 40 percent.

Involved were two bridge projects, one for an 852-foot span over Snake River on the Burley-Paul Road, and the other for a 378-foot viaduct over Union Pacific Railroad tracks near Topaz, on United States Highway No. 30, in Bannock County.

"It is evident that taking the lid off of OPA has increased material unit costs," Hally said. "Any project with an appreciable amount of prefabricated material—such as steel—will cost considerably more now than when OPA was effective."

The engineer's estimate on the Snake River bridge was $214,000. The low bid, submitted by the Hansen Construction Co., of Spokane, was $251,684.

On the overpass project the engineer's estimate was $108,000, and the low bid of $117,023 was offered by the Materials Supply and Construction Co., of Springville, Utah.

Mr. TAYLOR. I also ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks a letter from the New Council of American Business, Inc., stating that they have made a survey of Washington shops, and that the price of meat at retail has risen, on the average, 96 percent, and in some instances as much as 159 percent, together with an article from the Washington Daily News of July 17, 1946.

There being no objection, the letter and article were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NEW COUNCIL OF AMERICAN BUSINESS, INC.,
Washington, D. C., July 17, 1946.

Hon. GLEN H. TAYLOR,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR TAYLOR: Last week the New Council of American Business forwarded to and released to the press the results of a survey of retail meat prices in Washington grocery stores. It showed immediate and substantial increases in meat prices following the cessation of OPA controls.

We have continued our survey and have now covered 56 retail establishments in the District of Columbia. The results are even more startling and alarming.

The median increase over OPA ceilings in the price of beef and meat (all cuts) is 96 percent.

The median increase over OPA ceilings in the price of pork (all cuts) is 67 percent.

Price increases above the median ran as high as 159 percent for beef and veal. Approximately one-half of our purchases of these items represented price increases ranging from 96 to 159 percent.

Price increases for one-half of our total purchases of pork ranged from 67 percent to 138 percent above ceilings.

Our survey covered both chain stores (one-third of total number) and independents (two-thirds). Purchases were made in stores in all four quadrants of the District. Chain stores sell about 45 percent of the meat distributed in the District. The independent stores showed much higher prices than the chains but even in the chain stores more than half the increases ranged between 13 to 54 percent above OPA ceilings.

These facts completely discredit the previously estimated price advances made by the American Meat Institute. On May 1, testifying before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, Mr. Robert Eggert, of the Institute, agreed with Senator BUTLER that if price controls on meat were removed the price of meat would increase not more than 15 percent. He stated that consumers were then paying more in the black market than they would have to if meat controls were removed. But in surveys made on February 27 and again on March 26 and 27 the American Meat Institute's own survey of District meat prices showed meat selling (illegally) at an average of only 19 percent over OPA ceilings.

Our New Council survey this week, which shows beef up 96 percent and pork up 67 percent, certainly shows that the American Meat Institute misled the committee as to what would happen if controls were removed.

If anyone deceives himself that these great increases on retail prices are abnormal and temporary, let him notice that Monday, July 15, the big packers' wholesale prices of beef in Chicago had risen 50 percent over OPA ceilings and the wholesale prices of pork had advanced more than 20 percent over OPA ceilings. These advances, it might be pointed out, will not reach retailers until some weeks from now. In other words, the worst is yet to come unless meat controls are restored.

Previous to June 30, subsidies accounted for no more than 18 percent of the retail price of meat. Present increases are far above what could be accounted for by the removal of subsidies. Nothing illustrates more effectively the terrific inflationary pressures we are living under than what has happened to meat prices.

The rise in meat prices, we point out, has been accompanied by a similar rise in the price of a wide range of other basic commodities, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics Daily Index.

The New Council of American Business made its survey because, as we have previously stated, we believe inflation and the inevitable collapse following will be disastrous to every independent businessman in the country. Additionally, we are greatly concerned over the public resentment that undoubtedly will be directed against business as a result of uncontrolled price rises. American business, particularly that segment dealing directly with the buying public, cannot afford to be once again the target of public indignation.

We urge Congress to act now to restore the effectiveness of OPA.

Sincerely yours,

H. L. MCCARTHY,
Executive Director.

[From the Washington Daily News of July 17, 1946]

DISTRICT MEAT PRICES SOAR 159 PERCENT, NCAB SURVEY SHOWS

Retail meat prices in the District have soared an average of 80 percent above former OPA ceilings and some cuts of beef have skyrocketed as much as 159 percent, the New Council of American Business said today.

The council, which has fought to save OPA's full price controls, bases its figures on a city-wide shopping survery conducted last Friday. Its agents, camouflaged as housewives, canvassed 60 chain and independent stores, found meat in only 28 of them, and these price hikes:

Boneless sirloin steak up 147 percent, chuck roast up 159, fresh pork belly 110, ham 138, sirloin steak 112, rib steak 109, pork shoulder (sliced) 91, veal cutlets 83, pork chops 68, T-bone steak 55, smoked ham 53, ground beef 33.

Only three stores sold below OPA ceilings, but two of the sales were on luncheon meat, the council reported. Beef averaged 88 percent above ceiling and pork 68 percent.

The survey completely discredits estimated price advances ranging from 5 to 15 percent made by the American Meat Institute, H. L. McCarthy, NCAB executive director, said. (American Meat Ipstitute was a major opponent of the continuance of OPA.)

"We made this survey because, in the belief of the manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers who are NCAB members, inflation and the deflation that follows are disastrous to business as well as the public," Mr. McCarthy said.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, the American Butter Institute, which affords more than 1,000,000 farmers a daily cash market for milk and cream, has written me a letter calling attention to what I think most of our people do not understand. When the President vetoed the OPA bill he took from every pound of butter a subsidy of 14½ cents. He stopped the Treasury of the United States from paying 14½ cents.

The American Butter Institute writes that during the past 12 days' experience the butter industry has proved beyond any question of doubt that prices will not skyrocket following the elimination of price control. The best estimates indicate that over the next year market prices for butter will average less than the previous OPA ceiling plus the subsidy of 14½ cents a pound. Black markets have been eliminated, and consumers are now getting butter at prices reflecting old ceiling prices plus the subsidy. Those prices are exactly the same as were paid before, through price control and taxes.

That statement has been confirmed by me personally in Washington. Butter is now available. I ask unanimous consent that there be printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks an editorial from the Washington Post of July 19 entitled "Misleading Food-Price Figures."

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MISLEADING FOOD-PRICE FIGURES

Tuesday the Post invited me to comment in general on some of the misleading price surveys which have had wide publicity in the past 2 weeks.

Wednesday there appeared on page 1 of the Post a price chart on which I would like to comment specifically, and which I believe deserves a complete explanation to your readers.

Charts and studies such as this are the most misleading and confusing of all, since they are based—as you correctly state—"on Bureau of Labor Statistics daily indexes of 28 basic commodities."

This official source gives such surveys a ring of authenticity which leads most people to accept them without question, even though the figures themselves may not bear out at all the conclusions that are drawn from them. Your chart is an excellent case in point.

"This chart," the Post says, "indicates the rise in the cost of living from June 21 until yesterday (July 16)."

That, I respectfully submit, is an erroneous and misleading conclusion. The chart shows no such thing and the figures on which it is based were not intended for that purpose.

The BLS commodity index is intended to show the variation in prices of 28 basic commodities—and even for that purpose it is almost worthless in this period of transition from a controlled to a free economy.

The reason why the index itself has little or no value at the moment is this: The prices on which it is based since July 1 are the actual prices at which these specific commodities have been sold. In contrast, the prices on which it is based during OPA control are fictitious ceiling prices which in many instances do not reflect with any measure of accuracy the real price of the commodities.

There are four important factors that are not reflected in the published prices used by the BLS and other agencies in compiling their commodity indexes during the period of OPA control. These are:

(1) Black market prices (which were so general in many commodities that they were the prevailing prices);

(2) Subsidies (which were paid by the Federal Government for the specific purpose of holding down published prices);

(3) Quality deterioration (getting grade C meat, instead of grade AA, when you pay for AA);

(4) Alternative buying (having to buy a $4.45 shirt because the $2.50 shirts you usually buy have disappeared from the market).

Obviously all these things added tremendously to the real cost of commodities under OPA, but they are ignored completely by BLS in its commodity index.

Recognizing this deficiency in commodity indexes, the New York Journal of Commerce recently recalculated its own index to take into account two of these factors—black markets and subsidies. When it did so it found that the food index stood at 243.2 on June 28, instead of at 171.1 as shown in its "official" index—and that by July 13, with the index representing actual selling prices, it had dropped 19 points, to 214.

Comparing the actual prices of today with the fictitious official price level under OPA is like comparing apples to pears. It may be an interesting pastime, but it proves absolutely nothing.

During this period, when the Nation is in the throes of transition from a controlled economy to a free economy, it seems to me that there is an extra responsibility on newspapers and other sources of public information to be extremely careful in drawing conclusions which may be misleading.

I know the Post would not intentionally publish any misleading information, and I believe that if you discuss the BLS commodity index thoroughly with authorities in that agency you will agree with me that a chart such as the one you used Wednesday should not be used without careful explanation of exactly what it does and does not show.

HARRIS ELLSWORTH,
Member of Congress from Oregon.

WASHINGTON.

TITLE TO LANDS BENEATH TIDAL AND NAVIGABLE WATERS

The Senate resumed consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 225) to quiet the titles of the respective States, and others, to lands beneath tidewaters and lands beneath navigable waters within the boundaries of such States and to prevent further clouding of such titles.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, the joint resolution now pending before the Senate is designed to end an existing controversy between certain Federal officials and officials of the 48 States over title to lands underlying navigable waters lying wholly within the lawfully existing boundaries of the States.

For a period of 161 years—1776 to 1937—all State and all Federal officials had held that title to these lands was in the several States and more than 50 decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States confirmed this holding. In 1937 the then Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, "changed his mind," departed from precedent, reversed an opinion which he had signed in 1933, and asserted a belief that these lands might belong to the Federal Government.

This change of opinion by Mr. Ickes has caused a cloud of uncertainty upon the previously unquestioned title of the States. Removal of this cloud and the giving of unquestionable legal status to the title rule which was clearly followed for 161 years is the purpose of this resolution.

Senators have before them copies of the very exhaustive testimony given by more than 50 high public officials from nearly every State in the Nation in support of this joint resolution. This testimony includes statements of governors, mayors, city attorneys, State attorneys-general, officials of publicly owned ports, and other public officials. In addition, the joint resolution was given the official and practically unanimous backing of many great organizations of public officers such as the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers, representing 417 cities, the American Association of Port Authorities, composed of more than 50 of the Nation's most important harbors, the Governors' Conference of the 48 States, and such authoritative private organizations as the American Bar Association. Only one public official, Mr. Ickes, and three private persons who have filed claims on the lands here in controversy on Mr. Ickes' theory of Federal ownership, appeared in opposition to the joint resolution. Seldom has any legislation before the Congress received such Nation-wide and such nearly unanimous support. But Mr. President, Mr. Ickes changed his mind. He so testified before the committee.

As I have already stated, this legislation is made necessary by a change of opinion by former Secretary of the Interior Ickes. Prior to 1937, Mr. Ickes and all other Secretaries of the Interior had uniformly ruled that title to the tide and submerged lands affected by this resolution belonged to the States. For example, on December 22, 1933, the following letter was written by Mr. Ickes:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, December 22, 1933.

Mr. OLIN S. PROCTOR,
Long Beach, Calif.

MY DEAR MR. PROCTOR: I have received, by reference from the Department of State, copies of your letters of October 15 and November 22.

As to the jurisdiction of the Federal Government over lands, bordering on tidewater, the Supreme Court of the United States has held in the case of Hardin v. Jordan (140 U. S. 371), as follows:

"With regard to grants of the Government for lands bordering on tidewater, it has been distinctly settled that they only extend to high-water mark, and that the title to the shore and lands under water in front of lands so granted inures to the State within which they are situated, if a State has been organized and established there. Such title to the shore and lands under water is regarded as incidental to the sovereignty of the State—a portion of the royalties belonging thereto and held in trust for the public purposes of navigation and fishery—and cannot be retained or granted out to individuals by the United States."

The foregoing is a statement of the settled law, and therefore no rights can be granted to you either under the leasing act of February 25, 1920 (41 Stat. 437), or under any other public-land law to the bed of the Pacific Ocean either within or without the 3-mile limit. Title to the soil under the ocean within the 3-mile limit is in the State of California, and the land may not be appropriated except by authority of the State. A permit would be necessary to be obtained from the War Department as a prerequisite to the maintenance of structures in the navigable waters of the United States, but such a permit would not confer any rights to the ocean bed. I find no authority of law under which any right can be granted to you to establish your proposed structures in the ocean outside the 3-mile limit of the jurisdiction of the State of California, nor am I advised that any other branch of the Federal Government has such authority.

Sincerely yours,

HAROLD L. ICKES,
Secretary of the Interior.

In his testimony on the instant resolution Mr. Ickes said in part of the applications similar to that of Mr. Proctor:

Until 1937, these applications were denied by the Commissioner of the General Land Office and, in those cases where appeals were taken to the Department, his decisions were affirmed * * * but applicants and their lawyers continued to insist that the United States does own the land and the oil and that the department does have the power to grant them oil and gas leases. So we began to have doubts * * * consequently, since 1937, action on all of these applications, of which there are about 200, has been suspended pending a judicial determination.

There in his own words is the situation which has made this joint resolution necessary. Applicants for oil leases "and their lawyers" caused Mr. Ickes to decide that the "settled law" of 1933 had changed by 1937. This resolution makes it certain that the "settled law" will be followed in the future and that it will not be unsettled by the arguments of private claimants and their lawyers to some future Secretary of the Interior.

Legally unassailable real-estate titles are one of the keystones of our Nation's economy. The greatest of care is taken in removing all possible clouds to real-estate titles by careful record searches in every real-estate transfer. Certainty in real-estate title law is absolutely essential, for any change in basic legal rules would be disastrous. For example, all of the 48 States have sold at least some of the land which is affected by this joint resolution to private persons. Those persons, thinking they had a title based on settled law, have erected homes, businesses, and other improvements on this land. Cities have constructed harbors, parks, and other public improvements on such land granted to them by the States. The committee report refers to oil, gravel, coal, oyster, shrimp, sulfur, and other industries now conducted on these lands. In all, billions of dollars have been invested by States, cities, and private persons in the belief that under what Mr. Ickes called the settled law their investment was safe because their title was legally unquestionable. Now this title is clouded by Mr. Ickes' departure from the settled law, and the only way that cloud can be removed from the title is by the passage of this joint resolution.

Reference to this joint resolution as the only way, brings me to the pending Supreme Court case.

THE SUPREME COURT CASE

This suit was filed in October 1945 after the House of Representatives passed the joint resolution now before the Senate on September 20, 1945. This case is No. 55 in a long series of cases before the Supreme Court in which the the question of title to these tidal and submerged lands has been involved. The decisions in the first 54 cases are unanimous in their holding that title to these lands is in the States. There is not the slightest reason to anticipate that a different decision will be made in the fifty-fifth case.

Some say, "Why not wait and let the Supreme Court decide this controversy by its decision in this fifty-fifth case?" I say that the fifty-fifth case will not end this controversy, any more than the second, the thirteenth, the thirty-fifth, the fifty-third, or the fifty-fourth did. Nor will the ninety-ninth Supreme Court case end the controversy, for every case can develop some slight little factual or legal point not considered in one of the preceding cases. As I have already said, this joint resolution is, in fact, the only way by which this controversy can be ended forever. The passage of this one joint resolution will end all such cases for all time. It is the only method whereby that result can be achieved.

I know that on June 10, 1946, the Supreme Court set the pending case down for argument on the pleadings next fall. Did you know, however, Mr. President, that it has taken the Supreme Court an average of 9 years to decide cases such as this one, in which its original jurisdiction has been invoked? Since the pleadings in this case alone cover hundreds of pages and the case involves thousands of parcels of land, it is wholly reasonable to believe that the Supreme Court will render a final decision in less than its average of 9 years. It is certainly unjust to the States, cities, and private persons who have spent billions of dollars on the lands here in question, to make them endure such a long period of uncertainty just because a former Secretary of the Interior changed his mind and now has some doubts, as he states it, as to their title. Even that former Secretary of the Interior does not claim he has any definite and unquestionable legal rules for changing what he previously had called "the settled law."

To those who say we should await the result of the pending Supreme Court case, let me point out that never before has either branch of the Congress decided that all a Federal official need to do to stop congressional action is to file a lawsuit involving a subject upon which congressional action is pending. If such a rule were followed, some official of one of the hundreds of Federal agencies would certainly start a lawsuit every time the Congress considered legislation to which that official was opposed because it would lessen his powers, or for other reasons. To illustrate such a proposed rule for stopping congressional action is to demonstrate its utter absurdity. As the committee report points out, the Congress has on many, many occasions changed laws while cases were pending in the Supreme Court; and that Court, at an early date, in an opinion by the great Chief Justice Marshall, stated that where such "a law intervenes and positively changes the rule which governs, the law must be obeyed." No question of impropriety has ever been raised before when the Congress changed legislation to divest the courts of jurisdiction over other questions, and none can properly be raised here.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SWIFT in the chair). The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Gurney	Myers
Andrews	Hart	O'Daniel
Austin	Hawkes	Overton
Ball	Hayden	Pepper
Barkley	Hill	Radcliffe
Bilbo	Hoey	Reed
Brewster	Huffman	Revercomb
Brooks	Johnson, Colo.	Robertson
Byrd	Johnston, S. C.	Shipstead
Capehart	Knowland	Smith
Capper	La Follette	Stanfill
Carville	Langer	Swift
Chavez	McCarran	Taft
Connally	McClellan	Taylor
Cordon	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Donnell	McMahon	Tunnell
Downey	Magnuson	Vandenberg
Eastland	Maybank	Wagner
Ferguson	Mead	Walsh
Fulbright	Millikin	Wherry
George	Mitchell	White
Gerry	Moore	Wiley
Gossett	Morse	Willis
Green	Murdock	Young
Guffey	Murray

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventy-four Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Swanson, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5508) to authorize the return of the Grand River Dam project to the Grand River Dam Authority and the adjustment and settlement of accounts between the Authority and the United States, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4590) to authorize the use by industry of silver held or owned by the United States.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6835) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, to provide appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes; that the House receded from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 51, 60, 63, 64, 77, 119, 120, and 121 to the bill, and concurred therein; and that the House receded from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 33, 34, 46, 52½, 62, 69, 81, and 86 to the bill, and concurred therein, severally with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ANDRE DACHARRY—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. WHERRY submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2192) for the relief of Andre Dacharry, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum inserted by the Senate, to wit, "$7,923.44", insert "$9,923.44"; and the Senate agree to the same.

ALLEN J. ELLENDER,
KENNETH S. WHERRY,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

J. M. COMBS,
JOHN JENNINGS, Jr.,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

LEGAL GUARDIAN OF JAMES THOMPSON, A MINOR—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. WHERRY submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3543) for the relief of the legal guardian of James Thompson, a minor, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the text of the bill and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: On line 6, page 1, strike out the figures "$1,118.75", and in lieu thereof insert "$118.75"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the title of the bill, and agree to the same.

ALLEN J. ELLENDER,
KENNETH S. WHERRY,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

J. M. COMBS,
W. A. PITTENGER,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

THIRD DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. McKELLAR submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6885) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, to provide appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 24, 35, 56, 65, 74, 78, 79, and 83.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 31, 32, 36, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 47, 49, 50, 52, 53, 54, 58, 59, 61, 66, 67, 68, 70, 71, 72, 73, 75, 76, 80, 82, 84, 85, 87, 88, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, and 118; and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 23: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 23, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: At the end of the matter inserted by said amendment, and before the period, insert the following: ", one-half of such amount to be disbursed by the Secretary of the Senate and one-half by the Clerk of the House; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 30: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 30, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out and inserted by said amendment insert the following: "or refuses in the determination of the Secretary of State"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 37: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 37, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$75,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 38: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 38, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: ": Provided further, That no part of the funds appropriated in this paragraph shall be used to pay the salary of any person engaged in preparing or disseminating general propaganda in support of price control"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 39: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 39, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$325,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 48: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 48, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment, amended to read as follows: "That no payment shall be made under the provisions of such title of such Act to any person whom the Commission is convinced collaborated with the enemy or committed any act involving disloyalty to the United States or the Commonwealth of the Philippines: Provided further,"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 55: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 55, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"DAY CARE CENTERS

"For all expenses necessary for the establishment, maintenance, and operation of a system of nurseries and nursery schools for the day care of children of school or under school age, including personal services, as authorized by Public Law 514, Seventy-ninth Congress, approved July 16, 1946, fiscal year 1947, $250,000."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 57: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 57, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$55,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 89: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 89, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment, amended to read as follows:

"Public Roads Administration: Access roads, $320,596."

And the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference report in disagreement amendments numbered 33, 34, 46, 51, 52½, 60, 62, 63, 64, 69, 77, 81, 86, 119, 120, and 121.

KENNETH McKELLAR,
CARL HAYDEN,
RICHARD B. RUSSELL,
JOHN H. OVERTON,
C. WAYLAND BROOKS,
CHAN GURNEY,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

CLARENCE CANNON,
LOUIS C. RABAUT,
W. F. NORRELL,
JAMIE L. WHITTEN,
JOHN TABER,
EVERETT M. DIRKSEN,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, I should like to inquire as to the disposition of the amendment which we discussed at some length in the Senate, and which was adopted by an overwhelming vote of the Senate, I believe 45 to 10, dealing with the matter of dehydration of potatoes.

Mr. McKELLAR. The House absolutely declined to agree to the amendment.

Mr. BREWSTER. How long was the matter under discussion?

Mr. McKELLAR. It was under discussion probably longer than any other amendment about which we were in disagreement.

Mr. BREWSTER. I may say I pursued this matter as diligently as I could with my colleagues in the House. I think the amendment was agreed to in the Senate in the afternoon, and the next morning when I got around I found that the matter was reported in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD as all settled. So that I had some qualms as to how long the matter had been discussed or debated.

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not recall how long it was debated. The amendment numbered 62 related to the Commodity Credit Corporation. It was moved to insert in lieu of the Senate amendment the following:

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized to purchase surplus potatoes (including sweetpotatoes) produced during the year 1946 and to process and sell such potatoes to any foreign country, and upon requisition, to the Army and to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration for the relief of hungry people.

I will ask any members of the conference now on the floor if that amendment was not discussed about as long as any other amendment?

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I think the only change in the Senate version is that the conference report would not permit the Commodity Credit Corporation to give the dehydrated potatoes away.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is correct.

Mr. BALL. They would have to sell them.

Mr. McKELLAR. The conferees struck out the words "to give or otherwise dispose of such potatoes to any foreign country," and inserted the words "to sell."

Mr. BREWSTER. I think the word "sell" was in already. We had that in, but as I recall the 2 hours' rather heated debate, it revolved entirely about the right to give, and the Senator from Minnesota was suddenly, apparently, rather diligent in defending the Treasury, and that is what he opposed.

Mr. BALL. The defense of the Treasury by the Senator from Minnesota is not a sudden change of attitude.

Mr. BREWSTER. I hope the Senator will excuse me if I did him an injustice.

Will either of the learned Senators who dealt with this particular brain child of the Senator from Oregon advise us whether the amendment as now presented to us in any way extends the existing power of the Commodity Credit Corporation, or whether this is merely dressed up to make us feel good?

Mr. McKELLAR. The Commodity Credit Corporation has the right to take action.

Mr. BREWSTER. But do they not have the right to do so without the amendment? Has not the Commodity Credit Corporation the right, in fact, are they not obligated, to acquire potatoes? They certainly have the right to dispose of them, so they certainly must process them.

Mr. McKELLAR. They prbably would not do it unless they were directed by the Congress, specifically authorized by the Congress. The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON] was present at the conference, and I am sure he voted for the amendment as it was adopted, and can tell what happened in the conference.

Mr. OVERTON. I advocated the Senate amendment which was adopted, but we finally had to yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. There was nothing else to do. Both sides cannot have their way in a conference. We have to make concessions in order to get anything through.

I call the attention of Senators to what was known as the silver amendment to the Post Office and Treasury appropriation bill. That caused a delay of about two or two and a half months, as I recall. I am corrected by the Senator from Nevada, who sits near me, who says the disagreement started on February 14. Anyway, that amendment has been under constant discussion ever since, and has been settled only in the last few minutes, and even after it is settled, we have not gotten back from the House the conference report striking the amendment out of an appropriation bill and leaving it in a legislative bill.

Mr. BREWSTER. I am sure the Senator from Tennessee does not wish to imply that silver is more important than potatoes.

Mr. McKELLAR. No.

Mr. BREWSTER. The committee gave 3 months to silver, and have given us only 3 minutes on potatoes.

Mr. McKELLAR. We can eat potatoes and we cannot eat silver, so potatoes are very much more important.

Mr. BREWSTER. It seemed to me, from a reading of the amendment, that it meant exactly nothing at all, that it did not extend in any way the powers of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Mr. McKELLAR. It virtually authorized the Commodity Credit Corporation specifically, and if it has any respect for the will of Congress, it will undertake to sell the potatoes.

Mr. BREWSTER. As a matter of interpretation, the instructions are that they can now process and sell?

Mr. McKELLAR. Let me read again the agreement of the conferees:

> Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized to purchase surplus potatoes (including sweetpotatoes) produced during the year 1946 and to process and sell such potatoes to any foreign country, and, upon requisition—

It will be noted that those words were inserted by the conferees—> and, upon requisition, to the Army and to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration for the relief of hungry people.

Really the only change that was made was that dehydrated potatoes are not directed to be given away.

Mr. BREWSTER. There are two things involved. What is the meaning or significance of the word "requisition"?

Mr. McKELLAR. They must ask for them. The United States Relief and Rehabilitation Administration or the Army must make a request for the dehydrated potatoes.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Tennessee yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. OVERTON. While I advocated the amendment as adopted by the Senate, actuated to some extent by the fact that my amendment as to sweetpotatoes, in which the people of Louisiana are interested, was inserted, I finally yielded, along with the other Senate conferees. By the way, I think this amendment was discussed at probably greater length than any other amendment. The Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized to process and to sell potatoes. There is no limit, as I understand, in existing law or the conference report, as to the price they may ask. They may sell them at a cent a bushel.

Mr. BREWSTER. I think that is highly important. I was just going to ask the Senator from Tennessee, who I hope will corroborate the understanding and interpretation of the Senator from Louisiana, as to the significance of the action.

Mr. OVERTON. I have not had time to investigate and determine whether my recollection is correct, but it is my understanding that there is no limit, either in existing law or the conference report, certainly there is not in the amendment we are discussing, as to the price at which the Commodity Credit Corporation may sell the potatoes.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is my understanding.

Mr. BREWSTER. So that the two Senators who have been particularly concerned, and I trust others will indicate their dissent if they do not agree, state that this does not circumscribe in any way the authority of the Commodity Credit Corporation to sell, that it merely prescribes that they must sell for some price, but it does not mean they must get either cost or profit, that they can sell for anything they feel is reasonably practical.

Mr. McKELLAR. There is nothing said here about it.

Mr. BREWSTER. Would the Senator concur with the interpretation of the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. McKELLAR. Offhand, I certainly would.

Mr. President, I move the adoption of the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate the message from the House showing its action on certain Senate amendments to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives announcing its action on certain amendments of the Senate to House bill 6885, which was read, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, U. S.,
July 19, 1946.

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 51, 60, 63, 64, 77, 119, 120, and 121 to the bill (H. R. 6885) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, to provide appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, and concur therein;

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 33 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert: "Without any deletions or modifications by censorship of their reports dealing with such subjects: Provided, That none of the funds herein appropriated shall be used for the transportation, delivery, or distribution of any supplies, commodities, or equipment to or for any recipient country until the Director General of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration has advised the Secretary of State that such country has arranged for the prompt distribution of such supplies, commodities, and equipment."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 34 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert:

"SURPLUS PROPERTY, CARE, AND HANDLING

"Surplus property, care, and handling: That current naval and military appropriations shall be available for the care and handling of property wherever situated declared surplus to disposal agencies pending reimbursement for such expenses by such disposal agencies or in consequence of supplemental appropriations hereafter made directly to the owning agencies, any law to the contrary notwithstanding: Provided, That reimbursement shall not be made for pay and allowances and subsistence of military and naval personnel within the numbers appropriated for heretofore."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 46 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amount named in line 12, of said Senate engrossed amendment insert: "$75,000,000"; and in lieu of the amount named in line 14 of said Senate engrossed amendment insert "$3,000,000."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 52½ to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amount named in said amendment insert "$4,000,000."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 62 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert.

"COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION

"Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized to purchase surplus potatoes (including sweetpotatoes) produced during the year 1946 and to process and sell such potatoes to any foreign country, and, upon requisition, to the Army and the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration for the relief of hungry people."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 69 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amount named in line 9 of said amendment insert "$806,260"; in lieu of the amount named in line 10 of said amendment insert "$878,840"; and in lieu of the amount named in line 11 of said amendment insert "$1,684,470."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 81 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment, amended to read as follows: ", nor shall any part of this appropriation be available for expanding any public-works projects authorized by law to be replaced or rehabilitated beyond such as may be justified by sound engineering practice and which can be accomplished within the amount authorized to be appropriated."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 86 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lines 11 and 12 of the matter inserted by said Senate engrossed amendment strike out "(left either of such academies without completing the prescribed course)" and insert "were separated from either academy because of physical disability."

Mr. McKELLAR. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House to the amendments of the Senate numbered 33, 34, 46, 52½, 62, 69, 81, and 86.

The motion was agreed to.

TITLE TO LANDS BENEATH TIDAL AND NAVIGABLE WATERS

The Senate resumed consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 225) to quiet the titles of the respective States, and others, to lands beneath tidewaters and lands beneath navigable waters within the boundaries of such States and to prevent further clouding of such titles.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for an inquiry in respect to the argument now in progress?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. DONNELL. I observe on page 3 of the report of the Committee on the Judiciary this language:

In 54 decisions, over a period of 100 years, the Supreme Court of the United States has held that the ownership of lands beneath navigible waters lies in the States and in those to whom the States have granted them.

Later upon the same page I observe this language:

And, likewise, it has been decided that lands underlying the bordering oceans within the 3-mile limit belong to the States within their respect boundaries.

Citing the case of Martin v. Waddell (41 U. S. 366, at p. 410).

The question I desire to ask the Senator is whether or not the Supreme Court has made any distinction between the ownership by a State of land underlying tidal waters within the territorial limits of the State and the ownership by a State of lands within the 3-mile limit, we will say, in coastal waters, as for illustration, the ocean adjoining the Western States?

Mr. McCARRAN. My reading of the fifty-odd decisions causes me to say that the Supreme Court has made no distinction between the inland waters, as they choose to term them, and the tidelands outside. May I read to the Senator from the case of Martin against Waddell, the case he cited at page 410:

For when the Revolution took place, the people of each State became themselves sovereign; and in that character hold the absolute right to all their navigable waters and the soils under them for their own common use, subject only to the rights since surrendered by the Constitution to the general government.

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Senator. I have the decision before me, and observe the language which the Senator has just read. May I ask one further question?

Mr. McCARRAN. I wish first to read from another decision, United States v. Oregon (295 U. S. 1), at page 6, as follows:

Decision of the principal issues raised by the pleadings and proof turns on the question whether the area involved underlay navigable waters at the time of the admission of Oregon to statehood. If the waters were navigable in fact, title passed to the State upon her admission to the Union.

Citing a number of cases.

Mr. DONNELL. May I ask the Senator this further question, please? In 45 Corpus Juris, at page 540, occurs this language:

Unquestionably it is true that within its territorial limits a State owns the land underlying tidal waters, including the seashore and the land under a stream or river insofar as the tide ebbs and flows, and its ownerships extends to high-water mark, except in some jurisdictions where it extends only to low-water mark.

I observe further on page 8 of the report of the committee, in support of the proposition, as I understand it, that—

Coastal waters—the so-called marginal sea—were at common law known as tidewaters. Land beneath such coastal waters—including bays—are governed by the same rule as those beneath navigable river waters.

Below that is cited this observation by the Supreme Court:

Whatever soil below low-water mark is the subject of exclusive property and ownership, belongs to the State on whose maritime border, and within whose territory it lies, subject to any lawful grants of that soil by the State, or the sovereign power which governed its territory before the Declaration of Independence.

That language, Mr. President, "within whose territory it lies," and the language of Corpus Juris "within its territorial limits" caused me to ask the Senator whether there is any distinction, as for illustration between a case in which there is tidewater within the borders of a State, and the coast, on which the State, as for illustration California, is bordered by the ocean itself.

Mr. McCARRAN. I may say in that regard that I think the Senator will find that the term "territorial limits" not only embraces waters within the territory, such as inlets, bays, and the like, but also is used to comprehend the limits claimed by the State, which in the case of the State of California is 3 miles, in the case of the State of Texas is 10 miles, and in the case of Louisiana has another dimension. But the term used in Corpus Juris from which I think the Senator read, in my opinion, embraces that territory as well as the inlets.

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Senator. The same thought had occurred to me, as to whether "territorial limits," as used in Corpus Juris from which I read, possibly does include the 3-mile limit into the ocean. It was, however, with the view of clearing up any doubt in my mind, knowing the Senator's great familiarity with the subject, that I asked him whether the Supreme Court had made any distinction between tidal waters within, strictly speaking, the borders of a State, and coastal waters, such as those of the State of California, which borders upon the ocean itself.

Mr. McCARRAN. Let us take a State which claims jurisdiction to the space 3 miles out into the ocean. Let us suppose a crime is committed within the 3-mile limit, that is, within the territorial limits of the State, and that crime is triable and punishable by the laws of the State, whereas if it is committed beyond the 3-mile limit, it is regarded as having been committed on the high seas, and then the question of the jurisdiction, other than State jurisdiction, arises.

Mr. DONNELL. I regard that as a very apt illustration, and I thank the Senator for his courtesy in responding.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, finally, if the Supreme Court were in this fifty-fifth case to reverse its decisions in the other 54 cases, the result would, as found by the committee, "be so catastrophic to the economy of the country resulting from the overthrow of long-established rules of property, that the Congress would as a matter of equity be forced to enact legislation having an object similar to that of House Joint Resolution 225."

The assertion has also been that the oil produced in the coastal States ought to belong to the people of all the States, rather than merely to those favored States which happen to have oil within their boundaries.

The speciousness of this argument is obvious when we consider that many States obtain products of great value other than oil from their submerged lands. If the Federal Government is entitled to take the oil produced in Texas, Louisiana, and California merely because some other States do not have oil, then the Federal Government should also take the oysters from the beds of Chesapeake Bay, the gas from under Lake Erie, the iron ore from beneath the Minnesota lakes, and the coal from under the rivers of Pennsylvania and West Virginia, and divide these products up among States which do not produce oysters, gas, coal, or iron. The argument refutes itself.

In the committee report Senators will find a summary of the history motivating this resolution, a short statement of the types of businesses and public projects, besides homes, affected by the resolution, a review of the 54 decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States referred to above, reasons why the pending litigation should not abate the resolution, and a reprint of an opinion by Dean Borchard, of Yale, an outstanding authority on constitutional law, to the O'Mahoney committee on title to submerged lands beyond, but contiguous to, the marginal sea.

I commend this report to the Senate, and will not restate its detailed findings on these subjects.

We are dealing here with titles to real estate. Everyone knows that a claim by an important Federal official, even though wholly unfounded, is sufficient to create a cloud upon those titles. The purpose of this legislation is to remove that cloud. The resolution accomplishes this by the simplest and most appropriate method, namely, by a release and quitclaim. It was the conclusion of the House Judiciary Committee and also of the Senate Judiciary Committee that this quitclaim releases no property and no property interest to which the United States has any legitimate claim, either morally or legally.

In this measure Congress has before it the question whether officials of the United States shall be permitted to assert wholly unprecedented claims to property of enormous value which has always been held by the States. This is a basic question of policy involving vital relation between the States and Federal Government. Congress represents both the people of the Nation as a whole and the States as States. It is, therefore, peculiarly appropriate that this question should be settled once and for all by the Congress of the United States.

Mr. President, I have about concluded the opening presentation. At the close of the argument I shall go into the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States which I believe to be in direct point on the question here involved. I wish, however, to deal for a moment with the history of this legislation.

This legislation was first taken up by the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives. At that time a joint resolution was also pending before the Judiciary Committee of the Senate. I called upon the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary of the House and asked him if it would be agreeable to him to have a number of members of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate attend the House hearings, with the idea of perhaps saving time and expense. He was very agreeable to the suggestion. The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH] and one or two other Senators in addition to myself attended some of those hearings. We listened to the attorneys general present their case before the Judiciary Committee of the House. Then when the House had acted on the joint resolution and had passed it, I brought it before the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate. The subcommittee had presented to it the printed reports of the hearings conducted by the House Committee; and after studying those reports the subcommittee held meetings and concluded to report the measure favorably to the full committee.

On the day on which the full committee was about to consider the joint resolution which had been reported favorably by the subcommittee I received a cablegram from Mr. Ickes, the then Secretary of the Interior, from London, requesting that no action be taken by the Senate committee until he had had an opportunity to be heard. Mind you, hearings had been held at length in the House before the Judiciary Committee. A voluminous record was made over there; but Mr. Ickes did not appear before the House committee. On the receipt of this cablegram from London I laid the matter before the Judiciary Committee and requested the committee to approve a delay in action until Mr. Ickes could be heard. I then set a date for the hearings, and made those hearings public so that others might be heard on the same day or the days following.

Those hearings were held before the entire committee rather than before a subcommittee. Not very many members of the committee attended, but some attended very regularly. As I recall, the hearings continued for about 3 days. Mr. Ickes was the first witness to appear. He was present with the members of his office force, and presented his statement, and then departed from the committee. Others were heard following him, and the hearings are now printed and available to every Member of the Senate.

At that time the attention of the committee was called, as the attention of the House committee had been called, to various decisions by the Supreme Court of the United States, the action of forty-odd attorneys general of the various States, the action of various civic bodies, cities, and so forth. Following that, and after the hearings were printed, the committee met and voted to report the joint resolution favorably to the Senate.

It has been stated that it might be an act of discourtesy on the part of the Senate to pass upon this question while it is pending before the Supreme Court. I can see no element of discourtesy in such action. The Congress of the United States has its sworn duty to take care of matters which involve policy. It is not the function of the Supreme Court to establish policy. In the fifty-odd cases which the Supreme Court has had before it, in which it has passed upon the question presented, at no time did it attempt to go beyond the bounds of the questions presented. Every decision looked toward the very thing which the Committee on the Judiciary now believes, and which the House of Representatives now believes, should be established as the policy of this country, namely, that the cloud should be removed from the title. As I say, that cloud was placed on the title to these lands by one or two individuals, namely, Mr. Ickes and one or two others. The cloud has no business there whatever.

The argument is made that oil beneath the tidal lands should be conserved by the Federal Government, but Mr. Ickes, then Secretary of the Interior, had been receiving, and there are now on file, many claims for the use of these lands to extract oil. After he had changed his mind Mr. Ickes kept those claims on file.

Let me go further. I am not exactly certain as to the date when Mr. Ickes' change of mind took place, but about that time there was formed a corporation known as the Underseas Oil Corp., based on a claim filed with Mr. Ickes as Secretary of Interior, to lands beneath the waters of the ocean in the vicinity of Long Beach, Calif. Based solely and exclusively upon the fact that an application had been filed with the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Ickes, hundreds of thousands of shares of the stock of that corporation have been sold to innocent parties all over the country, much of it in violation of the blue-sky laws of the respective States. So when it comes to conserving oil, that does not seem to me to be an act of conservation. The claims filed by individuals were retained by Mr. Ickes in his office, and not rejected, as other claims prior to that time had been rejected by him and by others, on the legal basis that the lands belonged to the respective sovereign States, and that such permits could not be granted.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. OVERTON. In reference to the argument made by the able Senator from Nevada as to the propriety of legislating when the Supreme Court of the United States has under consideration a controversy bearing on the same subject matter, let me ask the able Senator whether he agrees with me in respect to these two points:

First, that a decision by the United States Supreme Court in the California case would not necessarily be decisive of all other cases. It would not be decisive, for example, of the rights of the State of Texas or of the State of Louisiana with respect to tidewater lands.

Mr. McCARRAN. Most certainly not, because involved in the California case may be one phase of the question which is peculiar to California. In the case of Louisiana there may be another phase of the question entirely peculiar to Louisiana. The State of Texas claims title to lands 10 miles out into the Gulf. It not only claims it, but in my judgment has it by virtue of treaty arrangements and by virtue of recognition by the Federal Government itself.

Other questions may arise. So the California case would decide not all the rights of the State of California; not all the rights of the Federal Government in waters adjacent to the State of California; but only the question with respect to the lands involved in southern California.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, my second question is this: If the Congress, in the exercise of its authority to legislate on this subject, should enact the proposed law, would it prevent future controversies insofar as the provisions of the proposed law might apply?

Mr. McCARRAN. It will decide the question for all States for all time.

Mr. OVERTON. I thank the Senator.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I think the able and distinguished Senator from Nevada will agree that should there be an adverse decision in the California case affecting the sovereignty of the States over the tidelands, which sovereignty has been exercised ever since California's admittance to statehood, such a decision would furnish a precedent upon which the Federal Government could seize tidelands under navigable streams in every State of the Union.

Mr. McCARRAN. I will go further than that. I do not think this statement can be successfully contradicted: If a decision of that kind were to be rendered, the port of New York and the berths in which ships are harbored while in the port of New York would be involved. Every other port in the country would be involved. The right to ownership of lands under navigable streams would be involved. San Francisco Bay and everything pertaining to it would be involved.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. CORDON. I am interested in the observation the Senator from Nevada has just made, namely, that this proceeding—I refer to the case now pending in the Supreme Court—unquestionably had its genesis in the desire of members of the executive branch of the Government to control whatever oil deposits may lie below the surface of the sea, within the established territorial limits of the State of California. That seems to be the main basis of all argument which I have heard in support of the claims which have been made to those areas.

In that connection, I call attention to the fact that we now have on our statute books legislation which was enacted for the purpose of permitting exploration of the public domain to be made by private individuals within the United States, for the very purpose of discovering new oil lands, and giving to those who might discover such new oil lands special consideration insofar as their discovery work was concerned, special consideration in connection with their producing oil, and special consideration thereafter — the point being that the Congress has endeavored to secure action from the citizens of the United States looking toward the discovery and production of oil on the public lands of the United States.

As I view the matter, the only value which could come to the United States if the United States Government did, in fact, have title to the lands in question, would be a small oil royalty. Otherwise, those lands would be exploited like other lands. So if we are looking at this matter, not from the legal standpoint, not from the broad national standpoint, but solely from the standpoint of the material interest of the States, forgetting the equities involved, the matter is so small as to be inconsequential.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, let me say in that regard that it was developed in the hearings—and to my mind, this matter is not of vital importance—that the royalties exacted by the State of California were much greater and much higher than the royalties exacted by the Federal Government. So, Mr. President, if a comparison of that kind amounts to anything, the argument is against the Federal Government. However, I do not think it is vital, at all.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, if the Senator will further yield to me, I should like to observe that if an investigation were made into the facts, I suspect we might find that the income tax which is exacted as the result of the production of oil in that area is far greater in amount than any equity or interest which the Government could possibly have.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, at this point I wish to dwell just a little more on one phase of this question. The two persons who testified before the Senate Judiciary Committee in opposition to House Joint Resolution 225 were Mr. E. J. Preston and Mr. Robert E. Lee Jordan, Jr., in addition to an attorney named Orin Demotte Walker, who appeared on behalf of Mr. Jordan. With the single exception of Mr. Ickes, those persons were the only ones who appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee in opposition to House Joint Resolution 225. The interest of each of them in the matter is as follows:

On June 26, 1937, Mr. E. J. Preston filed an application with the Department of the Interior for a Federal oil and gas lease, describing an area of submerged lands off the coast of California at Huntington Beach. The application was denied by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, in accordance with the then policy of the Department, Mr. Ickes having ruled that all such submerged lands belonged to the States.

However, Mr. Preston appealed to the Secretary from the Commission's decision. Prior to the issuance of any final decision on that appeal, Mr. Ickes changed his mind as to the question of State ownership. The appeal has never been acted upon, and is still pending.

Prior to 1938, Preston organized a corporation known as the Nevada Metals Recovery, Inc. The name was later changed to Pacific Underseas Oil, Inc. The authorized capital stock of the corporation was 4,000,000 shares, of the par value of 5 cents a share. The stock was issued to Mr. Preston, in exchange for his rights, upon the application for the Federal oil and gas lease, pending an appeal in Secretary Ickes' office. The corporate records show that the company had no assets of any kind except the expectancy created by Mr. Ickes' change of mind and by the possibility that if the United States should at some time acquire possession of California's tidelands, the Interior Department would act favorably on Preston's pending appeal and would grant to Pacific Underseas Oil, Inc., the lease for which Preston had applied.

On the strength of that expectancy, Mr. Preston sold a substantial part of the capital stock of the Pacific Underseas Oil, Inc. The records show that there were more than 300 stockholders, and that stock sales were made to individuals in California, Illinois, Colorado, Connecticut, Idaho, Oregon, and Utah. Whether the sales were properly authorized by the State corporation commissioners and by the Securities and Exchange Commission is a matter now under investigation by proper officials.

Mr. President, I am about to conclude my opening statement. I hope this matter will go over until tomorrow.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a moment, to permit me to make an observation?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. DONNELL. I should like to make an observation along the line of the information which the Senator was so kind as to give a while ago on the question whether there is any difference in rule as to the title of the State with respect to land under navigable waters within what are generally considered its boundaries and the title to lands underneath the marginal seacoast.

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. DONNELL. The Senator was kind enough to give the illustration of a crime committed within a distance of 3 miles from the coast.

I wish to call two things to the Senator's attention. One of them is an observation appearing in 16 Corpus Juris, which at first glance might seem to militate to some extent against the suggestion made by the Senator; but my primary purpose in referring to it is to call attention to a case which I have just seen, which I think clearly indicates the soundness of his position. I think it might be well for me to put those two observations into the RECORD.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, let me say to the Senator from Missouri that my experience in the practice of the law leads me to say that while in the first instance I frequently go to Corpus Juris, I always like to check up on it, because I find that one can find almost any kind of law he may wish to find in Corpus Juris.

Mr. DONNELL. I may say that my remarks with respect to Corpus Juris were possibly not quite fair, because without reading two sentences I think one might easily come to a conclusion not intended by the author of Corpus Juris.

Mr. President, may I have the Senate's permission to read these two brief observations?

Mr. McCARRAN. Certainly.

Mr. DONNELL. The following appears in 16 Corpus Juris, at page 169:

> It has often been said that the jurisdiction of a nation to punish offenses extends into the ocean to the distance of a cannon shot, which is estimated as one marine league from low-water mark on the shore; but it is doubtful whether there is any jurisdiction to punish for offenses committed within this marine league limit, if the place of the offense is not an arm of the sea and within the body of a country, unless the jurisdiction is expressly conferred by statute.

Let me digress here to say that up to that point it appeared to me, offhand, that the observation was somewhat contrary to the Senator's. But the author of Corpus Juris proceeds to state the following:

> Such jurisdiction, however, can undoubtedly be expressly conferred by statute, and such statutes have been enacted both in England and in the United States.

Mr. President, that last sentence led to the inquiry in my mind as to whether a State could itself enact a statute extending its boundary out into the ocean, or whether the statute referred to must be a Federal statute. With that thought in mind, I looked up the case which is cited in Corpus Juris. In that case I find the language which I am about to quote, which I think bears out what the Senator was kind enough to give us. The following appears in the case of the United States v. Newark Meadows Improvement Co. (173 Federal Reporter 429):

> In Manchester v. Massachusetts (139 U. S. 240, 258; 11 Sup. Ct. 559, 562; 35 L. Ed. 159), the court citing the case just referred to, declared that it must be regarded as established that as between nations the minimum limit of the territorial jurisdiction of a nation over tide waters is a marine league from its coast. Both from the language quoted and from the nature of the decision in the Manchester case, it seems to me to follow that New Jersey may, in the exercise of its sovereignty, extend its own borders for the space of one marine league from low-water mark and make the region so annexed as much a portion of the State as any other part of its territory.

I thank the Senator for the privilege of inserting this citation in the RECORD. I thought that it might have some relevancy to the information which the Senator gave a short while ago.

Mr. McCARRAN. I thank the Senator. I may say that there is a New York case in which the Federal Government found itself entangled with the marshal and with the State authorities. There is a very interesting treatise on the subject.

Mr. DONNELL. With reference to the case of Martin and others against Waddell, which was cited by the Senator, and which is found in U. S. 41, 367, I may say that I have not been able, from a somewhat brief examination of the decision to determine whether it involved an actual authority with respect to lands underlying the ocean. The language on page 407 of the decision reads, in part, as follows:

> At the trial in the circuit court, the jury found a special verdict, setting forth, among other things, that the land claimed lies beneath the navigable waters of the Raritan River and Bay where the tide ebbs and flows.

So I am not certain, from a casual reading of the case, whether it supports the view that the State, as distinguished from the Federal Government, has control over the land underlying the ocean, but I believe that the case cited from the 173 Federal, from which I read, is authority in support of the right of the State itself to enlarge its own boundaries to cover the 3-mile limit beyond low-water mark.

Mr. McCARRAN. If the Senator will read the report of the Judiciary Committee he will find there cited a number of cases which will throw much light on the question in the Senator's mind.

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Senator.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. HAWKES. The State of New Jersey is usually quite insistent upon getting its rights. I can see why the State took the position which it did, as set forth in the decision which has been read.

I wish to say further to the Senator from Nevada that the State of New Jersey, as far as I know, is deeply interested in having this question determined finally. I, for one, cannot understand why anyone should criticize this body for trying to define what those rights are, and whether they belong to the State or to the Nation. During the past few years there has been an ever-increasing tendency to concentrate more and more power in the Federal Government. I, for one, am opposed to the encroachment by the Federal Government upon rights which, to my mind, and to the minds of many other persons who are well informed of the law, have been fairly well determined. When I hear an argument that the Congress of the United States should not legislate in connection with this matter, merely because the question is now pending before the courts, I ask whether the courts should attempt to legislate on a subject which the Congress should determine, and thereby prevent the Congress from being allowed to define the rights of the States.

I wished to make those few remarks to the Senator from Nevada because I am deeply interested in seeing that the Congress determines this great issue. I shall vote for the joint resolution.

Mr. McCARRAN. I thank the Senator.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, on February 5, 1946, when the hearings were being held before the Committee on the Judiciary on the question of title to land beneath tidal and navigable waters I, together with my colleague, received a concurrent resolution from the State of South Carolina urging the United States Senators from South Carolina vigorously to support and vote for House Joint Resolution 225, now pending in the Senate of the United States, providing for the release and quitclaim to the several States of the lands lying beneath the tidewaters and inland waterway of the States.

I may say, Mr. President, that at that time I was a witness before the committee, and I made a statement with respect to the concurrent resolution. I ask unanimous consent that following the remarks of the distinguished Senator from Nevada my remarks before the Senate Committee on the Judiciary and the complete concurrent resolution adopted by the legislature of South Carolina, be printed in the body of the RECORD.

There being no objection, the matter referred to was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT OF THE HONORABLE BURNET R. MAYBANK, UNITED STATES SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA

Senator MAYBANK. Mr. Chairman, I want to make a very brief statement and I want to thank you for permitting me to do so, so that I can get back in the Senate.

On Friday of last week I placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a concurrent resolution passed by the State of South Carolina Legislature in session. It is not necessary for me to read that resolution at this time because it will take the committee's time, but I would like to have this concurrent resolution made a part of the permanent hearings here.

As for myself, I might say that I am in thorough accord with it. I might also say that we have some distinguished visitors from South Carolina here today, and I desire to do what I can to preserve the rights of the State of South Carolina.

I thank you very much, Mr. Chairman, and if you will put the resolution as expressed by the house of representatives and the senate of my State in the record, I would appreciate it.

Senator WILEY. It is so ordered.

(The resolution is as follows:)

"Concurrent resolution urging the United States Senators from South Carolina to vigorously support and vote for House Joint Resolution 225, now pending in the Senate of the United States, providing for the release and quitclaim to the several States of the lands lying beneath the tidewaters and inland waterway of the States

"Whereas prior to the year 1937 no claim was made by the Federal Government or by Federal officials to title to tidewater lands and lands under the waters of navigable streams within the boundaries of the several States; and

"Whereas since said time certain officials of the United States of America have taken the position that the title to such lands is not in the several States but in the United States; and

"Whereas there is now pending in the United States Supreme Court a suit by the United States of America against the State of California in which the title to such lands is involved, an adverse opinion in that case would seriously affect the interest of every State in the Union having a coast line or inland navigable streams; and

"Whereas there is now pending in the Senate of the United States of America House Joint Resolution 225, which seeks to quiet the title to all such lands and declare the same to be in the States and in such manner avoid much litigation on the subject, and perhaps save to the States millions of dollars' worth of valuable property; and

"Whereas it is the opinion of the General Assembly of the State of South Carolina that the status of the title to such lands should be definitely fixed in the States, and that the resolution above referred to should be passed: Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved by the senate (the house of representatives concurring), That the Honorable BURNET R. MAYBANK and the Honorable OLIN D. JOHNSTON, United States Senators from the State of South Carolina, be, and they are, urged to support and vote for House Joint Resolution 225 when the same is up for consideration in the United States Senate; be it further

"Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent to each of the United States Senators from the State of South Carolina."

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, the able and distinguished Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, has fully and completely covered this subject. It hardly seems necessary to consume the time of the Senate in going over the ground in a manner which might be repetitious. However, the matter before the Senate is one which vitally affects the State of California and, in my opinion, all other States of the Union.

It has been pointed out today that the suit which is now pending before the court is directed at the State of California. The suit represents an attack upon the sovereignty of the territory of the State of California, involving areas which have been recognized as belonging to that State since California was admitted to statehood. It has been clearly pointed out today, Mr. President, that if the attack on the sovereignty of the State of California is successful, it will establish a precedent for a similar attack upon the sovereignty of every other State in the Union.

It seems to me that an attempt is being made to divide the Nation at a time when we should have unity and cooperation. First, Mr. President, one particular coastal State is picked out upon which the attack is to be leveled. If the attack is successful, the precedent will, of course, apply to every other coastal State. Arguments have been made by Members of the Senate on the other side of the question that the precedent will apply only to coastal States and not to interior States. But we know that if the precedent is once established with respect to the coastal States, it will apply to the navigable streams and rivers throughout the entire United States. Sometimes remarks have been made to the effect that the precedent will apply only to the more recently admitted States and will not apply to the original 13 States. Those remarks have been made in an effort to allay the apprehensions of the representatives of the original 13 States as to the danger which lies in this kind of legislation.

I assert, Mr. President, that some of us believe that it has been firmly established that all other States came into the Union with the same rights, privileges, and sovereignties as did the original 13 States. If this attack upon the sovereignty of the State of California is successful, it is my opinion that the same attack could be made, and eventually would be made, upon the sovereignty of the territory of the original 13 States of the Union.

When hearings were being held by the committee, presided over by the able and distinguished Senator from Nevada, I appeared and presented a letter from the Governor of California. Because I realized that during the busy months through which we have been passing many Senators have not had time or an opportunity to read the hearings which were held by either the House or the Senate committee, I feel that it will be worth while to put some material into the RECORD at this point.

The letter to which I referred reads as follows:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
Sacramento, February 2, 1946.

Hon. WILLIAM F. KNOWLAND,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: It is a matter of sincere regret to me that I cannot attend the hearing upon House Joint Resolution 225 before the Judiciary Committee of the Senate on February 5. I would do so but for the fact that our legislature is meeting in extraordinary session at this time, and it is impossible for me to leave the State of California. However, I want the committee to know that I favor the passage of the bill and that it is, in my opinion, a matter of paramount concern to the State of California.

The passage of House Joint Resolution 225 will right a wrong which has been inflicted on our State since the introduction of the Nye resolution 9 years ago. The title to our tidelands—both those in the ownership of the State and of her grantees—has been assaulted throughout the intervening years, first by congressional resolutions, and failing there, by successive actions in the courts. The title of all our port facilities, our harbor and oceanside developments, our tideland oil deposits, and our inland waterways have been clouded through no fault or action of our own. We have exercised the same dominion over our tidelands that is being exercised by all other coastal States of the Union. We have never asked for more and we insist that we should not be required to be satisfied with less because we were admitted into the Union on "an equal footing with the original States in all respects whatever." The litigation of the Federal Government which has clouded our titles could continue for years at a time when we are endeavoring to absorb 2,000,000 people who came to us during the war by developing industry and expanding our trade into the Pacific. We must do this if we are to create the jobs essential for their well-being. We cannot do it to advantage if our ownership to the very land which makes these things possible is challenged.

For over a century and a half the Supreme Court of the United States has on at least 50 occasions—and under as many sets of circumstances—recognized the ownership of tidelands to be in the States subject only to the paramount right of the Government for national defense and the regulation of interstate commerce. The Congress and the administrative agencies of the Government have recognized this principle throughout that entire period. Enormous investments were made in reliance upon it by States, cities, port authorities, and private individuals. Property rights were established and universally recognized under it. To disturb those rights and the lives of the people who are dependent upon them at this time would be a cruel exercise of power by the Federal Government.

It should also be borne in mind that the establishment of any principle that would divest the State of California of her title to her tidelands and waterways would eventually result in similar action against the other States.

I shall not discuss the law involved in the situation because that will be ably done by our attorney general. Neither shall I state our legislative viewpoint because a special committee of our State legislature will perform that duty I will appreciate it, however, if you will be good enough to state to the Judiciary Committee that the governmental agencies of the State of California are as one in the belief that justice and equity call for the passage of House Joint Resolution 225.

Sincerely,

EARL WARREN,
Governor of California.

Mr. President, as I have pointed out, this is not a matter which concerns California alone. The able Senator from Nevada has already indicated that 48 States and local public officials, representing among them 47 States, 417 cities located in all 48 States, 50 public port authorities and other public agencies appeared in support of the joint resolution.

Two private persons, the attorney for one of these, and one public official appeared in opposition to the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was carefully considered by the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives, and was passed by an overwhelming vote by the House. It has been carefully considered and studied, after extensive hearings, by the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate of the United States.

It has been on the calendar of the Senate for a long period of time.

Because, Mr. President, as I have pointed out before, so many of the Members of the Senate, busily engaged with the many problems which have confronted all of us, have not had an opportunity to study the record, or the very valuable information which has been furnished each Senator, I believe, I shall take the time to read briefly some of the material contained in a report relative to the facts about the legislation quieting State titles to lands beneath tidal and navigable waters, prepared by the attorney general of the State of California, Mr. Robert W. Kenny. This is what he has to say:

On September 20, 1945, the House of Representatives passed by an overwhelming vote House Joint Resolution 225 which confirms long recognized State ownership of all lands beneath tidal and navigable waters and releases Federal claims to these lands. The purpose of this memorandum is to set forth the facts upon which the House predicated its action and to show who are the proponents of the legislation and why they are supporting it, and who are the opponents of the legislation and why they are opposing it.

Senate Joint Resolution 48, now pending in the Senate, is a companion measure to House Joint Resolution 225, and is substantially identical in form.

WHO ARE THE PROPONENTS OF HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION 225?

House Joint Resolution 225 was introduced in the House by Congressman HATTON W. SUMNERS, of Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee. It was actually a committee resolution designed to take the place of 18 similar House resolutions which had been previously introduced by Congressmen from Louisiana, Alabama, California, New York, Ohio, Illinois, Mississippi, and Maine. The consolidated resolution 225 was unanimously recommended for passage by the Judiciary Committee.

This committee action followed 3 days of public hearings at which the following persons appeared and testified in support of the legislation: Robert W. Kenny, attorney general of California; Leander I. Shelley, general counsel, Port of New York Authority; also representing American Association of Port Authorities, which consists of 51 important ports and harbors; Grover Sellers, attorney general, Texas; Hugh S. Jenkins, attorney general, Ohio; Richmond B. Keech, corporation counsel, District of Columbia, appearing on behalf of National Institute of Municipal Law Officers, representing 408 cities; Hirsh Freed, assistant corporation counsel, Boston, Mass.; Greek L. Rice, attorney general, Mississippi; John M. Daniel, attorney general, South Carolina; A. B. Mitchell, attorney general, Kansas; Ira J. Partlow, attorney general, West Virginia; Hughes J. Rhodes, assistant attorney general, North Carolina; Ralph W. Farris, attorney general, Maine; Gessner T. McCorvey, special assistant attorney general, Alabama; M. Vashti Burr, deputy attorney general, Pennsylvania; John J. Cooney, assistant attorney general, Rhode Island; Harry L. Brooks, assistant attorney general, Connecticut; John L. Madden, special assistant attorney general, State of Louisiana; Lucille May Grace, registrar, State land office, Louisiana; Orrin Judd, solicitor general, New York; Hall Hammond, deputy attorney general, Maryland; Bascom Giles, commissioner of general land office, Texas; Arthur Eldridge, harbor manager, Los Angelesfi Calif.; Claud A. Rankin, State land commissioner, Arkansas; Irving Smith, city attorney, Long Beach, Calif.; Harry C. Brockel, port manager, city of Milwaukee, Wis.; C. W. Babcock, city attorney, Milwaukee, Wis.; Herbert Wade, director of port authority, State of Virginia.

In addition the following sent written messages to the committee urging favorable action: Otto A. Case, commissioner, Department of Public Lands, State of Washington; John H. Burgard, chairman of public docks, Portland, Oreg.; T. H. Banfield, president, Pacific Coast Association of Port Authorities; John R. Dethmers, attorney general of Michigan; Nels G. Johnson, attorney general of North Dakota; Alan Bible, attorney general of Nevada; J. A. Burnquist, attorney general of Minnesota; Earl Snell, Governor of Oregon; Coke Stevenson, Governor of Texas; Simon E. Sobeloff, city solicitor of Baltimore; Frank F. Truscott, city solicitor of Philadelphia; James H. Davis, Governor of Louisiana.

In addition to the above a legal brief was filed in support of the legislation. This brief was signed by attorneys general of 46 States. After reviewing and citing authorities from many Supreme Court decisions this brief concluded:

"The proposed resolution releases no property and no property interest in which the United States now has any legitimate claim whatsoever. Its passage will serve to clear the titles of immensely important and valuable State and municipal properties throughout the Nation from the wholly unwarranted cloud which has been cast upon them as a result of the Nye resolution and of the more recent claims of the Department of the Interior. This alleged policy of that Department is not and never has been the true policy of the United States and is directly opposed to the legitimate and settled property rights of every State in the Union.

"The lands beneath tidewater and navigable waters belong to the States in their sovereign capacity as States. The claim of Mr. Ickes is a direct attack on State sovereignty. This claim affects not only the ownership and jurisdiction of every port and harbor in the United States but constitutes a threat to all property held under the principle of State sovereignty."

The overwhelming support accorded this measure by responsible and high-ranking officials from every part of the Nation demonstrates beyond question that this is, as Mr. Freed, corporation counsel of Boston, said, a measure of Nation-wide importance, a measure, indeed, that far transcends the interests of any one State or any person or group of persons.

WHAT LANDS ARE UNDER ATTACK?

The lands actually affected by Federal claims are all lands under the navigable waters within the boundaries of every State in the Union. In the coastal States this includes tidelands and submerged lands out to the 3-mile limit (or to the State's boundary wherever it may be). It includes all lands beneath inland navigable lakes and rivers. It also includes the beds of the Great Lakes out to the international boundary line, which is also the boundary of the States which border on the Great Lakes. All such lands for brevity are sometimes called "tide and submereged lands."

It must be borne in mind also that filled or reclaimed lands, which were formerly submerged, unless they have been granted away, still belong to the States as sovereign lands. Of course, in many instances the States have granted such lands to private individuals. Many of our large cities are partially built on filled tidelands, which are held by the present occupants under grants from the State or by virtue of State laws. An attack on State titles is necessarily an attack on the titles of all grantees, lessees, and successors of the States.

I might interpose at this point to say that the city of San Francisco is partially built upon filled tidelands.

I continue reading from Mr. Kenny's brief:

All tide and submerged lands, filled and unfilled, and all lands under inland navigable waters are held by the State by virtue of the same legal principle, namely, as sovereign lands of the State. A claim by a Federal official to any of these lands anywhere is a serious attack on this legal principle and hence is a threat to all such lands in every State.

WHO HAS HAD CONTROL OF TIDE AND SUBMERGED LANDS IN THE PAST?

From the beginning of the Federal Union all States have always exercised full powers of control and ownership over their tide and submerged lands, subject only to the constitutional powers of the Federal Government to regulate interstate and foreign commerce.

The ownership and control of these lands by the States is based not only on the court decisions cited in the Attorneys General brief, but also on the decisions of all Secretaries of the Interior, including Mr. Ickes (prior to 1936) and on the approval and acquiescence of Congress and all other Federal officials since 1789. Throughout all this time it was uniformly held by the courts and considered by the Government that tide and submerged lands were sovereign lands of the States and not public lands of the United States.

Each of the Original Thirteen States began to utilize its tide and submerged lands before the Federal Government was formed and has continued to deal with such lands under its own laws since that time. Each new State, since its admission to the Union, has done likewise. All ports and harbors have been constructed under State authority (subject to the approval of Federal officers only for the protection of navigation). In many cases lands have been granted by the States to their municipalities and to port districts. In others they have been leased or granted to private individuals and corporations for production of minerals or other products. The entire shrimp and oyster industry is carried on under State grants or leases. Almost every State in the Union, both coastal and inland, has some navigable waters under which there are products of great value which have always been administered pursuant to the State's own laws.

House Joint Resolution 225 is not an attempt on the part of the States to take something away from the Federal Government. It is merely to protect and clear the title of properties over which the States have always exercised full and complete control and ownership.

WHAT IS THE VALUE OF THE LANDS AFFECTED BY THE CLAIMS OF FEDERAL OFFICIALS?

It is impossible even to estimate the total value of all the lands which come within the category of tide and submerged lands. In 1938 it was estimated that the value of the property belonging to the ports and harbors of the respective States exceeded $3,000,000,000.

Mr. President, in conclusion, I merely wish to review one point. It has been stated earlier in the day that the proposed action, if taken by the Senate of the United States, along with the House, might have the appearance of taking jurisdiction away from the Supreme Court of the United States.

Such is not the case. The legislation was introduced prior to the filing of any suit. As the able Senator from Nevada has pointed out, if we allow such a doctrine to be established, it could mean that in any case, when the policy-determining body of the Federal Government, which is the Congress of the United States, undertakes to establish a national policy, someone by merely filing an action in the courts, could then come in and say "Do not act upon that subject. It is before the courts of the land."

Mr. President, that would tie the hands of the legislative body of this Nation. Instead of being equal partners with the executive and the judicial branches of the Government, it would make the legislative branch subordinate to the judicial branch of the Government. We cannot allow such a doctrine to be established

I simply wish to say in conclusion, Mr. President, that the State of California, represented by its Governor, by its Attorney General, by its State Legislature, by both its United States Senators, and by every port authority and municipal authority having jurisdiction over harbor developments in the entire State, is vitally interested and vitally concerned in the passage of this joint resolution. But I say, Mr. President, that these are not officials concerned with it merely because of some selfish interest on the part of the State of California to protect its sovereignty from the attack of the Federal Government. They are interested because they well know, as we must well know in this Chamber today, that if this precedent is once established, whereby the Federal Government can come in and seize a part of the territory of the State of California which has belonged to the State of California ever since her admission to statehood in 1850, then the Federal Government can come in and attack the sovereignty of every one of the other 47 States of the Union.

Therefore, Mr. President, I hope the Senate, by an overwhelming vote, will pass the joint resolution which has been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary by the able Senator from Nevada.

Mr. DOWNEY obtained the floor.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. I yield.

Mr. CAPEHART. I wish to ask the junior Senator from California a question. There is what is known as the continental shelf—I believe that is the official name of it—which varies in depth from 5 miles to 250 miles, under which there is a possibility that there may be oil or minerals. I should like to ask the Senator how many miles from the shore of California or any other State does he feel the State should own?

Mr. KNOWLAND. I will say in answer to my able and distinguished colleague that I am not an attorney. There is a legal question, and a grave legal question, involved. I would say that the situation differs as it relates to different States. Whatever title the State now owns should be given to it under this quitclaim deed. In California, as an example, ownership may extend out to the 3-mile limit. I have heard—I do not know on what basis the claim is made—that the State of Texas claims title out to 10 miles. To whatever distance the title extends, whether it be 3 miles or 10 miles or otherwise, should be quitclaimed to the States. Anything beyond the limit to which any State now has a legal right, of course, is a matter with respect to which the Federal Government might rightfully claim jurisdiction.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, do I have the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The senior Senator from California was recognized, and the Chair thought he yielded to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. DOWNEY. The Senator from Indiana asked me to yield to him, and from then on I have had no opportunity to speak.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOWNEY. I prefer not to yield.

Mr. President, the purpose of House Joint Resolution 225 is to recognize and confirm a condition that has existed since 1776 and that was never challenged until 1937, when former Senator Nye and Secretary Ickes began to agitate the idea that the Federal Government, through some never-before-heard-of legal theory, could acquire title to the tidal and submerged lands lying wholly within the boundaries of the respective States.

The States have always exercised, and do now exercise full powers of ownership over these lands, subject only to the power of Congress to regulate commerce and navigation. All the ports and harbors and all the enormous transportation and industrial facilities existing today on submerged or filled land have been constructed on the assumption that those lands belonged to the States or to their grantees. The States also have from the beginning followed the policy of leasing their submerged lands for the development of numerous products such as oil, gas, coal, iron, brine, sand, and gravel, oysters, mussels, shrimps, sponges, and other marine products. All these practices have been uniform both in coastal and inland States having navigable waters. Practically every State that has any navigable water receives large revenues by reason of the port and harbor developments and the products above-mentioned. The title of the inland States to the beds of their navigable waters has always been held to be based on the same legal principle as title of coastal States to their ports and harbors and their submerged coastal lands, namely, that by virtue of State sovereignty, the States were the owners of lands beneath navigable waters within their boundaries. The claims of Mr. Ickes and other Federal officials have therefore clouded titles to all submerged lands in every State for the obvious reason that it is impossible to attack one State's title without in legal effect challenging the title of every other State. The sole purpose and effect of House Joint Resolution 225 is to remove that cloud.

SPONSORSHIP CF HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION 225

As a result of the claims and acts of Mr. Ickes and of the suits filed at his insistence, the highest public officials of nearly every State in the Union have joined in the sponsorship of this legislation. Specifically, the State officials urging the passage of this legislation are:

First. The attorneys general of 47 States—Arizona not joining.

Second. The Governors' Conference representing the governors of all the States. This organization has twice taken action urging passage of House Joint Resolution 225.

Third. The National Association of Port Authorties. This organization consists of the officials and attorneys of 51 of the ports and harbors of the country. Their representatives have been active in support of this legislation from the start. Their attorneys are the best known experts in the country in the field of titles to submerged lands. They are unanimous in the opinion that the Federal claims are a definite cloud on the titles to all ports and harbors and that this legislation is essential in order to clear titles and make possible necessary financing and construction programs.

Fourth. The National Association of Municipal Law Officers. This organization is composed of city attorneys of 408 cities, and they have twice unanimously urged the passage of this legislation and have taken an active part in promoting it.

In addition to the above mention may be made of two private organizations which have studied this question and acted upon it. They are: First, the United States Chamber of Commerce, which after thorough study submitted the question to its membership throughout the country with full statements both of Mr. Ickes' position and that of the State officials. The vote of the members was 1,950 in favor of the adoption of House Joint Resolution 225 and 64 against; second, the American Bar Association, which at its last annual meeting took unanimous action in favor of the adoption of House Joint Resolution 225. Many other public officials and private organizations have likewise acted, but the above demonstrates that the issue is not as stated by Mr. Ickes merely a matter of some oil off the California coast, but it is a Nation-wide problem involving vital State and Federal relations and vital elements in the economy of nearly every State.

BASIS OF STATES' TITLES

The United States Attorney General apparently assumes that the pending suit in the Supreme Court involves only lands along the open seacoast below low-water mark. However, the almost universal concern expressed by representatives of State, municipal, and port officials is a clear demonstration of the fact that the Federal claims do affect not only submerged lands along the open coast but all submerged and reclaimed lands which are now or were formerly under navigable waters, whether along the seacoast, in ports and harbors or beneath inland waters.

When Mr. Biddle filed the first test suit in California, he frankly admitted that the decision would affect titles to submerged lands in every State in the Union, both coastal and inland, which had any navigable waters within its boundary.

The Supreme Court has told us not once but at least 50 times that title to all lands beneath navigable waters, whether coastal or inland, was originally held by the British Crown as an attribute of its sovereignty. No distinction was ever made between lands beneath inland waters or ports and harbors on the one hand and lands along the seacoast beneath the open sea on the other.

At the instant of the Declaration of Independence, the sovereignty of the British Crown, including title and ownership of all lands beneath navigable waters, both inland and coastal, passed to the people of each of the Thirteen Original States. All States subsequently admitted to the Union were admitted on an equal footing with the Thirteen Original States. The United States is a Union of equal States. The United States Attorney General has recognized this equality for in the pending suit he has challenged not only the title of California, but the title of the Thirteen Original States and he has challenged that title as of the very moment that independence was achieved. From that moment on, the Attorney General contends, the Federal Government and not the States has owned the lands along the seacoast below low-water mark and within the State's boundaries, and he has made the same claim as to every other coastal State.

But the fallacy of this claim is that we cannot separate those submerged lands today into two classifications. It is as true now as it was in 1776 that the sovereign owning to title to one part of the submerged lands holds title to all. Time after time the Supreme Court has upheld the unity of title of the States to all their submerged lands. Time after time the Supreme Court has held that those lands were owned absolutely by the States or their grantees.

To reverse that established rule now and to declare that the United States owns a part of these submerged lands would be to destroy the State's title to all its submerged lands. The title is as indivisible as the title to one's home. To attempt to divide these lands is as fantastic as to say: "While you may still own the back yard, you do not hold title to the front yard." That is why inland States are vitally affected.

FALLACY OF FEDERAL CLAIMS

In justification of the suit now pending in the Supreme Court, the Attorney General has been reported to have said that there are no Supreme Court decisions which specifically hold that the States own the tidelands along the open coast and below low-water mark. It is difficult to see how he can make such a contention in view of the long line of cases which are digested in the able report of the Senate Judiciary Committee recommending passage of this joint resolution. This report quotes from dozens of Supreme Court decisions which say in so many words that all lands beneath navigable waters, whether fresh or salt, belong to the States, and none of these cases makes any distinction between inland waters and coastal waters. However, the Attorney General, while admitting that the Supreme Court has many times said that tide and submerged lands belong to the States, now takes the amazing position that in every one of these many cases the language used was obiter dictum, which, in laymen's language, means that it was an expression of the Court's viewpoint but was not absolutely necessary to the decision in the particular case under consideration.

Of course, if this view is correct, then these repeated statements of the Supreme Court are not only obiter dictum but are actually incorrect statements of law.

In the brief filed by the attorneys general of 47 States, more than 30 Supreme Court decisions are cited, all of which contain statements upholding State ownership, which the United States Attorney General now says were useless and erroneous statements of law. It is difficult to believe that the Supreme Court would so frequently indulge in an erroneous statement of law on a fundamental principle which constitutes the basis of enormously valuable land titles in every State in the Union. On the contrary, it is the opinion of the attorneys general of all the States and the attorneys for the cities and port authorities that these statements by the Supreme Court were carefully worded pronouncements of a basic rule of law intended to cover not only inland water but all lands beneath navigable waters within the boundaries of all the States.

This viewpoint is borne out not only by the opinions of many United States Attorneys General in the past, but by the opinions and acts of every other department in the Federal Government prior to 1938.

The Department of the Interior itself has at all times relied on the language of the court decisions previously mentioned as establishing the rule under which that office was required to act until Mr. Ickes attempted to reverse this rule in 1938. For example, between 1882 and 1938, the Department of the Interior and the General Land Office issued no less than 27 decisions holding specifically that California was the owner of the lands below low-water mark and out to the 3-mile limit. It based all these decisions on the very Supreme Court language which the Attorney General of the United States now says is obiter dictum.

The Congress of the United States, the War and Navy Departments, and the United States Attorney General's office have also relied on this same language in hundreds of instances as being not obiter dictum but a definitive and controlling rule of property law.

Between 1887 and 1946 the State of California has granted or ceded to the United States by legislative act not less than 35 parcels of land along the open coast and below low-water mark. Most of these were for the War and Navy Departments. In every instance the United States recognized the ownership of California by asking the State to grant the United States these lands. The same thing has happened in every other coastal State.

In a great many instances the Congress of the United States has recognized the title of the States to these offshore lands by making appropriations for the construction of breakwaters or other improvements, upon the condition that the State would cede or grant title to these lands to the United States.

The opinion of the officials of the States of the Union with regard to Mr. Ickes' endeavors to change this long-settled rule of property and, in effect, confiscate billions of dollars of State properties, is summed up in the words of Nathaniel L. Goldstein, Attorney General of New York, who said to the House Judiciary Committee that the arguments advanced by the claimants of Federal ownership were:

> void of basis in law or fact, were flagrantly in disregard of the decisions of the United States Supreme Court, and were morally dishonest attacks upon the sovereignty and title of the States to the submerged lands.

PENDING SUPREME COURT CASE

The legislation to quiet State titles was introduced in Congress in March 1945. Late in May 1945, just 2 weeks before the time set for the House Judiciary Committee hearing, Mr. Biddle, at the urgent request of Mr. Ickes, filed a suit against Pacific Western Oil Co., a lessee of the State of California. It was obviously filed as a deliberate attempt to block the legislation. The House committee proceeded, however, and the bill was unanimously reported out of the committee and on September 20 passed the House by an overwhelming vote.

In October, just before the time set for the Senate committee hearings, again at the urgent request of Mr. Ickes, the Pacific Western suit was dismissed and another suit filed directly in the United States Supreme Court. Obviously this, too, was filed for the purpose of blocking the legislation.

The idea seems to have existed that the Supreme Court could decide this issue and settle the whole question in a few months' time, but this is contrary to all past experience. Litigation of this type invariably takes years to bring to a final conclusion. The essence of the matter is that this is not the type of question which can be easily or permanently settled by litigation. If the decision in the pending case is in favor of California, it will not stop future agitation of the question. In view of the propensity of public officials to change their viewpoint on such questions, there will always be the possibility of agitation over titles until Congress finally acts.

If the decision in the pending case were in favor of the Government, it would be only the first step in litigation which would necessarily continue for years and which would throw the titles of submerged lands in all other States into a condition of chaos and uncertainty. The task of fixing a new boundary around the entire United States dividing State from Federal title would take generations to complete.

Both the Senate and the House Judiciary Committees considered carefully the question whether Congress should defer all action during the pendency of this litigation. Both committees were of the opinion that Congress should act. The viewpoint of the House Judiciary Committee expresses the matter succinctly in the following words:

> In view of the settled rule of property previously mentioned, it is the opinion of the committee that there is no justification for subjecting the States and their successors who have long had the ownership and possession of their tide and submerged lands to the expense and vexation of litigation.
>
> The highest court in the land has already passed upon these questions numerous times. There is no certainty that another decision would be accepted as final by those who continue to agitate this question. Furthermore, the litigation recently filed would undoubtedly not settle the question but would be only the beginning of litigation which might last for many years. In the meantime, needed developments both in ports and harbors and elsewhere in the coastal and submerged lands would be definitely retarded.

No legal or political theory requires that Congress must cease to pass laws on matters pending in the courts. The fact is that Congress is continually passing laws which change or impair or completely destroy the jurisdiction of the court over pending cases. This has never been considered a breach of comity or a trespass on the court's function. The fact is that both Mr. Biddle and Mr. Ickes are on record as late as June 1945, that this matter is one of congressional policy. On June 6, Mr. Biddle wrote to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, a letter in which he said:

> The question whether the resolution should be adopted is one of legislative policy to be considered by Congress.

On the 20th day of June 1945, Mr. Ickes himself wrote a letter to Hon. HATTON SUMNERS, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, in which he said:

> It has seemed to be a matter not appropriate for executive decision, but, on the other hand, one for which the Federal courts have been created. Whether Congress elects to adopt the same view is, of course, a matter of legislative policy.

This controversy was initiated by the unauthorized acts of the Secretary of the Interior in attempting to reverse not only his own decisions, but the long-settled decisions and policies of every other department of the Federal Government. It was an unprecedented attempt to centralize enormous power and billions of dollars' worth of property rights in the Interior Department, at the expense of the States and their many grantees and lessees. This unprecedented attempt is well described in the words of the attorney general of the great inland State of Indiana, Hon. James A. Emmert, who said:

> This is as rank an attempt to steal from the States their lawful property as can ever be found in the history of the sovereigns which expropriate property without compensation.

Such an attempt presents a fundamental question of national policy which Congress should not ignore. To do so would be to inaugurate a period of strife and confusion between States and Federal Government which would last for many years to come.

CONTINENTAL SHELF

House Joint Resolution 225, particularly with the addition of the excellent amendment of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] fully preserves the rights of the United States to all lands and minerals outside lawfully existing State boundaries. But no attempt is made to define or describe the present location of every State boundary. It would obviously have been impossible to do that. The resolution simply deals with State boundaries as they now lawfully exist.

It is well known that there are a few States which claim more than the conventional 3 miles. The measure does not deal with those claims. It neither recognizes nor denies them. If the claims of such States are invalid and cannot be established, the quitclaim will run only to the 3-mile limit. Nothing in the present joint resolution would confirm or recognize the illegal claim of any State.

Beyond the States' legally determined boundaries and out to the limit of the Continental Shelf, as defined in the President's proclamation, the rights of the Federal Government are specifically reserved by the terms of the joint resolution.

Mr. President, I urgently recommend to the Senate that we avoid delay and uncertainty and litigation by the prompt passage of the pending joint resolution.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5452) making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6739) making appropriations for the Department of Labor, the Federal Security Agency, and related independent agencies, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes.

APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE TREASURY AND POST OFFICE DEPARTMENTS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. McKELLAR submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate numbered 7 to the bill (H. R. 5452) making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Omit the matter stricken out and inserted by said amendment; and the Senate agree to the same.

KENNETH MCKELLAR,
PAT MCCARRAN,
CARL HAYDEN,
THEODORE FRANCIS GREEN,
WALLACE H. WHITE,
CHAN GURNEY,
CLYDE M. REED,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

EMMET O'NEAL,
HERMAN P. KOPPLEMANN,
CLARENCE CANNON,
THOMAS D'ALESANDRO, Jr.,
JOHN TABER,
CORDON CANFIELD,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the conference report.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Tennessee make a very brief explanation of the situation?

Mr. McKELLAR. The only matter in controversy was the silver amendment. As the Senator knows, a separate legislative bill dealing with silver was passed by the Senate and has been passed by the House, and was finally agreed upon today, and has been sent to the President, as I understand. With that, we had an agreement that all mention of silver in the appropriation bill would be stricken out. It has been stricken out.

Mr. WHITE. The report, as made, carries out that agreement of the other evening; does it?

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes; it carries out the agreement of the other evening.

Mr. President, I ask for the adoption of the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

THE WORLD COURT

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. SMITH. I wish to make a very brief observation and to present two editorials for insertion in the RECORD.

On Wednesday last the distinguished Senator from Oregon [Mr. MORSE] made what to me was a very challenging and thrilling statement with regard to the Senate of the United States taking action to accept the optional clause of the Statute of the International Court of Justice. That was a very timely statement, made just after we had had the eloquent report of the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] on the Paris Conference. Today we have heard from our distinguished colleague the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], on the subject of the Paris Conference. We have also had the report of Secretary of State Byrnes on the international situation, based on the same Paris Conference.

I wish to identify myself with the statement made and the position taken by the Senator from Oregon in support of Senate Resolution 196, which was submitted by him to the Senate on November 28, 1945, for himself and a group of Senators, including myself, with regard to our accepting the optional clause conferring jurisdiction on the International Court of Justice, and to commend the Senator from Oregon for the very timely and very clear-cut position he took at that time in pointing out that we do not need, as many people have claimed, to wait until Russia acts in this matter. Our acting in this matter now is the logical position for us to take, and it will be an indication to Russia and to the other nations of the world of our intention still to maintain a positive and aggressive position of leadership in connection with all progressive steps looking toward the future peace of the world.

Mr. President, in connection with my remarks on this subject, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks an editorial entitled "Toward a Rule of Law," published in this morning's edition of the New York Herald Tribune, and also an editorial entitled "World Court Issue," published in today's edition of the Washington Post.

There being no objection, the editorials were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Herald Tribune of July 19, 1946]

TOWARD A RULE OF LAW

This week a Senate subcommittee has been holding hearings on a measure which has awakened relatively little public interest. Yet it has been described by Mr. Dean Acheson, Under Secretary of State, as "a long and even a decisive step in the direction of crossing the line which separates world disorder from world order based on law." The measure in question would recognize, on behalf of the United States, the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice.

The United States has already accepted the fact of the court in ratifying the Charter of the United Nations to which the statute of the court was appended. But at present this country cannot become a party to any case before the court (with the exception of cases arising under the constitution of the international labor office, which is not likely to produce controversy) except by agreement with the other parties. The statute of the court does permit states, however, to accept the court's jurisdiction in certain classes of cases in advance. These classes include the interpretation of treaties; any question of international law; the existence of facts which, if established, would constitute a breach of international law, and reparations for breaches of international obligations.

The Court of International Justice which was established in connection with the League of Nations contained a similar provision which, at various times, was utilized by as many as 45 states, and the declarations of about 20 states were still in effect when the new Court came into existence. There declarations will be carried over, so that the United States would not be making any daring innovation if it were to recognize its responsibilities for the development of world law. It would, however, add great strength to the Court by demonstrating its confidence in the equity of the tribunal and its own determination to deal lawfully with all states.

The Court, as now constituted, is not a perfect instrument. It has been pointed out during the hearing in Washington that the international organ lacks a sheriff. That it is not quite accurate, since the Security Council can, if a decision of the Court is not respected, take action to enforce its degrees. The Security Council, however, is so imperfect an instrument in its own sphere that the criticism may well stand. What the Court can do is to foster, by the mutual consent of those litigants who appear before it, the concept of an overriding international law, trusting that its efficient and fair functioning will strengthen respect for the rights of States and the habit of subordinating purely national interests to the common good. In that process, the acceptance by the United States of the jurisdiction of the Court can be a most important factor.

[From the Washington Post of July 17, 1946]

WORLD COURT ISSUE

In the masterly report to the Senate, following his return from the second Paris Conference of the Council of Foreign Ministers, Senator ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG said: "Peace with justice is the supreme necessity for America and for the world." We think that it is well to remember that the achievement of this great objective cannot be left to peace conferences and chancelleries alone. Every nation, acting on its own, can help by demonstrating its readiness to put these principles into practices. And the more powerful the nation the greater its responsibility in this regard.

For this reason it is disturbing, on the eve of the Paris Peace Conference, to learn that the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations may not report out the resolution favoring acceptance of the new World Court's compulsory jurisdiction. It is said that the time for such action is not ripe. But if it is not ripe now, more than a year after the San Francisco Conference and with the need of a reign of law in the world more urgent than ever, it will never be ripe. Unless and until this resolution becomes our policy, as Senator MORSE, its sponsor, pointed out in an eloquent speech in the Senate on Wednesday, the United States "will never be able to convince the weaker nations of the world that there is in fact a squaring between our professions of wanting to promote international peace and our practices."

In the hearings which the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has held on the resolution not one dissenting voice was heard. Moreover, the Morse resolution has strong support on both sides of the Senate and has won the fervent approval of innumerable individuals and organizations. Recently President Truman expressed support for the principle enunciated in that resolution. Indeed, the only argument that has so far been advanced against the proposal is that we should not accept the World Court's compulsory jurisdiction until Russia has done so, Russia being the only other great power that still clings to voluntary jurisdiction. This argument is not convincing and, in his speech, Senator MORSE tore it to shreds. Acceptance of the resolution would, he emphasized, constitute a demonstration to Russia that "we here and now are ready to take the next step in the development of amicable relations between America and Russia."

And, since the Court's compulsory jurisdiction would be binding on us only in cases where the other party was similarly bound, acceptance by the United States of that rule of law would not mean tying our hands while the hands of other nations remain united. It would mean that we are determined to square our practices with our professions, that we intend not only to talk peace and justice but also to live those principles.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. McCARRAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SWIFT in the chair) laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations and a protocol, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following favorable reports of nominations were submitted:

By Mr. OVERTON, from the Committee on Commerce:

Col. George Mayo, Corps of Engineers, for appointment as member, California Debris Commission, vice Col. Rufus W. Putnam, Corps of Engineers, to be relieved.

By Mr. WALSH, from the Committee on Naval Affairs:

Sundry officers of the line of the Navy to be assistant paymasters in the Navy with the rank of ensign.

By Mr. THOMAS of Utah, from the Committee on Military Affairs:

Brig. Gen. Henry Balding Lewis (colonel, Adjutant General's Department), Army of the United States, for appointment in the Regular Army of the United States as Assistant The Adjutant General, with the rank of brigadier general, for a period of 4 years from the date immediately following that upon which Brig. Gen. Thomas Jefferson Davis, the present incumbent, vacates his appointment as Assistant The Adjutant General, and Prof. (Col.) Roger Gordon Alexander, United States Army, to be dean of the Academic Board of the United States Military Academy, with the rank of brigadier general, Regular Army.

INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENT FOR REGULATION OF WHALING—REMOVAL OF INJUNCTION OF SECRECY FROM PROTOCOL

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the injunction of secrecy be removed from executive I, Seventy-ninth Congress, second session, a protocol signed at London on November 26, 1945, for the United States of America, the Union of South Africa, the Commonwealth of Australia, Canada, Denmark, the Provisional Government of the French Republic, the United Mexican States, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, amending in certain particulars the international agreement for the regulation of whaling signed at London on June 8, 1937, as amended by the protocol signed at London on June 24, 1938.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the injunction of secrecy will be removed from the protocol, and it will be published in the RECORD.

The protocol, with accompanying papers, is as follows:

To the Senate of the United States:

With a view to receiving the advice and consent of the Senate to ratification, I transmit herewith a certified copy of [a protocol signed at London on November 26, 1945, for the United States of America, the Union of South Africa, the Commonwealth of Australia, Canada, Denmark, the Provisional Government of the French Republic, the United Mexican States, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, amending in certain particulars the international agreement for the regulation of whaling signed at London on June 8, 1937, as amended by the protocol signed at London on June 24, 1938.]

I transmit also for the information of the Senate the report made to me by the Secretary of State regarding the protocol signed at London on November 26, 1945, with accompanying documents, namely, a certified copy of the final act of the International Whaling Conference at which that protocol was drafted and recommended, and a copy of the report of the United States delegation to that conference. The final act does not require ratification and is submitted only as explanatory of the amendments made to the whaling agreement of June 8, 1937, and the protocol of June 24, 1938.

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 19, 1946.

[Enclosures: 1. Report of the Secretary of State; 2. Certified copy of the protocol signed at London November 26, 1945; 3. Certified copy of the final act of the International Whaling Conference held at London November 20, 21, 22, 23, and 26, 1945; 4. Copy of the report of the United States delegation.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 18, 1946.

The PRESIDENT,
The White House:

The undersigned, the Secretary of State, has the honor to lay before the President, with a view to its transmission to the Senate to receive the advice and consent of that body to ratification, if his judgment approve thereof, a certified copy of a protocol signed at London on November 26, 1945, for the United States of America, the Union of South Africa, the Commonwealth of Australia, Canada, Denmark, the Provisional Government of the French Republic, the United Mexican States, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, amending in certain particulars the international agreement for the regulation of whaling, signed at London on June 8, 1937 (treaty series 933), as amended by the protocol signed at London on June 24, 1938 (treaty series 944).

The provisions of the present protocol were drafted and recommended by the International Whaling Conference held at London on November 20, 21, 22, 23, and 26, 1945. The object of that conference was to consider whether special measures should be put into force for the 1946–47 whaling season. Because of the acute shortage of fats and oils and in view of the probability that the fats and oils situation would continue to be serious through 1947, it was agreed to relax for another year certain provisions of the abovementioned whaling agreement of 1937, as amended. It was agreed also to carry over for the 1946–47 season, with revisions, regulations similar to those set forth in the protocol signed at London on February 7, 1944 (Senate Executive D, 78th Cong., 2d sess.). Article 4 of the 1944 protocol provided for its termination after the first season in which whaling operations were resumed, which was the 1945–46 season.

For the information of the Senate, as explanatory of the amendments to the international agreement of 1937 for the regulation of whaling and the protocol of 1938, there is enclosed a certified copy of the final act of the 1945 conference. The final act does not require ratification.

Article 1 of the present protocol amends article 7 of the 1937 agreement. It extends for the 1946–47 season the period during which factory ships or whale catchers attached thereto may be used to take or treat baleen whales in waters south of 40° south latitude from the period December 8 to March 7 to the period December 8 to April 7. This is a continuation of the 4-month season authorized in the 1944 protocol, with the exception that the starting date for the season is changed from November 24 to December 8, the date originally established by the 1937 agreement. The closing date is changed from March 24 to April 7 to compensate for the later opening of the season. The representatives at the conference were of the view that whales taken prior to December 8 had not spent sufficient time in the Antarctic feeding grounds to accumulate the optimum amount of fat, and that many of the whales carrying young have left the Antarctic feeding grounds prior to this date. At the same time it was thought practicable to extend the season beyond March 24, because recent experience had given some indication that ice conditions were not as important a factor as had been thought in the past.

Article 2 is carried over in identical substance from article I (ii) of the 1944 protocol. It provides that each contracting government intending to operate a factory ship in the area defined by article 7 of the 1937 agreement will notify the British Government, which in turn will inform the other contracting governments of such notice.

Article 3 continues the prohibition relating to the taking of humpback whales in any waters south of 40 degrees south latitude originally contained in article 1 of the 1938 protocol and reimposed by article 2 of the 1944 protocol. The purpose of this prohibition is to protect humpback-whale stocks in certain areas from depletion.

Article 4 retains the provision of the 1944 protocol imposing a limit of 16,000 blue whale units as the maximum catch of baleen whales in the 1946–47 season in the area defined by article 7 of the 1937 agreement. In addition, it provides machinery, which was not included in the 1944 protocol, to prevent the catch from exceeding the blue whale unit quota. Each contracting government undertakes to insure the submission of a weekly report to the International Bureau for Whaling Statistics on the number of blue whale units caught by each of its factory ships. If it appears from this information that the annual limit of 16,000 blue whale units will be attained before April 7, the above-mentioned bureau shall be requested to determine an earlier closing date and notify each contracting government thereof at least 2 weeks in advance. The taking of baleen whales in the area referred to shall be illegal after the date so determined.

Article 5 relaxes, during the period May 1, 1947, to October 31, 1947, the provisions of article 3, paragraph 2, of the 1938 protocol on the operation of factory ships as land stations in territorial waters.

Article 6 defines the expressions and technical terms used in the present protocol.

Articles 7, 8, and 9 are formal in their character. They relate to ratification of the protocol, accession thereto, and its entry into force. Article 8 provides that the present protocol shall come into force in its entirety as soon as instruments of ratifications or notifications of accessions have been deposited on behalf of all the signatory governments. The deposit of ratifications, however, by at least three signatory governments will make binding on those governments and each other government which subsequently ratifies or accedes, those portions of the present protocol which do not provide for relaxation of restrictions contained in previous whaling agreements which are still in force. The ratification of or accession to the present protocol will not be effective for any government not a party to the 1937 agreement and the 1938 protocol until such government becomes a party to that agreement and protocol.

For the further information of the Senate, a copy of the report of the delegation of the United States to the International Whaling Conference held at London November 20, 21, 22, 23, and 26, 1945, is furnished herewith.

Respectfully submitted.

JAMES F. BYRNES.

PROTOCOL

The Governments of the Union of South Africa, the Commonwealth of Australia, Canada, Denmark, France, Mexico, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America;

Desiring, in view of the fact that pelagic whaling operations in the area defined by Article 7 of the international Agreement for the Regulation of Whaling, signed at London on the 8th June, 1937 (hereinafter referred to as the Principal Agreement), as amended by the Protocol signed at London on the 24th June 1938 (hereinafter referred to as the Protocol of 1938), have been interrupted for a considerable period by the war, and in order to meet the emergency produced by post-war conditions without prejudice to the conservation of stocks of whales, to put into force by agreement such provisions as may be necessary in regard to pelagic whaling for the season 1946/47;

Have agreed as follows:

ARTICLE 1

Subject to the provisions of Article 3 of the present Protocol, the period fixed by Article 7 of the Principal Agreement, during which factory ships or whalecatchers attached thereto may be used for the purpose of taking or treating baleen whales, shall be extended for the season 1946/47 so as to cover the period from the 8th December to the 7th April inclusive.

ARTICLE 2

Each contracting Government shall give notice to the Government of the United Kingdom when factory ships registered under the law of any territory under its authority or otherwise under its jurisdiction engage in whaling operations in the area defined by Article 7 of the Principal Agreement. The Government of the United Kingdom will inform the other contracting Governments of all notices received under this paragraph and shall itself similarly give notice to the other contracting Governments if factory ships registered under the law of any territory under its authority or otherwise under its jurisdiction engage in whaling operations in the said area.

ARTICLE 3

The prohibition contained in Article 1 of the Protocol of 1938 relating to the taking of humpback whales in any waters south of 40° south latitude shall apply during the season of 1946/47.

ARTICLE 4

(1) During the season of 1946/47 the number of baleen whales caught in the area defined by Article 7 of the Principal Agreement shall not exceed 16,000 blue whale units.

(2) For the purposes of paragraph 1 of this Article blue whale units shall be calculated on the basis that one blue whale equals—

(a) Two fin whales or

(b) Two and a half humpback whales or

(c) Six sei whales.

(3) Each contracting Government undertakes to ensure that the International Bureau for Whaling Statistics shall be provided, within 2 days after the end of each calendar week, with data on the number of blue whale units caught by each factory ship under the jurisdiction of the said Government in the area defined by Article 7 of the Principal Agreement. The Government of the United Kingdom shall consult from time to time with the International Bureau for Whaling Statistics and if it should appear that the annual quota provided by paragraph (1) of this article may be reached before the 7th April, the International Bureau for Whaling Statistics shall be requested to determine, on the basis of the data provided, the date on which the annual quota of blue whale units shall be deemed to have been reached and to notify each contracting Government of that date not less than 2 weeks in advance thereof. The taking of baleen whales shall be illegal after the date so determined.

ARTICLE 5

The provisions of Article 3, paragraph (2), of the Protocol of 1938, regarding the operation of factory ships as land stations in the territorial waters of any contracting Government, shall not apply during the period from 1st May, 1947, to 31st October, 1947, inclusive.

ARTICLE 6

(1) In the present Protocol the following expressions shall have the meanings assigned to them in Article 18 of the Principal Agreement: "factory ship," "whalecatcher," "land station," "baleen whale," "blue whale," "humpback whale," "fin whale."

(2) Sei whale means, for the purposes of this Protocol, any whale known by the name of balaenoptera borealis, sei whale, Rudolphi's rorqual, pollack whale, or coalfish whale, and shall be taken to include Balaenoptera brydei, Bryde's whale.

(3) The expression "land station" shall, for the purposes of Article 5 of the present Protocol, include a factory ship the movements and anchorage of which are confined to the territorial waters of any contracting Government.

ARTICLE 7

(1) The present Protocol shall be ratified and the instruments of ratification deposited as soon as possible with the Government of the United Kingdom; and it shall be open to accession on behalf of any Government which is a party to the Principal Agreement and the Protocol of 1938 and has not signed the present Protocol.

(2) Accession shall be effected by notification addressed to the Government of the United Kingdom.

(3) The Government of the United Kingdom shall inform the Governments which are parties or signatories to the present Protocol of all ratifications of this Protocol or accessions thereto.

ARTICLE 8

(1) The present Protocol shall come into force in its entirety when all the Governments referred to in the Preamble hereof shall have deposited their instruments of ratification or given notifications of accession.

(2) The provisions of this Article and Articles 2, 3, 4, 6 (1), 6 (2), and 7 of the present Protocol shall, when instruments of ratification have been deposited by at least three signatory Governments, become binding on those Governments and shall become binding on each other Government which subsequently ratifies or accedes, on the date of the deposit of its instrument of ratification or notification of its accession.

(3) The ratification of or accession to the present Protocol by a Government which is not a party to the Principal Agreement and the Protocol of 1938 shall not become effective until such Government becomes a party to that Agreement and Protocol of 1938.

ARTICLE 9

The present Protocol shall bear the date on which it is opened for signature and shall remain open for signature for a period of 14 days thereafter.

In witness whereof the undersignd plenipotentiaries being duly authorised to this end by their respective Governments have signed the present Protocol.

Done at London this 26th day of November, 1945, in a single copy which shall remain deposited in the archives of the Government of the United Kingdom, by whom certified copies will be transmitted to all the Governments referred to in the preamble.

For the Government of the Union of South Africa:

A. P. VAN DER POST.

For the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia:

J. S. DUNCAN.

For the Government of Canada:

VINCENT MASSEY.

For the Government of Denmark:

P. F. ERICHSEN.

For the Provisional Government of the French Republic:

NOEL HENRY.

For the Government of the United Mexican States:

ALFONSO DE ROSENZWEIG DIAZ.

For the Government of the Netherlands:

E. TEIXEIRA DE MATTOS.

For the Government of New Zealand:

R. M. CAMPBELL.

For the Government of Norway:

BIRGER BERGERSEN.

For the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland:

A. T. A. DOBSON.
J. E. DE WATTEVILLE.

For the Government of the United States of America:

REMINGTON KELLOGG.
IRA N. GABRIELSON.

Certified a true copy. Foreign Office, London, December 27, 1945.

D. A. BIGBY,
Acting Librarian and Keeper of the Papers for the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the nominations on the calendar.

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Henry Clifford Jones to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Oklahoma.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

COLLECTORS OF CUSTOMS

The legislative clerk read the nomination of William H. Bartley to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 33, with headquarters at Great Falls, Mont.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of William Jennings Bryan, Jr., to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 27, with headquarters at Los Angeles, Calif.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Howard H. MacGowan, of Seattle, Wash., to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 30, with headquarters at Seattle, Wash.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the President be notified forthwith of all nominations confirmed today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the President will be notified forthwith.

RECESS

Mr. McCARRAN. As in legislative session, I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 42 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Saturday, July 20, 1946, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate July 19 (legislative day of July 5), 1946:

DIPLOMATIC AND FOREIGN SERVICE

The following-named persons to be Foreign Service officers, unclassified, vice consuls of career, and secretaries in the diplomatic service of the United States of America:

Edward B. Bergman, of Pennsylvania.
Mrs. Katherine W. Bracken, of Florida.
Jack F. Conner, of Texas.
Bruce R. Crooks, of New Jersey.
Thomas A. Donovan, of North Dakota.
Charles T. Dougherty, of Missouri.
Thomas J. Duffield, Jr., of Masachusetts.
George M. Finch, of New York.
William Dale Fisher, of California.
Tibor A. Galambos, of New York.
Meyer L. Goldman, of Missouri.
Deane R. Hinton, of Illinois.
John J. Ingersoll, of Pennsylvania.
David K. Marvin, of Nebraska.
Vincent T. McKenna, of New York.
Joseph P. Nagoski, of Tennessee.
Albert V. Nyren, of Massachusetts.
James F. O'Connor, Jr., of New York.
John Newton Smith, of Kentucky.
Thomas B. Stauffer, of Illinois.
Richard H. Stephens, of Utah.
Robin E. Steussy, of Wisconsin.
Robert W. Stookey, of Illinois.
J. Charles Thompson, of Connecticut.
Parker D. Wyman, of Illinois.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate July 19 (legislative day of July 5), 1946:

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE

Henry Clifford Jones, to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Oklahoma.

COLLECTORS OF CUSTOMS

William H. Bartley, to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 33, with headquarters at Great Falls, Mont.

William Jennings Bryan, Jr., to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 27, with headquarters at Los Angeles, Calif.

Howard H. MacGowan, to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 30, with headquarters at Seattle, Wash.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FRIDAY, JULY 19, 1946

The House met at 10 o'clock a. m.

Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., pastor of the Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

O Thou God of all grace, who alone canst supply our temporal needs and satisfy our eternal longings, Thou art again drawing us to Thyself in prayer for Thou knowest how feeble and faltering we are and how fickle and fitful in faith and in fortitude.

Grant that we may now unburden ourselves to Thy listening ear and understanding heart. We humbly confess that again and again we are haunted by a sense of misgiving, and we enter upon a new day hesitatingly and wistfully. When we are beset by perils, and life, with its difficult problems, presses hard upon us, we fear that they may overwhelm us. When trials and tribulations come, we are tempted to feel that we are the victims of a conspiracy of wicked circumstances. Our vision is often so dim and blurred and distorted and we know that we must see life in truer perspective and proportion.

God forgive us and forbid that any dark and despairing tempers of mind should assail and enslave us, for Thou hast created us not for failure and defeat but for victory and freedom, and in Thee we may find rest, release, and renewal. Help us to mobilize the great moral and spiritual resources, and with faith and valor may we forever banish the tragedies and tyrannies of war which have broken the heart of humanity and blasphemed the holy name of the Lord our God.

Hear us for the sake of the Prince of Peace. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 2125. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to establish a Code of Law for the District of Columbia," approved March 3, 1901, and the acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto;

S. 2326. An act to incorporate the Amvets, American Veterans of World War II; and

S. 2405. An act to define the area of the United States Capitol Grounds, to regulate the use thereof, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the President pro tempore has appointed Mr. BARKLEY and Mr. BREWSTER members of the joint select committee on the part of the Senate, as provided for in the act of August 5, 1939, entitled "An act to provide for the disposition of certain records of the United States Government," for the disposition of executive papers in the following departments and agencies:

1. Department of Commerce.
2. Department of the Interior.
3. Department of Justice.
4. Department of War.
5. Post Office Department.
6. Alien Property Custodian.
7. Federal Communications Commission.
8. Federal Security Agency.
9. National Archives.
10. National Housing Agency.
11. Office of Scientific Research and Development.
12. United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois.
13. United States Maritime Commission.

EDWIN DOYLE PARRISH

Mr. COMBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 1754) for the relief of Edwin Doyle Parrish, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 1, line 6, strike out "$3,500" and insert "$5,000."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this is a substantial increase. Will the gentleman explain the reason for increasing the amount?

Mr. COMBS. This claim is on behalf of a civilian who was injured at Lake Charles, La., during the rioting of some Army personnel. It later developed, after the bill had gone over to the Senate, upon further examination of the man's condition, it was found that his injuries were worse than had been anticipated. So the Senate increased the amount somewhat, as indicated in the bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. The reason I asked the question is that the Senate usually drastically reduces House bills, and I wondered what was the reason for this increase.

Mr. COMBS. That is the reason.

Mr. RICH. I fail to see where the Senate ever cut any House appropriation bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I am not talking about appropriation bills.

Mr. RICH. This is something new, and it would be something new if they did it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MRS. OPAL RILEY

Mr. COMBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 5025) for the relief of Mrs. Opal Riley and Robert R. Riley, with Senate amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 1, line 6, strike out "$5,578.24" and insert "$5,813.27."

Page 1, line 8, strike out "$5,578.24" and insert "$5,813.27."

Page 1, line 10, after "injuries", insert ", hospital, medical, and other expenses."

Page 1, line 10, after "her", insert "as the result of an accident."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MARYLAND SANITARY MANUFACTURING CORP.

Mr. COMBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 4616) for the relief of the Maryland Sanitary Manufacturing Corp., of Baltimore, Md., with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 1, line 7, strike out "$524,755" and insert "$374,755."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

JASPER A. MEALER

Mr. COMBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 5053) for the relief of the estate of Jasper A. Mealer, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 1, line 6, strike out "$5,000" and insert "$7,500."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PAYMENT OF OVERTIME, LEAVE, AND HOLIDAY COMPENSATION

Mr. COMBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 6532) to provide a method for payment in certain Government establishments of overtime, leave, and holiday compensation on the basis of night rates pursuant to certain decisions of the Comptroller General, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 3, line 18, strike out all after "agencies" over to and including "$1,000" in line 2, page 4.

Page 4, after line 2, insert:

"SEC. 7. No part of any moneys appropriated for payments of amounts certified under this act shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with claims so appropriated for and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

WILLIAM EDWARD OATES

Mr. COMBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (S. 78) for the relief of the estate of William Edward Oates, with a House amendment thereto, insist on the amendment of the House, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. COMBS, HEDRICK, and PITTENGER.

JAMES LEMUEL MUZZALL AND JAMES M. MUZZALL

Mr. COMBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 1151) entitled "An act for the relief of James Lemuel Muzzall and James M. Muzzall," with a Senate amendment, and agree to the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Amend the title so as to read: "An act for the relief of the legal guardian of James Lemuel Muzzall, a minor."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. COFFEE (at the request of Mr. SAVAGE) was granted permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a newspaper article.

Mr. GRANAHAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a statement on the loan to Great Britain.

Mr. LANE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial which appeared in last night's Evening Star on cars for amputees.

Mr. FLOOD asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a letter from President Charles Rozmarok of the Polish-American Congress.

Mr. JARMAN asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. KUNKEL asked and was given permission to extend the remarks he made in Committee of the Whole on July 12 relative to the British loan, and include certain extracts from the hearings on that bill.

Mr. RICH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a poem by Horace C. Carlisle, Where Are You Going To Get the Money?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts asked and was given permission to extend her remarks in the RECORD and include an article by a war amputee of World War I, two editorials, and an article in the New York Times.

Mr. PATMAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances and to include certain statements and excerpts.

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY AND THE CIO

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. I notice in the newspapers that the Democratic candidates in Pennsylvania have filed authorizations to the CIO for their election expenditures. In other words, it seems to me that Mr.

Guffey, Mr. Rice, Mr. Dent, and Mr. Schmidt are going to be candidates on the Democratic ticket and they authorized the CIO to run their campaign and figure out where they are going to get the money in order to conduct the campaign. As you know, the CIO has made repeated statements that they expect to raise a dollar from every one of their employees who is affiliated with the CIO and in that way collect a large campaign fund for the Democratic candidates in Pennsylvania. It does not look to me very good for the Democrats to turn over to the CIO the financing of their political campaign. A tie-up in Pennsylvania of the Democratic Party in partnership with CIO-PAC. Where is the Democratic Party going? Who knows? Why? Is it a sell-out? The authorization of the candidates reads as follows:

This is yours to receive and disburse money and incur liability to election expenses within the limits of the Pennsylvania election code in the furtherance of my candidacy.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

STREAM-POLLUTION LEGISLATION SHOULD BE ACTED ON BEFORE CONGRESS ADJOURNS

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Speaker, I notice an item in this morning's paper that there were 89 cases of infantile paralysis at Minneapolis, Minn. That is not very good publicity and I do not intend to give anybody any bad publicity, but I say that because it forcefully calls to mind one piece of legislation that should be passed by this body before it adjourns and that is the stream-pollution bill. There is a great deal of talk about adjournment. There is a great deal of work that should be done and a great many bills that should be considered before the Congress adjourns. None of them is more important than the stream-pollution bill which has been reported out of the Rivers and Harbors Committee and is pending on this calendar.

I do not undertake to say, Mr. Speaker, the cause of infantile paralysis at Minneapolis is found in the drinking water that they get out of the Mississippi River. I do know that at one time the drinking water, not only in that city but in other cities, was unfit because of sewage being dumped into the stream. Then the city of Minneapolis built a sewage-disposal plant so that they could treat the sewage.

In the city of Duluth, Minn., where I reside, there was a history of pollution of the waters of Lake Superior. The sewage was dumped into the lake by the city sewers, and then 3 or 4 miles away was the intake pipe for the drinking water of the city. A typhoid-fever epidemic cost numerous lives. The history of the progress made at Duluth, Minn., in taking care of its sewage there and in furnishing the people in the city with the finest drinking water in the world, out of Lake Superior, is very interesting. It is sufficient to say that a few years ago a sewage-disposal plant was built and a long step forward has been made to correct the evil of stream and lake pollution so far as it relates to the city of Duluth. The story, however, in connection with this problem in other localities is not a happy one. I recall a very prosperous city on the Ohio River having been mentioned some 4 or 5 years ago when the Committee on Rivers and Harbors of the House of Representatives was conducting hearings on a stream-pollution bill. The expert told how sewage was dumped into that river, not by one city but by a dozen cities. The water from that river was used by the city for drinking purposes. An elaborate system of purification works had been installed, so that the river water could again be made drinkable. The quaint way that the engineering expert expressed himself was in this manner:

For every gallon of Ohio River water that reaches the purification plant, 1 quart of that gallon is made up of the material which comes from the toilet in the city homes.

It hardly seems possible that a civilized people would permit such a condition to exist. Yet, that is exactly what is going on all over this country today. That is the kind of a condition that the pending stream pollution legislation will rectify and correct. It is important, before Congress adjourns, that we act on legislation of this character, which is of benefit to the American people and which directly concerns the health of the American people. I cannot help but feel, regardless of medical opinion, that the public health would be safer from epidemics such as this infantile paralysis epidemic, if domestic sewage and industrial waste could be kept from being dumped into our streams and lakes, out of which the drinking water of the people of our cities must come. This bill before us will go a long way to cure that evil.

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY AND POWER PROJECT

Then, Mr. Speaker, there are many other pending legislative proposals which ought to be acted on before this Congress adjourns. We ought not to adjourn until these propcsals do have consideration by Congress. No more important matter is before us now than the legislation dealing with the St. Lawrence seaway and power project. Nineteen months have elapsed since bills were introduced in Congress to deepen the navigation channels in the St. Lawrence River to a depth of 27 feet, and build a power plant at Massena, N. Y. There is no excuse for the long delay and many postponements in taking action on this legislation. The administration leaders who are anxious to adjourn Congress would do well if they brought this measure up for action and a vote before Congress adjourns.

OLD-AGE PENSION

Another subject which waits action deals with the passage of a bill to increase the old-age assistance payments to our aged citizens. They are very poorly taken care of under existing law. The payments that they receive are wholly inadequate to take care of their bills for room rent and food. They have a right to complain about being neglected and poorly treated by this national administration. Now, when announcement is made that the party leaders are going to have an adjournment within the next few days, we find still further delays being developed, so as to prevent us from considering national old-age pension legislation. We ought not to adjourn before that bill is passed.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks and to include certain statements and excerpts.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

[Mr. PATMAN addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix.]

SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE THE ELECTION OF MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 645.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That a special committee of five members be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives to investigate and report to the House not later than January 3, 1947, with respect to the following matters:

1. The extent and nature of expenditures made by all the candidates for the House of Representatives in connection with their campaign for nomination and election to such office.

2. The amounts subscribed, contributed, or expended, and the value of services rendered, and facilities made available (including personal services, use of advertising space, radio time, office space, moving-picture films, and automobile and other transportation facilities) by any individual, individuals, or group of individuals, committee, partnership, corporation, or labor union, to or on behalf of each such candidate in connection with any such campaign or for the purpose of influencing the votes cast or to be cast at any convention or election held in 1946 to which a candidate for the House of Representatives is to be nominated or elected.

3. The use of any other means or influence (including the promise or use of patronage) for the purpose of aiding or influencing the nomination or election of any such candidates.

4. The amounts, if any, raised, contributed, and expended by any individual, individuals, or group of individuals, committee, partnership, corporation, or labor union, including any political committee thereof, in connection with any such election, and the amounts received by any political committee from any corporation, labor union, individual, individuals, or group of individuals, committee, or partnership.

5. The violations, if any, of the following statutes of the United States:

(a) The Federal Corrupt Practices Act.

(b) Title 18, section 61 to 61t, inclusive, United States Code, 1940 edition, relating to pernicious political activities, commonly referred to as the Hatch Act.

(c) The provisions of section 9, Public Law 89, Seventy-eighth Congress, chapter 144, first session, referred to as the "War Labor Disputes Act."

(d) Any statute or legislative act of the United States, or of the State within which a candidate is seeking nomination or reelection to the House of Representatives, the violation of which Federal or State statute, or statutes, would affect the qualification of a Member of the House of Representatives within the meaning of article I, section 5, of the Constitution of the United States.

6. Such other matters relating to the election of Members of the House of Representatives in 1946, and the campaigns of candidates in connection therewith, as the committee deems to be of public interest, and which in its opinion will aid the House of Representatives in enacting remedial legislation, or in deciding any contests that may be instituted involving the right to a seat in the House of Representatives.

7. The committee is authorized to act upon its own motion and upon such information as in its judgment may be reasonable or reliable. Upon complaint being made to the committee under oath, by any person, candidate, or political committee, setting forth allegations as to facts which, under this resolution, it would be the duty of said committee to investigate, the committee shall investigate such charges as fully as though it were acting upon its own motion, unless, after a hearing upon such complaint, the committee shall find that the allegations in such complaint are immaterial or untrue. All hearings before the committee, and before any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, shall be public, and all orders and decisions of the committee, and of any such subcommittee shall be public.

For the purpose of this resolution, the committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold such public hearings, to sit and act at such times and places during the sessions, recesses, and adjourned periods of the Seventy-ninth Congress, to employ such attorneys, experts, clerical, and other assistants, to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such correspondence, books, papers, and documents, to administer such oaths, and to take such testimony, as it deems advisable.

8. The committee is authorized and directed to report promptly any and all violations of any Federal or State statutes in connection with the matters and things mentioned herein to the Attorney General of the United States in order that he may take such official action as may be proper.

9. Every person who, having been summoned as a witness by authority of said committee or any subcommittee thereof, willfully makes default, or who having appeared, refuses to answer any question pertinent to the investigation heretofore authorized, shall be held to the penalties prescribed by law.

That said committee is authorized and directed to file interim reports whenever in the judgment of the majority of the committee, or of a subcommitee conducting portions of said investigation, the public interest will be best served by the filing of said interim reports, and in no event shall the final report of said committee be filed later than January 3, 1947, as hereinabove provided.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. As I understand it, this is the usual committee to supervise elections?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. It is customary to pass such a resolution as this every 2 years.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Is there any change in the text from that of previous years?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I do not think so. I did not draft the resolution, but I do not think there is any important change.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. It has the unanimous report from the Committee on Rules?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Yes. I do not know of any objection to it and I advised the committee I would call it up this morning.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SCIENTIFIC SPIES AND THE ATOMIC BOMB

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday, and the day before, I warned the House that the best thing we could do would be to send the atomic-bomb bill back to the Military Affairs Committee for further study.

I warned you that from information the Committee on Un-American Activities has there are foreign spies working inside this plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn., trying to get the secret of the atomic bomb for the purpose of using it against the American people, as well as against our allies.

I call attention to the fact that in this morning's paper it is stated that five civilian spies have been caught out here at Aberdeen, Md., doing the same thing.

In order that you may know who they are, let me read you their names. One of them is Harry Spector. Another one is Irving Spector. Another one is called Abram Kotelchuck, another one Phil Weiss and another one Rheabel Mendelsohn.

It is time for America to be on guard against these subversive elements.

This is additional proof of the wisdom of recommitting this bill to the committee for further study.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

THIRD DEFICIENCY BILL, 1946

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 6885) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, to provide appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6885) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, to provide appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 24, 35, 56, 65, 74, 78, 79, and 83.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 31, 32, 36, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 47, 49, 50, 52, 53, 54, 58, 59, 61, 66, 67, 68, 70, 71, 72, 73, 75, 76, 80, 82, 84, 85, 87, 88, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, and 118, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 23: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 23, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: At the end of the matter inserted by said amendment, and before the period, insert the following: ", one-half of such amount to be disbursed by the Secretary of the Senate and one-half by the Clerk of the House"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 30: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 30, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out and inserted by said amendment insert the following: "or refuses in the determination of the Secretary of State"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 37: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 37, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$75,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 38: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 38, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: ": Provided further, That no part of the funds appropriated in this paragraph shall be used to pay the salary of any person engaged in preparing or disseminating general propaganda in support of price control"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 39: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 39, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$325,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 48: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 48, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment, amended to read as follows: "That no payment shall be made under the provisions of such title of such Act to any person whom the Commission is convinced collaborated with the enemy or committed any act involving disloyalty to the United States or the Commonwealth of the Philippines: Provided further,"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 55: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 55, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"DAY CARE CENTERS

"For all expenses necessary for the establishment, maintenance, and operation of a system of nurseries and nursery schools for the day care of children of school or under school age, including personal services, as authorized by Public Law 514, Seventy-ninth Congress, approved July 16, 1946, fiscal year 1947, $250,000."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 57: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 57, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$55,000" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 89: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 89, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment, amended to read as follows:

"Public Roads Administration: Access roads, $320,596."

And the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference report in disagreement amendments numbered 33, 34, 46, 51, 52½, 60, 62, 63, 64, 69, 77, 81, 86, 119, 120, and 121.

CLARENCE CANNON,
LOUIS C. RABAUT,
W. F. NORRELL,
JAMIE L. WHITTEN,
JOHN TABER,
EVERETT M. DIRKSEN,
Managers on the Part of the House.

KENNETH MCKELLAR,
CARL HAYDEN,
RICHARD B. RUSSELL,
JOHN H. OVERTON,
C. WAYLAND BROOKS,
CHAN GURNEY,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6885) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, to provide appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report as to each of such amendments, namely:

Amendments Nos. 1 to 8 and 10 to 18, inclusive, relating to the Senate: Appropriates, as proposed by the Senate, an additional amount of $371,250, under the following heads:

Office of the Secretary (salaries)	$4,160
Document room (salaries)	500
Clerical assistance to Senators	254,100
Office of Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper (salaries)	28,240
Contingent expenses of the Senate	84,250

Amendments Nos. 19 to 22, inclusive, relating to the House of Representatives: Appropriates an additional amount of $54,560.80 for salaries of officers and employees, pursuant to House Resolutions 90 and 691, as proposed by the Senate, and protects the technical assistant in the office of the attending physician against any forefeiture or reduction of pay by reason of his having been retired in a commissioned status instead of a noncommissioned status, as proposed by the Senate.

Amendment No. 23: Appropriates $3,600 for the pay of an assistant clerk, Joint Committee on Printing, as proposed by the Senate, amended to provide that payment of compensation shall devolve equally upon the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House.

Amendment No. 24: Strikes out the appropriation of $50,000 for salaries and expenses, Joint Committee on the Economic Report, proposed by the Senate.

Amendment No. 25: Continues available until August 31, 1946, the appropriation for the expenses of the commission to represent the United States at the Philippine independence ceremonies, as proposed by the Senate.

Amendment No. 26: Appropriates under the "Architect of the Capitol" $3,365 for altering and improving the barber shop in the Senate wing of the Capitol Building, as proposed by the Senate.

Amendment No. 27: Increases the amount limitation upon expenditures for printing, binding, and distributing the Federal Register from $550,000, as proposed by the House, to $554,681.06 as proposed by the Senate.

Amendment No. 28: Restores the effectiveness of the clauses making appropriations immediately available, contained in the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1947, as proposed by the Senate.

Amendments Nos. 29, 30, 31, and 32, relating to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration: Amends the House provision with regard to American press representatives in recipient countries by making failure or refusal to observe subject to the determination of the Secretary of State, and providing for the admission of a reasonable number of press representatives, all substantially as proposed by the Senate, but subject to further modification by reason of amendment No. 33, reported in disagreement.

Amendment No. 35, relating to salaries and expenses, Civilian Production Administration, 1947: Appropriates $18,000,000, as proposed by the House, instead of $20,000,000, as proposed by the Senate.

Amendment No. 36, relating to the War Assets Administration: Substitutes a comma for a semicolon.

Amendments Nos. 37 and 38, relating to salaries and expenses, Office of Price Administration: Appropriates $75,000,000 instead of $106,650,000, as proposed by the House, and $56,650,000, as proposed by the Senate, and bars the use of the appropriation for engaging in general propaganda in support of price control, as proposed by the Senate, excluding from the inhibition, however, its application to "any price-control program."

Amendment No. 39: Appropriates $325,000 for salaries and expenses, Federal Trade Commission, 1947, instead of $250,000, as proposed by the House, and $400,000, as proposed by the Senate.

Amendments Nos. 40, 41, and 42, relating to salaries and expenses, Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion, 1947: Extends the appropriation to include the Office of Contract Settlement, as proposed by the Senate.

Amendment No. 43: Inserts the fiscal year in the appropriation for veterans' decentralization allowances under the Public Buildings Administration, as proposed by the Senate.

Amendments Nos. 44 and 45, relating to damage claims, Public Roads Administration: Appropriates $1,172,850.67, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $64,942.28, as proposed by the House.

Amendments Nos. 47 and 48, relating to the appropriation for the Philippine War Damage Commission: Restores the House provision relative to payments to disloyal persons, amended to express more clearly the intent.

Amendments Nos. 49 and 50, relating to the appropriation for salaries and expenses, Selective Service System: Inserts the fiscal year and excludes from Budget Bureau revision the component parts of the appropriation, as proposed by the Senate.

Amendment No. 52: Appropriate for readjustment benefits, Veterans' Administration, an additional amount of $1,843,000,000 for the fiscal year 1947, as proposed by the Senate.

Amendments Nos. 53 to 59, both inclusive, relating to the District of Columbia: Appropriates and additional amount of $136,645.91 for the Collector's Office, fiscal year 1947, as proposed by the Senate; appropriates an additional amount of $45,200 for the Office of Administrator of Rent Control, fiscal year 1947, as proposed by the Senate; appropriates $250,000 for day care centers, instead of $344,000, as proposed by the Senate; restores the House provision barring the operation of the testing labcratory of the Highway Department and providing for the disposition of the equipment of such laboratory; appropriates $55,000 additional for salaries and expenses, National Guard, fiscal year 1947, instead of $35,080, as proposed by the House, and $105,240, as proposed by the Senate, and makes two textual corrections, as proposed by the Senate.

Amendment No. 61: Appropriates an additional amount of $10,000 for salaries and expenses, Bureau of Dairy Industry, Department of Agriculture, fiscal year 1947, as proposed by the Senate.

Amendment No. 65: Strikes out the authorization proposed by the Senate making certain appropriations of the Department of Commerce for the fiscal year 1947 available for medical care and subsistence in kind of departmental personnel in isolated areas in Alaska and other United States Territories and possessions, and for the relief of distressed persons in remote localities, all largely reimbursable except medical supplies to the total value of $2,500.

Amendments Nos. 66, 67, 68, and 70, relating to the Department of the Interior: Inserts a fiscal year in the appropriation for the Solid Fuels Administration for War; appropriates $50,000 for maintenance, San Carlos irrigation project, Gila River Reservation, Ariz., and appropriates $500,000 for the Colorado River front work and levee system, all as proposed by the Senate.

Amendments Nos. 71 to 75, inclusive, relating to the Navy Department: Appropriates $2,589.96 for damage claims, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $1,224.89, as proposed by the House; appropriates $28,750,000 for transportation of things, Navy, 1947, as proposed by the Senate; strikes out the authorization proposed by the Senate for using $50,000 of the appropriation "Medical Department, Navy, 1947," for making a general administrative and operational survey of naval hospitals, and strikes out, as proposed by the Senate, the authorization proposed by the House for the acquisition of certain parcels of land, including such improvements as there may be thereon.

Amendment No. 76: Appropriates $8,179 additional, fiscal year 1947, for salaries, Office of the Postmaster General, as proposed by the Senate.

Amendments Nos. 78, 79, and 80, relating to the Department of State: Strikes out the appropriation of $20,418.72 proposed by the Senate for International Office of Public Health, and appropriates, as proposed by the Senate, $339,853.60 for the liquidation of the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, Italy.

Amendments Nos. 82 and 83, relating to the Treasury Department: Makes Coast Guard appropriations available for the payment of claims authorized by law, as proposed by the Senate, and restores the House provision requiring funds available for strategic and critical materials in excess of the amount needed for storing the surplus of such materials to be carried to the surplus fund and covered into the Treasury.

Amendments Nos. 84, 85, and 87, relating to the War Department: Appropriates $398,405.94 for damage claims, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $108,638, as proposed by the House, and appropriates $3,800,000 additional for rivers and harbors, under "Civil functions, Corps of Engineers," as proposed by the Senate, instead of $2,500,000, as proposed by the House.

Amendment No. 88: Appropriates an additional amount of $15,116 for salaries, United States Supreme Court, fiscal year 1947, as proposed by the Senate.

Amendments Nos. 89 and 90, relating to surplus appropriation rescissions: Rescinds $320,596 of funds available for access roads, Public Roads Administration, instead of $641,193, as proposed by the House, and no rescission, as proposed by the Senate, and rescinds $199,000 of the maritime training fund, Coast Guard, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $274,325, as proposed by the House.

Amendments Nos. 91 to 118, inclusive, relating to judgments and authorized claims: Appropriates $8,720,457.59, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $5,860,420.91, as proposed by the House.

AMENDMENTS IN DISAGREEMENT

Amendment No. 33, relating to the appropriation for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. It will be moved to insert in lieu of such amendment, the following:

"without any deletions or modifications by censorship of their reports dealing with such subjects: Provided further, That none of the funds herein appropriated shall be used for the transportation, delivery, or distribution of any supplies, commodities, or equipment to or for any recipient country until the Director General of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration has advised the Secretary of State that such country has arranged for the prompt distribution of such supplies, commodities, and equipment"

Amendment No. 34, relating to surplus property, care and handling. It will be moved to insert in lieu of such amendment, the following:

"SURPLUS PROPERTY, CARE AND HANDLING

"Surplus property, care and handling: That current naval and military appropriations shall be available for the care and handling of property wherever situated declared surplus to disposal agencies pending reimbursement for such expenses by such disposal agencies or in consequence of supplemental appropriations hereafter made directly to the owning agencies, any law to the contrary notwithstanding: Provided, That reimbursement shall not be made for pay and allowances and subsistence of military and naval personnel within the numbers appropriated for heretofore."

Amendment No. 46, relating to veterans' educational facilities, Bureau of Community Facilities. It will be moved to recede and concur in such amendment with an amendment making the appropriation $75,000,000, instead of $100,000,000, and limiting the amount for administrative expenses to $3,000,000 instead of $4,000,000.

Amendment No. 51, relating to the United States Maritime Commission. It will be moved to recede and concur in such amendment.

Amendment No. 52½, relating to the operation of canteens by the Veterans' Administration. It will be moved to recede and concur in such amendment with an amendment providing an appropriation of $4,000,000, instead of $5,000,000.

Amendment No. 60, appropriating an additional amount, fiscal year 1947, for inspection and quarantine, Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture. It will be moved to recede and concur in such amendment.

Amendment No. 62, relating to the Commodity Credit Corporation. It will be moved to insert in lieu of such amendment the following:

"COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION

"Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized to purchase surplus potatoes (including sweetpotatoes) produced during the year 1946 and to process and sell such potatoes to any foreign country, and, upon requisition, to the Army and to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration for the relief of hungry people."

Amendment No. 63, relating to the transfer of funds from the appropriation "Compiling census reports, and so forth, 1946," to the Bureau of Standards. It will be moved to recede and concur in such amendment.

Amendment No. 64, amending the appropriation in the Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1947, for the compilation of foreign trade statistics. It will be moved to recede and concur in such amendment.

Amendment No. 69, appropriating additional amounts for the construction of reclamation projects.

Amendment No. 77, lifting the existing limitation upon allowances for living quarters of Foreign Service personnel as to such personnel serving at posts in certain specified countries. It will be moved to recede and concur in such amendment.

Amendment No. 81, relating to the replacement or rehabilitation of facilities in the Philippine Islands.

Amendment No. 86, providing for mustering-out payments to certain former members of the armed services. It will be moved to recede and concur in such amendment.

Amendment No. 119, increasing from $1,050 to $1,300 the previously established ceiling price to be paid for passenger-carrying automobiles. It will be moved to recede and concur in such amendment.

Amendment No. 120, repealing previously enacted provisions limiting passenger-automobile procurement to used or surplus vehicles. It will be moved to recede and concur in such amendment.

Amendment No. 121, changing a section number. It will be moved to recede and concur in such amendment.

CLARENCE CANNON,
LOUIS C. RABAUT,
W. F. NORRELL,
JAMIE L. WHITTEN,
JOHN TABER (except as to amendment No. 64),
EVERETT M. DIRKSEN,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 15 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, we present here the conference report on the last appropriation bill for the session, and with it 16 amendments in disagreement. Two of those amendments are brought back because of actual disagreement between the two Houses. The other 14 are brought back because of the parliamentary requirement which makes it necessary to bring them back in disagreement. We will dispose first of the conference report and then take up in turn each of the 16 amendments on which there has been no agreement.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. With reference to these day-care centers, you have given $250,000 for them. Is that for the District of Columbia proper?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. It is limited solely to the District of Columbia and paid out of District of Columbia funds.

Mr. RICH. We appropriate that money for the District of Columbia.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Exclusively from District of Columbia funds.

Mr. RICH. So that the Federal Government is now maintaining these day-care centers for the women who have children and are working possibly in the Government.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. On the contrary, the District of Columbia is maintaining them.

Mr. RICH. We appropriate the money to the District of Columbia.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Yes; the Congress acting, under the Constitution, as a city council for Washington, appropriates it out of District funds.

Mr. RICH. We appropriate that money for these day-care centers. These women that have children, instead of staying in their homes and taking care of the children, have day-care centers where their children are taken care of and they go out and work. It does not seem to me that is the American way of bringing up children. They ought to cut that out.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The Committee on Appropriations did not initiate this matter. The Congress passed a legislative bill authorizing this work, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania was present when the bill passed the House. In conformity with that specific authorization, an estimate came in here for a good deal more than this amount. It is paid not out of the Federal Treasury, not out of funds paid into the United States Treasury by the Federal taxpayers, but out of funds of the District paid in by the District taxpayers.

Mr. RICH. But the Federal Government gives $8,000,000 a year additional over what they wanted for the regular appropriation. That money is used for this particular purpose. You cannot deceive the people with statements of that kind. You know the Federal Government is paying the District of Columbia that money.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The gentleman understands that whether we appropriate this money for child-care centers or not, we still have to make the $8,000,000 contribution. If we did not appropriate a cent for this purpose we would still have to pay the $8,000,000. I think it is too much, but the gentleman and his colleagues have voted it, and I yield always to the will of the majority. This appropriation for child-care centers is in direct response to a bill passed by a majority of this House. That is in accordance with the American principle of self-government.

Mr. RICH. I voted for the $8,000,000 for the District because I wanted to help the District, but if the District is going to spend its money this way, the next time I vote money for the District I will know what they are going to spend it for. They are not going to put across anything like this.

Mr. DOYLE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DOYLE. I wish to make this observation in view of the observation by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, that I do not know of any place as important for the District or any other governmental unit of this country to spend money as in the field of underprivileged children. I am very happy indeed to see the District spending money in the interest of preserving the character and health of her children who have no normal home life.

Mr. RICH. If they maintained their homes and the women stayed home and took care of their children, they would have a normal home life.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, this conference report disposes of the last regular supply bill, winding up the appropriation measures for the session. In a day or so we shall meet to consider an appropriation effecting the payments under the recently passed bill authorizing terminal leave for noncommissioned personnel of the armed services. That will be the final report of the Committee on Appropriations. I wish to emphasize that that appropriation also will be in response to a vote by the House and the Senate on a bill submitted by the legislative committee having jurisdiction of the matter.

This conference report is the last stage in the enactment of the third general deficiency bill, 1946, which we passed on June 28. It left the House carrying appropriations in the total amount of $724,571,909.33. It came back to us from the other body carrying a total of $2,784,134,974.68. As we present it for final disposition it would make available a total of $2,652,860,866.96, assuming approval of amendment No. 69, which is yet to be disposed of.

The statement which has just been read contains an accounting of the matters involved. After the bill left the House, the Senate was presented with estimates of appropriations for or on account of veterans in the total amount of $1,982,682,624.92. That amount is included in the total of the additional amount to which the House conferees have agreed. It constitutes by far the major part of the difference between the House and Senate versions of the bill.

If the action of the conference committee be approved, the bill will carry $240,706,246 less than the estimates considered in connection therewith, still assuming approval of amendment No. 69.

With the approval of this bill, which contains a number of regular annual appropriations, all of the regular annual appropriations for the new fiscal year which started the first of this month will have been provided.

The final approval dates of some of the measures has been or will be late, but obligations under all have been made legal by reason of a protective provision included in the Third Urgent Deficiency Appropriation Act, 1946, which became law on June 21, 1946.

As to the regular annual bills which failed to meet the date line—there are five of them—I wish to give you the exact dates.

They may be tabulated as follows:

Passed House:
Treasury-Post Office	Feb. 14
Coast Guard	May 20
Labor-Federal Security Agency	June 11
Government Corporations	June 13
Military Establishments	June 21
Passed Senate:
Treasury-Post Office	June 21
Coast Guard	June 28
Labor-Federal Security Agency	June 28
Government Corporations	June 29
Military Establishments	June 28

As will be noted, the Treasury and Post Office appropriation bill passed the House on February 14. It has been on the other side of the Capitol all this time. It had passed the House on February 14 and did not pass the Senate until June 21.

The Coast Guard appropriation bill passed the House on May 20 and passed the Senate on June 28.

The Labor-Federal Security appropriation bill passed the House on June 11 and passed the Senate on June 28.

The Government corporations appropriation bill passed the House on June 13 and passed the Senate on June 29.

The Military Establishments appropriation bill passed the House on June 21 and passed the Senate on July 28.

The military bill was late passing the House because the military budget was not presented until May 3. Similarly, the Government corporations bill was not presented until June 13 because the Budget was not presented until May 2, 1946. Both of these bills were highly important. I submit the dates of their presentation to the House were as early as conditions warranted and permitted. In short, the Committee on Appropriations has passed supply bills this year under many heavy handicaps and with exceptional expedition. We have every reason to take pride in the speed made in the prompt enactment of budgets submitted to us.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. In authorizing these appropriations for the deficiency in an amount that is supposed to be given to a particular department of government, does the Deficiency Committee go back to a subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee and have them check back to see whether these amounts are necessary and essential?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The gentleman brings up a very interesting chapter in the history of the committee. Until recently, the Committee on Appropriations gave no opportunity to members of subcommittees dealing with regular annual appropriations to sit with the subcommittee having charge of deficiencies.

Mr. RICH. Did I understand you to say until recently?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Until I became chairman.

Mr. RICH. And now you go back to your subcommittees and permit them to pass on the amounts that are esssential for the subcommittee's appropriations?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. When any deficiency item is taken up, we always invite the chairman and the ranking minority member of the subcommittee which had the original bill and which made the original appropriation to sit with us and participate with us, and we give their recommendations every consideration.

Mr. RICH. Well, you have appointed a subcommittee to look after each department of Government. If that subcommittee is going to be responsible for the operation of that department of Government in the appropriation of funds, it seems to me that no funds should be appropriated by the Deficiency Subcommittee until after the subcommittee approves those funds. That is the only way you are going to get good government in the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. That is exactly the reason why we made this change in the procedure, and I am glad to find the gentleman from Pennsylvania endorses it.

Mr. RICH. I am not endorsing it unless you take in the whole committee.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Perhaps the gentleman would like to go just a little further and take in the entire House. There has to be a limit some place. When his chairmen were in charge they did not consult anybody.

Mr. Speaker, in connection with the preparation of the budget for the coming year, the committee has advised the Director of the Bureau of the Budget that it shall expect the 1948 budget to include all regular annual estimates of appropriations, and that course will be followed, according to word we have received from that official. We countenanced during the war years the late submission of budgets for the armed services, and it was not practicable owing to the recent readjustment, to include provision for Government corporations in the regular 1947 budget.

We are here dealing with the last appropriation bill, except, as I previously indicated, a resolution dealing with terminal-leave pay for veterans, and I shall include in my remarks at this point a statement, by bills, of all of the estimates of appropriations that have been presented for the consideration of the Congress at this session, and of the appropriations that have been voted, omitting the amounts that have been appropriated in private bills, which will not aggregate a great deal. The figures are sufficiently complete and accurate for all practical purposes, but will be supplemented later by a final and more comprehensive statement.

Comparative statement of estimates of appropriations submitted during the second session of the Seventy-ninth Congress and of appropriations made during such session

Bill	Estimates	Appropriations	Increase (+) or decrease (−)
Regular annual bills, 1947:
Department of Agriculture	$590,405,672	$581,240,121	−$9,165,551
District of Columbia	81,505,000	76,755,009	−4,749,991
Independent offices	5,140,876,502	5,094,976,677	−45,899,825
Interior Department	350,367,230	247,167,036	−103,190,194
Department of Labor, Federal Security Agency, and related independent agencies:
Labor	131,701,100	140,456,443	+8,755,343
Federal Security Agency	726,569,300	696,183,527	−30,385,773
Related agencies	319,805,500	318,375,700	−1,429,800
Total	1,178,075,900	1,155,015,670	−23,060,230
Legislative branch	58,339,134	53,809,736	−4,529,398
Military	7,208,207,429	7,263,542,400	+55,334,971
Navy	3,765,399,000	4,119,659,300	+354,260,300
State, Justice, and Commerce Departments, and Judiciary:
State	134,887,831	128,008,752	−6,879,079
Justice	98,063,050	99,752,250	+1,689,200
Commerce	238,755,000	193,884,720	−44,870,280
The Judiciary	16,591,720	16,057,490	−534,230
Total	488,297,601	437,703,212	−50,594,389
Treasury and Post Office Departments:
Treasury	335,978,000	325,290,250	−10,687,750
Post Office	1,298,239,190	1,279,571,890	−18,667,300
Total	1,634,217,190	1,604,862,140	−29,355,050
War Department—civil functions	338,638,509	333,230,498	−5,408,011
Coast Guard	134,920,000	116,226,000	−18,694,000
Government corporations	983,048,848	60,086,287	−922,962,561
Total, regular annual bills	21,952,288,015	21,144,274,086	−808,013,929
Supplemental, deficiency and miscellaneous bills:
Urgent deficiency bill, 1946	3,713,000	3,347,200	−365,800
Second urgent deficiency bill, 1946	362,879,807	364,114,807	+1,235,000
Third urgent deficiency bill, 1946	676,444,961	661,847,988	−14,596,973
Second deficiency bill, 1946	71,198,695	61,601,337	−9,597,358
Third deficiency bill, 1946	[1] 3,028,567,112	2,652,860,866	−375,706,246
Miscellaneous (House joint resolutions)	935,143,769	934,966,469	−177,300
Total, supplemental, deficiency, and miscellaneous bills	5,077,947,344	4,678,738,667	−399,208,677
Permanent and indefinite appropriations	7,343,333,410	7,343,333,410
Grand total	34,373,568,769	33,166,346,163	−1,207,222,606

[1] Includes $135,000,000 for UNRRA provided for in Second Supplemental Surplus Appropriation Rescission Act, 1946.

From this statement it will be seen that the estimates of appropriations aggregate $34,373,568,769. It shows the sum of the appropriations as $33,166,346,163.

The total of the estimates exceed by $3,706,250,939 the total amount projected in the Budget—$30,667,317,830. Of the excess, $3,287,551,000 is on account of the Veterans' Administration.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri has consumed 15 minutes.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I will require another 10 minutes.

The idea is often expressed, both here on the floor and in the press, that Congress ought to cut down appropriations arbitrarily. A great many appropriations are of a character which are not susceptible to reduction by any amount. We have here in this bill an example of such a situation. Of this excess, $3,287,551,000 is on account of the Veterans' Administration, which must be taken care of in full.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. Do you, as chairman of the Appropriations Committee, know that you went in the red last year $21,000,000,000? Do you know that at the rate you are appropriating money, you, as the head of this Appropriations Committee, are going to go in the red $10,000,000,000 this year or else I do not know my name? I want to know from you where you are going to get this money. I would like you to tell this House of Representatives if you are going to continue spending in appropriations like you have been, what is going to happen to this country. I would like somebody to tell the House what is going to happen. If you do not do your duty from now on, this country is going to be broke.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I will say to the gentleman now that we appropriated this money in response to the vote of the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. No; you did not do any such business.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The gentleman just confessed that he voted in this House to increase the Federal contribution to the District of Columbia to the amount of $2,000,000.

Mr. RICH. Yes; I voted to give an additional $2,000,000 to the District of Columbia. Why should I not, when the Congress voted to give $3,750,000,000 to a foreign nation?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The gentleman should have made that speech last week; that is not before the House of Representatives today.

But the gentleman who is decrying appropriations voted for the $2,000,000 when I voted against it. And now he comes complaining because he won and I lost.

I also note that the gentleman a few days ago voted to appropriate millions of dollars to complete vessels less than 30 percent complete when we have now more vessels than we know what to do with and are sinking them or putting them away in expensive cold storage. The gentleman voted to spend the money and I voted not spend it—money absolutely thrown away.

Returning to the tabulation which I have submitted, by way of recapitulation, it will be noted that the estimates of appropriations aggregate $34,373,568,769. The sum of the appropriations is $33,166,346,163.

The total of the estimates exceed by $3,706,250,939 the total amount projected in the Budget—$30,667,317,830.

The summation clearly demonstrates that there has been a determined effort on the part of the President to hew to the line marked out in his budget message of January 14, 1946 (H. Doc. 411) leading to a balanced budget in the fiscal year which has just commenced, and an equal determination on the part of the Appropriations Committees of the Congress, and of the Congress itself—not in any sense individually, but by majority action or concurrence, to attain that objective.

The way has not been easy; nor will it be ahead. The effort is not over. The fiscal year is just beginning, and the objective could yet be defeated. Very great pressures arise and will continue to rise to make drafts upon the Treasury for many types and kinds of projects, some meritorious and some of doubtful merit. But even the fact that an expenditure of money is meritorious is no reason why we should appropriate the money if we have not the money to appropriate.

Mr. RICH. Now you are talking. I hope you will keep that up.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I hope the gentleman will just stay with us in such instances. If he will refrain from voting additional Federal contributions and to build useless ships and so forth, we will save money even in this session.

To keep within a prescribed ceiling—and there must be predetermined ceilings in budget balancing efforts, since revenues are not definitely predictable, requires effort on the part of those of us who have the burden of recommending or of refusing to recommend to the House the grant of appropriations.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman for Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. Does not the gentleman know that he has not balanced the budget since 1931? The budget has not been balanced and you have been from a billion and a half to sixty billions a year off. You are off $21,000,000,000 last year and you will be off $10,000,000,000 next year. With that kind of spending you never will have a balanced budget.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The gentleman goes back over a period of 20 years; and, like Rip Van Winkle, he has been asleep all these 20 years.

When we took over this Government after 10 years of misrule, it was in a deplorable situation, the banks busted, no employment, the country gone to the dogs. We had to retrieve that situation. And we did retrieve it.

And in the meantime, while the gentleman may not have been aware of it, we have had a war.

Mr. RICH. You have been on the greatest joyride you ever had.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. We won that war, if that is what the gentleman means. Of course, it takes money to win a war, and no nation ever maintained a balanced budget during wartime.

Our greatest difficulty today ensues from the free spending that prevailed over the war and the war-readying years. Out of it has grown a point of view, manifested both in and out of Congress, that the wherewithal somehow, someway, sometime will be forthcoming. Money-spending propositions are advocated without regard to the "must" spending total or the demand upon revenues that such "must" total along imposes. This or that project will cost relatively little, it is argued, but this or that project, if we harken to the proponents, could amount to a great big lot, and I say to you that it is that measures adding new demands be held in abeyance to the greatest extent practicable if it be our aim and purpose to put and keep our Federal finances in order.

There is no alternative. There is no way to accomplish that except to quit spending.

Mr. RICH. That is right.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. This House on a number of occasions has evidenced no intention of adopting such an economy program.

Mr. Speaker, let me say that it is not a particularly pleasant task to me, it is not a particularly pleasant task to the committee or to any member of the Committee on Appropriations, to oppose the projects of various Members, but there is no other course to pursue if we are to deal with this matter sensibly.

Here is what invariably happens: After these bills pass the Senate and the Senate has added additional expenditures, there is a rush of Members, both Senators and Members of this House, to us saying, "Now, we want you to agree to the Senate amendments. We must have more money." But we have been instructed by the House not to agree to the Senate amendments. I do not agree. As a result I am the most unpopular man standing around within a radius of 25 feet.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. Does the gentleman find it difficult to say "No" to the Members when he knows these requests ought not to be granted?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I find no difficulty whatever in saying "No." But I do find it difficult to get the House to back me up when I do say "No." A lot of gentlemen, like the gentleman from Pennsylvania, talk economy but do not vote economy. There is a vast difference between talking economy and voting economy; between asking "Where are you going to get the money?" and voting to increase the Federal contribution; between talking economy and voting to build more battleships, when the material, and the labor, and especially the money, are needed for reconversion.

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. RABAUT. How many bills has the gentleman who just interrogated the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations voted against that appropriated money?

Mr. RICH. Practically all of them.

Mr. RABAUT. When? Did the gentleman vote against the war effort?

Mr. RICH. We have not been in the war 25 years. The gentleman has been one of the greatest spenders we ever had around here. It is about time some of you realized that we cannot go on this way.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The gentleman is great on precept but he is short on practice.

Until very recently the prospects were exceptionally bright for the end of deficit spending with the close of the fiscal year just terminated with the aid, however, of some surplus income, which would be diverted from debt retirement, a course admittedly distasteful, but made necessary by circumstances and demands not earlier foreseeable.

Lately, those prospects have dimmed. Personally, I believe we can do what we earlier set out to do with the aid of surplus income in greater measure than first planned. It is quite important that we make every effort to carry out the program. Deficit spending, which the war occasioned, may be said to have been the genesis of the inflation we are now experiencing. We must remove that influence insofar as it is an influence, upon the continuing inflationary pressures. We should exercise our responsibility by word and deed. I stress the word "deed" because we hear so many fine-sounding utterances, but when opposition is wanted, it is often lacking, and when votes are wanted, they are on the wrong side. Some project for the home district or the home State engenders a lapse of purpose and the job of budget balancing is made more difficult. I have in mind, for example, the advancement of the commencement of public works of various kinds that have been planned for construction in leanwork periods. Also the construction of naval vessels, less than 30 percent completed, which the chief constructor of the Navy testified he would not build if he were commencing anew because of war lessons, and that statement was made when Bikini was still well in the offing. Words mean nothing if the Members of the Congress do not live up to them.

As I said earlier, we have adhered closely to the appropriation program projected in the President's budget message. Practically all the excess is traceable to a succession of unanticipated demands coming from the Veterans' Administration. Such excess naturally will mean larger expenditures during this new fiscal year than previously contemplated, but, fortunately, earlier estimates of income and outgo for the fiscal year just closed have turned more favorable. Expenditures turned out to be lower and incomes turned out to be higher, giving us a larger initial base of operating funds for this new fiscal year than appeared likely back in April. The outlook today is promising for a continued high level of income. The January 1946 prediction for the 1946 fiscal year was $38,600,000,000. The April prediction was $42,900,000,000. The daily Treasury statement for June 28, 1946, reported the actual net receipts to have been $43,037,798,808.05. A high level of production is under way. Director of War Mobilization and Reconversion, Mr. John R. Steelman, in his report of June 30, 1946, stated that "total production of goods and services stands at the highest point in peacetime history." To hold that advantage and to expand it depends very largely upon what we do here in fostering production and aiding in stabilization. That is the key to budget balancing. It means a rise or fall in Treasury income, and if we can do as well or better during this fiscal year than we were doing prior to July 1, the chances of Treasury demands over the new 12-month fiscal year period coming within Treasury receipts are better than good.

The expenditure load for the fiscal year 1947, prophesied in the January Budget message, was $35,800,000,000. That figure will need to be added to to an appreciable extent, possibly somewhere around $5,000,000,000, because of veterans' programs, increased military and civilian Government wages and salaries, and deferral into the fiscal year 1947 of charges previously anticipated to be met in the fiscal year 1946.

One recent and unlooked-for expense will be that of paying terminal-leave pay to separated noncommissioned personnel of the armed services. I voted for the bill, which has passed the House, authorizing payment for such leave. It is an equitable and just measure. It would be gross discrimination not to treat all members of the armed services alike as regards such a gratuity. I think it would be far less inflationary and quite satisfactory, if not preferable, to a great majority of the recipients-to-be, were the bill to provide for payment in bonds, a wholly workable arrangement in my judgment, excepting fractional amounts that the usual denominations would not cover, which could be paid in cash. I suggested such a course before the authorizing legislation was considered by the House, and a procedure much in line with the suggestion, I am advised, will be presented to the Senate. Budget balancing otherwise would be wholly impracticable and the consequent inflationary pressures would be extremely harmful both to the veterans and to the country generally.

I do not know whether it is fully appreciated, but the fiscal record that has been made since VJ-day is truly remarkable. This time a year ago the Nation was still at war. Japan sued for peace on August 10, 1945, approximately 11 months ago. Expenditures during the last whole fiscal year of war—the fiscal year 1945—had exceeded the one hundred billion figure. In a part-war year, with war production in full swing and the armed forces at peak levels on VJ-day, expenditures during the fiscal year just closed grossed about $65,000,000,000, and during the present fiscal year we should be able to reduce that amount by something under 40 percent.

When we pause to reflect upon why we cannot retrench more quickly, and in larger amounts, the principal reasons become quite obvious. Here are some demands which are in a sense sacrosanct, at least, for the present:

Interest on the public debt	$5,000,000,000
Statutory debt retirement	592,000,000
Internal Revenue and Customs refunds	1,585,000,000
Army and Navy	11,000,000,000
Veterans' pensions and benefits, including emergency housing, school facilities and terminal leave pay	7,718,693,415

That list totals $25,895,693,415.

Fortunately, all of the components are not recurring, but there is no getting away from such a charge now.

The difference between such total and the total of the appropriations for the session, namely, $7,718,693,415, is for every other kind of expense of the Government—Agriculture, Public Works, the Postal Service, the Department of State, the Department of Justice, the Department of Labor, the Department of Commerce, social-security programs, miscellaneous executive agencies, and the judiciary. The statement introduced earlier contains the individual amounts, and discloses, apart from the armed services, a consistent retrenchment policy. A determined effort has been made to keep such appropriations down to minimums consistent with the general welfare. I will not say that we have been wholly successful, because control in the legislative branch is in many hands and dominated by varying influences and considerations.

One important reason why they exceed appropriations of prewar years is the item of pay. Pay runs as high as 85 percent of the appropriations for some agencies, and, subsequent to November 1942 there have been a succession of pay increases, with the result that today salaries in the former $2,000 to $8,000 range are up roundly from 25 to 32 percent. It is always a very considerable item. Another is a more liberal policy under the Classification Act as regards within grade advancements and advancements in grade. Also, the terminal leave statute, particularly as it is being applied, creates an appreciable expense which will continue until agencies have become stabilized and turn-over lessens. Stabilization will be hastened by the provision in the new Federal pay law establishing an over-all ceiling on the number of Federal employees.

War agencies have been responsible for swelling the Federal pay roll. Now they are rapidly folding up. At the end of June 1945 their staffs totaled 161,958. As of the end of May 1946 the number had dropped to 58,815, and 81 percent of that number were in two agencies—OPA and Selective Service.

Omitting the Army and Navy, the postal service, and the Veterans' Administration, the appropriations for 1947 contained in the regular annual bills, if we make allowance for the higher pay of Federal personnel, aggregate approximately $700,000,000 above the regular annual bills for the fiscal year 1940. We submit that is a very creditable showing. An itemized distribution of that amount, which is a net amount, would be a tremendous task. A comparison by bill totals would mean little because there has been much shifting of items since 1940, and new activities have come into being. Roundly, $600,000,000 of the $700,000,000 as between the two fiscal years may be charged to increased appropriations for three items, namely, $274,000,000 for the Railroad Retirement Act, $133,000,000 for the civil-service-retirement fund, and $191,000,000 for social security.

One of the outstanding, if not the outstanding, contributions that has been made to the economy drive grew out of the foresight of the Congress, anticipating the cessation of hostilities, in requiring the Bureau of the Budget to initiate and maintain a continual scrutiny of appropriations for war uses with the view to a periodical submission of rescissory recommendations. As a consequence, when this bill now before us shall have been enacted there will have been canceled of cash and contractual availability the stupendous sum of $64,328,230,565, all otherwise a potential demand upon the Treasury. The amount practically is the equivalent of all governmental expenditures for the entire fiscal year of 1946. It is an achievement to which all having a hand in its accomplishment may point with pride.

I shall include at this point a summation of rescissory actions:

Public Law	Appropriations	Contract authorizations	Administrative expense limitations	Return of corporate funds
68 (H. J. Res. 177)	$3,100,000,000	$4,265,000,000
127 (H. J. Res. 202)	92,119,000
301 First Supplemental Surplus Appropriation Rescission Act, 1946)	47,579,587,542	4,206,033,879	$9,318,307	$1,190,500
391 (Second Supplemental Surplus Appropriation Rescission Act, 1946)	6,243,217,831	468,673,001	7,410,000	446,890
Recommendations in bill under consideration	3,065,090,505	174,178,000
Grand total	60,080,014,878	9,113,884,880	16,728,307	1,637,390
Less appropriations to liquidate rescinded contract authorizations (column 2)	4,865,669,193
Net total appropriations	55,214,345,685
Total contract authorizations	9,113,884,880
Total appropriations and contract authorizations	64,328,230,565

NOTE.—The figures shown above are net of the subsequent adjustments in rescinded amounts, such as the transfer to UNRRA of $135,000,000 of rescinded defense-aid funds.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, there are two matters which should have special attention. First, as to deferred 1946 expenditures, which add to the 1947 load: The committee was fearful of such a contingency when it considered the second supplemental surplus appropriation rescission bill, 1946. In its report on that bill, dated February 27, 1946, referring to rescissory recommendations touching the armed services, the committee stated:

> It is manifest from the expenditure and obligation figures in House Document 394 as to such services (armed services) that either such figures are overstated or the projected expenditures for the fiscal years 1946 and 1947, contained in the 1947 Budget, are understated. It may develop that the difference will appreciably narrow as the fiscal year nears its close by further contract terminations or the contraction of programs under way and the abandonment of others not yet undertaken.

The door is still open for further contract terminations and consequent recoveries, and I am not wedded to the idea that decision should be governed by the percentage of completion of a contract. I am not convinced that contracts have not been allowed to run without thoroughly canvassing the need for the finished article, its care and handling expense when finished, or its sale value when finished. We had that sort of a proposition before us on unfinished naval vessels of different categories. We are surfeited with naval vessels, but, forsooth, because expenditures had reached a certain percentage, it was successfully argued here, according to the votes, that vessels should be completed, even though it meant an expenditure of millions of dollars, the need and what Bikini might disclose be damned.

Second, as regards stabilization: Whether we balance the Budget in this fiscal year or in any fiscal year in the near future depends upon the measure and kind of support we give to the President for promoting production and stabilizing the economy. Those objectives go hand in hand. They are inseparable, and they are vital in this transitional period to the achievement of an era of national economy such as all of us earnestly desire and such as any thinking citizen realizes are vital to the general welfare now and in the years ahead. To sabotage these two-in-one objectives and preach Budget balancing would be hypocrisy at its worst. Stabilization and the means for realizing and maintaining it are of imperative importance to the Nation's welfare today.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has again expired.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and include certain excerpts.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, this conference report comes to you signed by all the conferees. It has some items in it that I do not like. For instance, it carries $75,000,000 for the operations of the OPA. If they would run the thing honestly, efficiently, and effectively, they could get by with half of that amount of money. The trouble is they have been getting into many picayunish performances and have neglected their duty. They have had 30 or 40 people working on some jobs that 1 person could perform and, as a consequence, they have made a mess out of the whole thing because the Congress gave them too much money. I am not speaking facetiously or taking this stuff out of thin air; I am telling you things I know from my own experience through contact with the OPA.

There is a saving clause in here which will require the Budget, in the event that no OPA law is enacted, to trim their sails and require them to operate with a view to liquidation. But I am afraid that they will try to spend every dollar of it, whether they are continued or not. There are some other items in disagreement that we will have to discuss a little bit as they come up, but I do want to say just a word or two now about the present situation of appropriation bills.

According to the calendar this morning, there are still four bills that are not complete. I see no occasion for the Bureau of the Budget to continue the practice that has been followed this year of failing to send up a major portion of the Budget estimates until so late that it is impossible for the Committee on Appropriations in the House to get the bills covered and get them out and have them disposed of before the 30th of June. There were some estimates that did not arrive on our table until the middle of May; regular estimates. There were many deficiency estimates that did not come in here until close to the middle of June. There are estimates in here involving $2,000,000,000 which were considered in this bill that was sent to the Senate after we passed the deficiency bill on the 28th of June.

That is the situation that is very unsatisfactory, and it is bound to create dissatisfaction in the country because of the way the departmental operations are functioning. I want to project a few figures which I think are of some interest. Above the situation that the President contemplated when he sent his Budget estimate up here there are, as near as I can figure it, additional expenditures in sight that are going to be made in the fiscal year 1947 which he did not include in the $35,000,000,000 that he estimated would be spent, consisting of items like these:

Veterans' Administration, about $4,000,000,000.

Civilian and military pay increases, about $4,000,000,000.

Terminal leave, something like $3,500,000,000, according to the Budget, and the Army states that it might run a good deal higher than that figure.

Housing, $1,000,000,000.

Those things make a total of $12,500,000,000, and if you add those to the President's estimate of what might be spent when the Budget estimate was sent up here, you get a total of $47,500,000,000 of expenditures, with revenues in sight, according to the way the thing looks, of some $36,000,000,000 to perhaps $38,000,000,000. According to the way things break in business and incomes from the people, you get a deficit running anywhere from $9,000,000,000 to $11,500,000,000 for the fiscal year 1947. That is not a sweet picture. It very much behooves the Congress to see to it that we do something a great deal more strenuous to try to keep appropriations down. We are facing a serious situation, with a continued unbalanced Budget and a terrific debt. It is about time we begin to go the other way.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the adoption of the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The conference report was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the first amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 33: On page 9, line 22, after "country", insert "without any deletions or modifications by censorship of their reports dealing with such subjects: Provided further, That none of the funds herein appropriated shall be used for the acquisition, transportation, delivery, or distribution of any supplies, commodities, or equipment to or for any recipient country until such country shall provide for the prompt distribution of such supplies, commodities, and equipment."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CANNON of Missouri moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 33 and concur in the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert the following: "without any deletions or modifications by censorship of their reports dealing with such subjects: Provided, That none of the funds herein appropriated shall be used for the transportation, delivery, or distribution of any supplies, commodities, or equipment to or for any recipient country until the Director General of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration has advised the Secretary of State that such country has arranged for the prompt distribution of such supplies, commodities, and equipment."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, this is largely a clarifying amendment.

I move the previous question, Mr. Speaker.

The previous question was ordered.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 34: On page 10, line 21, insert:

"SURPLUS PROPERTY, CARE AND HANDLING

"Surplus property, care and handling: To enable the President, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, through the War and Navy Departments, to carry out the provisions of paragraph 8 of Executive Order 9630 of September 27, 1945, in connection with the disposal of surplus property in accordance with the provisions of the Surplus Property Act of 1944, as amended, $120,000,000, of which $100,000,000 shall be for expenditure by the War Department and $20,000,000 for expenditure by the Navy Department: Provided, That expenses hereunder shall include pay and allowances and subsistence of military and naval personnel: Provided further, That current naval appropriations shall be available for the care and handing of property declared surplus to disposal agencies pending actual reimbursement from them."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CANNON of Missouri moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 34 and concur in the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert the following:

"SURPLUS PROPERTY, CARE AND HANDLING

"Surplus property, care and handling: That current naval and military appropriations shall be available for the care and handling of property wherever situated declared surplus to disposal agencies pending reimbursement for such expenses by such disposal agencies or in consequence of supplemental appropriations hereafter made directly to the owning agencies, any law to the contrary notwithstanding: Provided, That reimbursement shall not be made for pay and allowances and subsistence of military and naval personnel within the numbers appropriated for heretofore."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, the effect of this amendment is to require owning agencies to come down here and submit their requests to Congress and get appropriations for the care and handling of all property outside the United States and all property inside the United States that has not been segregated.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 46: Page 32, line 13, insert:

"BUREAU OF COMMUNITY FACILITIES

"Veterans' educational facilities: For carrying out the provisions of section 504 of the act entitled 'An act to amend title V of the act entitled "An act to expedite the provision of housing in connection with the national defense, and for other purposes" approved October 14, 1940, as amended, to authorize the Federal Works Administrator to provide needed educational facilities, other than housing, to educational institutions furnishing courses of training or education to persons under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended' (S. 2085 or H. R. 6952, 79th Cong.), $100,000,000, to remain available until expended of which amount not to exceed $4,000,000 shall be available for administrative expenses, including travel expenses and the objects specified under the head 'Defense public works (community facilities)' in the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, 1941, and the joint resolution approved December 23, 1941 (Public Law 371): Provided, That there may be excluded from the aggregate maximum personnel ceilings established by section 14 (a) of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1946 (Public Law No. 390) in addition to other exclusions provided by law, not more than 600 positions to the extent that all or part of such number may be determined by the Director of the Bureau of the Budget to be essential to the effectuation of the provisions of said section 504. This appropriation shall not be available for obligation until the enactment into law of said S. 2085 or H. R. 6952."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CANNON of Missouri moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 46 and concur in the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amount named in line 12 of said amendment, insert "$75,000,000"; and in lieu of the amount named in line 14 of said amendment, insert "$3,000,000."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, this amendment is offered with the idea that the original amount asked could not possibly be economically expended within the time provided. For that reason, we propose this revision of the amounts.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 51: Page 38, line 12, insert:

"UNITED STATES MARITIME COMMISSION

"Receipts from operations of any functions of the War Shipping Administration which are transferred to the United States Maritime Commission under the terms of title II of Public Law 492, Seventy-ninth Congress, second session, shall be available until March 1, 1947, for obligation by the United States Maritime Commission in carrying out any such transferred operating functions as the Commisison shall deem necessary, including personnel and other administrative expenses necessary to conduct such operations."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, the Maritime Commission has a definite work to accomplish and must have funds with which to meet its requirements. There is no difference of opinion on the proposal.

I move that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and concur in the same.

Mr. THOMAS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. THOMAS of Texas. Does the amendment now under consideration mean that the funds of the War Shipping Administration will be transferred to the Maritime Commission after December 1? In other words, are the funds made available for a period longer than March 1 of next year?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. They are not. They stop March 1.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 52½: Page 39, line 1, insert:

"Operation of canteens: For all expenses necessary for carrying out the provisions of the act entitled 'An act to establish and provide for the maintenance and operation of a Veterans' Canteen Service in the Veterans' Administration, and for other purposes' (H. R. 6836 or S. 2354), $5,000,000, which shall be available to provide adequate working capital for each canteen and for the Service as a whole for (a) the acquisition of necessary furniture, furnishings, fixtures, and equipment for the establishment, maintenance, and operation of canteens, warehouses, and storage depots, (b) for the procurement of merchandise, supplies, and services for sale at canteens at stations of the Veterans' Administration, in accordance with the provisions of the act, and (c) for the employment of personnel and other expenses necessary for the operation of the canteens: Provided, That the amount appropriated and the proceeds of canteen operations shall be deposited in the Treasury or other depositaries selected by the Administrator in a special account which shall be available for the continued operation of canteens: Provided further, That the availability of this appropriation is contingent upon the enactment of H. R. 6836 or S. 2354."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CANNON of Missouri moves that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amount named in said amendment, insert "$4,000,000."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, we have here the same situation which obtained in the amendment just agreed to. It requires no further explanation.

As was explained, the whole appropriation is contingent upon the enactment of H. R. 6836 or S. 2324.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 60: Page 43, line 24, strike out "$56,000" and insert "and for carrying out the provisions of H. J. Res. 364, Seventy-ninth Congress, $141,000: Provided, That $85,000 of this amount shall not be available for obligation until the enactment of said House Joint Resolution 364."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, this is required by recent legislation on the verge of enactment. There is complete agreement about it. I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 62: Page 45, line 3, insert:

"COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION

"Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized to purchase surplus potatoes (including sweetpotatoes) produced during the year 1946 and to process and sell, give, or otherwise dispose of such potatoes to any foreign country or to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration for the relief of hungry people."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment which is on the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CANNON of Missouri moves that the House recede from its disagreement with amendment of the Senate numbered 62 and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert the following:

"COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION

"Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized to purchase surplus potatoes (including sweetpotatoes) produced during the year 1946 and to process and sell such potatoes to any foreign country, and, upon requisition, to the Army and the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration for the relief of hungry people."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH].

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, it seems strange to come in here at this time with an amendment, such as has been offered by the gentleman from Missouri, to have the Commodity Credit Corporation purchase potatoes and process them for relief. I cannot understand why you want to start the Commodity Credit Corporation in the relief business. Certainly you have the UNRRA and you have the Red Cross and you have other relief agencies. Now you are trying to establish the Commodity Credit Corporation as a manufacturing establishment to process potatoes for relief. Why permit the Commodity Credit Corporation to do that? Certainly there are other manufacturing concerns and other agencies in this country that can do this job, and there is no reason why you should have an amendment of this kind establishing this business in the Commodity Credit Corporation. It seems to me we should vote down this motion and send this back to the Senate without approval.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield.

Mr. WHITE. Does the gentleman know that if potatoes are substituted for wheat to feed the starving people of Europe, we will have more wheat for the dairies and more wheat for bread in the United States? Why let the potatoes rot and send all of our wheat away?

Mr. RICH. Why do they have to rot? You do not have to put the Government in the potato business to keep potatoes from spoiling. We can have private processors take care of the potatoes. You put the Government into all kinds of business. Now is the time to eliminate this part of the bill. I don't want to be a party to socialism or communism in our country.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, there seems to be a misapprehension about what this amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri does. Here is the picture, as I understand it, and I think I have it correct.

The Commodity Credit Corporation with the funds that have been allocated to it for the purpose of maintaining support prices for certain things after the war, has created a support price for potatoes. There is a large surplus of potatoes at the same time that we have a shortage of feed grains and corn. We already have, as I understand, about $1.80 per hundred pounds invested in these potatoes. Shall we let them spoil or shall we put a few cents more into them, have them processed and send them over to foreign countries in the place of the feed grains and corn that are so badly needed here in this country?

And let me call the gentleman's attention further to the fact that the language according to the amendment that has been offered by the gentleman from Missouri reads:

> That these potatoes shall be sold to foreign countries or to the Army or UNRRA for the relief of hungry people—

And not given away.

So the relief appropriations that we have already passed and which I believe to be ample in every way will be the funds that ultimately will be charged with this operation.

The question is whether we shall lose all those potatoes that are surplus or whether we shall process them and use them in such way that this country can get the benefit of the grain and the corn.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. JENKINS. I do not know about the advisability of the Commodity Credit going into this business; I am not so sure about that, but I think probably it would be all right. I do know, however, about the production of potatoes. Last year a group of us went up into New Jersey to see the potato situation up there. The Government had agreed to pay these people and encouraged them to raise potatoes, and they had. We saw them piled there, 60 railroad carloads; and all over that section in that one county there were literally thousands and thousands of bushels of the finest potatoes I have ever seen. The Government was bound to pay $1.80 a hundred pounds for those potatoes. Nobody wanted them. They finally sold them to a distillery in Philadelphia at a loss of 15 cents a bushel or more. Now, they are fine food, nutritious, but stock will not eat potatoes until they have been treated. If this plan will work, I do not know but what it would be a good thing for the feed industry of the Nation.

Mr. TABER. We will let these people across the water eat dehydrated potatoes instead of shipping them grains. We can do that and it will work very nicely.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. RICH. Does the gentleman expect the Commodity Credit Corporation to take these potatoes and establish plants for doing this?

Mr. TABER. They will let it out on contracts.

Mr. RICH. Will they do it through private enterprise?

Mr. TABER. It will be done by contract.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. We have produced this vast amount of potatoes. Something must be done with them. We have one alternative: We can let them rot and that is the end of it; or we can have them processed and supply one of the essential foods in a time when there is a shortage of rations; both at home and abroad.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. Is it the idea that the Commodity Credit Corporation shall go into business and establish plants to do this work?

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Idaho.

Mr. WHITE. There are ample dehydrating facilities in all the States, including Maine and Idaho, for these potatoes. The Surplus Commodity Corporation will not have to go out and build any plants. There are ample plants to handle the crops now. Let us send this over to Europe and keep our wheat and grain for dairy cattle and poultry at home in order to produce eggs and butter that are so critically needed at this time.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Missouri.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

> Senate amendment No. 63: On page 45, line 13, insert:
>
> "Compiling census reports, and so forth: The appropriation 'Compiling census reports and so forth' in the Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1946, as amended, is hereby made available for the transfer of not to exceed $300,000 to the National Bureau of Standards, to be available until expended for the objects specified under the aforesaid appropriation."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, this is for the purpose of building an electronic machine for mass statistical operations, which it is universally conceded will enable a great saving.

Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

> Senate amendment No. 64: Page 45, line 20, insert:
>
> "Compiling census reports, and so forth: The appropriations under the heading 'Compiling census reports, and so forth,' in the Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1947, are hereby made available for expenditure at the seat of Government on and after October 1, 1946, for the compilation of Foreign Trade Statistics within a limitation of $1,200,000."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a division of the question.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read, as follows:

> Mr. TABER moves to concur in Senate amendment No. 64 with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of Senate amendment No. 64 and in lieu thereof insert the following:
>
> "The limitation of $950,000 on the use of funds appropriated for 'compiling census reports and so forth' contained in the Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1947, is hereby increased to $1,200,000."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JONES].

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, this motion involves an amendment that we put in the State, Justice, and Commerce appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1947, which was passed a few days ago. The conferees agreed to this language in the Commerce appropriation bill:

Provided, That on or after October 1, 1946, all functions necessary to the compilation of foreign trade statistics shall be performed in New York: Provided, further, That not to exceed $950,000 shall be expended for this purpose.

Later the Census Bureau, through Mr. Capt asked the Senate for $1,200,000. He said that $950,000 did not provide for the Downey-Jackson Pay Act of 1946, passed subsequent to the House determination of the $950,000 figure. The $950,000 limitation does not provide for the 14 percent increase, and it does not provide for the cost of moving the large volume of records and equipment to New York, nor the cost of moving the personnel as provided by law. The $1,200,000 limitation in the Senate amendment is therefore not disturbed by the Taber motion now under consideration. The $1,200,000 amount added by this amendment to the Senate amendment would provide everything that Mr. Capt claims he is short in the regular supply bill limitation. In the regular supply bill for the Commerce Department and for the Census Bureau Congress decided that the collection and compilation of foreign trade statistics would be in New York City. The House committee, the conferees and both Houses of Congress, came to this conclusion from evidence submitted by the special staff for the Committee on Appropriations. This special staff, headed by a competent FBI man loaned to our committee, shows that most of the basic data is in New York, even though all the shipments to foreign countries and all the imports from foreign countries are not at the Port of New York. Fifty percent of the export and 60 percent of the import basic data for the entire United States is available in New York City and available to the Census Bureau at the New York office. The basic data is in New York City. It is collected by the Customs Division of the Treasury and is used by this division of the Bureau of the Census. Without leave of Congress the Census Department a few years ago decided to bring a major part of this work to Washington from New York City. At the time Director Capt and his staff appeared before the House committee there were some 453 employees in the Washington office and 100 employees in New York City.

When Mr. Capt testified before the Senate in behalf of the Senate amendment, there were 100 people in New York City and 500 people in Washington. If the Senate amendment stands, it means the end of the collection of these statistics in New York City. It means that they will scuttle the efficient New York City office for an inefficient Washington office. The amendment offered by the gentleman from New York to the Senate amendment would do just exactly what the House and the Senate decided in the regular Commerce supply bill; to let the work be done in New York City and provide additional funds the Census Bureau needs to carry on the will of this Congress.

The report of the special investigating staff of the Committee on Appropriations shows that the work can be done more efficiently by doing it in one office. In the regular supply bill the Congress decided that that office should be in New York City. The New York City office decided that they could do it for $950,000. The Census Department in the Budget request said originally that they needed $1,600,000 to do that same work. The New York office can do it with $1,200,000 if the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York prevails, and provides for all of the supplemental funds that Mr. Capt says he needs.

Mr. BENNETT of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. BENNETT of Missouri. Would that mean that 500 employees now in the District of Columbia would have to be transferred to New York and that all of the work of compilation of these foreign trade statistics would be transferred to New York City if the gentleman's amendment prevails?

Mr. JONES. Let me explain further. I think that there will be some employees transferred from Washington to New York. In any event the job can be done more efficiently and cheaply if we let all of the work be done in New York. In Washington they have the assembly line system of doing the New York job, and when any one person is off the Washington assembly line the job remains incomplete and expensive. Their figures are not verified and reports are delayed from 2 to 5 months. New York City reports are available in 1 month.

Mr. BENNETT of Missouri. It is my understanding that not only the Bureau of the Census but the Department of Commerce and the Department of State and the Bureau of the Budget prefer that it remain in Washington, as it is at the present time.

Mr. JONES. The investigating staff of the Committee on Appropriations showed that nearly all of the basic data is in New York City, and therefore New York City was the logical place to do the work. Proof of the pudding is that Mr. Kerlin, who was the Assistant Director of the Department of Commerce and who originally initiated the plan to bring a part of this work to Washington, despaired of doing it here, and his last official act before leaving the Commerce Department to be employed by the Export-Import Bank was to execute a directive to send this work back to New York City.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield two additional minutes to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. JONES. Those that originally intended to move a part of this work to Washington saw the inefficiency of the Washington operation and wanted to move it back to New York. It is claimed that there would be more liaison if the work were done here in Washington, D. C., but the facts prove that the Washington operation has become very inefficient, that it costs much more money to do it here in Washington, and that during the war years, when the Government did not publish the foreign-trade statistics in volume form by years, this Division consumed funds for this purpose too. Later they had to have extra funds to publish the bound volumes after the war was over; whereas the New York office with a lesser staff had always been able to keep current and publish its annual statistics in a bound volume without any additional appropriation.

Mr. BENNETT of Missouri. The fact remains, does it not, that the Chief of the Bureau of the Census feels that this would be a mistake and would interfere with the efficient operation of this activity, and so does the Bureau of the Budget and the Department of State?

Mr. JONES. The Chief of the Bureau of the Census, I think, has an ax to grind, because he wants to maintain a permanent staff in the Washington office. Instead of having a staff 1 year in 10, he wants to have a complete staff here 10 years out of 10.

The investigative staff of the Committee on Appropriations has no ax to grind, and it has made recommendations as follows:

It is felt that the joint committee plan to do the job for $950,000 should be approved.

If the first recommendation is accepted, it must be pointed out that the operation should be completely transferred to New York City.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent in the interest of expedition and fairness to those interested that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 20 minutes, the last 5 minutes to be reserved to the Committee on Appropriations.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Missouri that he has complete control of the time and can use whatever time he desires of the hour.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. That is true, Mr. Speaker, but I do not want to take what might be construed as arbitrary action in closing debate. If it is done by unanimous consent there can be no question of an unwarranted restriction of debate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, just a couple of weeks ago—I may have it a little wrong, but not much—the whole House committee agreed on a certain program of handling this proposition, and now we are asked to come in here and change it around so that we can continue an inefficient operation. Anyone who has had occasion to use the Customs statistics will realize just how inefficient that job is, because, in the juggling around of these statistics between New York and Washington, there is interminable delay and the statistics are nowhere near as up to date as they should be for the efficient operation of Government work and the efficient conduct of trade. Under these circumstances, the committee investigated the situation. They have something like 400 here and a couple of hundred in New York. It was agreed even by the head of the Census Bureau, Mr. Capt, that this was not an efficient operation and that a consolidation of the work in one location would be better. That is right in the hearings. The committee went over it thoroughly. They had a complete investigation, as a result of which they saved nearly a million dollars on the estimates. Even with these increases in pay, there will be $500,000 net savings. Why should not this consolidation be put into effect and why should not the job be done in such a way that we can save some money instead of continuing to waste money forever? I hope the amendment will be adopted and that we can do this.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. RABAUT].

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Speaker, this is an odd situation here this morning. I think it grows out of sincerity and devotion to the principle of economy on the part of the Subcommittee on Appropriations dealing with the Department of Commerce. The subcommittee was in unanimous accord in affecting the transfer of part of this service from Washington to New York. I signed the conference report on this bill because of the fact that the Census Bureau brought before us a number of operations which they said were performed for the most part in Washington and that it would cause a dislocation of personnel who are here. Nevertheless, as chairman of the committee, I can say to you now that we have effected a saving here close to half a million dollars. That is an annual saving.

The history of this case is as follows:

Prior to 1942 all work in connection with the compilation of foreign trade statistics was performed in New York. During that year the machine tabulation work and certain coding operations were transferred to Washington. During the course of the hearings on the Department of Commerce appropriations last winter a representative group of three employees of the New York office came to Washington and asked for a hearing which was granted. The subcommittee was told that a considerable sum of money could be saved for the Government if all of the work, including machine tabulation was performed in New York. The subcommittee, frankly, did not take this statement too seriously because it assumed that the Census Bureau, the Department of Commerce officials, and the Bureau of the Budget had gone into the matter of costs which were finally determined and established at $1,690,000. However, testimony of both the New York group and the Bureau of the Census officials did indicate that all was not as it should be in this matter of foreign-trade statistics, and an investigation of the operation was ordered.

Two committee investigators spent approximately 3 months on the job. Their report led the committee to the following conclusions:

First. That the split operation—that is, New York and Washington—was uneconomical and should be consolidated;

Second. That the plan submitted by the group representing the New York employees was feasible and should be tried, since it was claimed that the job could be done for $950,000, a saving of $740,000 to the taxpayers; and Third. That the work could be performed to advantage in New York because: (a) 60 percent of all the imports enter through the port of New York; (b) almost 50 percent of all the exports clear through the port of New York in normal times; (c) the investigation disclosed that prior to 1942, when a portion of the work was transferred to Washington, the finished product was more current; and (d) the New York employees were, for the most part, employees who had done this work for from 15 to 30 years.

Accordingly, the subcommittee inserted a provision in the State, Justice, Commerce, and Judiciary appropriation bill to the effect that this work should be performed in New York at a cost not exceeding $950,000 per year. This provision is now law.

Representatives of the Census Bureau now claim that a fully complete job cannot be done for $950,000 and that the full amount of the original estimate, or $1,690,000 should be allowed. This amendment provides $1,200,000, with no stipulation as to how much should be expended in Washington and how much in New York.

Inasmuch as the action of the conferees is now completed I will not pursue the matter further at this time. I do hope, however, that both the Department of Commerce and the Bureau of the Budget will study carefully all of the phases of this problem before effecting any major changes. The entire operation should be given a thoroughly objective study. I hope further, and I trust, that no recrimination of any form or nature will result against the New York group or any of the New York employees who first brought this matter to the committee's attention. They sincerely think that money can be saved. The only factor which motivated the subcommittee in its prior action was to try to see to it that the best possible results are obtained at a minimum of cost.

I just want to conclude by saying that I am going along with the report because we are effecting a saving and I have had the assurance of the chairman of the committee that there is to be an investigation by the Bureau of the Budget and this whole matter is to remain in status quo for the coming year for the purpose of this study, when it will again come before our committee which deals with this problem every year.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RABAUT. I yield.

Mr. STEFAN. The gentleman says it will remain in status quo. Under what expense?

Mr. RABAUT. One million two hundred thousand dollars. Many things were brought out in the discussion that show there is some additional work that must be performed.

Mr. STEFAN. I understand since they told us they could do that work for $950,000, there has been an increase in salary.

Mr. RABAUT. There has been an increase in salary.

Mr. STEFAN. And then they took into consideration the amount it would take to move a lot of employees from Washington to New York.

Mr. RABAUT. Yes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. RABAUT] has expired.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. SASSCER].

Mr. SASSCER. Mr. Speaker, further briefly supplementing the remarks of the distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. RABAUT] I hope this preferential motion will be voted down and that this activity of the Foreign Trade Unit involving some 500 employees of the Census Bureau at the seat of Government will be permitted to remain here. The Census Bureau, as the House no doubt knows, is now housed in its own building, erected just adjacent to the District of Columbia line in Maryland, where it has ample space.

If the activities are moved away no doubt space will have to be rented. The whole Census Bureau and various departments interlock one into another. I understand it is seldom that an item comes up in one branch of the Census that does not require that particular branch to get additional information from records that have been compiled by other units. It certainly seems to me that this Foreign Trade Section can operate as economically and certainly more efficiently here alongside the other units that have compiled numerous statistical data.

There are approximately 500 employees in this particular section, many of them specialists. I understand that over 400 of them have families and own their homes. It would be difficult for them to move away. In most instances they would be unable to do so.

In the interest of economy and in the interest of efficiency I trust this motion will not prevail.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SASSCER. I yield to my colleague from Virginia.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I desire to express my concurrence in the statement made by the gentleman from Maryland. I hope the motion will be voted down. It seems to me it would work a very great hardship upon these employees who own their homes in this locality to be uprooted and have to move away.

Mr. SASSCER. I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

Mr. D'ALESANDRO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SASSCER. I yield.

Mr. D'ALESANDRO. I join with my able colleague from Maryland in his protests against this amendment which would work a hardship on four or five hundred employees of the Census Bureau. Would it not work a hardship on account of housing conditions in New York?

Mr. SASSCER. I would assume from all reports that 500 people moving into the metropolitan section of New York would find difficulty in obtaining housing facilities.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time, 5 minutes, to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. O'NEAL].

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Speaker, my purpose is largely to clarify this matter because some Members may have come into the Chamber since this amendment was offered.

The appropriation bill for the State, Justice, and Commerce Departments for the fiscal year 1947 included this provision:

Provided, That on and after October 1, 1946, all functions necessary for the compilation of foreign trade statistics shall be performed in New York, N. Y.

When this bill was passed by the Senate it contained this amendment No. 64, which, in effect, permits the foreign-trade statistical department to be in New York and Washington within executive discretion. The amendment presented to you by the gentleman from New York and discussed by the gentleman from Ohio would confine the work entirely to the New York office as was carried in the Commerce supply bill.

So the whole problem is whether this work is to be done in the future entirely in New York or in New York and Washington as it has been done in the past.

The amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] would confine it entirely to New York. As far as the actual amount of money in the bill is concerned, no difference is involved. It is a question solely of where the work could be done better and which ultimately may affect, of course, the appropriation; but as of today there is no difference in the amount of money carried in the amendment discussed by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JONES] and the recommendation in the bill; and there has already been effected in this one department a saving of $400,000 or more.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'NEAL. I yield.

Mr. STEFAN. That is not exactly correct, is it? There is not a saving effected. It is merely that the committee has cut the budget estimate.

Mr. O'NEAL. The committee has effected a saving.

Mr. STEFAN. The Budget asked for $1,600,000 for its operation and the committee was told that this New York organization could do it for $950,000. The committee was not interested in whether it was being done in Washington or in New York.

Mr. O'NEAL. The gentleman is in part correct.

Mr. STEFAN. The committee wanted it done in the most efficient way.

Mr. O'NEAL. In other words, the Budget estimate is cut by $400,000.

There are two things, however, that are very important. The first is whether or not it is the right thing to do to remove 500 families living in Washington and make them go to New York in order to hold their jobs. Some, of course, would not go. The Secretary of State has said in a letter written as late as July 10 that he fears that it will seriously affect the compilation of these very necessary census statistics which he needs now. It will affect it because a considerable number of people possibly would not go to New York to work. This means the recruitment of new and inexperienced forces and will result in delays. If the New York office now closed it would affect about 100 families. Under the provisions advocated by the conferees the closing of either office is discretionary with the Secretary. Under the Taber amendment the Washington office would be closed.

I have always felt that duties which are largely executive jobs we should leave to the executive department. I do not mind cutting an appropriation but I am very loath to say to a department: "You must run your internal structure the way I tell you to do it and not the way you want to do it."

The department prefers to do its work as recommended by the conferees and says it can do better work by having some of it done in Washington and some in New York.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'NEAL. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Capt said on page 340 of the hearings:

I think it would be more economical and certainly wiser to operate and more satisfactorily to have it all together.

The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. RABAUT] asked:

If one location is better, where would you place it, New York or Washington?

Mr. Capt replied:

I would place it in Washington, D. C.

Mr. O'NEAL. I think all of us know that the department down there is hoping that this present method will be allowed to remain a little longer. That is the reason I made the statement.

The State Department, I reiterate, has issued a letter in which it is stated that it will adversely affect their work. I am not in favor of disrupting these families unless we have some very good reason for doing so. I think the logic is on the other side. We do not have to be hasty about uprooting these 500 families and say, "You must go to New York if you want to hold your job."

I believe there is plenty of time to do that after a more thorough study. Four hundred thousand dollars has already been cut from the budget. We can wait until next year to go into the question to see whether or not it is the wise thing to do. Let us not at this time act hastily on a matter involving the happiness and homes of at least 500 people.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from New York that the House concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. TABER) there were—ayes 51, noes 70.

So the motion was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 69: Page 49, line 8 insert the following:

"RECLAMATION FUND, SPECIAL FUND

"Construction: For additional amounts for construction of the following projects including the objects specified under the head "Bureau of Reclamation" in the Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1947, to be expended from the reclamation fund, to remain available until expended and to be reimbursable under the reclamation law:

"Projects:

"Boise project, Idaho, Anderson Ranch $1,612,525;

"Provo River project, Utah, $1,756,960;

"Total, from the reclamation fund $3,369,485."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CANNON of Missouri moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 69 and concur in the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the amount named in line 9 of such amendment insert "$806,260."

In lieu of the amount named in line 10 of such amendment insert "$878,480."

In lieu of the amount named in line 11 of such amendment insert "$1,684,740."

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. WHITE moves that the House recede and concur in Senate amendment No. 69.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a division of the question.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 69?

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, I shall try to explain the situation in connection with the Idaho project. I am not familiar with the Provo River project in Utah, but I am familiar with the project in Idaho.

This is an old project to provide supplemental water for one of the most productive irrigation districts or series of districts in the State of Idaho and in the whole West. The project has been started. It has been going a long time. We have succeeded in carrying on the work of this project all through the war period. During all the manpower shortage and all the material shortages the Congress thought this project important enough to carry on this work by making appropriations. $20,000,000 has been expended in carrying on this work, and the Budget this year allowed a figure of $2,847,610 which would carry on the work.

The Committee on Appropriations cut the amount about in half to $1,234,495. That money was carried in the regular appropriation bill and has been spent. Orders have been placed for turbines and electric generators, and over half of the money has been spent in paying installments on this machinery and now the work will have to stop on the 20th day of this month unless the Congress sees fit to make the appropriation that has beeen put in the bill by the Senate which appropriates only the Budget allowance. All we are asking the House to do as a matter of good business policy is to complete the job, to appropriate this money and not stop the work. A thousand men are employed there. They have the conveyer belts and everything working. We have $20,000,000 invested. Why should we now stop work and go to all the expense of shutting down and starting up again, when we will have to appropriate this money later to complete the project? The money will have to be spent next year. If we do not spend it now we will have a shut-down in the interim and the Government will take a serious loss by the suspension of the work.

I have a letter from the contractor which states positively that without money they cannot carry on. This letter is from the project manager, Mr. V. A. Roberts, of the firm of Morrison-Shea-Twaits-Winston that is building this dam. He states:

> Based on our information, it is apparent that funds appropriated by the Congress for carrying on this work, will be exhausted on or about July 15, 1946. Since the Congress has failed to appropriate additional funds necessary for continuing the work, and further, in view of the stipulation contained in paragraph No. 12 of the General Conditions of Specifications No. 965 of the contract, we, as contractors have no alternative except to cease operations.

This appropriation item in this bill will carry on the work. I implore the Congress to do the business-like thing and carry on the work, to leave in the bill this item that was placed in it in the Senate, and to agree to my motion to recede and concur in the Senate amendment. We will only have to put this extra money in the bill next year, so why not do it now? I ask that the House carry on this project and not incur serious loss to the Government. This money is coming out of the reclamation fund and it will be repaid. I ask any Member, even of the Committee on Appropriations, what is to be gained by a pinch-penny program of cutting down the appropriation and shutting down the work, and resuming at some later date?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. NORRELL].

Mr. NORRELL. Mr. Speaker, I would like to explain to the House the history of these two items. They appeared in the Department of the Interior appropriation bill this spring. The budget estimate for the Anderson Ranch project was $2,847,000 and the budget estimate for the Provo River project was, as I recall, $3,102,000. The Reclamation Service said they needed these amounts in order to operate these projects for 12 months, beginning July 1, 1946. It developed in the hearings of the Department of the Interior Subcommittee on Appropriations this spring that the Reclamation Service had an unexpended balance at the time of $135,000,000, to the credit of the reclamation projects, so the chairman of the subcommittee said that cuts had to be made, and requested Mr. Straus to make suggestions to the committee where reductions could be made. In fairness to Mr. Straus, I should say that he did not want to reduce the budget estimate of any of the projects, but after consideration Mr. Straus gave us a statement to the effect that the Anderson Ranch project could be reduced as suggested by the chairman to $1,234,475 and the Provo River project might be reduced to $1,345,040, thereby implying that these amounts, would be sufficient for the operation of these projects for the 12-month period.

The Interior Subcommittee on Appropriations allowed the amounts suggested by Mr. Straus. The House sustained our action.

The bill then went to the Senate and the Reclamation Service asked for the restoration of the funds. True to custom, the other body in its superior wisdom restored the entire amount of the House reduction. Then the matter went to the conference committee, and there in conference the membership representing the House and Senate agreed on the House figures. So the Senate receded. It was a unanimous agreement, as I understand it. The House and Senate confirmed the action of the conference committee. I do not know whether the Interior Department bill has yet been signed by the President, but we find the Reclamation Service before the ink is dry on the Department of the Interior bill asking for a deficiency appropriation equal to the total amount of the reductions. I say to you, this is nullifying the action of your Subcommittees on Appropriations. It is nullifying the action of your conferees. It is nullifying the action taken by the House and Senate. I am against the procedure. I hope the Reclamation Service will not be so unfair to the Interior Subcommittees on Appropriations and so unfair to the Congress in the future as to ask for a deficiency appropriation restoring a reduction made by the jurisdictional subcommittees and agreed to by the conference committee and also by the House and Senate. I am agreeable to the amendment as proposed by the chairman of our committee. This would allow $806,262.50 more for Anderson Ranch project and $878,480 for the Provo River project. Our brethren from the West are so nice, so courageous, and so efficient, that we are unable to resist them. I am willing to go along in restoring half of the cut which in the language of Mr. Straus will be sufficient to carry these projects for three-quarters of a year. I think that will be sufficient money to do for a year. I take great delight now in yielding to my very good friend, the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. WHITE].

Mr. WHITE. As a matter of fact, the item that the gentleman refers to in the regular appropriation bill is just equal to the budget.

Mr. NORRELL. That is correct.

Mr. WHITE. And if Mr. Straus made a mistake or committed an oversight, do you not think this House ought to correct that mistake through the deficiency bill?

Mr. NORRELL. I am not willing to admit that a mistake was made. All the subcommittees can do is to secure all available information and much of the evidence must come from the departments. The Anderson Ranch project was started in March 1942, and the total cost then was estimated by the Department of the Interior at $13,000,000. Expenditures to June 30, 1945, totaled $13,121,700. The total estimated cost now is $25,965,000; no collections have been made as yet. The Provo River project was started in June 1936, and the Department originally estimated the total costs would be $15,774,000. Up to June 30, 1946, we had actually spent on this project the sum of $9,777,503 and now the total estimated cost is $19,727,661. I do not know whether these are errors or not, but I must say, the increased cost is excessive. Not a cent has been collected from the water users and paid into the Treasury.

Mr. Speaker, I hope the motion of the gentleman from Missouri is sustained.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. TABER. Will the Speaker state for the information of the House what is pending now?

The SPEAKER. The pending question is the motion to recede and concur.

The Chair tried to put the motion for a division of the question, but the Members on either side did not vote on the question so the Chair declared that the question was not decided.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that the Speaker put the question on my preferential motion and that it carried.

The SPEAKER. The Chair tried to put the motion to recede, but Members did not vote on the question and, therefore, the Chair declared that there was no decision on the question. The Chair will put the question now if any Member insists.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I do.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House recede?

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

> Mr. CANNON of Missouri moves to concur with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amount named in line 9 of such amendment, insert "$806,260"; in lieu of the amount named in line 10 of such amendment, insert "$878,480"; in lieu of the amount named in line 11 of such amendment, insert "$1,684,740."

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. WHITE) there were—ayes 83, noes 5.

So the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 77: Page 54, line 8, insert: "The limitations under the appropriation 'Foreign Service quarters', fiscal year 1947, on the amounts which may be used for allowances for living quarters shall not apply to Foreign Service posts in Turkey, Switzerland, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Venezuela, and the Netherlands possessions. This provision shall be effective as of July 1, 1946."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. Speaker, this is in response to a situation which has developed in those five countries in which there is such a tremendous appreciation of currency that something must be done to relieve Foreign Service personnel serving therein.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the gentleman from Missouri.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 81: Page 57, line 24, strike out the remainder of line 24 after the word "act" and all of line 25, and on page 58, line 1, the words "to be replaced or rehabilitated."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur with an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CANNON of Missouri moves to recede and concur with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment, amended to read as follows: ", nor shall any part of this appropriation be available for expanding any public works project authorized by law to be replaced or rehabilitated beyond such as may be justified by sound engineering practice and which can be accomplished within the amount authorized to be appropriated."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, this amendment makes more specific the intent of the House provision as to the facilities involved, and permits expansion justified by sound engineering practice subject to previously established cost limits.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 86: Page 62, line 15, insert the following:

"FINANCE DEPARTMENT

"FINANCE SERVICE, ARMY

"Pay of the Army: The appropriation for 'Pay of the Army' in the Military Appropriation Act, 1947, is hereby made available to pay mustering-out payments, as authorized by the 'Mustering-Out Payment Act of 1944,' Public Law 225, Seventy-eighth Congress, second session, as amended, to members of the armed forces who were or may be denied such payments because they resigned from the Army to enter the United States Military Academy or the United States Naval Academy and subsequently left either of such Academies without completing the prescribed course."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a division of the motion.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the House recedes.

There was no objection.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to concur with an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. HINSHAW moves that the House concur in Senate amendment No. 86 with an amendment as follows: "Strike out all after the word 'subsequently' in line 1, page 63, and insert 'where separated from either Academy because of physical disability.'"

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, we all have great sympathy with the members of either of the Academies who were separated because of physical disabilities and who had come from either of the armed services and gone into the Academies by virtue of appointment or winning a competition for the Presidential appointments, and so forth and so on.

I believe this amendment was originally presented in the other body because one of the appointees of a Member of that body had served in the Battle of the Bulge. His feet had been seriously frozen, and it was not discovered until he afterward became a member of the Military Academy. He, of course, was discharged because of physical disability.

To provide for these cases I have moved to strike out the language after the word "subsequently" and insert in lieu thereof language providing for the payment of mustering-out pay to those who attended one of the Academies having come from the armed services and who were subsequently separated because of physical disability.

The reason I have suggested this amendment is because the language as it is presented in the Senate amendment reads "subsequently leave either of such Academies without completing a prescribed course" would include all who have been separated in the provisions of mustering-out pay, and there are a rather considerable number of young men who received appointments from Members of this House and who after VJ-day suddenly decided they did not want to be there any more, and who for one reason or other deliberately got themselves in condition to fail in their studies and consequently were let out—"bilged out" of one Academy, and I forget what they term it in the other. If those men subsequently went back into the armed services, then of course they would be entitled to mustering-out pay when they were discharged, but those who did not reenter the armed services do not have any sympathy from me for having accepted an appointment, passed the required examinations, and then after VJ-day either resign or fail in their studies purposely. I understand there were a considerable number of such failures, in fact, a sort of epidemic of such failures after VJ-day. Of course, no one can accuse these boys of having sought the Academy for any purpose other than military education, but there seems to be no reason why this epidemic of resignations and failures should receive too much consideration on the part of this body insofar as mustering-out pay is concerned.

I am perfectly willing, and I know you are, that this pay be given to those who were separated because of physical disability; but otherwise I think not.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HINSHAW. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee.

Mr. MAY. Would the gentleman's amendment make possible the payment to those who did resign after VJ-day or fail, or would it prohibit it?

Mr. HINSHAW. It would prohibit payment of mustering-out pay to those who either resign or fail in their studies. It would not prohibit mustering-out pay being paid to anyone who was discharged because of physical disability. They are the boys for whom I have the greatest sympathy, those who entered from the military service itself, and I think they are entitled to every consideration of this Congress.

I do not believe the committee will object to this motion to concur with an amendment. If there are no further questions I ask for a vote on the motion.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, the amendment offered by the gentleman from California better expresses the intent of the amendment. I agree that it is an improvement upon the Senate language and is in keeping with the views of the managers on the part of the House. The committee therefore accepts the amendment.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the motion is agreed to.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 119, page 86, line 16, insert as follows:

"Sec. 406. Subsection (a) of section 202 of the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1947, is hereby amended by striking therefrom the figures '$1,050' and substituting therefor the figures '$1,300'."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment. This is in response to the general rise in prices of all commodities and takes care of that situation.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 120, on page 86, line 20, insert as follows:

"Sec. 407. Wherever an appropriation for the fiscal year 1947 is made available for the purchase of passenger automobiles and such availability is specifically limited to used or surplus vehicles, such limitation is hereby repealed."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment. Prior provisions have limited purchase to surplus or used automobiles. There are no longer any surplus automobiles to be had and it is necessary to amend such former provisions of law.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 121: On page 87, line 1, strike out "406" and insert "408."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment. This is merely a perfecting amendment which changes a section number.

The motion was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider the votes by which action was taken on the several motions was laid on the table.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members who have spoken on the bill may have five legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

GRAND RIVER DAM PROJECT

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 5508) to authorize the return of the Grand River Dam project to the Grand River Dam Authority and the adjustment and settlement of accounts between the Authority and the United States, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment as follows:

Page 5, after line 3, insert:

"SEC. 6. The Administrator of the Federal Works Agency or his successor in interest is hereby authorized to reduce the rate of interest to 2½ per centum on all power bonds held by such Agency issued by States, public authorities, counties, municipalities, and other subdivisions of State governments for power projects financed by the Public Works Administration."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain what this amendment is?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, this bill was passed unanimously by the House and provided for the return of the Grand River Dam project to the Grand River Authority which dam project was taken over under the War Powers Act and operated by the Southwestern Power Authority. This project was constructed by the Authority created under the laws of the State of Oklahoma. It is a public power project, constructed with Federal funds under the Public Works Administration. There was provided, among other things, for the reduction of the rate of interest from 4 to 2½ percent. In the other body an amendment was inserted providing for the same reduction in the rate of interest on some three projects in Nebraska of similar nature and one project in South Carolina. The Public Works Agency has advised me that the amendment is agreeable, so has the Secretary of the Interior. I have taken the amendment up with the ranking minority member of the Committee on Flood Control, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CLASON], and it is agreeable to him.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. This simply equalizes the projects in Oklahoma, Nebraska, and South Carolina?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Yes. It only covers these power projects and equalizes the rate of interest.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. What will be the interest rate?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Two and a half percent as against four at the present time.

Mr. STEFAN. It was 5 percent, was it not?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. No. It is 4 percent at present, according to the Public Works Agency.

Mr. STEFAN. It could have been 5.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. This reduces it to 2½ percent.

Mr. RIVERS. This will save the power users of my State a considerable amount of money.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Yes. It will reduce the rate of interest from 4 to 2½ percent on the loans on said projects in the three States mentioned.

Mr. RIVERS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. RIVERS. Mr. Speaker, I am convinced that the House should agree to pass the amendment submitted by Senator JOHNSTON authorizing the Federal Works Administrator, or his successor, to reduce the interest rate from 4 percent to 2½ percent on all power bonds held by such agency issued by States, counties, municipalities and other subdivisions of State governments for power projects financed by the Public Works Administration.

In my own district, this would enable the South Carolina Public Service Authority which operates the great Santee-Cooper hydroelectric and navigation system, to pass on to the people of South Carolina a saving, in interest alone, exceeding $600,000.

In my opinion, this will be a great thing, not only for the State of South Carolina but for the country as a whole.

Today, money can be borrowed from banks at a rate of interest as low as 2½ percent. It is eminently fitting that the Government should follow the lead of private enterprise. We are living in a day of inflationary values and money is easily accessible. It follows, therefore, that the Government should pass on to the people the advantages to be gained by a low rate of interest.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SHORT asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances and include certain excerpts from magazines and newspapers.

Mr. KNUTSON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial.

Mr. DAVIS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an address.

Mr. SCHWABE of Oklahoma asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include two letters.

Mr. ROCKWELL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an item.

Mr. CARNAHAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an article by C. P. Turley from the July 11, 1946, issue of the Current Local, Van Buren, Mo.

Mr. BUNKER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an article on mining.

DEVELOPMENT AND CONTROL OF ATOMIC ENERGY

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (S. 1717) for the development and control of atomic energy.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently a quorum is not present. Without objection a call of the House is ordered.

There was no objection.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 227]

Allen, Ill.	Gillespie	Monroney
Allen, La.	Gossett	Norton
Anderson, Calif.	Granger	O'Toole
Andrews, N. Y.	Gross	Patrick
Arnold	Hart	Peterson, Ga.
Baldwin, Md.	Hébert	Pfeifer
Bates, Ky.	Holifield	Powell
Beckworth	Holmes, Wash.	Priest
Boren	Hook	Reece, Tenn.
Boykin	Izac	Robinson, Utah
Buffett	Jennings	Roe, Md.
Cannon, Fla.	Johnson, Okla.	Roe, N. Y.
Cochran	Johnson, Tex.	Slaughter
Coffee	Keogh	Sparkman
Cole, Kans.	Kerr	Stewart
Combs	Kilday	Talbot
Cooper	LaFollette	Tarver
Courtney	Ludlow	Tolan
Cox	McGehee	Torrens
Cravens	McMillan, S. C.	Vinson
Crawford	Mahon	Welch
Curley	Mankin	West
Daughton, Va.	Mansfield, Mont.	Wickersham
De Lacy	Mansfield, Tex.	Wigglesworth
Earthman	Mason	Wolfenden, Pa.
Engel, Mich.	Miller, Calif.	Wood
Gibson

The SPEAKER. On this roll call 352 Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

By unanimous consent, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

ATOMIC ENERGY ACT OF 1946

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Kentucky.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (S. 1717) for the development and control of atomic energy, with Mr. JOHN J. DELANEY in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I understand the reading of the bill was completed to and including all of section 5. May I inquire whether the committee amendments were agreed to?

The CHAIRMAN. The reading was completed down to page 23, line 15. The Chair may say for the information of the gentleman that all committee amendments were adopted.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I take the floor at this time to propound an inquiry or two of the committee in connection with the prohibition on page 15, line 15. It is stated there:

It shall be unlawful for any person after 60 days from the effective date of this act to * * * (c) directly or indirectly engage in the production of any fissionable material outside of the United States.

How are you going to prevent any one from producing such material outside the United States? I would like to ask that question of the committee.

Mr. MAY. I would like to answer the gentleman by saying that is a Senate provision that was in the bill when we received it, and the committee merely left it in the bill.

Mr. HINSHAW. That is not an answer. How in the world can you prevent anybody from manufacturing or engaging in the production of any fissionable material outside of the United States?

Mr. MAY. I will answer the gentleman directly by saying this Government has no jurisdiction outside of its own territory except in its possessions, and they are outside of the United States. That provision was likely put in there to enable this Commission to control the production of these materials and the handling of them in our territories. There is Alaska, for instance.

Mr. HINSHAW. That is not outside of the territorial definition of the United States as set forth on page 43 of the bill.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. As a matter of fact, the gentleman has put his finger on the futility of the whole bill. That is the assumption of placing the production of fissionable material in the United States under control and the use of that under control. That will have no effect on what happens outside of the United States. I think that this shows the futility of this bill until some international agreement is arrived at.

Mr. HINSHAW. Now let us refer to page 16, line 25, where it is stated:

The Commission is authorized to purchase or otherwise acquire any fissionable material or any interest therein outside the United States, or any interest in facilities for the production of fissionable material, or in real property on which such facilities are located.

And so forth. The last sentence of that subsection reads:

The Commission is further authorized to take, requisition, or condemn, or otherwise acquire any interest in such facilities or real property, and just compensation shall be made therefor.

I would like to know how the Commission can condemn an interest in any property outside the United States?

Mr. MAY. This merely provides that it may purchase.

Mr. HINSHAW. It provides for condemnation.

Mr. MAY. Where is the gentleman reading?

Mr. HINSHAW. The word "condemn" appears in line 11, page 17.

Mr. MAY. Line 11, page 17:

The Commission is authorized to take, requisition, or condemn, or otherwise acquire any interest in such facilities or real property, and just compensation shall be made therefor.

Mr. HINSHAW. I would like to know how you can do that outside the United States, and I merely asked for this time in order to call the attention of the membership to some of these things. I do not care whether the Senate put them in or who put them in.

Mr. MAY. I did not say that. I said it was the Senate that put it in, and it probably relates to the materials that they acquire in the United States.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, I would like to reiterate that the answers of the committee on a great many questions that have been asked here have necessarily been probabilities rather than facts, because I do not believe that either the committee or this House understands the import of this bill.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HINSHAW. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SHORT. Of course, we all know that there are many things going on at this hour in foreign lands that none of us know anything about because of the strict censorship that other countries have.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

MILITARY APPLICATIONS OF ATOMIC ENERGY

SEC. 6. (a) Authority: The Commission is authorized to—

(1) conduct experiments and do research and development work in the military application of atomic energy; and

(2) engage in the production of atomic bombs, atomic-bomb parts, or other military weapons utilizing fissionable materials; except that such activities shall be carried on only to the extent that the express consent and direction of the President of the United States has been obtained, which consent and direction shall be obtained at least once each year.

The President from time to time may direct the Commission to deliver such quantities of weapons to the armed forces for such use as he deems necessary in the interest of national defense.

(b) Prohibition: It shall be unlawful for any person to manufacture, produce, transfer, or acquire any equipment or device utilizing fissionable material or atomic energy as a military weapon, except as may be authorized by the Commission. Nothing in this subsection shall be deemed to modify the provisions of section 4 of this act, or to prohibit research activities in respect of military weapons, or to permit the export of any such equipment or device.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 24, line 6, after the word "of", insert "fissionable materials or."

Page 24, line 8, after the word "defense", insert "or (2) to authorize the armed forces to manufacture, produce, or acquire any equipment or device utilizing fissionable material or atomic energy as a military weapon."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, here is another provision in the bill which is an anomaly. The committee amendment on page 24, line 8, reads:

to authorize the armed forces to manufacture, produce, or acquire any equipment or device utilizing fissionable material or atomic energy as a military weapon.

If you will then turn to page 28, line 20, you will find this language:

The President shall direct the transfer to the Commission of all interests owned by the United States or any Government agency in the following property:

(1) All fissionable materials; all atomic weapons and parts thereof; all facilities, equipment, and materials for the processing, production, or utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy—

I would like to know how you can in one place authorize or direct the Commission to deliver quantities of fissionable material, and then authorize the armed forces to manufacture, produce or acquire equipment, when in section 9 you say that the President shall direct the transfer to the Commission of all interests owned by the United States or any Government agency in all of this property.

Can anybody on the committee answer that question?

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HINSHAW. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. The gentleman knows that I am opposed to this bill, and I shall vote to recommit the bill.

Mr. HINSHAW. I assume that is the case from the gentleman's previous remarks.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. So my answer may not be a complete answer to the gentleman's question, but all the way through in the deliberations of the committee the committee members asked questions about the bill, just as we are asking questions today, and the more questions you ask the more confused you are going to be and the more confused this House is going to be, so therefore that is one of the main reasons I am going to vote against this particular bill.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HINSHAW. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky, the Chairman, if he has an answer to the question.

Mr. MAY. Yes; I will answer it for the gentleman. Under section 9 of the bill, which requires the turning over of property to the Commission, which becomes effective on the date of enactment and approval of the bill. As to the provision in line 8 down to and including line 11 on page 24, it becomes effective thereafter and provides that the Commission may authorize the armed forces to manufacture atomic weapons as they see fit.

Mr. HINSHAW. No. It says that the President may direct the Commission to authorize, and on page 28 it says that the President shall direct the transfer of all interests owned by the United States, in any material and any machinery and any weapons, to the Commission. Those two sections are not compatible, if I can read the English language.

Mr. MAY. The gentleman is not opposed to a provision in the bill which would authorize the Commission to give the armed forces the right to manufacture atomic weapons after the Commission takes over the property, Oak Ridge, for instance? If they want to manufacture them, does not the gentleman think the Commisssion ought to let them do it?

Mr. HINSHAW. As I say, section 9 directs the President to transfer, and then the bill states at other places that when so transferred this property comes under the full and complete ownership of the Commission. The proposed committee amendment then states that the President may direct the Commission to authorize the armed forces to manufacture them. How can they do that if they cannot own any of the equipment? I should like to know that.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HINSHAW. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. ELSTON. May I tell the gentleman how this particular committee amendment happened to be adopted? In reading this bill, some of us made the point that everything was transferred to the Commission. The Army and the Navy would not even have the right to manufacture atomic weapons of any kind except with the consent of the Commission. We felt that the manufacture of atomic weapons or any other kind of weapons is a function of the War and Navy Departments which should not be interfered with by any civilian commission. We were insisting that the services be given the right to go ahead with the manufacture of weapons without any order or license from the Commission. The committee amendment, which was offered I believe by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILDAY], was simply a compromise, and in my judgment is just about as confusing as about everything else in this bill, which is another reason why the bill should be recommitted for further study.

Mr. HINSHAW. If you put in the bill this amendment on page 24, on page 28 in some location you will have to put in a proviso that will exempt that material and those facilities that are transferred back to the War Department for the manufacture of this material from the direction that the bill contains, which is that the President shall direct the transfer.

Mr. DOYLE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HINSHAW. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DOYLE. Answering the gentleman's question, there is nothing inconsistent between this language and the language in lines 20 and 21 in section 9, because the language in line 5 of page 24, to which the gentleman refers, states that the President from time to time may direct the Commission. That language does not compel the President of the United States to authorize the armed forces to manufacture, it merely makes it optional. So this amendment, subdivision (2), on which we are now voting, is subject to an option expressly given in line 5. It is optional with the President of the United States after he gets control under section 9 as to whether or not he desires to authorize the armed forces.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for three additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. HINSHAW. I appreciate the gentleman's remarks, but elsewhere in the bill it states quite clearly that when these transfers are once made to the Commission the Commission is vested with all right, title, and interest to, in full and complete ownership of, all of this material and facilities and all of the atomic weapons. In section 9 not only do you direct the transfer to the Commission of all of the material, the facilities, and the equipment, but the Commission will then have the full and complete ownership of all the bombs that have heretofore been manufactured and the military will have nothing to say about it.

Mr. MAY. That is the purpose of this amendment, to make it possible for the military department to manufacture them.

Mr. HINSHAW. I again suggest that if we are going to do that we had better amend section 9 in such a way as to permit the transfer of the bombs back to that department.

Mr. MAY. We are not through that section yet.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HINSHAW. I yield.

Mr. DONDERO. In reading the hearings I can find no reference to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Can anybody tell why?

Mr. HINSHAW. That is a little bit off this subject.

Mr. DONDERO. It has application to this bill.

Mr. HINSHAW. I know that, but I would rather that the gentleman talk on that subject on his own time.

Mr. CLASON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HINSHAW. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. CLASON. Yesterday I pointed out in connection with an amendment which I offered, which is on page 9381 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, that the Army and Navy are today spending millions of dollars on a program which permits them to carry on research and discovery in the field of atomic energy. Apparently my amendment was offered for the same purpose as the one offered by the committee except, I believe, the committee amendment is much more restricted in scope.

Mr. HINSHAW. Section 8, dealing with international arrangements, makes it mandatory upon the Commission as soon as an international arrangement is entered into to transfer to the international authority all of this material and facilities and bombs and everything else that the international authority may want. I would like to know how after that happens you are going to be able to authorize the armed forces to manufacture anything. You are not going to be able to do it. There is no sense having that amendment in the bill at all because the international authority will control the entire program from stem to stern and you will have located in the United States and elsewhere in the world international extraterritorial localities, if you want to call them that, where this manufacturing and so forth is to be carried on. That is a very serious question. I think it deserves the serious consideration of the Committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I would agree with those Members who have indicated that the bill would be confusing if the committee amendment were added to it. I think I understand quite clearly what the bill would mean if the committee amendment were not adopted. I would like to read this language as the Senate wrote it:

> The President may from time to time direct the Commission to deliver such quantities of weapons to the armed forces for such use as he deems necessary in the interests of national defense.

The principle of the bill as it came to us from the Senate was briefly that atomic-energy development was to be concentrated in the hands of the Commission. It was assumed that this Commission would be composed of the very best and most patriotic people in the whole Nation. It was assumed that they would handle this most dangerous and important problem and material that has ever faced this country with the degree of care and concern for the interests of this Nation that it demands. Anticipating, perhaps, what the gentleman from Michigan may have had in mind when he arose and mentioned the Federal Bureau of Investigation, may I say to him that so far as I am concerned I should be perfectly glad to support provisions in this bill providing for FBI investigation of persons who shall have any part in this work. It seems to me, however, what this proposed committee amendment which we are now considering will actually do, briefly, is this: The bill as originally brought to us provides unquestionably for the power of the President to decide how many atomic bombs shall be manufactured, at what time they shall be manufactured, whether or not they shall be manufactured, and to tell this Commission through its Division of Military Application to make that number of bombs and deliver them to the armed forces.

Obviously, the bombs are going to have to be made by scientists if they are made at all. They will be made in the Division of Military Application, under the terms of the original bill. The committee amendment will only mean, if I understand its meaning at all, that we will set up two places for the making of atomic bombs. On the one hand, they will be manufactured by the Division of Military Application of the Commission, and, on the other hand, if the President happens to decide to do it, the armed forces, the Army or the Navy, or both, may themselves set up new Oak Ridges or new something else and make them there.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Let me yield to my colleague from California because he has asked me three times.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I think subdivision 2 on page 24 means that the Army and Navy shall have the right to requisition the property of the Commission and make various kinds of atomic weapons. That is all it means. The property to make weapons and the machinery belongs to the commission, and the armed forces can requisition those and make them in an arensal or any other place. In other words, there are two places you can make them under this provision, as the gentleman said.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. That is what it seems to me, but it does not seem to me that that is the wise and orderly way to go about the matter.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield.

Mr. MAY. I think the gentleman has overlooked one important feature of the discussion here. Beginning in line 5 on page 24, it says:

> The President from time to time may direct the Commission (1) to deliver such quantities of materials or weapons to the armed forces for such use as he deems necessary in the interest of national defense, or (2) to authorize the armed forces to manufacture, produce, or acquire any equipment or device utilizing fissionable material.

What is wrong with the Commission's determining whether they will do it or the armed forces do it?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Of course, this would provide, as the gentleman suggests, that it might be done by the Division of Military Application of the Commission or it might be done elsewhere. It seems to me this work ought to be concentrated in one organization.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. VOORHIS] has expired.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

There was no objection.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. I am troubled by this committee amendment, because in placing in the hands of the War Department the power to manufacture bombs, it must, of course, be given over to private industry, and it cannot be given to small industry, it must be given to large industry. I fear the control of those, due to the fact that it might be that those large industries would make deals and cartels with other countries that would be detrimental to the safety of our own country. I would like to have the gentleman's opinion on that.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. My opinion of that is that so long as this process of manufacture is handled under the terms of the bill as written, I do not have the fear that what the gentleman postulates will happen. I believe it might well be that the Commission or the armed forces might want to contract for some of this production. I think that might well happen. I would not object to that being done. The thing I am fearful of—and I do not want to speak about it now because I have no doubt there will be full discussion of it later—but I am fearful that if we permit the private patenting of atomic energy, the thing the gentleman mentioned will happen. But I do not think it is involved in this particular question.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. BROOKS. Further in reference to the subject discussed by the gentleman from California [Mr. JOHNSON] who preceded you, regarding the apparent conflict in two sections of the act, I want to say this:

The section to which he referred on page 24 deals entirely with the material application of atomic energy whereas the subsequent section which he felt conflicted with the military application section deals entirely with the ownership of the property of the Commission. To hold that that particular phrase to which the gentleman refers conflicts with the section on the property of the Commission would in effect hold that the entire section dealing with military application conflicts with the section on ownership of the property by the Commission. That is not an argument that is tenable, because they do not conflict. They are separate and stand on their own feet.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I am much obliged to the gentleman.

In conclusion may I say that the Chief of Staff of the Army and the Secretaries of War and the Navy have expressed their satisfaction with this bill from the point of view of its guarding the military interests of this Nation.

The most important thing that the bill will do will be to assure the continued development of the military applications. That is the thing that really counts much more than the manufacture of bombs; that is the vital thing. I am for continuing that military development under present circumstances; and until an international agreement and control that we have talked about so much is finally effected.

I believe all decisions with regard to what is going to be done under this bill should be made at the very highest level in our Government, that is, the President of the United States. I think that is where they should all be made. This legislation is written from the point of view of trying to make this thing a unified proposition so that the American program with regard to it will be so well coordinated as to make possible effective hope at least of getting the international control upon which the future hope of peace really rests. These are the reasons it would seem to me reasonable to leave the bill as it was before and why the committee amendment should be defeated.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has again expired.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a vote on the committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. THOMASON) there were—ayes 63, noes 38.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chair appointed as tellers Mr. MAY and Mr. SHORT.

The committee divided; and the tellers were unable to agree on the count.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Chair will direct that the vote by tellers be taken over.

There was no objection.

The Chair appointed as tellers Mr. THOMASON and Mr. SHORT.

The Committee again divided, and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 102, noes 72.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: On page 24, line 13, after the comma insert "except as provided in section 6 (a)."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

UTILIZATION OF ATOMIC ENERGY

SEC. 7. (a) License required: It shall be unlawful, except as provided in sections 5 (a) (4) (A) or (B) or 6 (a), for any person to manufacture, produce, or export any equipment or device utilizing fissionable material or atomic energy or to utilize fissionable material or atomic energy with or without such equipment or device, except under and in accordance with a license issued by the Commission authorizing such manufacture, production, export, or utilization. No license may permit any such activity if fissionable material is produced incident to such activity, except as provided in sections 3 and 4. Nothing in this section shall be deemed to require a license for the conduct of research or development activities relating to the manufacture of such equipment or devices or the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy, or for the manufacture or use of equipment or devices for medical therapy.

(b) Report to Congress: Whenever in its opinion any industrial, commercial, or other nonmilitary use of fissionable material or atomic energy has been sufficiently developed to be of practical value, the Commission shall prepare a report to the President stating all the facts with respect to such use, the Commission's estimate of the social, political economic, and international effects of such use and the Commission's recommendations for necessary or desirable supplemental legislation. The President shall then transmit this report to the Congress together with his recommendations. No license for any manufacture, production, export, or use shall be issued by the Commission under this section until after (1) a report with respect to such manufacture, production, export, or use has been filed with the Congress; and (2) a period of 90 days in which the Congress was in session has elapsed after the report has been so filed. In computing such period of 90 days, there shall be excluded the days on which either House is not in session because of an adjournment of more than 3 days.

(c) Issuance of licenses: After such 90-day period, unless hereafter prohibited by law, the Commission may license such manufacture, production, export, or use in accordance with such procedures and subject to such conditions as it may by regulation establish to effectuate the provisions of this act. The Commission is authorized and directed to issue licenses on a nonexclusive basis and to supply to the extent available appropriate quantities of fissionable material to licensees (1) whose proposed activities will serve some useful purpose proportionate to the quantities of fissionable material to be consumed; (2) who are equipped to observe such safety standards to protect health and to minimize danger from explosion or other hazard to life or property as the Commission may establish; and (3) who agree to make available to the Commission such technical information and data concerning their activities pursuant to such licenses as the Commission may determine necessary to encourage similar activities by as many licensees as possible. Each such license shall be issued for a specified period, not to exceed 1 year, shall be revocable at any time by the Commission in accordance with such procedures as the Commission may establish, and may be renewed upon the expiration of such period. Where activities under any license might serve to maintain or to foster the growth of monopoly, restraint of trade, unlawful competition, or other trade position inimical to the entry of new, freely competitive enterprises in the field, the Commission is authorized and directed to refuse to issue such license or to establish such conditions to prevent these results as the Commission, in consultation with the Attorney General, may determine. The Commission shall report promptly to the Attorney General any information it may have with respect to any utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy which appears to have these results. No license may be given to any person for activities which are not under or within the jurisdiction of the United States to any foreign government.

(d) Byproduct power: If energy which may be utilized is produced in the production of fissionable material, such energy may be used by the Commission, transferred to other Government agencies, or sold to public or private utilities under contracts providing for reasonable resale prices.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 27, line 3, strike out "to exceed" and insert "less than."

Page 27, line 19, strike out "States or" and insert "States."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 27, line 20, after the comma insert "or to persons within the jurisdiction of the United States where the issuance thereof would be inimical to the common defense and security."

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute for the committtee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MAY as a substitute for the committee amendment: On page 27, line 20, before the period insert the following: "or to any person within the United States if in the opinion of the Commission the issuance of a license to such person would be inimical to the common defense and security."

The substitute for the committee amendment was agreed to.

The committee amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. CLASON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I merely wish to point out that the last amendment over which we had a dispute and which was approved by our votes put into the bill an amendment which in effect I offered yesterday and which was rejected. I believe it is important because it will give to the armed forces through an order of the President an opportunity to carry on the very important research and development work they are now carrying on prior to the passage of this bill.

Another proposition which indicates to me how confused we are in connection with legislation today is the situation with reference to our postal employees. They are without their pay because we cannot figure out what the price of silver should be. This bill here gets all balled up because of a lot of little mix-ups between the Department of the Interior, the military departments, and all the other departments of the Government. I sincerely hope that during the course of the day not only will this committee straighten out this bill but the Committee on Appropriations will be able to bring in here a bill which will permit our postal employees to get their pay. The postal employees should not be penalized by the dispute over the price of silver now raging in the Treasury Department. They need their pay for their families, for their food, and for their vacations. In this case the Treasury Department is balling up the orderly processes of the Post Office Department.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I note in this section subparagraph (d), entitled "Byproduct Power." It reads:

If energy which may be utilized is produced in the production of fissionable material, such energy may be used by the Commission, transferred to other Government agencies, or sold to public or private utilities under contracts providing for reasonable resale prices.

Now, I have been trying to find out what that means. Is there anybody on this committee who can tell us what that means?

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. If the gentleman would yield, I would like to answer the question.

Mr. KEEFE. I will yield to the gentleman in just a moment.

I get a little inkling as to what it means by reading the preface contained in the Report on the International Control of Atomic Energy prepared for the committee of the Secretary of State which I have before me. To show you how simple and easy this situation is, let me read it to you:

It is impossible to maintain a chain reaction in a mass of ordinary uranium. The neutrons which result from the fission of uranium 235 are captured by the much more abundant uranium 238 before they can get to another uranium 235 nucleus and the chain is therefore broken. However, by an adroit arrangement of ordinary uranium in the form of a lattice, imbedded in an inert material with respect to neutron capture like carbon, the neutrons can be slowed down and preferentially captured by uranium 235 to maintain the chain reaction.

Now, here is what happens:

In this way ordinary uranium can be used to maintain a chain reaction. A device of this sort is called a pile or a nuclear reactor. Since a large fraction of the neutrons in the reactor are captured by uranium 238, plutonium is a byproduct of the operation of the reactor. Another byproduct is the enormous amount of heat energy released by the fission process. A third byproduct is a large variety of highly radioactive materials which are the fission fragments or the result of neutron capture by materials inserted in the reactor.

Now we have indicated here in this section that the so-called byproduct powers that I have just described may be used by the Commission and transferred to other Government agencies or sold to public or private utilities under contracts providing for a reasonable retail price. Just so that the public and the Congress will know and understand when this bill passes and becomes operative and your constituents should certainly understand that they will perhaps have an opportunity to buy as byproducts from this Commission highly radioactive materials which are fission fragments as the result of neutrons captured by materials inserted in the reactor, it demonstrates to me so far as I am concerned, and I think most of the Members of this House are concerned, that we are going over this legislation without any very clear comprehension as to just exactly what may be involved. I conceive that possibly in this process there may be the development of heat as another byproduct. There may be developed electricity as another byproduct. I call it to the attention of the Congress in order that we may know and may have in the RECORD a very clear and definite understanding as to what we are legislating on today.

I now yield to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HARNESS].

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. A few moments ago I wanted to make an observation that that was only one of the many reasons why this legislation should go back to the committee.

Mr. KEEFE. Well, that may be a compelling reason.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KEEFE] has raised an important question on which I think I can at least say one thing that will be of interest.

At the atomic-energy plant in the State of Washington there is at the present time a considerable amount of this byproduct energy, that the gentleman described when he read the report, that is being produced and wasted into the Columbia River. The fact of the matter is that the temperature of that great stream is being considerably raised. There exists the possibility that that byproduct energy might indeed be sold to some public body or some private agency for some useful purpose, on condition that since it is generated with public funds it should be resold at a fair price. That happens to be a problem right now and for want of legislation like this a great waste is going on. I take it that is why it is in the bill.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield.

Mr. KEEFE. Does the gentleman understand that in this process there might be electricity developed as a byproduct of the process?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I understand, as fully as one man's completely inadequate mind can understand it, that there are those possibilities with regard to this matter. My main concern, as far as the domestic application of peacetime uses is concerned, is that they shall be under such circumstances as to spread the benefits as broadly as possible throughout the Nation, and to give all elements in the population and all elements in business, as nearly as possible, an equal chance.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. VOORHIS] has expired.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, I regard paragraph (d) of the bill, as found on pages 27–28, a wise provision. Whoever wrote this bill, S. 1717, must have become very well acquainted with the processes thus far used in placing in human hands atomic power. I understand that there are several exceedingly valuable byproducts in the manufacture of atomic bombs. We have heard suggested that we probably have only slight conception of the great value for medicine of radioactive material.

Probably in the field of power, or in heat, there is likewise a tremendous byproduct of the process. If electric power can be produced as a byproduct in the manufacture of fissionable material, which in itself also has great peacetime utility and value, it is easily conceivable that great quantities of heat or electricity can be produced very cheaply. If such is the case, whoever has control of the processes should see to it that society gets the benefit, through lowered rates. Society has already paid a great financial price and ought to enjoy financial benefits.

The Clerk read as follows:

INTERNATIONAL ARRANGEMENTS

SEC. 8. (a) Definition: As used in this act, the term "international arrangement" shall mean any treaty approved by the Senate or international agreement approved by the Congress, during the time such treaty or agreement is in full force and effect.

(b) Effect of international arrangements: Any provision of this act or any action of the Commission to the extent that it conflicts with the provisions of any international arrangement made after the date of enactment of this act shall be deemed to be of no further force or effect.

(c) Policies contained in international arrangements: In the performance of its functions under this act, the Commission shall give maximum effect to the policies contained in any such international arrangement.

With the following committee amendment:

On page 28, line 7, after the word "agreement", insert the word "hereafter."

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, I ask for recognition on the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to inquire of the chairman of the committee why it was that they limited the international agreements to those which might "hereafter" be approved by Congress. Are there some agreements that have already been approved that require the insertion of this word "hereafter"?

Mr. MAY. The intention was to be all-inclusive, so that it would include not only those that have already been approved but any that may hereafter be approved.

Mr. HINSHAW. No. I believe the gentleman is mistaken. By the insertion of this word "hereafter," you are approving all of those treaties that have been heretofore as well as those hereafter approved by the Senate, but you are limiting the international agreements approved by Congress to only those which are hereafter approved. I wonder if there has been some agreement that has been heretofore approved in this connection that I do not know about.

Mr. MAY. There is none that I know of. It is simply to take care of any that might be made.

Mr. HINSHAW. I would like to call attention to the fact that this section 8 remaining in the bill is an authorization, in advance of any treaty that might be made, to carry out the provisions of any such treaty and give maximum effect to any policies contained in such arrangement. In other words, that would almost constitute a blank check to the Commission in connection with any arrangement of international character that might hereafter be made. You should understand in giving this your approval that it can be a treaty approved by two-thirds of the Senate, without regard to the House of Representatives, in which case, of course, the House would not have anything further to say on this subject. Or it can be an international agreement approved by both bodies and I assume a majority vote in both bodies.

This section 8 is the kernel of the nut in this bill. It is the section which provides that all properties, materials, real estate, and everything else in the United States under the jurisdiction of the United States Atomic Energy Commission may be transferred to the international authority upon the conclusion of the international agreement.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HINSHAW. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Is not that the rule that pertains now, that a treaty is the supreme law of the land and it modifies all laws that may conflict with it?

Mr. HINSHAW. There is no treaty that I know of that would authorize the turning over to an international authority of real property of the United States within the United States boundaries.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. How does the gentleman know they are going to have one like that? The gentleman is just assuming that.

Mr. HINSHAW. I am assuming that after this bill becomes law with that language in it and you should want to strike that out of section 8, it would be subject to a veto and it would take a two-thirds vote in both Houses to override the veto.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. What the gentleman is talking about is the rule now in the case of international agreements. This does not change any rules.

Mr. HINSHAW. This authorizes in advance something that is not already done.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 28, line 19:

PROPERTY OF THE COMMISSION

SEC. 9. (a) The President shall direct the transfer to the Commission of all interests owned by the United States or any Government agency in the following property:

(1) All fissionable material; all atomic weapons and parts thereof; all facilities, equipment, and materials for the processing, production, or utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy; all processes and technical information of any kind, and the source thereof (including data, drawings, specifications, patents, patent applications, and other sources) relating to the processing, production, or utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy; and all contracts, agreements, leases, patents, applications for patents, inventions and discoveries (whether patented or unpatented), and other rights of any kind concerning any such items;

(2) All facilities, equipment, and materials, devoted primarily to atomic energy research and development; and

(3) Such other property owned by or in the custody or control of the Manhattan Engineer District or other Government agencies as the President may determine.

(b) In order to render financial assistance to those States and localities in which the activities of the Commission are carried on and in which the Commission has acquired property previously subject to State and local taxation, the Commission is authorized to make payments to State and local governments in lieu of property taxes. Such payments may be in the amounts, at the times, and upon the terms the Commission deems appropriate, but the Commission shall be guided by the policy of not making payments in excess of the taxes which would have been payable for such property in the condition in which it was acquired, except in cases where special burdens have been cast upon the State or local government by activities of the Commission, the Manhattan engineer district or their agents. In any such case, any benefit accruing to the State or local government by reason of such activities shall be considered in determining the amount of the payment. The Commission, and the property, activities, and income of the Commission, are hereby expressly exempted from taxation in any manner or form by any State, county, municipality, or any subdivision thereof.

Mrs. LUCE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, there is hardly an hour, certainly not a day, that I do not learn some new and frightening fact concerning atomic energy.

The gentleman from Wisconsin pointed out to you that the Lilienthal or State Department report indicated that it would only be a question of time before atomic energy installations could be used to generate heat and electrical power. As a matter of fact the report goes on to say that these installations may be put into operation in the very near future, and, I quote, "only the gradual incorporation and adaptation of such units to the specific demands of contemporary economy will involve a protracted development." This translated into plain English means that the only thing the Commission formed under the bill will need to determine is how long it will take Government monopoly heat and electricity to put private heat and electricity out of business, without unduly upsetting the folks.

But now here is an amusing idea which occurred to me as a result of a conversation that I had in the lobby with my great good friend, Dr. JUDD, the gentleman from Minnesota, who is certainly a scientific expert in the field of radioactive materials. He told me—and I do not know whether he is on the floor, but if he is I hope he will correct the remark if I got it wrong—that he said in his speech on the floor of the House yesterday, which I have not yet had the time to study, that radioactive energy, used on human germ cells, may be used to mutate the species, and that it was radioactive energy which was probably responsible, at history's dawn, for such sports and biological monsters as dinosaurs, and, was itself the mysterious instrument God used to create the creature, man. In those days only God knew how to mutate animal species. The secret may now be man's.

Now, evidently the gentleman from Minnesota, Dr. JUDD, suggests radioactive energy may eventually be used to breed a new species: a superman godlike creature, or perhaps a monster; at any rate, operating on the germ cells it could be used to bring forth out of man as we know him now an indeterminate quantity of legs, arms, ears and eyes, if a careless user of this should feel so disposed, or if a lot of the stuff got loose on the premises.

I suddenly imagined myself many years from now confronted by a commission that had gotten rather bored, as well it might, with the follies and futilities of man, or even with the stubborn unwillingness of the common Congressman to vote away his liberties; and the commission decided that the time had come to mutate the species, the male species of course—because when they got around to mutating the female of the species they would surely make them all Lana Turners; but as far as the stubborn male species are concerned they might decide the time had come to treat human beings with these radioactive particles in order to get a new type with a very large head, one eye, one ear bent permanently to hold a telephone, one armed, with only a forefinger and thumb for signing documents and checks, no legs and an anatomy constructed to fit most comfortably into a swivel chair. In other words, they might decide to make a new species—the Bureaucrats.

I consider this a very dangerous idea, but in order not to leave the matter on this humorous plane, I ask my colleague, Mr. JUDD if he will explain to the House the truly scientific aspects of the mutation of the species with atomic energy as he explained them to me earlier. And, although I speak entirely in fun, I think this question of the terrible dangers inherent in radioactive energy is, in all seriousness, a further great argument for the need of civilian control for the next years, and another reason for voting for this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentlewoman from Connecticut has expired.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I am definitely delighted with my membership on the Committee on Agriculture. On that committee we have not discussed such technical subjects as atomic energy. Certainly, we have not discussed subjects as technical as the subject which has been discussed by the lady from Connecticut and the doctor from Minnesota. Frankly, I think we ought to forget that discussion and leave it right where it is.

Mr. Chairman, I have never seen this House in such an atmosphere of uncertainty and indecision. I agree with the lady from Connecticut that we seem to learn something new every hour about radioactivity and atomic energy, but, apparently, the more we talk about these things the more we are confused. The very distinguished and learned gentleman from Missouri admitted frankly that he was confused and after his very fine speech he said that he was going to take his seat and listen to the debate, in the hope that it would aid him in making up his mind. I know that the distinguished lady and distinguished doctor are confused, and I believe that most of us are confused.

It seems to me that when we consider the whole subject we are in a rather ridiculous position. According to the gentleman from Wisconsin, we are now providing for the sale of this new and mysterious power to our constituents. If this new discovery possesses the potentialities and possibilities indicated by the lady from Connecticut, I certainly do not want any of it sold down in the Fourth Congressional District of North Carolina.

As I said yesterday, I am anxious, yes, most anxious, for the secrets of atomic energy to be controlled and carefully guarded. I do not think that it is necessary for us to take anyone else into our confidence in our efforts to keep better and guard the secret which has been pretty well guarded up to this moment. I am at a loss to understand why there seems to be such controversy over, and such lack of confidence in, our military men. We certainly know that the members of our armed forces are true, patriotic Americans, and they would do nothing to jeopardize or to imperil the safety of our country. When members of the committee have been asked why they object to military men being placed on this committee, they say that they object to it because it is a violation of the traditions of America for military men to participate in the deliberations of any committee within the civil branch of our Government. It seems to me that is a very, very, weak argument. We are dealing with something about which there are no traditions. We know nothing about atomic power. We know that it has not yet been perfected for military purposes. We are now in the experimental stage. We are still experimenting with the atomic bomb in Bikini. We know what the effect of the atomic bomb is because we have seen its results at Hiroshimo and Nagasaki. Why can we not rest easy and let the development of atomic energy for peaceful pursuits remain unknown for a few months, until at least the peace documents are prepared and signed?

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. JENSEN. Does not the gentleman agree with me that there are as many potential dangers to the peace and security of the world in this legislation that we are now considering as there are in the atomic bomb itself?

Mr. COOLEY. I do not know whether in degree I agree with the gentleman exactly, but I do say that there is great danger in this situation. We talk about being fair and we talk about dealing fairly with all the people of the world. Here is a secret that cost $2,000,000,000 and, incidentally, has cost thousands and thousands of human lives, as witnessed by the destruction of Nagasaki and Hiroshima, and yet we are talking about sharing the secret with other peoples of the world before we even have full knowledge ourselves.

Mr. ARENDS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. ARENDS. In view of what the gentleman is saying, and the impression that was given awhile ago, does he not think the smart thing to do would be to recommit this bill at the present time?

Mr. COOLEY. I agree with the gentleman.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I am sure that the gentleman from North Carolina does not think that by recommitting this bill we somehow or other make atomic energy stand still in other countries.

Mr. COOLEY. I think we can at least control the secrets that we have here and leave it in the hands of the military people.

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DURHAM. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes.

Mr. BIEMILLER. I object, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Chairman, I do not stand in the well of the House to lecture on biology, or to lecture to any Member. I do not think I am any scientist, but I just wonder to what level this debate will fall, if we will stop and just think about ourselves, what the scientists in this world have given us. We should think about the great Scotchman, Watt, who invented the steam engine. We should think about the other great inventors, of the barometer and thermometer, compass and many other inventions that have aided our welfare. Yet here in this House today we are poking fun at the people who have given to this world today a problem that we have got to solve ourselves.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DURHAM. I yield to the gentleman from Arizona.

Mr. MURDOCK. I imagine the gentleman has some such thought and feeling as I have. Fun has been poked at inventors and inventions before this, even in this body. Does the gentleman recall that about 100 years ago when Morse proposed his electric telegraph and needed money to help with it, there were plenty of people, even Members of Congress, who facetiously wanted to spend money instead on investigating several other things instead of the telegraph? People poked fun at that effort in that day, but the people who made fun had a laugh on the other side of their faces in after years. Any way we look at it, atomic energy is a serious matter.

Mr. DURHAM. I thank the gentleman.

The Clerk read as follows:

CONTROL OF INFORMATION

SEC. 10. (a) Policy: It shall be the policy of the Commission to control the dissemination of restricted data in such a manner as to assure the common defense and security. Consistent with such policy, the Commission shall be guided by the following principles:

(1) That information with respect to the use of atomic energy for industrial purposes should be shared with other nations on a reciprocal basis as soon as the Congress declares by joint resolution that effective and enforceable international safeguards against the use of such energy for destructive purposes have been established; and

(2) That the dissemination of scientific and technical information relating to atomic energy should be permitted and encouraged so as to provide that free interchange of ideas and criticisms which is essential to scientific progress.

(b) Dissemination: The Commission is authorized and directed to establish such information services, publications, libraries, and other registers of available information as it may deem necessary or desirable to provide for the dissemination of information in accordance with subsection (a).

(c) Restrictions:

(1) The term "restricted data" as used in this section means all data concerning the manufacture or utilization of atomic weapons, the production of fissionable material, or the use of fissionable material in the production of power, but shall not include any data which the Commission from time to time determines may be published without adversely affecting the common defense and security.

(2) Whoever, lawfully or unlawfully, having possession of, access to, control over, or being entrusted with, any document, writing, sketch, photograph, plan, model, instrument, appliance, note or information involving or incorporating restricted data—

(A) communicates, transmits, or discloses the same to any individual or person, or attempts or conspires to do any of the foregoing, with intent to injure the United States or with intent to secure an advantage to any foreign nation, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $20,000 or imprisonment for not more than 20 years, or both;

(B) communicates, transmits, or discloses the same to any individual or person, or attempts or conspires to do any of the foregoing, with reason to believe such data will be utilized to injure the United States or to secure an advantage to any foreign nation, shall, upon conviction, be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both.

(3) Whoever, with intent to injure the United States or with intent to secure an advantage to any foreign nation, acquires or attempts or conspires to acquire any document, writing, sketch, photograph, plan, model, instrument, appliance, note or information involving or incorporating restricted data shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than $20,000 or imprisonment for not more than 20 years, or both.

(4) Whoever, with intent to injure the United States or with intent to secure an advantage to any foreign nation, removes, conceals, tampers with, alters, mutilates, or destroys any document, writing, sketch, photograph, plan, model, instrument, appliance, or note involving or incorporating restricted data and used by any individual or person in connection with the production of fissionable material, or research or development relating to atomic energy, conducted by the United States, or financed in whole or in part by Federal funds, or conducted with the aid of fissionable material, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $20,000 or imprisonment for not more than 20 years or both.

(5) No person shall be prosecuted for any violation under this section unless and until the Attorney General of the United States has advised and consulted with the Commission with respect to such prosecution.

(6) This section shall not exclude the applicable provisions of any other laws, except that no Government agency shall take any action under such other laws inconsistent with the provisions of this section.

(d) Inspections, records, and reports: The Commission is—

(1) authorized by regulation or order to require such reports and the keeping of such records with respect to, and to provide for such inspections of, activities and studies of types specified in section 3 and of activities under licenses issued pursuant to section 7 as may be necessary to effectuate the purposes of this act;

(2) authorized and directed by regulation or order to require regular reports and records with respect to, and to provide for frequent inspections of, the production of fissionable material in the conduct of research and development activities.

With the following committee amendment:

On page 33, lines 7 to 10, inclusive, strike out all of subsection (5).

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, if I may be permitted to make an explanation of this amendment, I do not believe there will be any opposition to it.

This amendment was requested by the Attorney General of the United States because the language contained in the Senate bill, and which is stricken out here, would have taken completely out of the hands of the Department of Justice the power to prosecute or determine who should be prosecuted, and turned it over to this Commission. We thought that was taking away from the Department of Justice and turning over to a civilian commission a function that it is not proper to take away from it.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAY. I yield.

Mr. DONDERO. For what reason was the Federal Bureau of Investigation entirely bypassed?

Mr. MAY. It is in the Department of Justice and this amendment takes care of it.

Mr. DONDERO. I understand that, but should not the violations and even all personnel connected with the Commission be investigated before the violations take place?

Mr. MAY. I think that is right. I agree with that.

Mr. DONDERO. I have a substitute amendment to cure that which will be offered when we reach page 50 of the bill.

Mr. MAY. When we get to that, we can vote on that amendment at that time.

Mrs. DOUGLAS of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, the explanation that the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs has given for the striking out of this section sounds reasonable and would be reasonable if it were not for the fact that we are not dealing with an ordinary subject; we are dealing with atomic energy. The reason this section was put in the bill, and I have discussed this with Senator McMAHON at great length, as well as with some of the scientists, was that in the field of atomic energy there is a great deal of hysteria. It is a spectacular new force that we have gotten hold of, to say the least. The gentlewoman from Connecticut has given her playfully, imaginative conception of what atomic energy may mean in one instance to mankind. I wish I had the time here to tell you about one of the byproducts of fissionable material that will revolutionize research in many fields—radioactive materials. This is no figment of the imagination. This is a certainty. I wish I could tell you what a sufficiency of radioactive material will mean in the treatment of skin cancer, and what it will mean to medicine in general. It will mean more than anything that has ever been discovered—more even than the discovery of the microscope. I cannot adequately compare it with anything. The doctors just hold up their hands and say, "If we could only have enough radioactive materials, we could do so much to help mankind." Well, you can have enough radioactive materials through the proper control of atomic energy. It means medicine and agriculture may be revolutionized. For the first time, doctors will be able to tell what a medicine actually does in a person's body because by the use of radioactive materials they can trace a medicine and its effect upon certain organs of the body. The same thing can be done with food. It means that we can grow crops that will be resistant to too much water or resistant to too much dryness.

For instance, Japan went into China and attacked China because they said they could not support their people on their small area of land. That was their reason as they gave it. It was not true but no such excuse can be given in the future. This in the future may mean perhaps that on a small amount of land there can be raised a hundred times or a thousand times more food than has ever been raised in the past. Think what this will mean to the undernourished people of the world. These are just a few of the things that will come from the byproducts of atomic energy. But to get back to the amendment. With this provision stricken out, the United States attorneys throughout the country would be able to bring suit against scientists in their districts for supposed violations of security regulations. You know that in many of the United States attorneys' offices in the rural districts there may be 1 person or 2 persons or perhaps 3 persons at the most. They cannot possibly be conversant with the subject of atomic energy. Good heavens, Congress itself is not conversant with the subject of atomic energy. If you have a hysterical kind of witch hunting after scientists, you are going to drive them from this field. The only people who know what is a secret and what is not a secret are the scientists. If a case does come up, this does not mean that you are doing away with prosecution. It only means that before the Attorney General acts, the United States attorney from any particular section of the country refers the case to the Attorney General and through his office the Commission is contacted so that they will not be prosecuting someone for a secret which the entire world has known for the last 10 years.

If we drive the scientists out of this field, I tell you we are destroying our defense. You are not protecting the American people. You are weakening our defenses. You are not keeping us in our preeminent position in science. The scientists will not stay in this field if they are hounded—if their good names are needlessly, stupidly dragged in the mire—if they are subject to hysterical, sensational publicity. A scientists' reputation is severely injured by the mere initiation of a prosecution regardless of whether or not he is ultimately acquitted. I was shocked and horrified to hear the name of the great Dr. Condon and Dr. Urey brought up in a derogatory manner on this floor the other day. Dr. Condon was the associate director of Westinghouse for 10 years and is now the head of the Bureau of Standards. Dr. Urey won the Nobel prize for having discovered heavy water without which the atomic bomb could not have been made. It is that kind of loose talk which will not give us any defense in the future, but will strip us of the real defense in this field.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. DOUGLAS of California. I yield.

Mr. JUDD. May I ask for clarification of one statement I understood the gentlewoman to use. Did she say the Japanese were compelled to go into China for food, because if so, that is not true.

Mrs. DOUGLAS of California. No. I did not say that.

Mr. JUDD. Did I not understand the lady to say that it was an economic necessity for Japan to go into China?

Mrs. DOUGLAS of California. I said that was one of the reasons the Japanese gave. That is what I said. But the gentleman has been to China and knows it well. The gentleman remembers the great vast areas in China with dry soil on which nothing can be raised. Research with radio active nitrates may some day turn those lands into fertile fields.

Mr. JUDD. But I did not want the idea to get abroad that the Japanese were compelled to go to Asia to get food, as has been so commonly believed. The Japanese have always had an adequate supply of rice, fish, and vegetables for their own population.

Mrs. DOUGLAS of California. I agree with you perfectly.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentlewoman from California has expired.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAY].

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 33, line 11, strike out "(6)" and insert "(5)."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ELSTON: On page 30, strike out lines 17 to 23, inclusive.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, before we vote on this bill, if it reaches that stage, I hope we will give very serious consideration to section 10, particularly to that part of section 10 which is the subject of my motion. Let me read it:

(1) That information with respect to the use of atomic energy for industrial purposes should be shared with other nations on a reciprocal basis as soon as the Congress declares by joint resolution that effective and enforceable international safeguards against the use of such energy for destructive purposes have been established.

Note that it starts out with the premise that the Commission in controlling the dissemination of restricted data must do so in a manner as to assure the common defense and security of the United States. Then it goes on to provide that it shall be the policy—and that policy is laid down by the Congress—to share with other nations on a reciprocal basis as soon as the Congress declares by joint resolution that effective and enforceable safeguards have been established. In other words, if we pass this bill with this part of section 10 in it, Congress has definitely gone on record as favoring a policy that the Commission shall share with other nations, on a reciprocal basis, information with respect to the use of atomic energy for industrial purposes. All that is necessary before the Commission begins the dissemination of this information, is for Congress to establish by a joint resolution that international safeguards have been set up. If anybody can tell me why we should commit ourselves in advance to a policy as broad as that, I certainly would like to have them do it. Consider for a moment what atomic energy may mean to industry over the years. It does not make any difference what it may cost the industry of this country, the information has to be shared with other nations.

I know, of course, that the bill provides for an exchange of information on a reciprocal basis, but the Commission itself will determine what is to be exchanged. The Commission can take anything in return for the information it furnishes. Obviously, the time may come when some international organization will agree on safeguards; and the time may come when this Congress will by joint resolution determine that safeguards have been set up; but what has the setting up of those international safeguards got to do with the transmission of information to other nations with respect to the use of atomic energy for industrial purposes? If we develop in this country, as he have, atomic energy for any purpose at all, is there any reason why we should share it with other nations except probably as a matter of mutual safety? Is there any reason why we should transmit to other nations information that will enable them to compete with American industry although they may give little or nothing in return? The policy would be a strange philosophy in America. I know no precedent for it. I do not recall that we ever at any time in our history went on record in the Congress of the United States as saying that anything that was developed by industry in this country should be shared with the industries of other nations.

Since the Commission, under this bill as now written, will own or control every patent dealing with the subject of atomic energy, this section of the bill will also authorize the sharing of American patents with any nation in the world.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

(Mr. ELSTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I am completely in disagreement with my good friend and colleague from Ohio on his presentation of the amendment he has just offered.

This is a very simple bill understood, perhaps, if and when you look carefully at two words in the language used. This is under the general heading of control of information, and it expressly provides that the control and dissemination of restricted data shall be by the Commission. For what purpose? "To assure the common defense and security."

The particular section that the amendment would strike out is subsection 1 of section 10, and it reads this way:

All information with respect to the use of atomic energy for—

Two words now—

Industrial purposes should be shared with other nations on a reciprocal basis as soon as—

What now?—

as soon as Congress declares by joint resolution that effective and enforceable international safeguards against the use of such energy for destructive purposes have been established.

This section clearly imposes upon this Commission to restrict that data that would affect the common defense until such time as Congress has declared by a joint resolution, I assume, that it is in the interest of the national security that civilian uses of it be shared with other countries on a reciprocal basis. That is so simple and so plain to me that I cannot quite understand the reasoning of my fine colleague.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAY. I yield.

Mr. THOMASON. Is not the important thing that no information can be released until Congress itself, the people's representatives, by a joint resolution, says that international safeguards against the use of atomic energy for destructive purposes have been established? I just do not know how you could have a more democratic way of control than to leave it to a joint resolution of Congress.

Mr. MAY. If the provision is stricken out, it opens the gate wide for the Commission to have power to do it. This would prevent them from doing it at all until the Congress says so.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAY. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. I think the point the gentleman expressed was the use of this for industrial purposes irrespective of patent rights. That is what is involved. Is there in the opinion of the gentleman any more reason for disseminating this information for industrial purposes, free of any cost, than spreading or disseminating information in respect to any patents now existing in this country for industrial or for any other purpose after we spent over $2,000,000,000 for it?

Mr. MAY. I can imagine there might arise a situation in international negotiations if it were proposed that there should be a widespread dissemination of atomic energy for civilian purposes under some subcommittee or other organization established by international agreement, it might be the means of obtaining a concession against the military use of atomic energy by some other nation.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, I merely want to call the attention of the Committee to a single point in reference to the amendment suggested by my good friend and able colleague the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ELSTON]. The confusion exists in reference to the meaning of the word "reciprocal." I do not take the term "reciprocal basis" to mean gratuity or free. I take it to mean that it is a "mutual basis" of self-interest. Where two countries deem it to the mutual advantage of each country to enter into a reciprocal agreement, an agreement in which both gain an advantage, that agreement then would be possible only after a joint resolution of the Congress. That does not mean a gift, it does not mean a gratuity, it does not mean giving away something for nothing; it means a mutual agreement where both nations profit; and when the Congress looks into it and passes a joint resolution, the action is made final—and, by the way, a joint resolution has the same sanctity as law. It is passed by both the House and Senate and signed by the President. I see nothing wrong at all in that paragraph as written.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROOKS. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. That very type of reciprocal program is being carried out in the matter of agriculture in my State of California, for instance, in reference to the exchanging of ideas in regard to fruits and grapes, and also in reclamation work and in river and harbor work, as well as in communications. We have the reciprocal interchange of ideas and information.

Mr. BROOKS. I say running through each agreement must be the mutual interest of both countries; they enter into an agreement for the mutual advantage of both.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. Does the gentleman mean to infer, by referring to agriculture, that those same reciprocal arrangements are made in connection with patent rights affecting the great industries of this country by which we have grown beyond the industries of any other country in the world?

Mr. BROOKS. The gentleman is a most capable Member of Congress. He has studied those things. The gentleman knows that no such strained construction can be placed on this language as intimated by him.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROOKS. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. ELSTON. I would like to ask the distinguished gentleman from Louisiana, who is a very capable lawyer, if he knows of any precedent for this type of legislation? Does the gentleman know of any time in history when Congress went on record saying that we should exchange information with respect to the industrial use of any type of power with other nations?

Mr. BROOKS. Not with reference so much to information as to reference with mutual advantages. I think that has been very well written into our laws, and I do not think there is anything new or startling or dangerous about it, especially when it is necessary to come back to this same body here, back to the United States Senate and the President to reaffirm this principle and decide when it is time to act.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROOKS. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. CHURCH. Will the gentleman refer to the word "information" again and answer me whether or not the word "information" cannot and does not definitely mean the know-how that we have heard so much about; the know-how of the atomic bomb secrets? Cannot "information" mean the know-how?

Mr. BROOKS. I will say this to the gentleman. Of course, the word "information" is generic in its terms, but I think the thing the gentleman overlooks is the fact that the agreement to which this section refers is for our mutual advantage and, further, it can only be effected after we agree to it.

Mr. BIEMILLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROOKS. I yield to the distinguished representative from Wisconsin.

Mr. BIEMILLER. I would like to observe that there has been some exchange of information between private trusts, through cartels, relating to deals between Standard Oil and the Farbenindustrie, and I think we have far more to fear if we go ahead with private patents in that there will be a bad exchange of information.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Louisiana has expired.

Mr. PRICE of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to briefly give the reasons why I believe section 10, control of information, was placed in the Senate bill. Discussion of the secret of the atomic bomb is subject to certain misconceptions. First, the secret is not permanent since it consists entirely of natural phenomena capable of discovery sooner or later by competent scientists anywhere. Just 3 days ago we read in a local newspaper an article in which a Jap scientist was well on his way to finding the secrets of the atomic bomb, using equipment that scientists in this country estimated cost $25.

Second, perhaps the major part of the pure science involved was known throughout the world before the war; and, third, the real advantage is largely a combination of technological advances in design and construction of equipment, and the fact that the United States already has equipment which takes a long time to construct.

In controlling the dissemination of secret information, there are two basic objectives which tend to conflict with one another. Reasons of security require complete control of information which might help other nations to build atomic weapons. At the same time sufficient freedom of interchange among scientists must be provided if we are to maintain our preeminent scientific position. The bill expressly states these policy objectives and subjects not only atomic weapon information but atomic power information to control with serious criminal penalties for illegal dissemination of information. To assure scientific progress the Commission may free information in the restricted category if it determines the value of such dissemination outweighs the value of secrecy.

Mr. FENTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, first of all, I want to allay any fears that my colleagues may have that I am going to give you any scientific talk on this legislation. I promise you I will not add to your confusion, but rather, as a general practitioner of medicine, attempt to give you my viewpoint and diagnosis in plain language and use an illustration that is well known to all of us.

Mr. Chairman, as one member of the House Military Affairs Committee who has been in fairly constant attendance at its meetings—especially during its deliberations of this bill—I feel that you must all agree that we should proceed with great caution and care.

In my opinion we will have gone far afield from the American way of life if we act too quickly on this bill.

Mr. Chairman, the old backbone of this great country of ours is beginning to sag. The heavy weight of all countries upon our spinal column is beginning to compress our spinal cord to such an extent that it soon will be completely severed and paralysis will result, unless it is supported by a good strong brace.

We possess that brace in the secret of the atomic bomb and certainly for the time being we should not throw or give it away.

Personally, I am of the opinion, that since we have control of this secret bomb that we should not be in a hurry to share it with any other country or countries.

I believe that peace will be attained much quicker by keeping what we have; and, in so doing we will in no uncertain terms serve notice to those people who are continually blocking the efforts of our peace-making representatives that we expect to retain the secret until at least peace has been declared.

For, with the state of uncertainty now existing with our peace proposals, as evidenced by our Secretary of State and others in their reports to the country on the progress of peace negotiations it would appear to me that this is not the time for this legislation.

To enact S. 1717 would to my mind give a lot of aid and comfort to a certain group—that at the moment is using to its own advantage—as a member of the Security Council, its veto rights.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the pending amendment and all amendments thereto close in 25 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DONDERO].

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, sometime this afternoon we hope to come to a very important decision on this bill. No doubt the most important decision we will be called upon to make in this session of Congress. I am sure the one underlying motive of all of us will be what is for the best interests of our country. Everybody admits that we are dealing with the most destructive force ever devised by the human race. We are asked to share or divulge its secrets, which we now hold, with other governments. Not long ago some members who now advocate the passage of this bill, S. 1717, with all its implications for the dissimination of information about this almost supernatural power, took this floor and urged the passage of the draft bill in support of our Secretary of State who was then battling in Paris against powers opposing peace and who recognize force only to achieve their objective. Yet, the country is still at war technically. Its termination has not been declared by the President of the United States. Neither has its termination been declared by the Congress of the United States. Several times since hostilities ceased and several times since the United Nations conference at San Francisco the nations of the world have endeavored, through meetings, to bring peace upon this earth. Up to this present hour, those attempts have very largely failed. On the 29th of this month in Paris, France, the nations of the world will convene again in the hope of making some progress to achieve peace upon this earth. If that conference had been held on the 29th of June instead of the 29th of July next and if that conference like all other previous conferences had come to the same conclusion and brought forth very little if any progress toward peace, would we be here this afternoon debating whether or not we would share this most destructive power with some other nations of the world? Some ideologies of government believe there is only one force on this earth, and that is brute force. The able gentleman from North Carolina, [Mr. COOLEY] touched upon this matter a few moments ago. I heartily agree with him when he says that peace treaties have not been written. Peace treaties have not been agreed upon. Their terms have not been arrived at. They have not even come to sit around a table to formulate any particular plan or program on the basis of which peace might be obtained. The peace of the world thus far has been vetoed. Yet, here we are proposing to give to the world the most destructive engine mankind has ever created. What can we lose by recommitting this bill to the Committee on Military Affairs and leaving the secrets of the atomic bomb where they now are, and that is the agency of our Government charged with the defense of our Nation. Let us see what happens after the conference in Paris on the 29th of this month. Nothing can be lost but much can be gained if we defer this matter until we know whether or not universal peace can be established upon this earth. We have provided all the legislative machinery necessary for that high purpose. Until that time comes, I believe, my colleagues, that we can serve our country best by deferring action upon this bill. Therefore, I am going to vote to recommit this measure to the Committee on Military Affairs for further study and consideration. I hope a motion to recommit will be adopted.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, consideration of this amendment is a preview of what we are going to do on section 10, the patent section. This amendment offered by my distinguished colleague from Ohio [Mr. ELSTON] leaves in the statement of policy the assurance of common defense and security, and then permits and encourages "dissemination of scientific and technical information relating to atomic energy."

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. I have an amendment at the desk to strike out subsection (b), on page 31, which is entitled "Dissemination."

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. There is no amendment pending now to strike out the provision for dissemination of scientific and technical information.

PROTECTION OF OUR PATENT SYSTEM

The provision that would be stricken out by the present amendment is a provision for the dissemination of information with respect to the use of atomic energy for industrial purposes. The most important information about any industrial process or any industrial gadget is, under our way of life, contained in patents. It is provided by section 10, as the bill is now written, that this Commission is to have a monopoly on all former patentable information remotely connected with atomic energy, and unless this present section is stricken out, the Commission is to have the right, subject to military requirements, to pass out industrial information to all the world that would otherwise be subject to patents.

THE REAL ISSUE—DISARMAMENT

There is another reason why I think this language should be stricken out. This section provides for sharing information on industrial uses of atomic energy when the Congress declares by joint resolution that effective and enforcible international safeguards against the use of such energy for destructive purposes have been established. Thus we are asking international safeguards only against atomic weapons, and saying nothing about other weapons. There is not only confusion in this House, but there is confusion at New York in the United Nations on this subject. We have gotten ourselves so fascinated and horrified by atomic energy that we are forgetting about some of the other forms of destruction. We gain nothing for our own security, or for world peace, when we outlaw the one weapon in which we excel, in order to enter an international armament race in all other forms of destruction. By the above language we would bind ourselves to furnish the industrial know-how to other nations for them to use atomic energy in the manufacture of other weapons, V–2 bombs, rockets, after the atomic bomb itself has been outlawed.

We should not forget that the most destructive force, up to the present time, including the atomic bomb, is mass armies. We have in Japan a unique case of a nation that succumbed without invasion, but you ask them in China or Poland or Germany or Russia about mass armies, and they will tell you they are more destructive to life and property than anything that has ever been invented. Up to date the Roman broadsword is the deadliest weapon ever invented, based upon actual records of killed and wounded. Total conscription is a comparatively new weapon in history and has been developed by Germany, Japan, and Russia to a superstate of efficiency and destructiveness. Total conscription, which drafts part of the population for fighting and the rest for labor in industry and agriculture, requires complete regimentation, complete surrender of individual freedom. We do not like it. We will not be good at it. Are we going to outlaw the one weapon in which we excel in order to compete with the rest of the world in the one weapon in which we do not excel and do not want to excel?

The U. S. S. R. now has a population of about 170,000,000 and the population of the countries it has taken over since 1939 is, in Europe, 118,000,000 and in Asia 130,000,000. Thus the Soviets have a manpower pool of 418,000,000 people. The birth rate in Soviet Russian is so high compared with ours that in 1970, 24 years from now, they will have approximately 100,000,000 more population than the United States. In 9 years the Soviets will have 36,900,000 men between the ages of 15 and 34. If we eliminate all other weapons, except conscripted mass armies, what nation in the world will be unquestionably the greatest military power?

Let me quote some sentences from the Baruch report.

Let us not deceive ourselves: We must elect world peace or world destruction.

Only in the will of mankind lies the answer.

But before a country is ready to relinquish any winning weapons it must have more than words to reassure it. It must have a guaranty of safety not only against the offenders in the atomic area but against the illegal users of other weapons—bacteriological, biological, gas, perhaps, why not? against war itself.

In the elimination of war lies our solution, for only then will nations cease to compete with one another in the production and use of dread secret weapons which are evaluated solely by their capacity to kill. This devilish program takes us back not merely to the Dark Ages but from cosmos to chaos.

Yet in spite of these eloquent, penetrating words of wisdom in the Baruch report, Mr. Baruch and our leaders in the United Nations seem to be striving solely for international outlawry of atomic warfare. We should face the fact that only by total war against all warfare can we secure peace for the world and security for ourselves.

I had hoped that some part of this bill would be devoted to this subject. Instead, I find that this bill keeps so far away from it that I have been unable to devise an amendment on the subject that would be in order. I can only express here the hope that our leaders will do something on the international front about total disarmament before they commit us on outlawing the atomic bomb and sharing industrial uses of atomic energy. Adoption of the Elston amendment would be at least a congressional gesture in the right direction.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York, [Mr. REED].

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, the problem of the atomic bomb ought to be decided in the light of history. We all want peace, pray for peace, yet there is no peace. What does history disclose? J. Novicow, vice president of the International Institute of Sociology, points out that: "From the year 1496 B. C. to A. D. 1861, in 3,358 years, there were 227 years of peace and 3,130 years of war, or 13 years of war to every year of peace. Within the last three centuries," so the author reminds us, "there have been 286 wars in Europe." Even more significant, now that peace negotiations are being conducted, Mr. Valbert says: "From the year 1500 B. C. to A. D. 1860 more than 8,000 treaties of peace meant to remain in force forever were concluded. The average time they remained in force is 2 years."

I know that a person is guilty of lese majesty to quote George Washington in these days of so-called brotherly love, the good neighbor era, the share-the-wealth program, the share-the-raw-material and share-the-atomic-bomb-secrets in the new warless age of international affection and good will. George Washington uttered these prophetic words with full knowledge of the bloody and almost constant wars throughout the world prior to A. D. 1790. I quote from Washington's Farewell Address of September 17, 1796, as follows:

Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence, I conjure you to believe me, fellow citizens, the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government. * * * Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none, or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics, or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities * * * Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, or caprice?

Does the number of wars since 1800 to the present day hold out to suffering mankind the prospect of an era of universal peace? Let us look at the record:

TIME-TABLE OF EUROPE'S WARS

1801: The old German Empire breaks up, and all territory on the left bank of the Rhine is ceded to France.
1802: French aggressions in Holland, Italy, and Switzerland.
1805: England declares war on Spain. France fights Austria.
1806: Napoleon enters Berlin.
1807: Napoleon defeats Russia.
1808: Napoleon invades Spain.
1810: France annexes Holland, Turks driven out of Balkans.
1812: War starts between United States and England.
1812: Napoleon declares war on Russia.
1814: France invaded from all sides. Napoleon to Elba. British seize and burn Washington.
1815: Napoleon leaves Elba, is defeated by British and Germans at Waterloo, then sent to St. Helena for life.
1816: Holland annexes Belgium.
1817: British wars in India.
1822: Greeks and Turks at war. Civil war in Spain.
1823: French army enters Spain.
1824: British battle for Burma.
1825: Russia wars on Turkey.
1826: Russia invades Persia.
1827: Turks driven from Greece.
1828: Russia overruns Rumania.
1829: England and Austria intervene against Russia.
1830: Revolution in Poland and France. Belgium revolts from Holland.
1831: Prussia and Austria aid Russia against Poland.
1832: Egypt revolts against Turkey.
1838: French bombard Mexican ports. Debt collection, old style.
1839: Britain wars on China.
1846: War between United States and Mexico.
1848: Schleswig-Holstein fights Danish annexation.
1849: Danish-Russian war.
1850: Britain blockades Greece. Prussia and Austria war.
1854: France and England war against Russia.
1856: British war on China and Persia.
1861: Civil War in United States. British blockade runners supply South.
1864: Germans defeat Danes.
1866: War between several German states. Austria wars on Italy.
1868: Britain invades Abyssinia. Spanish revolution.
1870: Franco-German War.
1871: Alsace-Lorraine goes to Germany. Back to France in 1918 and back to Germany in 1940.
1874: Spanish civil war.
1876: Balkan wars.
1877: Civil war in Japan. Russia wars on Turks.

1879: British war on Zulus.
1880: Boers and British battle.
1881: France wars on Tunis.
1882: Britain wars on Egypt.
1884: Japan wars on Korea.
1885: Russia wars on Afghanistan.
1887: Balkan wars. Italy wars on Abyssinia.
1894: Japan wars on China.
1895: Belgium seizes Congo state.
1898: Spanish-American War.
1899: Britain wars on Boers.
1900: Boxer War in China, United States returns Boxer indemnities.
1904: Russian-Japanese War.
1910: Japan takes Korea.
1912: Balkan wars.
1914–1918: Russia, France, Britain, Italy, United States, Japan, Rumania, Serbia, Belgium, Greece, Portugal and Montenegro, 12 nations, battle Germany, Austria-Hungary, Turkey and Bulgaria.
1917–1918: The United States of America participated in the World War.
1920 to 1930: A breathing spell and period of disarmament conferences, which obviously disarmed no nation except the United States. European and Asiatic powers destroy League of Nations ideal.
1931: Japan seizes Manchukuo.
1932–33: Europe repudiates all World War debts to United States ($12,000,000,000).
1934: Italy takes Abyssinia.
1937: Japan develops an "incident" in China.
1938–1939: Germany takes Austria, Czechoslovakia and Poland. Russia invades Poland. France and England declare war on Germany.
1940: Russia takes part of Finland. Germany seizes Denmark and defeats Norway, Holland, Belgium and France. Italy joins war against England.
1941: Germany and England at war. Russia, Italy, Rumania and Japan, against Germany in 1914, like the figures of the year, have reversed their positions and are with her in 1941. Bulgaria, Turkey, Greece, and Jugoslavia involved in conflagration. Starvation general throughout all Europe.
1941 to VJ-day: United States still at war.

The acrimonious battle of words now going on between the peace delegates of the respective nations still technically at war is no time to share military secrets with totalitarian or other foreign nations. The fewer persons in possession of the secret of this instrumentality of wholesale human slaughter, the safer mankind will be until a better understanding between nations has been attained.

I regard this legislation as premature, unwise, and not in keeping with our national safety.

[From the Washington Evening Star of July 19, 1946]

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

(By Frank R. Kent)

BULLITT'S BOOK DEFLATES OPTIMISM OF SOVIET COLLABORATION FOR PEACE

In a recent summary of William C. Bullitt's just-published book, The Great Globe Itself, a foreword says that "unquestionably it will become a major topic of discussion." To even a casual reader this will appear an understatement.

If the considerable number of extremely articulate persons in this country who insist that sympathetic understanding and friendship with Russia is the only means by which we can promote peace in the world and international cooperation become a reality do more than discuss Mr. Bullitt's book, it will, indeed, be remarkable. For as trenchant, documented, and convincing an indictment of the Russian leaders, their methods, and their purposes has not before been made.

Great weight is given the Bullitt charges, first, because they come from a man who not only knows well modern Russia and the men who run that country, but who is a student of Russian history and an admirer of the Russian people; second, because the author was the first American Ambassador to Russia after our long delayed recognition in 1934. He went to Moscow openly friendly to the Soviet experiment.

Disillusioned in Russia

His disillusionment came while he was there—the result of close personal contact with the operations of the Russian system and personal experience with the Russian rulers. It has been greatly increased by their ruthless and aggressive policies—in clear violation of the Atlantic Charter, which Stalin indorsed—following the end of the war and by their general course in every international gathering from the Yalta Conference on down to the recent meeting in Paris. The chronology of the acts and attitude here presented seem an unassailable basis for Mr. Bullitt's views.

In effect, he charges that the period after a war for the Soviet Government is not a period to make peace but to prepare for war; that the primary, compelling, and unchangeable motive of the government is the spread of communism throughout the world; that it conceives its own safety is involved in this as it is convinced that Russian communism cannot survive for long by the side of the capitalistic countries; that it is unalterably hostile to foreigners; that it signs treaties and makes agreements not with any idea of keeping them but only because they appear expedient at the time; that Stalin grossly deceived Mr. Roosevelt when he pledged himself not to promote communism in this country; that the Soviet word is not good, that the Russian rulers regard everything, including fraud, deceit, and murder as justifiable to perpetuate their own power and promote the Communist purpose.

Warfare always

"In the eyes of the Soviet Goverment," writes Mr. Bullitt, "the Soviet Union is always engaged in warfare, open or concealed, with the non-Communist states of the world. And where it embraces in friendship a non-Communist government, it is always with the ultimate intention of driving a dagger in its back. That is why Stalin is unappeasable. That is why Mr. Roosevelt's 'great design' was foredoomed to failure. That is why, for our own self-preservation, we must face the fact that Stalin, like Hitler, will not stop but can only be stopped."

These are terrific charges—particularly at this stage when such great—though apparently futile—efforts are being made to get Russia to cooperate wholeheartedly in the cause of peace and in the complete control of atomic energy. Certainly, it is true that far greater progress toward these goals would have been made in the past year but for the obstructions offered by the Soviet representatives. Mr. Bullitt is neither an irresponsible nor a reckless man. He presents facts to support his contentions. He is a detached man without a grievance and no cause to serve other than the truth. Such a book by such a man cannot easily be passed over.

Superior force necessary

Undoubtedly, he will be denounced by those who resent any reflection on the honor and purity of the Russian leaders. Nevertheless, the book is well calculated to increase the number of those who believe as Mr. Bullitt believes, that the only way to deal with the Soviet rulers is by confronting them with superior force.

"The most legitimate use of force on earth," says Mr. Bullitt, "is to gain time to permit the growth of moral ideas. It will take some time for moral ideas to grow in the Soviet Union. There is no way to prevent it from conquering non-Communist states during that time except the hard way of keeping it constantly confronted by superior force."

It is interesting that the series of articles recently appearing in the New York Times by Brooks Atkinson, just returned after a year as Times correspondent in Moscow, fully sustains Mr. Bullitt's view that friendship with Russia is impossible and that for us to hope for mutual, sympathetic understanding is to delude ourselves. It is also interesting that the appearance of the Bullitt book coincides with th recent attack by Attorney General Clark on Communists in this country and his reference to a vicious plot to destroy our Government. For these remarks, the lawyers' guild—which has a heavy Communist flavor—passed denunciatory resolutions condemning Mr. Clark as a Red baiter.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE] is recognized for 4 minutes.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment:

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CASE of South Dakota:

On page 30, line 18, strike out "should" and insert "may."

In line 18 strike out "as soon as" and insert "only after."

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MAY. Is the gentleman's amendment offered as a substitute for or a modification of the pending amendment?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. My amendment is offered as a perfecting amendment to the language in the bill. Mr. Chairman, I think I share with every Member of the House the feeling that once in a while we get sort of punch-drunk on words and it becomes difficult and perhaps wearying to try to follow the technical language of a bill. Nevertheless, we try. And I shall try to be brief and direct in my remarks.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ELSTON] is to be congratulated for having drawn attention to the importance of this section on the control of information; but I would raise a question as to whether or not the entire elimination of this paragraph may not have the reverse effect of that intended. If this paragraph be lifted from the bill just what restriction remains in the bill to restrain the Commission from doing the very thing he fears?

The chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAY], and the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BROOKS] have said in defense of keeping this subparagraph of the bill that it would permit the Commission to exchange this information on a reciprocal basis "only after" Congress passes a joint resolution, but actually that is not what the language in the bill says. The language in the bill is a directive and not a limitation. The language in the bill says that as soon as Congress passes a joint resolution the Commission "should" share this information. In other words, it gives an affirmative directive to the Commission. If it be intended that this be a safeguard and that this information may be shared with other nations on a reciprocal basis only after Congress has passed a joint resolution, then the language in the bill should clearly say that. That is what my amendment proposes to do by striking out the word "should" in line 18, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "may", and striking out the words "as soon as" in line 19, and inserting in lieu thereof "only after". The language then becomes a limitation upon the Commission rather than a directive.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Is it not true that the gentleman's amendment if adopted would still leave in this bill an advance promise of Congress to have this Commission furnish industrial information much of which up to now has been contained in patents?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. No; I think that is not quite true, because with this section out of the bill you would have no restriction on the Commission, and it could release the industrial information at any time. To express the intent Members have voiced, a restriction should be clearly written in the bill saying that the Commission may dispense this information only after Congress, by a joint resolution, has said that adequate safeguards have been established, and the joint resolution has been signed by the President.

I hope my amendment will be adopted.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from South Dakota yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. It is true, is it not, that the President did not share this secret with Russia during the war?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I do not know.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Does the gentleman mean only after Congress declares by joint resolution that adequate and enforceable international safeguards have been put into effect, or only after the Congress by joint resolution declares that the war is over? There are two considerations there. These international safeguards could be declared before the period of the war has ceased.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Well, that would depend on Congress. Congress would have to use its own judgment as to whether effective international safeguards had been established. I doubt that the Congress would find that proper international safeguards had been established unless the war had been declared at an end.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from South Dakota has expired.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BIEMILLER].

Mr. BIEMILLER. Mr. Chairman, there have been times in this debate that I have been wondering if we were discussing S. 1717 or if there has been some substitute bill introduced here which has not been made available to all the Members. I have heard Members on this floor speak constantly about a bill that is going to immediately share the secrets of the atomic bomb with other nations. I have thoroughly read this bill a good many times, I have read the report of the Senate, I have read the report of the House committee and I can find absolutely nothing in the bill or in the reports about the immediate sharing of the present technological secrets of the atomic bomb with other nations. I think we ought to recognize that fact and not be discussing extraneous issues at this stage of the game.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BIEMILLER. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Will the gentleman read the paragraph under consideration for that certainly uses the words "shall be shared."

Mr. BIEMILLER. Yes, but the bill further reads "As soon as the Congress declares by joint resolution that effective and enforceable international safeguards against the use of such energy for destructive purposes has been established."

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. That is a directive that as soon as that is done it should be shared. The amendment which I have offered simply said that it is only after those safeguards have been created that the Congress might do that.

Mr. BIEMILLER. I think that is quibbling over language. Furthermore, that section, as the gentleman from South Dakota well knows, refers only to the use of atomic energy for industrial purposes. It says absolutely nothing about sharing the technological processes of the atomic bomb.

Why are we trying to confuse the issue here? Actually, if we are going to follow the policy that some Members of this House have been suggesting, what we will do is put an effective stop to further experimentation on the part of American scientists. You have been told repeatedly on this floor, and I know it is correct, that almost all of the scientists who were working for the Manhattan district have left that project. There is no real experimentation going on there today. The Army as such did not do the experimenting during the war. All of the technological processes that resulted in the atomic bomb were done by civilian scientists and directed by civilian scientists.

Why should we take this great chance you are asking us to take? The Manhattan project will not result in any further experimentation. Secretary Patterson has asked that the Army be relieved of this responsibility. The establishment of an Atomic Energy Commission in the form proposed by the McMahon bill when it left the Senate will give us a chance to perfect our knowledge of atomic energy.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BIEMILLER. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. LANHAM. If section 11 should be stricken from the bill or remain in the bill as it is, unless my amendment to that section is adopted, would not this provision in the bill give the Commission the right to transfer patent rights in America without any registration or authorization of them in foreign countries to foreign countries?

Mr. BIEMILLER. On the contrary, what I am afraid of is that if the amendment of the gentleman from Texas is adopted what we will do is make available the secrets of the atomic bomb. The gentleman's amendment would permit private individuals to patent atomic weapons. All such patents must carry a full description which would be available to the public. Any smart secretary or technician would then have all the information he would need. I hope we can discuss that at more length when that particular amendment is before us.

Mr. LANHAM. They can under this provision in the bill certainly transfer our patent rights at will.

Mr. BIEMILLER. While I do not share the gentleman's point of view I am sure he would not claim that the bill would make the bomb processes public. The point I want to make specifically is that there is nothing in this bill as it now stands which if passed will result tomorrow morning in making the secrets of the atomic bomb available to any other nation on the face of this earth; yet that is the charge that speaker after speaker has thrown on this floor, the most recent being the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DONDERO]. There is nothing in the bill of that kind. The bill is purely an effort to systematize in an intelligent manner further research in this country into the problem of atomic energy. That research is badly needed. If this bill is recommitted we will not have it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. FOLGER].

Mr. FOLGER. Mr. Chairman, I was about to become so impatient as to decide that if this part of the bill were eliminated, I would not vote for the bill at all. It is unthinkable to me that we in this country, who have the atomic energy secret so far as the manufacture of bombs is concerned, should become so isolated in our disposition and spirit as to be afraid to allow other countries of the world to take such portion of this developed energy as might be used for industrial purposes only.

I think it would be a great mistake to hold ourselves as possessing any such attitude toward the world as to be unwilling to share the industrial part of this discovery with other nations of the world. It should be the policy of the Commission to control the dissemination of restricted data in such a manner as to assure the common defense and security. That means we can hope, I suppose, that it will allay the suspicion or the expectation of anyone that by permitting this dissemination of knowledge as to industrial purposes we might let out something that would be capable of being used for the destruction of mankind.

The gentleman from South Dakota, I think, is in error in undertaking to substitute the word "may" for "should." This is no more than a declaration of policy, "consistent with such policy" that is, the security of the United States, "the Commission shall be guided by the following principles." It does not say they shall do it or they shall not do it.

Then they say they will be guided generally by the following principles: "That information with respect to the use of atomic energy for industrial purposes should be" not may be, not will be, but should be "shared with other nations."

That means that it is an exemplification of a spirit of worldwide understanding and willingness to help to contribute to the welfare of other people in this world in order that we may lay the foundation of a permanent peace, and not rest our security altogether on armament or atomic bombs for the destruction of human lives.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. JOHN J. DELANEY, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (S. 1717) for the development and control of atomic energy, had come to no resolution thereon.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. Koerber, its assistant enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 7052. An act to amend the Internal Revenue Code, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed, with an amendment in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 6983. An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render judgment in any and all claims which the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes of Indians of the Flathead Reservation in Montana, or any tribe or band thereof, may have against the United States, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate disagrees to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1236) entitled "An act to amend the Mineral Leasing Act of February 25, 1920, as amended, in order to promote the development of oil and gas on the public domain, and for other purposes; requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. O'MAHONEY, Mr. WAGNER, Mr. MURRAY, Mr. GURNEY, and Mr. ROBERTSON to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4590) entitled "An act to authorize the use by industry of silver held or owned by the United States."

USE BY INDUSTRY OF SILVER HELD OR OWNED BY THE UNITED STATES

Mr. SPENCE submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 4590) to authorize the use by industry of silver held or owned by the United States:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4590) to authorize the use by industry of silver held or owned by the United States, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1 and 4, and the amendment of the Senate to the title of the bill, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 2: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "90.5"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 3: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: ": Provided further, That hereafter each United States coinage mint shall receive for coinage silver mined after July 1, 1946, from natural deposits in the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof, as provided in the Act of July 6, 1939 (Public Law 165, Seventy-sixth Congress), and tendered to such mint within one year after the month in which the ore from which it is derived was mined, except that the seigniorage to be deducted shall be 30 per centum instead of 45 per centum as provided in section 4 (b) of said Act"; and the Senate agree to the same.

BRENT SPENCE,
PAUL BROWN,
WRIGHT PATMAN,
JESSE P. WOLCOTT,
Managers on the Part of the House.

ROBERT F. WAGNER,
ALBEN W. BARKLEY,
ABE MURDOCK,
R. A. TAFT,
E. D. MILLIKIN,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4590) to authorize the use by industry of silver held or owned by the United States, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

Amendment No. 1: This is a technical amendment inserting the word "hereafter" and is related to amendment No. 4 which eliminates the provision for an expiration date contained in the House bill. The House recedes.

Amendment No. 2: This amendment changed the minimum price at which Treasury silver may be sold under the bill from the 71.11 cents per ounce provided in the House bill to 90.3 cents per ounce. The House recedes with an amendment making the figure 90.5 cents per ounce. This change in the Senate figure is a technical change to make the figure conform with the policy agreed upon in connection with amendment No. 3.

Amendment No. 3: This amendment added a provision to the effect that in the case of silver mined after July 1, 1946, from natural deposits in the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof, and received by any United States coinage mint for coinage under the act of July 6, 1939 (Public Law 165, 79th Cong.), the seigniorage to be deducted under section 4 of said act shall be 30 percent instead of 45 percent as provided in such section 4. The House recedes with an amendment which restricts the application of this provision so that it will not apply unless the silver in question is tendered to the mint within one year after the month in which the ore from which the silver is derived was mined.

Amendment No. 4: This amendment struck out section 2 of the House bill, which provided that the act should expire two years after the date of its enactment. The House recedes.

The House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the title of the bill.

BRENT SPENCE,
PAUL BROWN,
WRIGHT PATMAN,
JESSE P. WOLCOTT,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the conference report on the bill (H. R. 4590) to authorize the use by industry of silver held or owned by the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. Is their objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL CREDIT UNION ACT

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 6372) to amend the Federal Credit Union Act, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 3, after line 20, insert:

"SEC. 8. Subsection (b) of section 16 of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"'(b) (1) The Governor may suspend or revoke the charter of any Federal credit union, or place the same in involuntary liquidation and appoint a liquidating agent therefor, upon his finding that the organization is bankrupt or insolvent or has violated any provisions of its charter, its bylaws, or of this chapter, or of any regulations issued thereunder.

"'(2) The Governor, through such persons as he shall designate, may examine any Federal credit union in voluntary liquidation and, upon his finding that such voluntary liquidation is not being conducted in an orderly or efficient manner or in the best interests of its members, may terminate such voluntary liquidation and place such organization in involuntary liquidation and appoint a liquidating agent therefor.

"'(3) Such liquidating agent shall have power and authority, subject to the control and supervision of the Governor and under such rules and regulations as the Governor may prescribe, (i) to receive and take possession of the books, records, assets, and property of every description of the Federal credit union in liquidation, to sell, enforce collection of, and liquidate all such assets and property, to compound all bad or doubtful debts, and to sue in his own name or in the name of the Federal credit union in liquidation, and defend such actions as may be brought against him as liquidating agent or against the Federal credit union; (ii) to receive, examine, and pass upon all claims against the Federal credit union in liquidation, including claims of members on shares; (iii) to make distribution and payment to creditors and members as their interests may appear; and (iv) to execute such documents and papers and to do such other acts and things which he may deem necessary or desirable to discharge his duties hereunder.

"'(4) Subject to the control and supervision of the Governor and under such rules and regulations as the Governor may prescribe, the liquidating agent of a Federal credit union in involuntary liquidation shall (i) cause notice to be given to creditors and members to present their claims and make legal proof thereof, which notice shall be published once a week in each of three successive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in each county in which the Federal credit union in liquidation maintained an office or branch for the transaction of business on the date it ceased unrestricted operations: Provided, That whenever the aggregate book value of the assets and property of a Federal credit union in involuntary liquidation is less than $1,000, unless the Governor shall find that its books and records do not contain a true and accurate record of its liabilities, he shall declare such Federal credit union in liquidation to be a "no publication" liquidation, and publication of notice to creditors and members shall not be required in such case; (ii) from time to time, make a ratable dividend on all such claims as may have been proved to his satisfaction or adjudicated in a court of competent jurisdiction and, after the assets of such organization have been liquidated, shall make further dividends on all claims previously proved or adjudicated; and the liquidating agent may accept in lieu of a formal proof of claim on behalf of any creditor or member the statement of any amount due to such creditor or member as shown on the books and records of the credit union: Provided, That all claims not filed before payment of the final dividend shall be barred and claims rejected or disallowed by the liquidating agent shall be likewise barred unless suit be instituted thereon within 3 months after notice of rejection or disallowance; (iii) in a "no publication" liquidation, determine from all sources available to him, and within the limits of available funds of the Federal credit union, the amounts due to creditors and members, and after 60 days shall have elapsed from the date of his appointment, shall distribute the funds of the Federal credit union to creditors and members ratably and as their interests may appear.

"'(5) Upon certification by the liquidating agent in the case of an involuntary liquidation, and upon such proof as shall be satisfactory to the Governor in the case of a voluntary liquidation, that distribution has been made and that liquidation has been completed, as provided herein, the Governor shall cancel the charter of such Federal credit union: Provided, That the corporate existence of the Federal credit union shall continue for a period of 3 years from the date of such cancellation of its charter, during which period the liquidating agent, or his duly appointed successor, or such persons as the Governor shall designate, may act on behalf of the Federal credit union for the purpose of paying, satisfying, and discharging any existing liabilities or obligations, collecting and distributing its assets, and doing all other acts required to adjust and wind up its business and affairs, and it may sue and be sued in its corporate name.

"'(b) After the expiration of 5 years from the date of cancellation of the charter of a Federal credit union the Governor may, in his discretion, destroy any or all books and records of such Federal credit union in his possession or under his control.'"

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DEVELOPMENT AND CONTROL OF ATOMIC ENERGY

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (S. 1717) for the development and control of atomic energy.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill S. 1717, with Mr. JOHN J. DELANEY in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BATES].

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ELSTON].

As I stated yesterday on the floor of the House, under the conditions existing throughout the world today things are too uncertain to permit the changing of the present status and control of the administration of the atomic bomb and everything connected with nuclear energy. I think we ought to give the United Nations an opportunity to hold their peace parley the latter part of this month and see if we cannot find some way by which we can establish a basis for a permanent peace in the world. Surely with the unsettled conditions existing today, this is no time for us to disseminate information of any kind on the atomic front or nuclear energy. In today's paper we read of the War Department firing five physicists from the Aberdeen Proving Ground, where they were employed in very responsible positions, it is said that they were discharged on the ground that they were carrying on subversive activities. Yet, by this bill we are building up another organization, taking the control away from the War Department which is now working very closely with our scientists and has been over the period of the war years. It is through this organization that the War Department has thus created that this tremendous weapon with all of its power has been fully developed.

Mr. Chairman, I do not blame the House for being in confusion. Over a period of 3 days we have been discussing this bill. Already several amendments have been offered and agreed to. There seems to be a complete misunderstanding on the part of many of us as to how far-reaching the provisions of this bill are, and we should go slowly.

Let me read briefly a report placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD yesterday by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BENDER]. It is an article given to the press by Mr. Paul Bellamy, editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, who was one of those editors of American papers who visited Europe at the request of the War Department to make a first-hand, on-the-job inspection of what is going on there. He said:

I have just returned from a trip to hell. Would that I had the tongue of men and of angels to describe what I saw.

Dante should return and rewrite his description of the inferno.

By hell I mean postwar Germany and general conditions in central Europe.

Then he went on to speak about the Russians not cooperating. He said:

I believe the Russian problem is paramount in Europe. Everywhere one turns he finds that our commanding officers in the various zones, regions, and even county and municipal governments, have to keep an eye on the Russians. Everything we do has to be measured a little bit by its effect on the ever-present Russian influence in Europe. And the Russians are not cooperating, not a single whit, with the other occupying powers in Germany. They are running their own show blithely and confidently and sometimes in an openly insulting manner.

Mr. Chairman, they are not cooperating in any other part of the world. They are operating behind the iron door in Central Europe where no one is permitted to visit the area under their control. They are operating secretly and conniving in Korea. We know the difficulty that is existing in the Manchuria area, where there is no cooperation and no mutual understanding and where civil war continues between the Chinese Nationalist troops and the Chinese Communists who are aided and supported by the Russians.

There should be no haste in changing the status of control of the atom bomb or nuclear energy while the world is still in an upheaval. No one can definitely forecast whether there will be further trouble ahead or whether the statesmen of the world will finally see the light, and find some way to establish permanent and lasting peace.

The War Department and the scientists of the country are working very closely together in further research on atomic energy. Today papers inform us that a huge atomic research center is being planned by the War Department and that nine major universities are cooperating in a project, the projected size of which can be seen in the board of regents', Columbia University, statement that the estimated expenditure may exceed $5,000,000 a year. Such a statement assures us that research work on the development of nuclear physics is continuing with speed and is now in good hands.

Let us keep things in this field of activity just as they are, and until things become more settled throughout the world.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BATES] has expired.

All time has expired.

The question recurs on the perfecting amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE].

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment may again be reported.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will again report the amendment.

There being no objection, the Clerk again reported the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE].

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. I would like to have the Chair advise the House if this perfecting amendment is adopted, then the vote would recur on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ELSTON] to strike out the section?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is correct.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. CASE of South Dakota) there were—ayes 66, noes 57.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ELSTON].

The question was taken; and the Chair being in doubt, on a division there were—ayes 79, noes 70.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chair appointed as tellers Mr. ELSTON and Mr. THOMASON.

The Committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 99, noes 94.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HARNESS of Indiana: On page 31, lines 4 to 8, inclusive, strike out all of subsection (b) of section 10.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, the amendment I have offered seeks to strike from the bill the following language on page 31:

Dissemination. The Commission is authorized and directed to establish such information services, publications, libraries, and other registers of available information as it may deem necessary or desirable to provide for the dissemination of information in accordance with subsection (a).

That language would authorize and direct the Commission to set up the biggest propaganda agency ever created by the Congress. It could become a super OWI and I do not think that is necessary in carrying out the policies enumerated in subsection (a). I hope my amendment will be agreed to.

Mr. JENNINGS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. JENNINGS. Under that provision could they not set up a bureau far broader, nationally and internationally, than anything to date and load the Federal pay roll down with crackpots and people who are in favor of giving this country away and turning over its means of defense to the enemies of our country?

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. Of course, if they set up this agency, under the authority and direction of this bill, it could become one of the most dangerous agencies ever created by law. In fact, I know of no precedent for such action. Subsection (b) of section 7 requires the Commission to report to the President and Congress any industrial, commercial, or nonmilitary uses of fissionable material or atomic energy. This provision should be adequate for providing pertinent information to the country.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. How is this any different than the dissemination of information by the State bureau of health, like we have in our State, telling how to avoid diseases, how to guard against communicable diseases, and all those things?

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. I do not think the gentleman or this Congress is ready to set up an agency that would have such tremendous and the sweeping powers that this Commission would have, to establish libraries, information services, publications, and to disseminate information some of which might be only remotely connected with the subject of atomic energy. The cost of such a bureau would be staggering. I hope the Committee will adopt this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Indiana has expired.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I am sure everybody here including those on my side of the aisle will agree that I have not been profligate in voting for amendments to this bill. I have consistently voted against all amendments, except the Case perfecting amendment to the paragraph just voted out of the bill. But I am going to vote for this amendment because I cannot see any possible reason or useful purpose to be served by this subsection. Any information with respect to atomic energy which this Commission can properly and rightfully release will be eagerly and instantly gobbled up and published by all the scientific journals in our country and in the world. To direct the Commission to establish publications and libraries and propaganda agencies to make this information available to the people seems to me utterly unnecessary, when there are already thousands of journals and publications, scientific and industrial and popular, able and eager to do the job. We cannot justify this provision when it is not necessary and sets up one additional Government propaganda agency.

Therefore, I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JUDD. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. I am glad that the gentleman emphasized that this is not only an authorization but a direction in law.

Mr. JUDD. That is right.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana, but I am very frank to say that I think it is sort of a futile thing for me or anybody else to oppose it in view of the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ELSTON]. Judging from the last vote, it looks like isolationism is again in the saddle. I take it that most of you want no part in our international problems. Paragraph 1 of section 10 specifically provides that nothing shall be done in connection with the dissemination of scientific and technical information unless and until Congress, the representatives of the people, if you please, by resolution had declared that effective and enforcible international safeguards against the use of such energy for destructive purposes had been established. That is a condition precedent. That has to be done before we make a single move. But after the American people, the owners and possessors of the atomic bomb, through their representatives in Congress and after due deliberation, say that the secret of the atomic bomb has been properly safeguarded, to then say to the people all over the world who are crying out for medical aid, calling out for this great marvelous discovery that will bring happiness and prosperity and, I hope, peace to the countless people of the world—to then say to them that we will not give it to them for that purpose, that we will just draw ourselves into a shell and say, "No, we are not going to share that even for industrial purposes; we will not help to reclaim the stricken lands of Europe and Asia; we will not share our medical secrets and the discovery of a remedy for cancer," and all of these other aids to mankind is beyond my comprehension.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. I would like to know if the gentleman does not agree with me whether under subsection (b) of section 7 on page 25, which requires the Commission to make a report to the President and to the Congress of all the information with respect to industrial, commercial, or nonmilitary use of atomic energy, it would not be sufficient, without setting up this agency and directing them to establish libraries and so forth.

Mr. THOMASON. I do not know about that, but I certainly do not want, by my vote, to say that I refuse to give nonmilitary aid to the other peoples of the world. We are no giving away the atomic bomb secret, a bomb that destroyed a whole city, and another bomb in the hands of somebody else could destroy this Capital and the whole beautiful city of Washington and the great city of New York. We have harnessed it and we should put it in safe custody through some kind of a commission. Certainly we have got to take care of it from a domestic standpoint before we reach into the international field. Everybody knows that the Germans were on their way to perfect it. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT], who was with me when we visited the atrocity camps in Germany, knows that they were then in those underground factories working diligently to perfect the atomic bomb as soon as possible. We know that Russia and other countries are well on the way. We have to take care of the bomb domestically first. After we do that, surely some kind of international atomic commission can be set up to take care of the entire problem. When that is done, if we are to live in a peaceful world, our delegates to Paris on the 29th day of this month must be able to take back some hope to the people who perhaps think, "The United States are the only people that have the bomb, and they are experimenting with it out in the Pacific now and are going to have some more experiments. There is not much use in trying to arrive at peace terms, because they can blow us up any time they want to." We are not going to do anything of that kind, but that is what some people probably think.

Speaking for myself, from the depths of a sincere conviction, I say that just as soon—and I pray that that day is quite soon—as we place under control the atomic bomb, we then can release this wonderful new discovery to the sick and the impoverished people of the world.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for two additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mrs. LUCE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield to the gentlewoman from Connecticut.

Mrs. LUCE. I also voted against No. 1 under section 10, but does not the gentleman feel that even though that section is stricken this bill contains provisions for our integrating the whole Commission with an international commission when it is formed, so that the very purpose of this section, although it is stricken, will nevertheless be fulfilled the minute the world is able to establish adequate safeguards?

Mr. THOMASON. The gentlewoman is absolutely correct because we have left in subsection (2) that the dissemination of scientific and technical information relating to atomic energy shall be permitted.

Mrs. LUCE. You would have to strike out subsection (2) before you could make it possible for us to prevent giving it away.

Mr. THOMASON. That is right. It is most unfortunate that the Elston amendment was adopted, if we are to try to make some contribution here today to the cause of world peace. That is the way I feel about it. I hope there will be a roll call on that amendment.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. JUDD. I agree with the gentleman in the hope there will be a roll call on the Elston amendment and that it will be defeated. I think it was most unfortunate that it was adopted, especially after modification by the Case amendment. However, the gentleman's remarks here have been against the Elston amendment rather than the Harness amendment. I still feel that the Harness amendment is good and will not have any of the terrible effects the gentleman has portrayed.

Mr. THOMASON. I have great respect for the opinion of my distinguished friend from Minnesota. I know how he feels about this bill, because he has spent a good many years abroad. He knows what the suffering and what the turmoil is in Asia and perhaps in Europe. I hope we go back to the Elston amendment. I repeat that as far as I am concerned, I do not think it is very material if this amendment is adopted. I have made these remarks to try to convey to you my own conviction on the subject and express the hope that we will have a roll call in the House and defeat the Elston amendment.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I agree heartily with what the gentleman from Texas has just said, both as to the fact that the Harness amendment is not of great significance and as to the fact that the action of the House with regard to the Elston amendment is, in my judgment, very regrettable indeed.

Mr. FOLGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. FOLGER. I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that subsection (b) says that that shall be done in accordance with subsection (a), which protects against divulging any military secrets.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Precisely. What I want to address myself to is the very realistic situation under which we are legislating today. I know that to base our action on hope that the so-called secret of the atomic bomb may be protection for America for longer than a few brief years is to practice self-deception and deception of the people. During that brief period while America retains her preeminence in this field—and I shall vote to prolong that period as long as we can—America has an opportunity to take leadership for the harnessing of this terrible force by international agreement which, to quote the bill, will give "enforceable international safeguards against the use of such energy for destructive purposes."

The official position of the United States Government as to how that can be accomplished is contained in the Baruch proposal to the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission. What does that proposal contain? The proposals it contains are the conditions under which America would share the peacetime benefits of atomic energy with other nations under the terms of this bill had the Elston amendment not been adopted or should that language go back in the bill. Perhaps as the gentlewoman from Connecticut suggests this would be the case under the bill anyway, but certainly it would be far better to restore the language stricken by the Elston amendment so as to make America's position quite clear and to make it accord with the clear vision expressed by the gentleman from North Carolina a short time ago. The terms of the Baruch proposal laid down the conditions under which America would say, "Yes, so far as the peacetime benefits of atomic energy are concerned, we intend to share those peacetime benefits on a reciprocal basis with other nations." The conditions that the Baruch proposal laid down are briefly as follows: That the nations of the world—the other nations of the world as well as ours—shall agree that an international authority in which this Nation as well as other nations shall have full participation, shall have the police power to enter every nation on this globe to see whether or not in that nation there are being possessed any atomic weapons or any fissionable material or whether there is any plant manufacturing fissionable material or whether there is in that nation any plant for the production of such materials as could produce atomic weapons. More than that, America proposes that such an authority shall control and own any such fissionable material or facilities for the production of fissionable material which could be used to produce such weapons anywhere on this globe, including that dictatorship which now lives behind that iron curtain. Those are the conditions and the only conditions under which America proposes that there shall be any dissemination of this knowledge. But can we here say—and still pretend to be for peace—that even if such conditions for enforceable international safeguards against the possession of atomic weapons or the means of making them are achieved, still America will refuse to share the knowledge not of atomic weapons but of possible medical or industrial benefits of atomic energy? No. We cannot take such a position.

Mrs. LUCE. Does the gentleman believe that if this world authority is brought into being that they will be able to capture materials used for chemical and biological warfare and take them out, too, and will it also provide a way of getting the battleships and B–29's and B–17's?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I am very much obliged to the gentlewoman for asking the question. I want to answer it. I will say to the gentlewoman from Connecticut, it might well be that having once established the supremacy of a law of peace over the right of any nation to possess one kind of weapon of mass destruction, we will have taken a step which might open the gateway through which we could march to reach peace along the very lines that she suggests.

Mrs. LUCE. If it can be done, I am for it.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I know that, of course.

I believe it quite important that we recognize that the problem of peace is not confined to atomic weapons by any manner of means, if the nations would agree, but in controlling atomic weapons in the manner suggested by the United States the first step in all history toward enforceable means to peace will have been taken and other necessary steps will become infinitely easier.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I have not spoken on this bill up to now, but I have been terribly distressed about it. I think the passage of this bill is the greatest menace that could possibly be set up against the success of a peace conference. Unless we leave this situation in the hands of the military until after the June 29 conference, we are giving up and turning over to a civilian commission a set-up where they can do a lot of things that would be out of control. This particular provision which is the subject of this amendment is a very dangerous thing.

One does not have to be an internationalist or an isolationist to understand those things, but one has to be an American, and has to think, and not be led astray by false prophets. The idea of setting up this kind of an information service and establishing all sorts of libraries and registers and all that sort of thing to get the stuff out before we have a definite, positive agreement on the part of the other countries to permit us to do the inspecting that we need to do to find out whether or not they are ready to comply with whatever agreement that may be made, that is necessary if we are going to have peace in the world in the days to come. We are not going to have peace unless we protect ourselves right here, and unless we let those people who represent us go into that conference with something to talk about.

I wish this House, instead of being led astray by false statements as to what folks are who take one position or another, would think this thing out and not go off half-cocked. That is what I am afraid those who are supporting this legislation are doing. I wish we would think about it and not do something that is going to interfere with a lasting and stable peace.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER], has expired.

All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HARNESS].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. HARNESS of Indiana) there were—ayes 80, noes 68.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SMITH of Virginia: Page 33 after, line 6, insert a new subsection as follows:

"(5) The Commission shall make no contract under sections 3 or 4; shall issue no license to any person nor employ any person until the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall have first made an investigation of the character and associations of such person and certified that the character of such contractor licensee or employee is such as not to endanger the common defense or security."

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I think this amendment speaks for itself. All the discussion here has hinged around the tremendously dangerous forces which are involved in this bill, and the necessity for seeing that our secrets are kept.

This amendment, which I hope the committee will accept, will provide that no one shall be employed by the Commission and no license shall be granted by the Commission to manufacture these dangerous engines until the FBI has certified that such persons have been investigated and are of such character as not to endanger the welfare or security of the United States.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. SHORT. This side of the Committee will accept the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. MAY. The Committee of course cannot accept that amendment. Under that amendment they would never employ anybody unless the Bureau of Investigation were expanded to a hundred thousand men to investigate them.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I have nothing further to say on that amendment, but I have 5 minutes' time and I should like to devote the remainder of it to a discussion of an amendment I intend to offer following the fate of this one.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Not at this moment.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. On the present amendment?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. If I can get some more time, but I want to discuss the next amendment I wish to offer for fear I may not have sufficient time when it is offered.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Virginia may proceed for two additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has not expired. That request would not be in order until his time had expired.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. You will note on page 32 the provision for the punishment that shall be imposed for the violation of the terms of this act when it is done for the purpose of injuring the United States. That punishment is totally inadequate. If you will read those lines you will find that a person can divulge these secrets and be guilty of treasonable conduct and escape with a fine of $10. That is possible under this act.

I propose to offer amendments throughout which will place a minimum—a minimum—of a fine of not more than $20,000 and imprisonment for not less than 10 nor more than 20 years.

I hope the committee will agree to it so we may have some protection against the violation of this act when it is done for treasonable purposes.

Mr. JENNINGS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. JENNINGS. That would not be punishment enough for a man, be he red, pink, or punk, who would undertake to betray this country.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I just want to say that I think the gentleman's amendment with regard to the FBI investigation is well taken. I also agree with the amendment he proposes to offer fixing minimum punishment.

Mr. CHELF. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. CHELF. Does not the gentleman feel that if anyone would divulge the secrets of this atomic energy that the minimum penalty ought to be death? For instance, we have had here in a short time past during the war 1,700 documents classified "Secret" and "Top Secret" stolen from the office of the Secretary of State. What did they do? They did not even prosecute them.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I do not yield further.

I may say to the gentleman from Kentucky that I believe we ought not to pass a bill of this magnitude and let anybody guilty of treasonable conduct get away with a $10 fine, which he may do as the bill now stands.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. KEFAUVER. I am in sympathy with the gentleman's amendment regarding the FBI investigation, but suppose the FBI for some capricious reason which we cannot understand, of course—but suppose that should happen——

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I will answer the gentleman's question.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Let me finish the question.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I think the gentleman has finished it. The FBI does not have the reputation of acting capriciously and I am sure no such instance would occur.

Mr. KEFAUVER. May I finish my inquiry? I do not think they have that reputation; I do not think they would.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. What is the question?

Mr. KEFAUVER. The question is: If anyone wanted to appeal from the ruling of the FBI could they appeal under the Administrative Procedure Act?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. No; I do not think they could.

Mr. KEFAUVER. The gentleman thinks there would be no appeal?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Under the amendment of this language they could not.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I offer a further amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. If the Chair may suggest to the gentleman from Virginia, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS] has asked the Chair to recognize him to offer an amendment after the words the gentleman has just suggested.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SUMNERS of Texas: Page 32, line 2, after the words "punished by", insert the word "death or by."

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have the attention of the members of the committee to this proposed amendment. It is very important, as I see it, from a number of angles. Under the head of "Restrictions" the restrictions include data concerning the manufacture or utilization of atomic weapons. Then it is provided that if a person who possesses knowledge of this matter in reference to atomic weapons communicates, transmits, or discloses the same to any individual or person, or attempts or conspires to do any of the foregoing with intent to injure the United States or with intent to secure advantage to any foreign nation, he shall be punished by a fine of not more than $20,000 or not more than 20 years in the penitentiary or both. That is the penalty.

Now here is a person who possesses information with reference to these atomic bombs, the sort of thing we know about, these deadly things. If that person under this provision takes the information and gives it or sells it to an enemy of this country, then all we do to him is say "naughty, naughty" relatively. The maximum penalty which could be given him is 20 years in the penitentiary and a fine of $20,000. I propose a maximum penalty of death.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that still under the amendment he has offered, a person could do all of those things and yet escape with a fine of $10. The reason I interrupt the gentleman is to ask if he will not change his amendment so as to make that punishment in the penitentiary a minimum of 10 years—not less than 10 years or more than 20?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I will say to the gentleman that I have no objection to that. If this amendment is agreed to that detail can be worked out. I think this whole penalty provision ought to be reworked and I assume it will be in conference if my amendment is agreed to. If my amendment is agreed to then if a person does a minor thing he could be fined or imprisoned, according to the degree of his offense, and it would make it possible for a person who betrays his country, does a thing with regard to the atomic bomb for the purpose of hurting his nation or give advantage to another nation, to be executed. Without this amendment it would be possible for a traitor possessed of the knowledge to make it possible by his betrayal for this Capitol to be destroyed by a bomb, and all we could do under these circumstances would be to give him 20 years as the maximum.

Mr. JENNINGS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. JENNINGS. Does not the gentleman think he ought to adopt the suggestion offered by the gentleman from Virginia, because it is entirely possible that a jury might be composed of Russian subversives or Russian sympathizers. I do not know what happened out on the coast, but out there they acquitted a Russian spy.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes. But this must be considered. If you put a minimum that is too high where the act ought not to be excused, but a jury might not want to be instrumental in the giving of a long prison term; the jury might not convict at all. You have no way to compel a jury to render a verdict of guilty. That is what you are up against. I agree that there should be no spirit of tolerance or indulgence where a person possessed of information imparts that information with the purpose of injuring his country and imperiling the people, in fact the existence of whole cities. I am concerned about that type of criminal who would betray his country for money, perhaps imperil his nation for pay. Besides the psychological effect of this small general penalty would be bad. There is too much loose talk and loose acting with regard to this mightiest of all the agencies of destruction which at the moment we hold within the confines of our own knowledge. There are too many people doing their best to turn it loose, or what amounts to the same thing, attempt to deliver it into the custody of a so-called world government, nonexistent except on paper.

I do not know of any generation in all history which has brought upon itself a greater responsibility, a greater danger, a greater duty, than that which is now ours by reason of our having liberated this dynamic power, and now are in danger of being responsible for its being turned loose in a psychopathic world.

Whatever is done should be the result of deliberate, advised, cautious judgment. Whoever, to hurt this country or to aid its enemies, would turn loose this thing against his people should not be permitted to live. There is no punishment severe enough for such a person.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MARTIN of Iowa: On page 31, line 14, after the word "commission", insert the words "by unanimous vote."

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, my only purpose in offering this amendment is to add to the safeguard against the release of data from the classification "restricted data" that is covered in this section. I do not believe anyone would have any serious objection to requiring the unanimous vote of the Commission to remove data from the "restricted data" classification.

Mr. Chairman, I have no desire to offer any further argument in regard to the matter.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Chairman, those of us on this side do not oppose the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SMITH of Virginia: Page 32, line 3, after the word "not", insert the words "less than 10 years or."

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Chairman, in view of the adoption of the other amendment, those of us on this side have no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, this language occurs probably 12 or 15 times throughout this bill, and it should be changed to conform to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas and the amendment I offered as we go along. I wonder if that could not be done by unanimous consent?

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Chairman, it is agreeable to those of us on this side.

Mr. SHORT. We have no objection, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that wherever that language occurs later on in the bill that it may be changed to conform to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas and the amendment offered by myself.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, does the gentleman mean in this section or throughout the entire bill?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Throughout the entire bill.

Mr. ELSTON. This section deals with offenses against the security of the country. There may be other places where the security of the Nation is not involved; it may be only offenses by reason of some regulation of the Commission.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. What I am speaking of is where this identical language occurs throughout the bill, where it says that the act is done for the purpose of injuring the United States. That is the only place I have in mind.

Mr. SAVAGE. Mr. Chairman, further reserving the right to object, would the gentleman explain how this is going to read after it is engrossed? There are two or three amendments on this question.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. It will read:

Upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $20,000 or imprisonment for not less than 10 years or more than 20 years, or both.

Mr. SAVAGE. Is not the language "more than $20,000" stricken out?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. No; that remains.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. DWORSHAK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, before we leave this section dealing with information about atomic energy, I should like to direct your attention to some information which may have a more realistic aspect now. You will recall that, several weeks ago when the extension of the draft bill was before this body, the Members who were in favor of exempting the 18- and 19-year-old boys from the draft were assailed and condemned by many newspapers because we were told that exemption would destroy the entire military program. You probably have read some of the dispatches appearing in the publications and newspapers of our country during the past week.

I have here a page from the New York daily, PM, dated July 16. As I recall, that was one of the publications which contended a few weeks ago that 18- and 19-year-old boys should be sent abroad as members of our armies of occupation. Let me read you a brief excerpt from the editorial captioned "The betrayal of youth," appearing in PM Tuesday:

At the end of the war in Europe the venereal disease rate among American soldiers was seven and a half percent a year. At the end of April 1946 it had risen to over 20 percent. By the middle of June it had reached 26 percent—perhaps the highest in American military history. It is still rising. In some areas in Germany the rate is more than twice the present average—that is to say, close to 55 percent.

I continue to quote from that editorial:

The new troop replacements we have been sending for the armies of occupation are youngsters given the task of policing a beaten people without having first had the disciplining task of winning the victory. They are kids who have not yet cut their eye-teeth in the experience of living, and whom we send—raw and morally unprepared—into a situation where they are the lords of the earth.

Is it a great wonder, then, that they show themselves incapable of resisting either the Nazi doctrines or the rampant diseases?

The influential New York Times—which generally supported a teen-age draft—on July 14 published a dispatch from Lindesay Parrott dated Yokohama. It refers to the order issued by Lt. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, commander of Allied ground forces in Japan, who warned his soldiers that the increasing misconduct by American troops in their teens had reached the point of "endangering the mission of the occupation" and must be stopped at once. I quote from this special dispatch:

The release of General Eichelberger's letter officially confirmed what most correspondents have known for some time, that the new young draftee in Japan has exhibited qualities of juvenile delinquency and vandalism never demonstrated by the combat troops who fought the Southwest Pacific war.

Most of the crimes are committed by youthful soldiers—the average age of the army of occupation is 20.3 years old.

Conditions probably are aggravated by the fact that Japanese hesitate to make complaints against Americans and also because most military policemen who suppress such actions are green youngsters.

General Eichelberger concluded:

This condition, a result of assault, crime, and retaliation, is endangering the mission of the occupation and must be stopped at once.

Mr. Chairman, while we are discussing this important problem of protecting the people of our country and the entire world from the potential ravages of atomic energy and atomic bombs, is it not pertinent at this time to pause and consider whether the responsibility devolves not only upon the military authorities, but likewise upon this Congress, to determine whether this scourge of disease and crime shall destroy the youth of America?

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DWORSHAK. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SHORT. A few weeks ago I said in essence what the gentleman has quoted here, only to have opprobrium heaped upon my head, and abuse even from some of the Members of this body. I am placing in the RECORD tonight other quotations from military authorities, not only General Eichelberger but General McNarney.

Only a few days ago I asked General Eisenhower how the volunteer system was coming along. This morning I received a letter from Major General Person, the chief liaison officer between our committee and the War Department, informing me that the number of volunteers had jumped from 10,000 the first week of last month to more than 25,000 the last week of last month, and that more than 62,000 young men volunteered in the month of June.

Mr. DWORSHAK. I thank the gentleman. I am presenting this information at this time to emphasize the importance not only of seeking to protect the people of the entire world, but to recognize our primary responsibility. We should realize that while we apparently won a military victory over the Axis Powers, today we are confronted with the serious situation of protecting these teen-agers of our country.

Almost daily we receive reports of courts martial of young American soldiers in occupied zones. It is obvious there has been a complete break-down of our military discipline, which probably is aggravated by too much leisure time available to our armed forces. Possibly this is the result of having more personnel for this assignment than is necessary to do an efficient job.

Mr. Chairman, the American people are cooperating in bringing order out of chaos in the Pacific occupied areas and in Germany. They have been told by the military authorities that it was necessary to draft in peacetime 18- and 19-year-old boys to maintain our armed forces at required strength. Congress did compromise this issue by demanding that 18-year-olds be exempted and, notwithstanding the assurances which were given during the debate on the peacetime draft bill, the military authorities are sending youngsters abroad for foreign service, although it is apparent older and more mature personnel should be utilized. It is difficult to justify such policies when it is recognized that voluntary enlistments have reached 847,220 in the Army and 265,230 in the Navy, in addition to several thousands in the Marine Corps, since VJ-day.

It is a terrible indictment of our military program that we must jeopardize the health and the morals of our youth to satisfy the demands of those who police the occupied areas. Is Congress going to evade its responsibilities in meeting this challenge, or will this legislative body demand that our military leaders discharge their duties in a more efficient manner?

Some encouragement is provided in the belated recognition of many newspapers that there is justification for exempting teen-agers from the peacetime draft. If we are to maintain a strong military establishment, it will be necessary to give immediate consideration to the problems called to our attention by General Eichelberger in Japan and General McNarney as head of our occupation forces in Germany.

It should be possible to protect the welfare of American youth in this postwar era if we make the maximum use of a professional army. I have advocated, for many months, that pay scales in the military branch be increased to stimulate volunteer recruitment. Atomic energy constitutes a real menace to mankind, but so does the prevalence of disease and crime among our occupation forces. We must demand greater efficiency on the part of our military leadership.

The Clerk read as follows:

PATENTS AND INVENTIONS

SEC. 11. (a) Production and military utilization:

(1) No patent shall hereafter be granted for any invention or discovery which is useful solely in the production of fissionable material or in the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy for a military weapon. Any patent granted for any such invention or discovery is hereby revoked and just compensation shall be made therefor.

(2) No patent hereafter granted shall confer any rights with respect to any invention or discovery to the extent that such invention or discovery is used in the production of fissionable material or in the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy for a military weapon. Any rights conferred by any patent heretofore granted for any invention or discovery are hereby revoked to the extent that such invention or discovery is so used, and just compensation shall be made therefor.

(3) Any person who has made or hereafter makes any invention or discovery useful in the production of fissionable material or in the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy for a military weapon shall file with the Commission a report containing a complete description thereof, unless such invention or discovery is described in an application for a patent filed in the Patent Office by such person within the time required for the filing of such report. The report covering any such invention or discovery shall be filed on or before whichever of the following is the latest: (A) The sixtieth day after the date of enactment of this act; (B) the sixtieth day after the completion of such invention or discovery; or (C) the sixtieth day after such person first discovers or first has reason to believe that such invention or discovery is useful in such production or utilization.

(b) Use of inventions for research: No patent hereafter granted shall confer any rights with respect to any invention or discovery to the extent that such invention or discovery is used in the conduct of research or development activities in the fields specified in section 3. Any rights conferred by any patent heretofore granted for any invention or discovery are hereby revoked to the extent that such invention or discovery is so used, and just compensation shall be made therefor.

(c) Nonmilitary utilization:

(1) It shall be the duty of the Commission to declare any patent to be affected with the public interest if (A) the invention or discovery covered by the patent utilizes or is essential in the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy; and (B) the licensing of such invention or discovery under this subsection is necessary to effectuate the policies and purposes of this act.

(2) Whenever any patent has been declared, pursuant to paragraph (1), to be affected with the public interest—

(A) The Commission is hereby licensed to use the invention or discovery covered by such patent in performing any of its powers under this act; and

(B) Any person to whom a license has been issued under section 7 is hereby licensed to use the invention or discovery covered by such patent to the extent such invention or discovery is used by him in carrying on the activities authorized by his license under section 7.

The owner of the patent shall be entitled to a reasonable royalty fee for any use of an invention or discovery licensed by this subsection. Such royalty fee may be agreed upon by such owner and the licensee, or in the absence of such agreement shall be determined by the Commission.

(3) No court shall have jurisdiction or power to stay, restrain, or otherwise enjoin the use of any invention or discovery by a licensee, to the extent that such use is licensed by paragraph (2) above, on the ground of infringement of any patent. If in any action for infringement against such licensee the court shall determine that the defendant is exercising such license, the measure of damages shall be the royalty fee determined pursuant to this section, together with such costs, interest, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be fixed by the court. If no royalty fee has been determined, the court shall stay the proceeding until the royalty fee is determined pursuant to this section. If any such licensee shall fail to pay such royalty fee, the patentee may bring an action in any court of competent jurisdiction for such royalty fee, together with such costs, interest, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be fixed by the court.

(d) Acquisition of patents: The Commission is authorized to purchase, or to take, requisition, or condemn, and make just compensation for, (1) any invention or discovery which is useful in the production of fissionable material or in the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy for a military weapon, or which utilizes or is essential in the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy, or (2) any patent or patent application covering any such invention or discovery. The Commissioner of Patents shall notify the Commission of all applications for patents heretofore or hereafter filed which in his opinion disclose such inventions or discoveries and shall provide the Commission access to all such applications.

(e) Compensation awards; and royalties:

(1) Patent compensation board: The Commission shall designate a Patent Compensation Board, consisting of two or more employees of the Commission, to consider applications under this subsection.

(2) Eligibility:

(A) Any owner of a patent licensed under subsection (c) (2) or any licensee thereunder may make application to the Commission for the determination of a reasonable royalty fee in accordance with such procedures as it by regulation may establish.

(B) Any person seeking to obtain the just compensation provided in subsection (a), (b), or (d) shall make application therefor to the Commission in accordance with such procedures as it may by regulation establish.

(C) Any person making any invention or discovery useful in the production of fissionable material or in the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy for a military weapon who is not entitled to compensation therefor under subsection (a) and who has complied with subsection (a) (3) above may make application to the Commission for, and the Commission may grant an award.

(D) Any person making application under this subsection shall have the right to be represented by counsel.

(3) Standards:

(A) In determining such reasonable royalty fee, the Commission shall take into consideration any defense, general or special, that might be pleaded by a defendant in an action for infringement, the extent to which, if any, such patent was developed through federally financed research, the degree of utility, novelty, and importance of the invention or discovery, and may consider the cost to the owner of the patent of developing such invention or discovery or acquiring such patent.

(B) In determining what constitutes just compensation under subsection (a), (b), or (d) above, the Commission shall take into account the considerations set forth in paragraph (A) above, and the actual use of such invention or discovery, and may determine that such compensation be paid in periodic payments or in a lump sum.

(C) In determining the amount of any award under paragraph (2) (C) of this subsection, the Commission shall take into account the considerations set forth in paragraph (A) above, and the actual use of such invention or discovery. Awards so made may be paid by the Commission in periodic payments or in a lump sum.

(4) Judicial review: Any person aggrieved by any determination of the Commission of an award or of a reasonable royalty fee may obtain a review of such determination in the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia by filing in such court, within 30 days after notice of such determination, a written petition praying that such determination be set aside. A copy of such petition shall be forthwith served upon the Commission and thereupon the Commission shall file with the court a certified transcript of the entire record in the proceeding, including the findings and conclusions upon which the determination was based. Upon the filing of such transcript the court shall have exclusive jurisdiction upon the record certified to it to affirm the determination in its entirety or set it aside and remand it to the Commission for further proceedings. The findings of the Commission as to the facts, if supported by substantial evidence, shall be conclusive. The court's judgment shall be final, subject, however, to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon writ of certiorari on petition therefor under section 240 of the Judicial Code (U. S. C., title 28, sec. 347), by the Commission or any party to the court proceeding.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ELSTON: On page 34, strike out section 11.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. ELSTON. I yield.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment in the nature of a substitute for section 11 which, of course, is a perfecting amendment. It is my understanding that the amendment could be offered and voted upon as a perfecting amendment before a vote is taken on the motion to strike out the section.

The CHAIRMAN. It can be, if the gentleman desires to offer such an amendment.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, I have the amendment at the Clerk's desk.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELSTON. I am glad to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. THOMASON. May I ask the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ARENDS] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT] whether we cannot reach some fair agreement as to a limitation of time on this section.

Mr. SHORT. The gentleman will find us both cooperative, sir.

Mr. THOMASON. Then, Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 30 minutes.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, it will be recalled that I spoke in general debate at some length with reference to what I conceive to be the effects of section 11. In presenting the substitute amendment for section 11, I should probably like to have a little more than 5 minutes in order to make a proper presentation. I would like probably 10 minutes.

Mr. THOMASON. May I say I am certainly not disposed toward cutting anyone off from having a fair amount of time.

Mr. LANHAM. I would like to have 10 minutes, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. THOMASON. If I amend my request to limit debate to 40 minutes, that will probably give the gentleman an extra 5 minutes. We are just trying to save time.

Mr. SHORT. None of us have any purpose or desire to limit debate unduly so far as anyone is concerned. But since the gentleman from Texas spoke on this section the day before yesterday and the gentleman from Illinois spoke yesterday, it seems to me they covered the ground pretty thoroughly at that time. I hope we can set a limit on debate.

Mr. LANHAM. May I say to the gentleman that I did not speak, however, in explanation of the details of the amendment I am going to offer as a substitute.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, in glancing around the Chamber I wonder whether I may be the only Member who is going to speak in defense of the provisions of the bill unless members of the committee intend to do so.

Mr. THOMASON. No; the gentleman from California will not be the only one.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 45 minutes and that the acting chairman of the committee have the last 5 minutes.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, is it the understanding that I will have 10 minutes to make an explanation of the substitute for the section?

Mr. THOMASON. If the gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to be given that additional time, I certainly shall not object. I hope it would not be setting a precedent.

Mr. LANHAM. I may not use all of it, but I would like to have that understanding connected with the request.

Mr. THOMASON. May I say to my colleague I would not object.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas that debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 45 minutes?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, I do so to request of the committee if it is thought possible to finish the bill tonight. Are you driving to finish tonight?

Mr. THOMASON. We certainly will drive as fast as we can. I cannot commit the House or the Committee on that.

Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto be limited to 45 minutes, with the acting chairman, or somebody whom he may designate, to have the last 5 minutes.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HINSHAW. The time being limited to 45 minutes does not include the time of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ELSTON], does it?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is correct. It does not include the time.

Each Member will be recognized for 3 minutes.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ELSTON] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, if section 11 is permitted to remain in this bill, it will completely void our existing patent system. The only testimony presented to the Military Affairs Committee on this phase of the bill was by Mr. Conder C. Henry, who for 17 years was the chief examiner of patent applications in the United States Patent Office, and for 5 years was Assistant United States Patent Commissioner. In his appearance before our committee, Mr. Henry represented the American Bar Association and the House Committee on Patents, being a member of the committee's National Advisory Committee. As Assistant Commissioner of Patents during the war, Mr. Henry issued a large part of the security orders which were issued under the law in application for patents.

Mr. PRICE of Illinois. Will the gentleman tell us who Mr. Henry was employed by?

Mr. ELSTON. You can read the hearings and find that out.

You will note from his testimony that hundreds of inventions used on the Manhattan project were made by private inventors. Yet the security of the Nation and the interests of the Government were fully safeguarded. Notwithstanding this demonstration of the adequacy of our present laws from the standpoint of security, we are asked to scrap a system upon which a great part of our industrial economy has been created. In its place it is urged that we adopt a system which is paralleled only by the patent laws of Soviet Russia. About the only difference is that in Soviet Russia an inventor may have his name placed in the Labor Book, which gives him a priority for a position as a scientific worker. Under this bill the inventor would receive whatever royalty fee might be awarded by the Patent Compensation Board consisting of two or more employees of the Commission. In making application for his royalty fee, the sponsors of this un-American system have magnanimously provided that an applicant for a patent may be represented by counsel. I have examined the hearings before the Senate committee, which our committee was told need not be supplemented, and while I find that such persons as Mr. Harold L. Ickes, Mr. Henry Wallace, a radio commentator, and various and sundry professors and scientists were called as witnesses, only one person presuming to know anything about our patent laws appears to have testified. He made the statement that—

> The provision of our Constitution for the granting of exclusive rights, which has served so admirably in the past, should be continued with respect to this new art, in order that the development thereof may not be hampered.

Mr. Chairman, I submit that section 11 of this bill violates both the spirit and the letter of the Constitution, as expressed in its due-process-of-law provision, as well as in article I, section 8, clause 8, which provides:

> The Congress shall have • • • power to promote the program of science and useful arts by securing for limited times for authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries.

In the minority views of the committee we have cited a number of Supreme Court decisions interpreting these constitutional provisions. Let me quote from just one of them, Solomons v. U. S. (137 U. S. 342, 346), in which the Court said:

> The Government has no more power to appropriate a man's property invested in a patent than it has to take his property invested in real estate.

As a revolutionary departure from the present patent system, the bill provides in section 11 that inventions and discoveries in the following fields shall not in the future be patentable:

First. The production of fissionable material;

Second. The utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy for a military weapon;

Third. Inventions to the extent used in the conduct of research or development activities in the fields specified in section 3 of the bill.

With respect to each of the foregoing three fields any patent that has already been granted would be revoked in whole or in part, that is to the extent that any such invention or discovery is so used in these fields. Section 11 also provides that in the future no patent shall be granted for those three fields.

For removing patent protection in the field of the production of fissionable material and in the field of utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy for military weapon, the report of the Senate committee gives the following reasons:

> The committee concluded that private patents can play no role in the field of activity reserved exclusively for the Government. For this reason and to eliminate risk of disclosure of restricted information, risk which would be certain to arise under normal patent procedure, the bill provides that invention and discovery in these fields shall not be patentable matter.

Heretofore inventions useful solely or largely for governmental purposes, as, for example, military weapons, have been the subject matter of patents. Some of the most important of such inventions have been developed by independent inventors. It would be unwise to change a practice which for approximately 150 years has proven to be advantageous to the Government as well as to private inventors.

As to the reason for removing these inventions from the field of patentable subject matter given by the committee's report; namely, to eliminate risk of disclosure of restricted information such removal of the inventions from patentable subject matter is an inadequate and an ineffectual means for effectuating that purpose. The present law does that much more effectively. I refer to the act of October 6, 1917 (40 Stat. 934, U. S. C., title 35, sec. 42), which provides as follows:

> Whenever the publication or disclosure of an invention by the granting of a patent might, in the opinion of the Commissioner of Patents, be detrimental to the public safety or defense he may order that the invention be kept secret and withhold the grant of a patent for such period or periods as in his opinion the national interest requires: Provided, That the invention disclosed in the application for said patent may be held abandoned upon it being established before or by the Commissioner that in violation of said order said invention has been published or disclosed or that an application for a patent therefor has been filed in a foreign country by the inventor or his assigns or legal representatives, without the consent or approval of the Commissioner of Patents.

When an applicant whose patent is withheld as herein provided and who faithfully obeys the order of the Commissioner of Patents above referred to shall tender his invention to the Government of the United States for its use, he shall, if and when he ultimately receives a patent, have the right to sue for compensation to begin from the date of the use of the invention by the Government: Provided, That the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy or the chief officer of any established defense agency of the United States, as the case may be, is authorized to enter into an agreement with the said applicant in full settlement and compromise for the damage accruing to him by reason of the order of secrecy, and for the use of the invention by the Government.

It is true that section 2 of the above quoted act makes no provision for secrecy during the times of peace, since it merely provides that the act "shall remain in force during the time when the United States is at war." It would seem far more effective, if it is desired to prevent premature disclosure, to do so by making the above quoted act effective at all times so far as the production of fissionable material and of the utilization of fissionable material for military weapons is concerned.

Section 11, in addition to providing as above stated, that patents already issued in these fields shall be revoked, further provides that where the invention has not been already patented, the inventor "shall file with the Commission a report containing a complete description thereof unless such invention is described in an application filed in the Patent Office by the inventor." It still further provides that, in case the report shall be filed within a specified time, the inventor may make application to the Commission for an award for his invention. Provision is made for a Patent Compensation Board to determine what such award shall be.

Such provision for an award would throw an almost insufferable burden upon the Patent Compensation Board. A person thinking he has possibly made an invention could disclose the same to the Board and seek an award without being under any expense in so doing. The Commission would, therefore, undoubtedly have a large number of impractical schemes submitted to it for consideration. The person submitting his alleged invention would have nothing to lose in case his invention is turned down. Moreover, past experience has shown that failure to appreciate an invention at the time it is made, or at any time soon thereafter, is quite likely to happen. The vast importance of such inventions as the telephone and the modern vacuum tube went without proper appreciation until long experience and development activities by private enterprise demonstrated their importance.

If a Patent Compensation Board has had to pass upon these and other inventions of major importance, such Board would undoubtedly have failed to recommend the very considerable awards which should have been due to the inventors. It would be far better and more equitable to allow the grant of the patent and leave to the future the determination of the amount of compensation to which the inventor is justly entitled. That is, let the Government, as at present, exercise eminent domain and pay just compensation for what it actually takes; and not engage in speculation as to whether the invention is or is not valuable, and if so, to what extent.

No good reason is seen for departing from our present patent system and adopting an "award" system akin to the practice in Russia. Such award would not be as satisfactory an incentive as the present patent grant and all too frequently would result in an award given where it is not deserved and being withheld where it is actually due.

The other field which section 11 would remove from patent protection is that of research. As to this section 11 (b) provides—

No patent hereafter granted shall confer any rights with respect to any invention or discovery to the extent that such invention or discovery is used in the conduct of research or development activities in the fields specified in section 3. Any rights conferred by any patent heretofore granted for any invention or discovery are hereby revoked to the extent that such invention or discovery is so used, and just compensation shall be made therefor.

The fields specified in section 3 in which no patents will be granted for use of inventions in the conduct of research and development are as follows:

(a) Nuclear processes;

(b) The theory of production of atomic energy including processes, materials, and devices related to such production;

(c) Utilization of fissionable and radio-active materials for medical, biological, health, or military purposes or utilization of fissionable or radio-active materials and process entailed in the production of such material for all other purposes, including industrial uses; and

(d) The protection of health during research and production activities.

In view of the fact that atomic energy is defined to mean "all forms of energy released in the course of or as a result of nuclear fission or nuclear transformation," the fields above specified practically include, in language at least, everything in the universe. As stated in the Secretary of State's report on the International Control of Atomic Energy "almost all sources of the energy used on earth come to us from the sunlight which this great atomic energy plant provides." Even if these fields are limited to man-made production of atomic energy, the provisions of the bill are entirely too sweeping.

As is well known, many important industries are engaged in the manufacture and sale of research instruments which are useful only, or to a large extent, in the conduct of research and development activities. The bill would provide that no patents would be granted in the future for such inventions and that patent protection already granted therefore would be revoked. No provision is made even for an award for inventions in these fields. The bill would thus place these highly important kinds of invention without the pale of patent protection without any protection whatsoever in the future; and would destroy the incentive of inventors and industry to spend time and money in the development and commercialization of instrumentalities indispensable in research and development work.

I wish to emphasize the fact that the taking away from patent owners the rights they now possess in the field of research and development and giving them to private enterprise, even to competitive enterprises, is not the Government's exercise of eminent domain for which just compensation should be made. On the contrary, it is depriving a person of his property without due process of law.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. MARTIN] is recognized.

PATENT LEGISLATION SHOULD NOT BE INCLUDED AT PRESENT IN ATOMIC ENERGY CONTROL ACT

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, the patent provisions in section 11 of the McMahon bill, S. 1717, represent a complete departure from the fundamental and basic principles of the United States patent system. Such changes could be defended only on the grounds that the present system is unable to cope with the future. Such fears would appear to be groundless since other provisions of the bill are ample to protect the national safety and the public interest.

The fundamental or basic principles of our patent laws are grounded in the constitutional provision giving Congress the power to promote the progress of science and the useful arts and granting to inventors exclusive rights to their inventions for a limited time. Those basic principles have been almost universally recognized as of great importance, and have been emphasized by the Supreme Court in numerous decisions during the last 100 years. They were restated by the United States Supreme Court on January 8, 1945, in the Glass Industry Case (323 U. S. 415). Among those basic principles are:

First. The exclusive right granted by a patent for a limited time is merely the right to exclude others from making, using, or selling the patented invention. The patent gives no right to make, use, or sell the invention and any such right that the patentee may have is a common-law right in nowise dependent upon the patent laws. The right to exclude others is the exclusive right provided for by the Constitution and is distinctive of our patent system.

Second. Patents are property. Since patents are property they should receive the same protection as is given to other forms of property and any provision for compulsory sharing of that property with others, such as by compulsory licensing, is inimical to our system of private enterprise.

In considering proposals for revising our patent system such as is provided in section 11 of this bill, it is especially important that these two basic fundamental principles be borne in mind in order that, not even unwittingly, shall these distinct and beneficent features of our patent system be destroyed.

During the last 12 years there have been three major committees or commissions appointed under Government authority to make reports with respect to our patent system; namely, the Science Advisory Board Committee, which made its report in 1935; the Temporary National Economic Committee, which made its final report in 1941; and the National Patent Planning Commission, which made the first of its reports in 1943. Each of these committees issued warnings and made strong recommendations against any revolutionary changes in the patent system.

The Science Advisory Board Committee stated:

> Modifications should be entered upon carefully without destroying any vital part of the structure.

And further that—

> The patent system in the past has been one of the primary influences in shaping American industrial life, and it has assisted enormously in the development of the country * * *. Radical changes in such a system should, of course, not be undertaken without serious and careful consideration.

The Temporary National Economic Committee in its final report stated:

> The Temporary National Economic Committee rejoices in the endless march of discovery, invention, and innovation which has made possible the relatively high level of living enjoyed in the United States.

The chairman of the Committee, Senator O'MAHONEY, gave out a statement in which he said:

> (1) * * * inventors and business still need the protection and stimulation of patents.
>
> * * * * * *
>
> (7) There was practically unanimous agreement among the witnesses that Congress, by the enactment of the patent law, has given this country a system far superior to that which exists in any other country.

The National Patent Planning Commission in its report stated:

> This system has accomplished all that the framers of the Constitution intended. It is the only provision of the Government for the promotion of invention and discovery and is the basis upon which our entire industrial civilization rests.

It further stated that—

> The basic principles of the present system should be preserved.

In April 1945, President Truman asked the Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Wallace, to undertake a study of the operation and effectiveness of the patent laws and their relation to the purposes of the antitrust laws and postwar economy, and to submit recommendations respecting legislative proposals. A patent survey committee appointed for that purpose has since then been busily engaged in undertaking the work laid out for it which, of course, embraces a consideration of proposals such as are found in section 11 of the present bill. No reason is apparent meanwhile for hasty action by Congress upon the vital patent questions involved.

Patent provisions should not be introduced in the bill unless there is an extreme urgency for so doing. Especially provisions which are of a revolutionary character should not be considered except after ample opportunity has been given for their careful consideration. Such drastic patent legislation should, of course, be referred to the congressional committees on patents, which are especially qualified to evaluate such provisions.

Other provisions of the bill by which the Commission is given authority to control all uses of fissionable material, including use not merely for military purposes, and for research and industrial purposes as well, render any further control through patents absolutely unnecessary.

For example, section 5, paragraph 2, vests in the Government ownership of all fissionable materials.

Section 5, paragraph 4, authorizes and directs the Commission to distribute fissionable material or atomic energy except under and in accordance with the license issued by the Commission authorizing such manufacture, production, export or utilization.

Section 7 (c) especially provides where activities under any license might serve to maintain or to foster the growth of monopoly, restraint of trade, unlawful competition, or other trade position inimical to the entry of new, freely competitive enterprises in the field, the Commission is authorized and directed to refuse to issue such licenses or to establish such conditions to prevent these results as the Commission, in consultation with the Attorney General, may determine. The Commission shall report promptly to the Attorney General any information it may have with respect to any utilization of fissionable materials or atomic energy which appears to have these results. Under these provisions the Commission is not merely authorized but it is directed to prevent any monopolistic practices in this art by refusing or revoking licenses to enter this field, even for industrial purposes by those abusing the license rights. Even the license, if granted, is limited to 1 year. Certainly it clearly appears, therefore, that any necessity for special patent provisions is unnecessary.

Especially should no attempt be made to incorporate patent provisions in a law to further govern the use of atomic energy in the fields of research or of the utilization of fissionable or radio-active materials for medical, biological, or other industrial uses. Such uses are not materially different in kind from uses under patents granted nowadays for other classes of inventions. There is no necessity for patent legislation directed against the development of inventions in this new field of atomic energy. If subsequent experience indicates need in this field for special treatment other than elsewhere provided in the bill, Congress will be in a far better position to enact legislation than it is now when at best so much is pure speculation as to any probable necessity therefor.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM].

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LANHAM: Pages 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40. Strike out all of the patent provisions commencing with line 5 on page 34 down to and including line 18 on page 40 and substitute in lieu thereof the following:

"SEC. 11. (a) The Commission is authorized to purchase, for the manufacture or use by or for the United States Government, any and all rights in and to any invention or discovery, or application for patent or patents thereon, relating to research on or the production of fissionable material or the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy.

"(b) The Commission is authorized to condemn, and to determine and make just compensation for, any and all rights in and to any invention or discovery relating to research on or the production of fissionable materials or the utilization of fissionable materials or atomic energy that affects the national defense and security: Provided, however, That upon the determination by the Commission that the national defense or security is no longer involved, any and all rights in and to such invention or discovery shall revert to the owner, subject to a nonexclusive, irrevocable and nontransferable license in favor of the Government.

"(c) When any person who has made an invention or discovery relating to research on or the production of fissionable material, or the utilization of fissionable materials or atomic energy and shall have filed an application for a patent thereon and shall have tendered his invention or discovery to the Government of the United States for its use, he shall, if and when he ultimately receives a patent, have the right to sue for compensation as provided for in this section, such right to compensation to begin from the date of any use of the invention by the Government: Provided, That the Commission is authorized to enter into and effect an agreement with said applicant in full settlement and compromise for the use of his invention by the Government.

"(d) If any person is dissatisfied with the determination of the Commission as to just compensation, he may have his remedy by filing a suit in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, if filed within 6 months after such determination; and such court, on notice to the Commission and other due procedures had, may thereupon determine the amount of the compensation to be paid such person, as the facts in the case may appear: Provided, That in any such suit the United States may avail itself of any and all defenses, general and special, that might be pleaded by a defendant in an action for infringement, as set forth in title 60 of the revised statutes, or otherwise. Any final judgment rendered against the Commission under any provision of this section shall have like force and effect as a money judgment rendered against the United States by the Court of Claims in a suit in respect of which the United States has expressly agreed to be sued; and the amount of any such final judgment shall be paid out of any appropriation applicable to the case, if any such there be; and when no such appropriation exists, said judgment shall be paid in the same manner as judgments rendered by the Court of Claims in cases under its general jurisdiction.

"(e) Any party aggrieved by any final judgment in a proceeding under this section may appeal therefrom to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, and upon such appeal said court shall have power to review said judgment and affirm, revoke, or modify the same as upon appeals in other actions at law.

"(f) Attorneys appointed by the Commission may appear for and represent the Commission before any Government agency or judicial tribunal with respect to any and all invention, patent, and research matters in which the Commission is involved.

"(g) Any person who has made, or hereafter makes, any invention or discovery utilizing fissionable materials or atomic energy designed or specially adapted for use as or in a military weapon, shall file with the Commission a report containing a complete description thereof. The report covering any such invention or discovery shall be filed on or before whichever of the following is the latest: (1) The sixtieth day after the date of enactment of this act; (2) The sixtieth day after completion of such invention or discovery; or (3) the sixtieth day after such person first discovers, or first has reason to believe that such invention or discovery is specially useful as or in such a weapon."

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANHAM. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I am very anxious to hear a more complete discussion by the gentleman from Texas than he can give in his allotted time. I ask unanimous consent that my remarks may be inserted immediately following the remarks of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ELSTON], and that I may yield my time to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM].

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, I am just as much opposed to section 11 as the gentleman from Ohio who offered an amendment to strike it out. I spoke in general debate citing reasons why the adoption of section 11 as it appears in the bill would abolish our patent system upon which the progress of this country has depended.

The reason I am offering my amendment rather than supporting the one striking out the section is that if this bill should pass and go to the conference committee, that committee probably would reinsert section 11; then we would have no option upon its return to this body except to vote for or against section 11.

Mr. Chairman, may I say that the amendment which I have offered has the approval of the gentleman who has been the adviser in patent matters in connection with atomic energy from the very beginning; it has the approval of the National Patent Council, the small manufacturers of this country; it has the approval of the patent section of the American Bar Association; it has the approval of the American Patent Law Association, and it will not in any way injure our patent system and its protection and promotion. It will give to this Commission in all fairness every right which it should receive.

In addition to the approval of those whom I have mentioned, I received on yesterday this letter from the president of the New York Patent Law Association. He writes as follows:

THE NEW YORK
PATENT LAW ASSOCIATION,
July 17, 1946.

Hon. FRITZ G. LANHAM,
House Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

Re: McMahon atomic energy bill.

DEAR SIR: It is generally believed that the field of atomic energy is destined to be one of great commercial and industrial importance, possibly competing with or supplanting coal, oil, gas or water power, in addition to its obvious military and international aspects.

It is of fundamental importance that the incentives to invention and practical development provided by our patent system should not be jettisoned in this new industrial field. Yet the pending McMahon bill, S. 1717, and its companion, H. R. 6179, which have never had the benefit of consideration by the Patents Committee of either the Senate or the House, would virtually abolish the patent system in this new field.

It is not commonly appreciated that these bills go far beyond the military and international aspects of atomic energy and include the entire industrial field—section 1 on policy includes all industrial and commercial phases of improving the public welfare and increasing the standard of living; section 7 giving the Government licensing power, covers all uses of atomic energy whether for military or for industrial purposes; the bill throughout refers not only to fissionable material such as used in the atomic bomb but also to atomic energy broadly, even though usable solely for industrial purposes.

Similarly the patent provisions limiting or abolishing patent rights are drawn to cover all aspects of atomic energy—section 11a relates to production and military utilization; section 11b refers to research; section 11c refers to nonmilitary utilization.

1. In the military field (where, under existing and time-tested law, there is no question that patents could not interfere with the activities of the Government or its contractors) the important incentives provided by patents are abolished by prohibiting the grant of all patent rights and substituting a system of awards to be made by a specially created Government board. This board, acting in advance of the event, would have no basis for determining value as does the Court of Claims which makes an award after the event; nor would this board have any basis for determining priority among rival claimants, as does the Patent Office under the patent system.

2. In the research and commercial fields important incentives of patents are abolished by the institution of a system of compulsory licensing. The Congress has consistently and for many years rejected efforts to establish compulsory licensing of patents. The public interest underlying this policy is well understood by the Patent Committees of both the Senate and the House and applies to all industrial fields including that of atomic energy.

I urge on all the Members of the Congress that the patent provisions (sec. 11) of this bill should be deleted before its passage.

Very truly yours,
R. MORTON ADAMS,
President.

Mr. Chairman, I repeat that this amendment which I have offered as a substitute has the approval of those who are interested in our patent laws and our patent system and in the preservation of the privileges rightfully granted to inventors in the Constitution and that have been preserved by the legislative bodies of this Government since our Republic first began.

What does this amendment do that I have offered? It allows this Commission by purchase or by condemnation to acquire any patent that it needs or any application for patent or any invention that it needs. It provides that in case it acquires a patent and discovers after a while that it is not useful with reference to atomic energy, it can retain a nonexclusive, nontransferable license for the use of it and transfer the patent back to the owner. It is impossible to conceive, when a patent is first issued or first applied for, what the ramifications of its use and success may be during the 17 years that the patent exists. Certainly, the patent owner should not be forever deprived of the advantages of his patent in industry and in the activities of civil life, and there is no reason for the Commission to keep it beyond the time that it is useful for the purposes set forth in this bill.

It provides that, if the compensation that is awarded by the Commission is not adequate in the judgment of the patent owner, he may have his day in court to determine that, and that he may have, in the case of dissatisfaction, an appeal to the Court of Appeals in order that his proper compensation for the time his patent is used may be fixed. Surely, all that we want to do is to give this Commission the right to the use of the patents that it needs and the patents that it can make of service in the promotion of atomic energy.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. ARENDS. Mr. Chairman, my name is on the list for time. I ask unanimous consent that my time be given to the gentleman from Texas, who is so well acquainted and so conversant with the matter of patents.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, this amendment gives the Commission the right to acquire any patent that it may need, and it also preserves our patent system and does not permit compulsory licensing and the undermining and the abolishment of the incentives to American ingenuity and inventive genius upon which the prosperity of our country has been founded.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANHAM. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. SPRINGER. Under the gentleman's amendment, is there a provision that permits voluntary licensing?

Mr. LANHAM. The Government may acquire any patent. It may acquire by negotiation voluntary licensing from the patent owner, if that is what it wishes, or it may acquire his patent ownership outright, with the provision that for proper compensation it can use his patent while it is effective for the purposes of the act, and when no longer effective in that way in the opinion of the Commission it reverts to the owner in order that he may get the use that he should get, with a license retained by the Government.

Mr. JENNINGS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANHAM. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. JENNINGS. It is fortunate, I think, for the House that we have among us a man with the ability and thorough and comprehensive knowledge of the patent laws of this country that the distinguished gentleman who is now addressing us has. I feel that we ought to go along with him on this amendment.

Mr. LANHAM. I thank the gentleman.

This is a detailed and technical matter. I have been on the Committee on Patents for more than 20 years. This section has been handled by a committee not familiar with it. You may take my word for it that, unless you want to abolish our patent system, unless you want to cripple and destroy the incentive for American ingenuity to give expression to itself in inventions that will promote the progress of our country, you should adopt this amendment, which the people interested in patents approve, and preserve this fundamental system of our Nation.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANHAM. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. JUDD. All the patents when they are granted are made available for persons to come and inspect. Under the gentleman's amendment would patents that were held by the Commission be open for public inspection and knowledge?

Mr. LANHAM. Provision is made for keeping secret those that are primarily useful for national defense. As a matter of fact, I am the author of the law that provides that. The War Department and the Navy Department have their own research counsel with reference to patents, who work with the Patent Commissioner and his office, and whatever they discover is kept secret if it should be.

Mr. JUDD. Those provisions would apply under the gentleman's amendment?

Mr. LANHAM. Those provisions would apply.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANHAM. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. But the holder of a patent or the person who applies for a patent would have to register that patent, would he not?

Mr. LANHAM. The Commission under this amendment may even take an application for a patent before the patent is ever granted. The Commission has the right to get an invention before it has ever reached the patent stage, from the standpoint of applications, or it may get inventions for which patents have not even been applied for.

Let us preserve our patent system and not adopt a section devised by some one unknown that would destroy and abolish the fundamental basis of our progress.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. WHITE].

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Chairman, we are dealing with one of the fundamental principles of our Government, the advancement of science. Anybody who reviews the history of the United States cannot fail to be impressed with what the advancement of science through the national patents policy has done for this country. If I were asked to state which building in this country houses the most important office of the Government, the office that is more responsible for the preeminent position attained by our Government among world powers, I would point to the Patent Office. I would go back to the invention of the cotton gin, the steamboat, steel, and all the inventions that have placed us in that preeminent position abreast of and ahead of the rest of the world. I subscribe to everything said by the gentleman from Texas who preceded me.

Let me read from a release from the National Patent Council, sent to the office of every Congressman:

"The McMahon atomic energy bill (S. 1717) reflects the blind arrogance of bureaucracy gone mad," declared John W. Anderson, spokesman for small business, today. "The bill would drive American inventive diligence underground. It would create a vast black market in dangerous atomic inventions. Secret agents of foreign governments would find United States inventors cringing from the harsh treatment threatened by their own Government. Fear and resentment would lead to secret deals in which alien agents would get the inventions for black cash."

I read further from this release:

"The patent provisions of this bill," he said, "are so totally un-American and unconstitutional that all industry was amazed and aroused last week to learn that the House Committee on Military Affairs had reported it out favorably in the face of violent protests from industry and others."

If there is anything we should be jealous of and if there is anything we should protect, it is the right of the individual citizen of this country to be rewarded for his inventive genius. We should foster the advancement of science by protecting the right of patenting inventions.

Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. HINSHAW].

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, in the event the amendment of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] is not agreed to, I have at the Clerk's desk an amendment at line 11, page 35, which adds the words before the period "and just compensation shall be made therefor." In items Nos. 1 and 2 on page 34, it is provided in each case that just compensation shall be made. In item 3, however, which does not refer to a patent but to a mere invention or discovery useful in the production of fissionable material, the discoverer or inventor is required to report to the Commission within 60 days giving a full description thereof but no reward whatsoever is provided in the text of the bill. It seems to me that must have been an oversight on the part of the Senate committee or on the part of the House committee. I trust that in the event the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Texas is not agreed to, the committee will agree to the insertion of the language I propose. I do not exactly see how you can, by law, force any man who has made a discovery or invention for which no patent application has been made, to disclose his discovery to the Commission if he does not want to, until he should perhaps attempt to put his discovery or invention into practice. Certainly, to attempt by law to force him to make disclosure without reward is carrying things pretty far into the nebulous realms. I wonder what starry-eyed dreamer wrote this provision in subsection (3).

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. FOLGER].

Mr. FOLGER. Mr. Chairman, it is rather difficult, in fact, impossible, to analyze the substitute amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas. I have felt in reading the provisions of section 11 that the ultimate purpose of all the provisions of that section were not to discourage inventive genius or to destroy patent provisions, but to recognize them as having a legitimate place in our economy and in the world as well and that that very provision is to encourage discovery and inventive genius and provide that compensation might be made. I apprehend that the framers of this section feel about the matter as I feel, that this is not something set up to be exploited by men in order to create discoveries and inventions which they may consider to be commercially advantageous to themselves. It is not a money-making proposition. It is something that is not going to be cornered by a few men. If atomic energy outside its military value amounts to as much as many of our people think it will, it is largely something that has been discovered and paid for by the people of the United States of America. I cannot understand why it is thought that the handling of this subject as it is handled in section 11 of the bill would have any effect upon the patent laws and rights of men in discoveries and inventions in this country.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SAVAGE].

Mr. SAVAGE. Mr. Chairman, the Constitution says that "the Congress has the right to promote the progress of science and useful arts by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries."

I, like the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. FOLGER], want to point out that it was the American people who spent about $2,000,000,000 for the discovery of atomic energy. I think the people have as much right to the control of this dangerous entity as any private corporation. I do not see that it affects our patent laws. This is an exception to the patent laws.

I also want to point out that many corporations in the United States are now destroying initiative when they hire workers. Before you can go on the pay roll you have to sign a statement that the patent on anything you invent while working for that company shall be the property of the corporation, and the man gets no compensation of any kind for the invention. They are destroying initiative themselves.

I think that may very well apply to atomic energy. A corporation that requires its employees to sign over to the corporation all patent rights on anything the employee might invent or discover will also require scientists in their employ to sign a waiver, then what becomes of your incentive? There is more incentive in the bill as it now is than there will be if either amendment is adopted. The bill as is would compensate an inventor, but if amended there will be no compensation for the inventor from anybody. If it is incentive you are after you had better kill these amendments.

I am opposed to both of the pending amendments, the one offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] and also the amendment to strike out the entire section 11. I think it is too dangerous to make public the records of atomic energy. I do not believe there is anything wrong with holding these secrets. If they are going to be kept secrets, let us not make public records in the Patent Office of inventions regarding atomic energy.

We, by our votes on these amendments, are going to place the control of these vital patents in the hands of the Government or in the hands of corporations. We cannot trust corporations with such vital secrets. I can still remember, and so can you, that Standard Oil, just prior to the war, made a deal with Hitler that if Hitler would keep the patents for synthetic gasoline out of this country Standard Oil would attempt to prevent the development of synthetic rubber in the United States. Hitler believed that if he could deprive us of rubber tires it would mean our defeat. You know how crucial the rubber situation became during the war and it is not entirely cleared up yet. Was the Standard Oil Co. thinking of the welfare of the country or was it thinking of a monopoly in the oil business? You know the answer to that one. Furthermore this happened at a time when the country's supply of crude oil was running low with less than a 20-year supply remaining.

What about the Anaconda Copper Co. whose officials were convicted of producing inferior copper wire for the American soldiers to use on the battle fronts? How many men did that company kill? How would you like to turn the atomic bomb secrets over to that Garsson outfit which the Senate now has on the carpet? Too many people in Congress have profititis. They want some outfit to make a profit on everything but those same Members can seldom see the need for anything for the people.

This Seventy-ninth Congress is really doing a job for the country, this atomic bomb control bill is butchered up now about as bad as the OPA bill.

I hope these amendments will be defeated. I hope all the amendments that have been adopted here in the Committee of the Whole will be defeated when we report the bill back to the House. I do not want to see the control of atomic energy turned over to the Army nor to the corporations. I want to see the bill passed substantially as it came from the Senate.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Washington has expired.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. GWINN] for 3 minutes.

Mr. GWINN of New York. Mr. Chairman, the debate has made clear that so long as we are at war or threatened with war the military secret of atomic bombing should remain exactly where it is.

The armed forces are better guardians of military secrets than any political commission. Treasonable conduct regarding a military secret is subject to immediate court martial. This need for top-military secrecy takes precedence, therefore, for the time being over any consideration of peacetime use of atomic energy for industrial development. We hope that the tense international situation will change in 6 months. Until then, this bill should be recommitted to the Military Affairs Committee for further study.

When this atomic discovery is no longer a secret, and peace and international order are assured, and the nations of the world together turn to industrial, agricultural, and medical developments, there will be no need for a huge and intricate atomic commission like the one contemplated in S. 1717.

Government must probably register and license the use of atomic energy in the same way dangerous materials are licensed in many fields. For such a purpose there is no use for such a commission as proposed.

When the time comes for the industrial and agricultural and humanitarian uses of this energy, the accumulated knowledge should be made freely available to the mind and imagination of the inventive geniuses of our country. From these men will come the inventions and discoveries in the application of atomic energy in the next 20 years as the theoretical and technological discovery of it all came from them during the last 20 years. All this happened without Government control, supervision, or direction by such commissions as here proposed.

The Government could not have selected or subsidized or even guessed who the discoverers of this energy would be. Nor is it likely that a mere Government commission in the next 20 years will contribute the most creative ideas in the further development of the scientific use of this energy. That impossible task is contemplated in this bill. It is totalitarianism. It is a rejection of our basic faith in the free human mind.

By comparison, government and its commissions and employees do not invent and discover. They suffer from a kind of intellectual sterility and bureaucratic incapacity for creative work of this kind. Why, then, should it be given control over what it cannot understand?

Even from the War and Navy Departments, having the greatest war plants in all the world, not one invention decisive in the success of modern warfare has come. The truly great discoveries and inventions have all come from individuals, many of them obscure, some of them even regarded as crack-pots; none of them subsidized.

The sad fact seems to be that a Government is more likely to prosecute than it is to promote the geniuses of discovery and invention. Mr. DeForest, the inventor of radio in America, was tried for 30 days in an effort to convict him for using the mails to sell stock on the representation that he had invented a machine to talk without the use of wires.

It is entirely contrary to experience to expect that Government commissions should be wise enough to own, explore, experiment, manufacture, promote, invent, subsidize and make scientific advances like Edison, Ford, Wright, DeForest, Blake, McCormick, Whitney, or the inventors of radar and electronics accomplished.

To sum up, the industrial development of this great Nation and the conversion of its industrial plants to war are so completely dependent upon the untrammeled exercise of the free mind and imagination of our citizens that we dare not depart from our traditional ways of doing things. American progress and world power are built upon the social and industrial benefits which a free nation has derived from inventors and workers not controlled by Government.

Thus, both for the sake of peace and for the sake of defense, we must stand firm in favor of freedom of action in the development even of this new device, if we are to be sure of maintaining our course in national development and in security of world affairs.

So, I shall vote to recommit the McMahon bill, S. 1717, for these reasons:

First, because the present status of world affairs does not warrant any action on behalf of the United States which would deprive this Nation of its supreme weapon of war. The guardianship of our secret war weapon must not be moved or disturbed.

Second, when peace and international order come, the outlawing entirely of the use of atomic weapons and the enforcement of the law by international police is the prerogative of the United Nations Security Council.

Finally, and above all, because I reject the very idea that any governmental or international commission shall have power to hamper, control or censor free men and their free science beyond the mere licensing required in the use of such dangerous materials.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. DOYLE].

PROPOSED AMENDMENT ENDANGERS NATIONAL SECURITY

Mr. DOYLE. Mr. Chairman, lest the House get the idea that all American industry is in favor of the gentleman's amendment, may I call attention to the fact that on yesterday I read two letters from the National Association of Manufacturers, one dated June 27 and one July 16, from their Patent Division.

I call your attention to the RECORD of yesterday, page 9359.

I repeat, you can read it. They there claim that while private enterprise should have more availability to this atomic energy, they admit that private enterprise is safeguarded by adequate licensing provisions by the Commission. In other words, that Nation-wide group of manufacturers recognizes that adequate licensing by the Commission is sound and necessary in the interests of national security and safety.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOYLE. No. I am sorry, I have only a few minutes; the gentleman has had 15.

Mr. Chairman, I wish to call attention to the fact that if you adopt this amendment you strike out all control by the United States Government of this most dangerous substance, for military purposes, unless it is acquired from the inventors by purchase or condemnation, after a military weapon is invented or patented. You wipe out all exclusive control at the source of this material by the United States Government, and turn it over to private speculation and control. You turn over to private parties the control of the source of this energy and control of the development of military weapons in the first instance. Yet we have already this day by other actions recognized it to be the most powerful element in history for destruction or for progress.

I am absolutely opposed to my Government being placed in second place, on account of any factor. Passing as we did a minute ago an amendment carrying the death penalty for revealing any of these secrets of this terrific atomic energy to a foreign government—yet we now propose by this amendment, to turn it over to the genius and the greed too, of all those elements in our population, to use and develop and produce as they wish, for purposes of monopoly and money profit, without the Federal Government's having any proper control or jurisdiction over it, even for war purposes unless it buys it. I say, that is fundamentally dangerous to our national security and safety.

Section 11 as now written in the bill and as passed by the Senate requires a license from the United States to use any invention or discovery which is useful solely for military purposes. Is not this in the interests of our national security and safety? Yet the proposed amendment by the gentleman from Texas would leave wide open the field of inventing and developing military weapons with the atomic energy in them in private hands and control and force our Government to condemn by court action if necessary their acquisition for our own national defense.

If this statement by me is not a fact, then I invite you to call attention to where in the proposed amendment there is anything to the contrary.

Yes, we have spent over $2,000,000,000 as taxpayers to develop it for our national security and safety—it won for us that very freedom—and now we propose by this amendment to turn it over to whosoever will to develop military weapons with, and then require our taxpayers to again spend millions to acquire these military machine inventions.

I repeat, that I invite the gentleman to point out if his amendment provides any sort of a limitation on the utmost freedom to develop atomic military weapons, or even bombs, without even the Government having a word to say, unless it condemns or otherwise acquires the invention or patent.

This amendment proposes to make billions of money for private gain at the expense of some of our national security and safety. It does it in effect, even though no Member of this House so intends, of course.

As for me on this far reaching issue of private gain versus maximum national safety and maximum progress of the human race, I choose to vote in favor of my Nation's welfare and security first, and leave money profit for monopolies out. We must this date make this choice.

No justification has yet been offered by proponents of the amendment as relates to the development of military weapons with atomic energy. They know there is no justification for leaving the invention and production of military weapons with atomic energy in private hands, so they stress that the Government can acquire by condemnation, through court action if necessary, any such development.

Nor does the amendment of the gentleman prohibit a private party inventing a military weapon with atomic energy from selling it to a foreign nation. It does authorize the United States Government to acquire it, but it does not undertake to compel an American inventor to offer to sell it to the United States first or at all. Under subdivision (g) of the proposed amendment it requires an inventor to disclose his invention to the Government the sixtieth day after he makes up his mind that his invention or discovery is especially useful as a military weapon. So, again, it places our Nation under the handicap of waiting upon an inventor to be willing to admit that he concludes he has a military weapon. It does not even give the Government a first option or right to purchase or acquire such invention for our national security.

Nor are any penalties proposed in the amendment of the gentleman. I can readily understand why, I think. It is because the requirements upon any inventor under this amendment, even in the field of the invention of military weapons with atomic energy, are so indefinite and uncertain that no penalty clause would have much chance of application in a court of last resort.

Yes, an inventor in America, under the gentleman's proposal, could invent a military weapon with the atomic energy factor even more destructive than the Hiroshima bomb, he could legally sell it to a foreign nation who might then be a potential or actual enemy to our national security; he could still file a report within the 60 days' period as provided in the gentleman's amendment; he could pocket his filthy monetary gain thus had; and he would still be acting within the requirements of the gentleman's amendment as far as military weapons are concerned.

Remember, gentlemen, this amendment does not reserve unto the Government any prior option to purchase, nor does it require the inventor to first offer it to the United States Government before he does to anybody else—foreign nations included.

So, under the gentleman's amendment we could easily have an invention in the military field, with a sale to an international cartel or a foreign nation by the inventor prior to the date he files his 60-day report with the United States Government, after he makes up his mind it is worth millions to him as a military weapon. So also, it leaves the field of military weapons wide open for foreign spies and agents to deal and trade with the few in our nation who might place greed for gold above patriotism. Yes, an American could invent a most destructive military weapon, he could sell and transfer it to a foreign nation through a foreign agent in this country; the invention could be removed to foreign shores and the American then file his 60-day report as required, and the inventor not have violated any provision of the proposed amendment. But, as long as the amendment is designed to allow freedom and free enterprise in the field of atomic energy for military weapons, we certainly could not then complain if the American inventor got all the gold he could for it. This is the sort of freedom of action this amendment would allow, regardless of our national safety and security. I am opposed to it.

Now, the field of industrial purposes I have not discussed for others have already done so.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PRICE] is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. PRICE of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, the only witness we had before our committee during the consideration of section 11 of this bill was Mr. Henry, former Commissioner of Patents, who appeared in opposition to the amendment. Mr. Henry at the present time, however, is privately employed as patent attorney for the Radio Corp. of America.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PRICE of Illinois. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. LANHAM. He is also one of the advisory council to the House Committee on Patents and went before the gentleman's committee at the express wish and request of the Committee on Patents.

Mr. PRICE of Illinois. I recall, however, that Mr. Henry was very confused when we asked him whether he was appearing as a representative of the Committee on Patents.

The present Commissioner of Patents not only has approved this section of the bill but participated in the drafting of parts of the section. The patent provisions are included in order to give special treatment to carry out other provisions of the bill. The atomic energy patents with which this section will deal are divided into two groups.

Group 1 consists of patents on the production of fissionable material and atomic weapons. The bill completely removes these subjects from the patent field. Since the production of fissionable material and atomic weapons are a Government monopoly, there seemed no point in having private patents for activities which could not be privately conducted. If this provision were not made, the Government would have to file for patents on the bomb and all secret processes and equipment to prevent private patents on these inventions. By eliminating patents in this field of exclusive Government activity, important secrets will be more closely guarded than if it were necessary for them to go through the Patent Office. Financial incentives for inventions in these fields are nevertheless retained through awards to be made by the Commission. Express provision is made for judicial review if the inventor is dissatisfied with the award.

The second group is limited to patents covering devices utilizing atomic energy, for example, atomic power plants, atomic-propelled ships, and so forth. Here, patents are applied for and issued in the usual way to private inventors. The only new provision is that if a patentee refuses to license an important patent, the Commission is authorized to require a license to be issued in return for a reasonable royalty to the patentee. This provision carries out the intent of the bill that the benefits of atomic energy be made generally available, and is specifically warranted by the fact that all development patents in the atomic energy field will necessarily be founded upon the work done in the Government's $2,000,000,000 project. Since the public has paid for a major part of these inventions the bill assures the public that the benefits of the inventions will be made generally available. If the patent holder is dissatisfied with the royalty, he is expressly granted judicial review. These provisions, as I stated at the beginning of my remarks, were approved by and in part drafted by the Commissioner of Patents.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. MURDOCK].

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, in 1937 one of the leading Members of this House rose solemnly in this well and declared that we ought to have a holiday on inventions. I think that in order to enforce such a holiday he meant to close the Patent Office. I took issue with him at the time, because I felt that you cannot put a damper on human ingenuity and the inventive spirit. However, I am going to take a slightly different attitude now because of changes occuring during the last 10 years. At that time the gentleman thought man had created some things he could not control. I do not know whether today he is sure of that fact or not, but I am afraid of it right now.

In reference to the matter of inventions that pertain to atomic weapons and the use of atomic energy, I feel we have something that is far too dangerous to leave too freely in human hands. For that reason I favor the provision in section 11 in this bill, and I am opposed to striking it out.

Mr. BIEMILLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURDOCK. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. BIEMILLER. As I understand section 11 in S. 1717, it only prevents the functioning of the normal patent system on two items of development; that is fissionable material and atomic weapons. I am inclined to ask the question of this House: Are you sincere in talking about secrecy with reference to atomic weapons or do you want profits? If you are going to permit private individuals to get patents on atomic weapons, a complete description must be filed in the Patent Office. It is there available to anyone who wants to look at it. Any intelligent scientists or technologist will have the secret of every atomic weapon. As far as I am concerned, I am for keeping secrecy above profits.

Mr. MURDOCK. I thank the gentleman and agree with him. I favor safeguarding property rights, yet I want to remind you that we have already denied the prospector, the man who goes out into the West and finds uranium, the right to establish a claim on that property having the material which may be converted into atomic energy. I think we ought to do very much the same thing for the protection of our national security, the same thing in regard to personal property in ideas covering this dangerous material as well as the mineral that is in the ground from which the material can be made. For that reason, I am opposed to the amendment which would strike section 11 from this bill.

I have not only read the extensive hearings of the Senate Committee on Atomic Energy, but I attended some of the sessions and heard the statements made. I was impressed with the seriousness of the attitude of the scientists. They appeared to me to have a deep sense of social responsibility. They were fearful of the terribly destructive power of the thing which they have produced, but they were also conscious of the great benefits which it might afford humanity. Yet practically all of them emphasized that when you produce atomic energy for peace you are at least 75 percent along the road of having it for war. That terribly significant fact makes it imperative that we must not permit atomic energy uncontrolled in private hands.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I am as susceptible as any Member of the House to an appeal for freedom, but the general purpose of this bill, if I understand it correctly, is to say that until we know what atomic energy is and will do, until we have established sufficient controls so as to enable mankind to live with it with safety, until we know the answer to some of the questions posed by the gentleman from Minnesota, Dr. JUDD, we cannot safely permit every private individual in the country to exercise unlimited freedom in handling, possessing, or patenting atomic energy.

The point has already been made that as soon as we permit anyone to patent fissionable material or weapons depending on atomic energy, the patent has to be registered and the description has to be given in such clear, exact, full, complete, and concise language that any person versed in the arts and professions can understand it. Those are the words of the patent law. Will that promote security?

Under the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas, anyone could patent fissionable material itself and it would then be incumbent upon the commission to go out and recapture the patent after it had been issued if the Commission believed it important to security. It is impossible for the Commission to guess what is going to happen all over the country with regard to such development. I think it quite evident that to plead for national security on the one hand and to say that private individuals might patent atomic energy on the other, is utterly inconsistent. So if either of these amendments is adopted, the safety provisions of the bill, the control over the terrible dangers inherent in misuse of this energy, will be largely lost.

Now as to my second point, I recall that the gentleman from Ohio himself the other day inserted an amendment in order that he might be sure that any person applying for the use of some of this material for industrial purposes in the future might be guaranteed his opportunity to get it. The gentleman appealed for his amendment on the ground that denial by the Commission of the use of radioactive material might at some future time deprive a man of the opportunity to remain in business.

Please bear in mind that argument as we consider the far more serious possibility of some single private corporation gaining a patent on some absolutely vital key device for the application of atomic energy. Such a corporation, if protected by a patent, could quite conceivably control and deny access to whole segments of the business life of America to everyone else.

We are dealing with a power here before the House today which may well transform the entire economy of the United States, and I have no fear of taking my stand on these grounds: First, I think the bill as written is quite right in refusing to allow the patentability of atomic energy itself, the very energy of the sun, for the development of which the American people as a whole have paid $2,000,000,000 and which, by every principle, must always belong to all the people. Second, I think the bill is also altogether correct in charging the Commission with this duty, that if in the future a patent is taken on some application of atomic energy—if it happens that such an invention is made that would, for example, deprive every company or agency of this country that now furnishes power or heat or light to the people of the very foundation of its business—then, under those circumstances, the Commission should exercise its power to require compulsory licensing, at a fair royalty, of such a patent. Unless this provision is retained, there is every likelihood of more complete monopolistic power than the world has ever seen being built on the basis of patents on this basic energy. To adopt either of these amendments is to risk the taking over of the whole economy of America and put it in monopolistic hands, of one or two great corporations. I furthermore plead for this understanding, that in recent years it has not been necessarily true that patents have advanced the sciences, and the arts, and the industrial progress, but sometimes they have hampered it, and we have evidence of that in the cartel agreements based on some patents that have been during the war period so inimical to national defense.

Would the House want some private agency to hold a patent on the air we breathe? I believe not. But who is to say the basic energy of every piece of matter in this universe is any more a fit subject for private patent than the air? No, Mr. Chairman; these amendments are wrong, fundamentally wrong. I am against them. I support the patent sections of the Senate bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. THOMASON].

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Chairman, my remarks will necessarily be very brief. I just want to make this observation. I am strong for the patent laws of this country, and I have great respect for the judgment of my colleague the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM]. But I have studied the provisions of this bill, and we are not dealing with ordinary patents. We are dealing with an extraordinary discovery. This Government has spent more than $2,000,000,000 already on the discovery of atomic energy. It has untold millions of dollars invested in the Manhattan project and the Oak Ridge project, and only today they are having another big experiment out near where I live, in the white sands of New Mexico. We are dealing with the most destructive thing that has ever been known since the Supreme Architect of the Universe threw this old world together.

As I understand this bill, ordinary and usual patents are not affected. This Government, Uncle Sam, owns this discovery. It is our bomb. It is our secret, and when the Commission wants to take over any patent, revoke any patent, take charge of any patent, they have to pay for it. There is to be just compensation just as if they were invoking condemnation proceedings for any other kind of property. It is a most unusual situation, the way I view it. If we were not dealing with this destructive agent, I would be in sympathy with the views of my colleague from Texas. This terrible weapon is and must be, at least for a time, a Government monopoly.

That is all I have to say. It is Uncle Sam's secret. It is Uncle Sam's property now. The United States Government, acting through the Commission or the Army or the Navy, must control it. Of course, private industry would like to have a part in it, and they can under proper conditions. The provisions of the bill place no improper restrictions on private enterprise. If the bomb is to be kept a secret and if atomic energy is later to be developed for medical and industrial use, patents at least for the present should be kept exclusively in Government hands. We must take no chances. This amendment should be defeated.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM].

The question was taken; and the Chair being in doubt, the Committee divided, and there were—ayes 121, noes 57.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

GENERAL AUTHORITY

SEC. 12. (a) In the performance of its functions the Commission is authorized to—

(1) establish advisory boards to advise with and make recommendations to the Commission on legislation, policies, administration, research, and other matters;

(2) establish by regulation or order such standards and instructions to govern the possession and use of fissionable and by-product materials as the Commission may deem necessary or desirable to protect health or to minimize danger from explosions and other hazards to life or property;

(3) make such studies and investigations, obtain such information, and hold such hearings as the Commission may deem necessary or proper to assist it in exercising any authority provided in this act, or in the administration or enforcement of this act, or any regulations or orders issued thereunder. For such purposes the Commission is authorized to administer oaths and affirmations, and by subpena to require any person to appear and testify, or to appear and produce documents, or both, at any designated place. No person shall be excused from complying with any requirements under this paragraph because of his privilege against self-incrimination, but the immunity provisions of the Compulsory Testimony Act of February 11, 1893 (U. S. C., title 49, sec. 46), shall apply with respect to any individual who specifically claims such privilege. Witnesses subpenaed under this subsection shall be paid the same fees and mileage as are paid witnesses in the district courts of the United States;

(4) appoint and fix the compensation of such officers and employees as may be necessary to carry out the functions of the Commission. Such officers and employees shall be appointed in accordance with the civil-service laws and their compensation fixed in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, except that to the extent the Commission deems such action necessary to the discharge of its responsibilities, personnel may be employed and their compensation fixed without regard to such laws. Attorneys appointed under this paragraph may appear for and represent the Commission in any case in any court. The Commission shall make adequate provision for administrative review of any determination to dismiss any employee;

(5) acquire such materials, property, equipment, and facilities, establish or construct such buildings and facilities, and modify such buildings and facilities from time to time as it may deem necessary, and construct, acquire, provide, or arrange for such facilities and services (at project sites where such facilities and services are not available) for the housing, health, safety, welfare, and recreation of personnel employed by the Commission as it may deem necessary;

(6) with the consent of the agency concerned, utilize or employ the services or personnel of any Government agency or any State or local government, or voluntary or uncompensated personnel, to perform such functions on its behalf as may appear desirable;

(7) acquire, purchase, lease, and hold real and personal property as agent of and on behalf of the United States and to sell, lease, grant, and dispose of such real and personal property as provided in this act;

(8) contract for the expenditure of funds for the purposes specified in section 10 (b) without regard to the provisions of section 87 of the act of January 12, 1895 (28 Stat. 622), and section 11 of the act of March 1, 1919 (40 Stat. 1270; U. S. C., title 44, sec. 111); and

(9) without regard to the provisions of the Surplus Property Act of 1944 or any other law, make such disposition as it may deem desirable of (A) radioactive materials, and (B) any other property the special disposition of which is, in the opinion of the Commission, in the interest of the national security.

(b) Security: The President may, in advance, exempt any specific action of the Commission in a particular matter from the provisions of law relating to contracts whenever he determines that such action is essential in the interest of the common defense and security.

(c) Advisory committees: The members of the General Advisory Committee established pursuant to section 2 (b) and the members of advisory boards established pursuant to subsection (a) (1) of this section may serve as such without regard to the provisions of sections 109 and 113 of the Criminal Code (18 U. S. C., secs. 198 and 203) or section 19 (e) of the Contract Settlement Act of 1944, except insofar as such sections may prohibit any such member from receiving compensation in respect of any particular matter which directly involves the Commission or in which the Commission is directly interested.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the Chair, Mr. GORE, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (S. 1717) for the development and control of atomic energy, had come to no resolution thereon.

TREASURY AND POST OFFICE DEPARTMENTS APPROPRIATION BILL, 1947

Mr. O'NEAL submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 5452) making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate numbered 7 to the bill (H. R. 5452) making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Omit the matter stricken out and inserted by said amendment; and the Senate agree to the same.

EMMET O'NEAL,
HERMAN P. KOPPLEMANN,
CLARENCE CANNON,
THOMAS D'ALESANDRO, Jr.,
JOHN TABER,
GORDON CANFIELD,
Managers on the Part of the House.

KENNETH MCKELLAR,
PAT MCCARRAN,
CARL HAYDEN,
THEODORE FRANCIS GREEN,
WALLACE H. WHITE, Jr.,
CHAN GURNEY,
CLYDE M. REED,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5452) making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, submit the following report in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report as to such amendment:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

Amendment No. 7: Eliminates language proposing amendments to the Silver Purchase Act, the repeal of the transactions tax on silver bullion and prohibiting ceiling prices on silver and silver products.

EMMET O'NEAL,
HERMAN P. KOPPLEMANN,
CLARENCE CANNON,
THOMAS D'ALESANDRO, Jr.,
JOHN TABER,
GORDON CANFIELD,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the conference report on the bill H. R. 5452.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the conference report.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR AND FEDERAL SECURITY AGENCY APPROPRIATIONS, 1947—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. HARE submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 6739) making appropriations for the Department of Labor, Federal Security Agency, and related independent agencies for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate numbered 39 to the bill (H. R. 6739) making appropriations for the Department of Labor, the Federal Security Agency, and related independent agencies, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

Amendment numbered 39: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 39, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out by said amendment insert the following: ": Provided further, That no part of the funds appropriated in this title shall be available to organize or assist in organizing agricultural laborers, or used in connection with investigations, hearings, directives, or orders concerning bargaining units composed of agricultural laborers as referred to in section 2 (3) of the Act of July 5, 1935 (49 Stat. 450), and as defined in section 3 (f) of the Act of June 25, 1938 (52 Stat. 1060)"; and the Senate agree to the same.

BUTLER B. HARE,
MATTHEW M. NEELY,
FRANK B. KEEFE,
H. CARL ANDERSEN,
Managers on the Part of the House.

PAT MCCARRAN,
KENNETH MCKELLAR,
JOSEPH H. BALL,
WALLACE H. WHITE, Jr.,
STYLES BRIDGES
(By J. H. B.),
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference of the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on amendment No. 39 of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6739) making appropriations for the Department of Labor, the Federal Security Agency, and related independent agencies, for the fiscal year 1947, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The language agreed upon by the conferees differs from the original House language by preventing the use of any funds appropriated to the National Labor Relations Board for the purpose of organizing or assisting in organizing agricultural laborers, and further provides that the definition of "agricultural labor" as applied to the inhibition on the expenditure of funds for any hearings, investigation, directives, or orders by the National Labor Relations Board for collective-bargaining units composed of agricultural laborers shall be the definition contained in the Fair Labor Standards Act instead of the definition contained in the Social Security Act as provided in the original House language.

BUTLER B. HARE,
MATTHEW M. NEELY,
FRANK B. KEEFE,
H. CARL ANDERSEN,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. HARE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the conference report on the bill (H. R. 6739) making appropriations for the Department of Labor, Federal Security Agency, and related independent agencies for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the report.

Mr. HARE. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

UNITED NATIONS EDUCATIONAL, SCIENTIFIC, AND CULTURAL ORGANIZATION

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 305) entitled "Joint resolution providing for membership and participation by the United States in the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization," and authorizing an appropriation therefor, with Senate amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 2, lines 11 and 12, strike out "and must have been such for at least fifteen years."

Page 3, line 9, after "Cooperation", insert "of not to exceed one hundred members."

Page 3, line 9, strike out after "Cooperation." over to and including "States." in line 3, page 4, and insert "Such Commission shall be appointed by the Secretary of State and shall consist of (a) not more than sixty representatives of principal national, voluntary organizations interested in educational, scientific, and cultural matters; and (b) not more than forty outstanding persons selected by the Secretary of State, including not more than ten persons holding office under or employed by the Government of the United States, not more than fifteen representatives of the educational, scientific, and cultural interests of State and local governments, and not more than fifteen persons chosen at large. The Secretary of State is authorized to name in the first instance fifty of the principal national voluntary organizations, each of which shall be invited to designate one representative for appointment to the National Commission. Thereafter, the National Commission shall periodically review and, if deemed advisable, revise the list of such organizations designating representatives in order to achieve a desirable rotation among organizations represented."

Page 4, line 12, strike out "committee not exceeding fifteen persons" and insert "committee, and may designate such other committees as may prove necessary."

Page 4, line 15, strike out "it" and insert "them."

Page 5, lines 1 and 2, strike out "and must have been such for at least five years."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain the Senate amendments?

Mr. BLOOM. I took this matter up with the gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. MERROW], who introduced the bill, who went over to London as your representative.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. But I would like to know a little bit about it also.

Mr. BLOOM. Well, they are simply perfecting amendments.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Just what do the Senate amendments provide? What is the substance of them?

Mr. BLOOM. Two of the amendments remove an implication which the Senate felt to be unsound law. These amendments removed restrictions which provided that naturalized American citizens must have been naturalized at least 15 years before serving as representatives or alternates and at least 5 years before serving on the national commission. The Department of State had requested that these two provisions be eliminated and the Senate report supported the Department's thought that any law which implies that a native-born citizen is superior to a foreign-born citizen, or that a citizen naturalized for 15 years is better than one naturalized for 5 years, is unsound law.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. The Senate is not amending this bill just for the sake of amending it. It must have some purpose. Now, what were the amendments?

Mr. BLOOM. The third amendment, which has the approval of the State Department, relates to section 3 of the joint resolution. I believe that there will be no objection to the changes made by the Senate.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I think we had better ask the gentleman to let this go over until tomorrow, until I have a chance to look over the amendments.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. The gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. MUNDT] and the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. RYTER] were the principal protagonists of amendments along this line. It seems to me that the changes which the Senate have made do not at all change the principles for which those gentlemen contended so ably before our committee. Am I not correct in that?

Mr. RYTER. Mr. Speaker, the principal change consists of the composition of this National Advisory Commission who are delegates to the UNESCO set-up. The House voted the original methods, which I had introduced, calling for the creation of this National Advisory Commission, to consist of representatives of the principal national educational, scientific, and cultural bodies in the United States. It took away from the Secretary of State the appointive power and left it to the selection of one or two individuals to be selected by this principal original organization. Originally the bill called for a body of 15, and allowed a certain amount of elasticity, so that thereafter this Commission might form the rules and regulations with reference to organizations interested in scientific and cultural matters. The Senate amendment places a ceiling of a hundred, but gives the principal private national organizations 60 of those 100 representatives, and divides the 40 amongst the other organizations upon a State and local basis. That amendment is agreeable to the proponents of the original amendment to the House version.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. The ordinary practice is that when legislation of this character is to be brought up, I should have an opportunity to look it over before unanimous consent is requested. When that is not done, I generally object until I have had that privilege.

Mr. RYTER. I trust that my explanation supplies the gentleman with the necessary information. If there are any other questions I will be glad to answer them.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I think the gentleman should withdraw his request for the moment, and then we will see what we can do tomorrow.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. This experience best illustrates the wisdom of the policy that exists among the leadership. It is based upon courtesy. I know there is no intent to be discourteous, but the custom and the practice of consulting the leadership on both sides and the Speaker before unanimous-consent requests are made should be strictly adhered to. My remarks are not to be construed as criticism, but what has happened here best illustrates the situation. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN] is minority leader. I knew nothing about this myself. I assumed the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN] had been consulted. It is also wise to consult with the members of the minority party, the ranking members, on the committee, to whom the minority leader looks for their suggestions or advice or guidance.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, let me say that I did not intend to bring this up this afternoon but the Committee of the Whole having risen as early as it did I thought it would facilitate matters to call it up. I had spoken to the gentleman before. I am sorry I did not consult the minority leader.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. We are approaching what we hope are the closing days of the session and there are likely to be many pieces of legislation called up by unanimous consent. If the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK] and myself do not have the opportunity of looking it over we are likely to let legislation go through that some of the membership did not expect would go through.

Mr. BLOOM. I will say to the gentleman that it is my mistake. I did not know there was going to be any controversy about it.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. There is no controversy about it as far as I know but we do not like the way it is called up without prior consultation.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from New York withdraw his request?

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the request.

HOUR OF MEETING TOMORROW

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet at 10 o'clock tomorrow.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

CONFEDERATED SALISH AND KOOTENAI TRIBES OF INDIANS

Mr. JACKSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 6983) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render judgment on any and all claims which the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes of Indians of the Flathead Reservation in Montana, or any tribe or band thereof, may have against the United States, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment and agree to the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 2, line 3, strike out all after "States" down to and including "Indians" in line 19.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this is merely a corrective amendment, as I understand it.

Mr. JACKSON. That is correct. The bill passed the House on Tuesday unanimously. This merely strikes out a section that was included in the bill that was passed on that day.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, my attention has been called to the fact that the Clerk in reading said "line 3" and he should have said "line 5."

Mr. JACKSON. I think the gentleman may be referring to the Senate bill. This is the House bill that is up for consideration.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

USE OF CERTAIN INDIAN FUNDS—PERMISSION TO FILE SUPPLEMENTAL REPORT

Mr. JACKSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to file supplemental report on S. 1235, to authorize the use of the funds of any tribe of Indians for insurance premiums; and on S. 115, to modify sections 4 and 20 of the Permanent Appropriation Repeal Act, 1934, with reference to certain funds collected in connection with the operation of Indian Service irrigation projects, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

ADDITIONAL JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF DELAWARE

Mr. BYRNE of New York. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, I call up the conference report on the bill S. 1801, authorizing the appointment of an additional judge for the District of Delaware, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain what this bill is?

Mr. BYRNE of New York. This is a bill providing for the appointment of an additional judge in the State of Delaware.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. It is a request to agree to the conference report?

Mr. BYRNE of New York. Yes.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement of the managers on the part of the House.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1801) authorizing the appointment of an additional judge for the district of Delaware, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respect Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following:

"Provided, That the first vacancy occurring in the office of district judge in said district shall not be filled: Provided further, That unless the President shall submit a nomination to the Senate or make a recess appointment to fill the office hereby created within ninety days after the effective date of this Act, then in that event this Act shall be of no force and effect."

And the House agree to the same.

HATTON W. SUMNERS,
FRANCIS E. WALTER,
JOHN JENNINGS, JR.,
Managers on the Part of the House.

PAT MCCARRAN,
ABE MURDOCK,
E. H. MOORE,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1801) authorizing the appointment of an additional judge for the district of Delaware, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report.

The House passed the Senate bill after amending it to provide that no appointment should be made to fill the first vacancy which should thereafter occur in that district, and by further providing that the act should be ineffective unless a nomination to fill the office thus created be submitted to the Senate within 90 days. The Senate disagreed to the House amendment and requested the conference, to which the House agreed.

The Senate conferees agreed to the amendment of the House with the addition of language to insure that a recess appointment could be made within the 90-day period in the event the Senate should not be in session, with which the House conferees agreed.

HATTON W. SUMNERS,
FRANCIS E. WALTER,
JOHN JENNINGS, JR.,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The conference report was agreed to, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FEES OF UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS

Mr. BYRNE of New York. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, I call up the conference report on the bill (S. 346) to amend section 21 of the act of May 28, 1896 (29 Stat. 184, 28 U. S. C., sec. 597), prescribing fees of United States commissioners, and ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement of the managers on the part of the House.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 346) to amend section 21 of the act of May 28, 1896 (29 Stat. 184, 28 U. S. C., sec. 597), prescribing fees of United States commissioners, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the House and agree to the same.

HATTON W. SUMNERS,
EMANUEL CELLER,
LOUIS E. GRAHAM,
Managers on the Part of the House.

PAT MCCARRAN,
JAMES W. HUFFMAN,
WILLIAM A. STANFILL,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 346) to amend section 21 of the act of May 28, 1896 (29 Stat. 184; 28 U. S. C., sec. 597), prescribing fees of United States commissioners, submit the following explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon in conference and recommended in the accompanying conference report.

Seven amendments were made by the House to the Senate bill, the first two of which were to provide that the increases authorized by the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1945 as amended by the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1946 be applied to the fees of commissioners prescribed by the bill. The other five amendments were made to correct the language of the bill. The Senate disagreed to these amendments and requested the conference, to which the House agreed.

The Senate conferees agreed to the House amendments.

HATTON W. SUMNERS,
EMANUEL CELLER,
LOUIS E. GRAHAM,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. PATTERSON asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD.

Mr. KELLEY of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a statement by Col. G. H. Rarey on the need for reeducating the American public upon the subject of leprosy.

Mr. EBERHARTER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an address by Judge Henry Ellenbogen.

Mr. MONRONEY asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Tuesday after disposition of matters on the Speaker's desk and at the conclusion of any special orders heretofore entered, I may address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

CONGRESSIONAL REORGANIZATION

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Speaker, together with the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] I am having printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for tomorrow a committee print on the agreed changes in the bill having to do with the reorganization of the Congress. We have attempted to meet in advance many of the more strenuous objections to certain provisions of the Senate bill.

These objections, for the most part, have been compromised and adjusted, with a view to preserving as much as possible of the idea of an over-all reorganization of the machinery of Congress.

I feel we have a very satisfactory bill to present to the Members of the House; in fact, in my opinion, it accomplishes about 80 percent of the entire goal that was sought in the reorganization of the Congress.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. TABER. I notice that there are a lot of research artists set up in this bill but they are not given any authority. I am not much on research artists without any authority.

Mr. MONRONEY. I believe that the gentleman will find these research men will work under the very able direction of the chairmen and the ranking members of the reorganized House committees.

Mr. TABER. If they have no authority to get down into these departments, they will not do any good.

Mr. MONRONEY. I would like to assure the distinguished ranking member of the House Appropriations Committee, that we intend for these committee staff members to have all the authority needed to do their job. If further change, extending authority to the Appropriations Committee to assign these men to the tasks we want them to perform is needed, I am certain that the bill can be amended to permit it.

The committee print to which I refer follows:

A bill to provide for increased efficiency in the legislative branch of the Government

Be it enacted, etc.—

SHORT TITLE

That (a) this act, divided into titles and sections according to the following table of contents, may be cited as the "Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946":

TABLE OF CONTENTS

TITLE I—CHANGES IN RULES OF SENATE AND HOUSE

Sec. 101. Rule-making power of the Senate and House.

Part 1—Standing rules of the Senate

Sec. 102. Standing committees of the Senate:
Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.
Committee on Appropriations.
Committee on Armed Services.
Committee on Banking and Currency.
Committee on Civil Service.
Committee on the District of Columbia.
Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.
Committee on Finance.
Committee on Foreign Relations.
Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.
Committee on the Judiciary.
Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.
Committee on Public Lands.
Committee on Public Works.
Committee on Rules and Administration.
Sec. 103. Appropriations.

Part 2—Rules of the House of Representatives

Sec. 121. Standing committees of the House of Representatives:
Committee on Agriculture.
Committee on Appropriations.
Committee on Armed Services.
Committee on Banking and Currency.
Committee on Civil Service.
Committee on the District of Columbia.
Committee on Education and Labor.
Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.
Committee on Foreign Affairs.
Committee on House Administration.
Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.
Committee on the Judiciary.
Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.
Committee on Public Lands.
Committee on Public Works.
Committee on Rules.
Committee on Un-American Activities.
Committee on Veterans' Affairs.
Committee on Ways and Means.
Sec. 122. Delegates and Resident Commissioner.
Sec. 123. Reference of private claims bills.

Part 3—Provisions applicable to both Houses

Sec. 131. Private bills banned.
Sec. 132. Congressional adjournment.
Sec. 133 Committee procedure
Sec. 134. Committee powers.
Sec. 135. Conference rules on amendments in nature of substitute.
Sec. 136. Legislative oversight by standing committees.
Sec. 137. Decisions on questions of committee jurisdiction.
Sec. 138. Legislative budget.
Sec. 139. Hearings and reports by Appropriations Committees.
Sec. 140. Records of Congress.
Sec. 141. Preservation of committee hearings.
Sec. 142. Effective date.

TITLE II—MISCELLANEOUS

Part 1. Statutory provisions relating to congressional personnel

Sec. 201. Stenographic pool.
Sec. 202. Increase in compensation for certain congressional officers.
Sec. 203. Committee staffs
Sec. 204. Legislative Reference Service.
Sec. 205. Office of the Legislative Counsel.
Sec. 206. Studies by Comptroller General.
Sec. 207. Expenditure analyses by Comptroller General.
Sec. 208. Correction of Military and Naval records.

Part 2. Statutory provisions relating to committees of Congress

Sec. 221. Improvement of CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.
Sec. 222. Joint Committee on Printing.
Sec. 223. Joint Committee on the Library.
Sec. 224. Transfer of functions.
Sec. 225. Joint Committee on the Economic Report.
Sec. 226. Economic Report of the President.

Part 3. Provisions relating to Capitol and pages

Sec. 241. Remodeling of caucus rooms and restaurants.
Sec. 242. Assignment of Capitol space.
Sec. 243. Senate and House pages.
Sec. 244. Effective date.

TITLE III. REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

Sec. 301. Short title.
Sec. 302. Definitions.
Sec. 303. Detailed accounts of contributions.
Sec. 304. Receipts for contributions.
Sec. 305. Statements to be filed with Clerk of the House.
Sec. 306. Statement preserved for 2 years.
Sec. 307. Persons to whom applicable.
Sec. 308. Registration with Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House.
Sec. 309. Reports and statements to be made under oath.
Sec. 310. Penalties.
Sec. 311. Exemption.

TITLE IV. FEDERAL TORT CLAIMS ACT

Part 1. Short title and definitions

Sec. 401. Short title.
Sec. 402. Definitions.

Part 2. Administrative adjustment of tort claims against the United States

Sec. 403. Claims of $1,000 or less.
Sec. 404. Reports.

Part 3. Suits on tort claims against the United States

Sec. 410. Jurisdiction.
Sec. 411. Procedure.
Sec. 412. Review.
Sec. 413. Compromise.

Part 4. Provisions common to part 2 and part 3

Sec. 420. One year statute of limitations.
Sec. 421. Exceptions.
Sec. 422. Attorneys' fees.
Sec. 423. Exclusiveness of remedy.
Sec. 424. Certain statutes inapplicable.

TITLE V. GENERAL BRIDGE ACT

Sec. 501. Short title.
Sec. 502. Consent of Congress.
Sec 503. Tolls.
Sec. 504. Acquisition by public agencies.
Sec. 505. Statements of cost.
Sec. 506. Sinking fund.
Sec. 507. Applicability of title.
Sec. 508. International bridges.
Sec. 509. Eminent domain.
Sec. 510. Penalties
Sec. 511. Rights reserved.

TITLE VI. COMPENSATION AND RETIREMENT PAY OF MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

Sec. 601. Compensation of Members of Congress.
Sec. 602. Retirement pay of Members of Congress.

Separability clause

(b) If any provision of this act or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the act and of the application of such provision to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

TITLE I—CHANGES IN RULES OF SENATE AND HOUSE

Rule-making power of the Senate and House

SEC. 101. The following sections of this title are enacted by the Congress:

(a) As an exercise of the rule-making power of the Senate and the House of Representatives, respectively, and as such they shall be considered as part of the rules of each House, respectively, or of that House to which they specifically apply; and such rules shall supersede other rules only to the extent that they are inconsistent therewith; and

(b) With full recognition of the constitutional right of either House to change such rules (so far as relating to the procedure in such House) at any time, in the same manner and to the same extent as in the case of any other rule of such House.

PART 1—STANDING RULES OF THE SENATE

Standing committees of the Senate

SEC. 102. Rule XXV of the Standing Rules of the Senate is amended to read as follows:

"RULE XXV

"Standing committees

"(1) The following standing committees shall be appointed at the commencement of each Congress, with leave to report by bill or otherwise:

"(a) Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Agriculture generally.

"2. Inspection of livestock and meat products.

"3. Animal industry and diseases of animals.

"4. Adulteration of seeds, insect pests, and protection of birds and animals in forest reserves.

"5. Agricultural colleges and experiment stations.

"6. Forestry in general, and forest reserves other than those created from the public domain.

"7. Agricultural economics and research.

"8. Agricultural and industrial chemistry.

"9. Dairy industry.

"10. Entomology and plant quarantine.

"11. Human nutrition and home economics.

"12. Plant industry, soils, and agricultural engineering.

"13. Agricultural educational extension services.

"14. Extension of farm credit and farm security.

"15. Rural electrification.

"16. Agricultural production and marketing and stabilization of prices of agricultural products.

"17. Crop insurance and soil conservation.

"(b) Committee on Appropriations, to consist of 21 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Appropriation of the revenue for the support of the Government.

"(c) Committee on Armed Services, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Common defense generally.

"2. The War Department and the Military Establishment generally.

"3. The Navy Department and the Naval Establishment generally.

"4. Soldiers' and sailors' homes.

"5. Pay, promotion, retirement, and other benefits and privileges of members of the armed forces.

"6. Selective service.

"7. Size and composition of the Army and Navy.

"8. Forts, arsenals, military reservations, and navy yards.

"9. Ammunition depots.

"10. Maintenance and operation of the Panama Canal, including the administration, sanitation, and government of the Canal Zone.

"11. Conservation, development, and use of naval petroleum and oil-shale reserves.

"12. Strategic and critical materials necessary for the common defense.

"(d) Committee on Banking and Currency, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Banking and currency generally.

"2. Financial aid to commerce and industry, other than matters relating to such aid which are specifically assigned to other committees under this rule.

"3. Deposit insurance.

"4. Public and private housing.

"5. Federal Reserve System.

"6. Gold and silver, including the coinage thereof.

"7. Issuance of notes and redemption thereof.

"8. Valuation and revaluation of the dollar.

"9. Control of prices of commodities, rents, or services.

"(e) Committee on Civil Service, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. The Federal civil service generally.

"2. The status of officers and employees of the United States including their compensation, classification, and retirement.

"3. The postal service generally, including the railway-mail service, and measures relating to ocean-mail and pneumatic-tube service; but excluding post roads.

"4. Postal-savings banks.

"5. Census and the collection of statistics generally.

"6. The National Archives.

"(f) Committee on the District of Columbia, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. All measures relating to the municipal affairs of the District of Columbia in general, other than appropriations therefor, including—

"2. Public health and safety, sanitation, and quarantine regulations.

"3. Regulation of sale of intoxicating liquors.

"4. Adulteration of food and drugs.

"5. Taxes and tax sales.

"6. Insurance, executors, administrators, wills, and divorce.

"7. Municipal and juvenile courts.

"8. Incorporation and organization of societies.

"9. Municipal code and amendments to the criminal and corporation laws.

"(g) (1) Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"(A) Budget and accounting measures, other than appropriations.

"(B) Reorganizations in the executive branch of the Government.

"(2) Such committee shall have the duty of—

"(A) receiving and examining reports of the Comptroller General of the United States and of submitting such recommendations to the Senate as it deems necessary or desirable in connection with the subject matter of such reports;

"(B) studying the operation of Government activities at all levels with a view to determining its economy and efficiency;

"(C) evaluating the effects of laws enacted to reorganize the legislative and executive branches of the Government;

"(D) studying intergovernmental relationships between the United States and the States and municipalities, and between the United States and international organizations of which the United States is a member.

"(h) Committee on Finance, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Revenue measures generally.

"2. The bonded debt of the United States.

"3. The deposit of public moneys.

"4. Customs, collection districts, and ports of entry and delivery.

"5. Reciprocal trade agreements.

"6. Transportation of dutiable goods.

"7. Revenue measures relating to the insular possessions.

"8. Tariffs and import quotas, and matters related thereto.

"9. National social security.

"10. Veterans' measures generally.

"11. Pensions of all the wars of the United States, general and special.

"12. Life insurance issued by the Government on account of service in the armed forces.

"13. Compensation of veterans.

"(i) Committee on Foreign Relations, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Relations of the United States with foreign nations generally.

"2. Treaties.

"3. Establishment of boundary lines between the United States and foreign nations.

"4. Protection of American citizens abroad and expatriation.

"5. Neutrality.

"6. International conferences and congresses.

"7. The American National Red Cross.

"8. Intervention abroad and declarations of war.

"9. Measures relating to the diplomatic service.

"10. Acquisition of land and buildings for embassies and legations in foreign countries.

"11. Measures to foster commercial intercourse with foreign nations and to safeguard American business interests abroad.

"12. United Nations Organization and international financial and monetary organizations.

"13. Foreign loans.

"(j) Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Interstate and foreign commerce generally.

"2. Regulation of interstate railroads, busses, trucks, and pipe lines.

"3. Communication by telephone, telegraph, radio, and television.

"4. Civil aeronautics.

"5. Merchant marine generally.

"6. Registering and licensing of vessels and small boats.

"7. Navigation and the laws relating thereto, including pilotage.

"8. Rules and international arrangements to prevent collisions at sea.

"9. Merchant marine officers and seamen.

"10. Measures relating to the regulation of common carriers by water and to the inspection of merchant marine vessels, lights and signals, life-saving equipment, and fire protection on such vessels.

"11. Coast and Geodetic Survey.

"12. The Coast Guard, including life-saving service, lighthouses, lightships, and ocean derelicts.

"13. The United States Coast Guard and Merchant Marine Academies.

"14. Weather Bureau.

"15. Except as provided in paragraph (c), the Panama Canal and interoceanic canals generally.

"16. Inland waterways.

"17. Fisheries and wildlife, including research, restoration, refuges, and conservation.

"18. Bureau of Standards including standardization of weights and measures and the metric system.

"(k) Committee on the Judiciary, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Judicial proceedings, civil and criminal, generally.

"2. Constitutional amendments.

"3. Federal courts and judges.

"4. Local courts in the Territories and possessions.

"5. Revision and codification of the statutes of the United States.

"6. National penitentiaries.

"7. Protection of trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies.

"8. Holidays and celebrations.

"9. Bankruptcy, mutiny, espionage, and counterfeiting.

"10. State and Territorial boundary lines.

"11. Meetings of Congress, attendance of Members, and their acceptance of incompatible offices.

"12. Civil liberties.

"13. Patents, copyrights, and trade-marks.

"14. Patent Office.

"15. Immigration and naturalization.

"16. Apportionment of Representatives.

"17. Measures relating to claims against the United States.

"18. Interstate compacts generally.

"(l) Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Measures relating to education, labor, or public welfare generally.

"2. Mediation and arbitration of labor disputes.

"3. Wages and hours of labor.

"4. Convict labor and the entry of goods made by convicts into interstate commerce.

"5. Regulation or prevention of importation of foreign laborers under contract.

"6. Child labor.

"7. Labor statistics.

"8 Labor standards.

"9 School-lunch program.

"10. Vocational rehabilitation.

"11. Railroad labor and railroad retirement and unemployment, except revenue measures relating thereto.

"12. United States Employees' Compensation Commission.

"13. Columbia Institution for the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind; Howard University, Freedmen's Hospital, and St. Elizabeths Hospital.

"14. Public health and quarantine.

"15. Welfare of miners.

"16. Vocational rehabilitation and education of veterans

"17. Veterans' hospitals, medical care, and treatment of veterans.

"18. Soldiers' and sailors' civil relief.

"19. Readjustment of servicemen to civil life.

"(m) Committee on Public Lands, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Public lands generally, including entry, easements, and grazing thereon.

"2. Mineral resources of the public lands.

"3. Forfeiture of land grants and alien ownership, including alien ownership of mineral lands.

"4. Forest reserves and national parks created from the public domain.

"5. Military parks and battlefields, and national cemeteries.

"6. Preservation of prehistoric ruins and objects of interest on the public domain.

"7. Measures relating generally to Hawaii, Alaska, and the insular possessions of the United States, except those affecting their revenue and appropriations.

"8. Irrigation and reclamation, including water supply for reclamation projects, and easements of public lands for irrigation projects.

"9. Interstate compacts relating to apportionment of waters for irrigation purposes.

"10. Mining interests generally.

"11. Mineral land laws and claims and entries thereunder.

"12. Geological survey.

"13. Mining schools and experimental stations.

"14. Petroleum conservation and conservation of the radium supply in the United States.

"15. Relations of the United States with the Indians and the Indian tribes.

"16. Measures relating to the care, education, and management of Indians, including the care and allotment of Indian lands and general and special measures relating to claims which are paid out of Indian funds.

"(n) Committee on Public Works, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Flood control and improvement of rivers and harbors.

"2. Public works for the benefit of navigation, and bridges and dams (other than international bridges and dams).

"3. Water power.

"4. Oil and other pollution of navigable waters.

"5. Public buildings and occupied or improved grounds of the United States generally.

"6. Measures relatng to the purchase of sites and construction of post offices, customhouses, Federal courthouses, and Government buildings within the District of Columbia.

"7. Measures relating to the Capitol building and the Senate and House Office Buildings.

"8. Measures relating to the construction or reconstruction, maintenance, and care of the buildings and grounds of the Botanic Gardens, the Library of Congress, and the Smithsonian Institution.

"9. Public reservations and parks within the District of Columbia, including Rock Creek Park and the Zoological Park.

"10. Measures relating to the construction or maintenance of roads and post roads.

"(o) (1) Committee on Rules and Administration, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"(A) Matters relating to the payment of money out of the contingent fund of the Senate or creating a charge upon the same; except that any resolution relating to substantive matter within the jurisdiction of any other standing committee of the Senate shall be first referred to such committee.

"(B) Except as provided in paragraph (n) 8, matters relating to the Library of Congress and the Senate Library; statuary and pictures; acceptance or purchase of works of art for the Capitol; the Botanic Gardens; management of the Library of Congress; purchase of books and manuscripts; erection of monuments to the memory of individuals.

"(C) Except as provided in paragraph (n) 8, matters relating to the Smithsonian Institution and the incorporation of similar institutions.

"(D) Matters relating to the election of the President, Vice President, or Member of Congress; corrupt practices; contested elections; credentials and qualifications; Federal elections generally; Presidential succession.

"(E) Matters relating to parliamentary rules; floor and gallery rules; Senate Restaurant; administration of the Senate Office Building and of the Senate Wing of the Capitol; assignment of office space; and services to the Senate.

"(F) Matters relating to printing and correction of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

"(1) Such committee shall also have the duty of examining all bills, amendments, and joint resolutions after passage by the Senate; and, in cooperation with the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives, of examining all bills and joint resolutions which shall have passed both Houses, to see that the same are correctly enrolled; and when signed by the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate, shall forthwith present the same, when they shall have originated in the Senate, to the President of the United States in person, and report the fact and date of such presentation to the Senate. Such committee shall also have the duty of assigning office space in the Senate Wing of the Capitol and in the Senate Office Building.

"(2) Each standing committee shall continue and have the power to act until their successors are appointed.

"(3) Each standing committee is authorized to fix the number of its members (but not less than one-third of its entire membership) who shall constitute a quorum thereof for the transaction of such business as may be considered by said committee, subject to the provisions of section 133 (d) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946.

"(4) Each Senator shall serve on two standing committees and no more; except that Senators of the majority party who are members of the Committee on the District of Columbia or of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments may serve on three standing committees and no more."

Appropriations

SEC. 103. Rule XVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate is amended to read as follows:

"RULE XVI

"Amendments to appropriation bills

"1. All general appropriation bills shall be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and no amendments shall be received to any general appropriation bill the effect of which will be to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add a new item of appropriation, unless it be made to carry out the provisions of some existing law, or treaty stipulation, or act, or resolution previously passed by the Senate during that session; or unless the same be moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate, or proposed in pursuance of an estimate submitted in accordance with law.

"2. The Committee on Appropriations shall not report an appropriation bill containing amendments proposing new or general legislation or any restriction on the expenditure of the funds appropriated which proposes a limitation not authorized by law if such restriction is to take effect or cease to be effective upon the happening of a contingency, and if an appropriation bill is reported to the Senate containing amendments proposing new or general legislation or any such restriction, a point of order may be made against the bill, and if the point is sustained, the bill shall be recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations.

"3. All amendments to general appropriation bills moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate, proposing to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add new items of appropriation, shall, at least one day before they are considered, be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and when actually proposed to the bill no amendment proposing to increase the amount stated in such amendment shall be received; in like manner, amendments proposing new items of appropriation to river and harbor bills, establishing post roads, or proposing new post roads, shall, before being considered, be referred to the Committee on Public Works.

"4. No amendment which proposes general legislation shall be received to any general appropriation bill, nor shall any amendment not germane or relevant to the subject matter contained in the bill be received; nor shall any amendment to any item or clause of such bill be received which does not directly relate thereto; nor shall any restriction on the expenditure of the funds appropriated which proposes a limitation not authorized by law be received if such restriction is to take effect or cease to be effective upon the happening of a contingency; and all questions of relevancy of amendments under this rule, when raised, shall be submitted to the Senate and be decided without debate; and any such amendment or restriction to a general appropriation bill may be laid on the table without prejudice to the bill.

"5. No amendment, the object of which is to provide for a private claim, shall be received to any general appropriation bill, unless it be to carry out the provisions of an existing law or a treaty stipulation, which shall be cited on the face of the amendment.

"6. (a) Three members of the following-named committees, to be selected by their respective committees, shall be ex officio members of the Committee on Appropriations, to serve on said committee when the annual appropriation bill making appropriations for the purposes specified in the following table opposite the name of the committee is being considered by the Committee on Appropriations:

Name of committee	Purpose of appropriation
Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.	For the Department of Agriculture.
Committee on Civil Service.	For the Post Office Department.
Committee on Armed Services.	For the Department of War; for the Department of the Navy.
Committee on the District of Columbia.	For the District of Columbia.
Committee on Public Works.	For Rivers and Harbors
Committee on Foreign Relations.	For the Diplomatic and Consular Service.

"(b) At least one member of each committee enumerated in subparagraph (a), to be selected by his or their respective committees, shall be a member of any conference committee appointed to confer with the House upon the annual appropriation bill making appropriations for the purposes specified in the foregiong table opposite the name of his or their respective committee.

"7. When a point of order is made against any restriction on the expenditure of funds appropriated in a general appropriation bill on the ground that the restriction violates this rule, the rule shall be construed strictly and, in case of doubt, in favor of the point of order."

PART 2—RULES OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Standing committees of the House of Representatives

SEC. 121. (a) Rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"RULE X

"Standing committees

"(a) There shall be elected by the House, at the commencement of each Congress, the following standing committees:

"1. Committee on Agriculture, to consist of twenty-seven members.

"2. Committee on Appropriations, to consist of 43 members.

"3. Committee on Armed Services, to consist of 33 members.

"4. Committee on Banking and Currency, to consist of 27 members.

"5. Committee on Civil Service, to consist of 25 members.

"6. Committee on the District of Columbia, to consist of 25 members.

"7. Committee on Education and Labor, to consist of 25 members.

"8. Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, to consist of 25 members.

"9. Committee on Foreign Affairs, to consist of 25 members.

"10. Committee on House Administration, to consist of 25 members.

"11. Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to consist of 27 members.

"12. Committee on the Judiciary, to consist of 25 members.

"13. Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, to consist of 25 members.

"14. Committee on Public Lands, to consist of 25 Members.

"15. Committee on Public Works, to consist of 27 Members.

"16. Committee on Rules, to consist of 12 Members.

"17. Committee on Un-American Activities, to consist of nine Members.

"18. Committee on Veterans' Affairs, to consist of 27 Members.

"19. Committee on Ways and Means, to consist of 27 Members.

"(b) (1) The Speaker shall appoint all select and conference committees which shall be ordered by the House from time to time.

"(2) At the commencement of each Congress, the House shall elect as chairman of each standing committee one of the Members thereof; in the temporary absence of the chairman, the Member next in rank in the order named in the election of the committee, and so on, as often as the case shall happen, shall act as chairman; and in case of a permanent vacancy in the chairmanship of any such committee the House shall elect another chairman.

"(3) All vacancies in standing committees in the House shall be filled by election by the House. Each Member shall be elected to serve on one standing committee and no more; except that Members who are elected to serve on the Committee on the District of Columbia or on the Committee on Un-American Activities may be elected to serve on two standing committees and no more, and Members of the majority party who are elected to serve on the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments or on the Committee on House Administration may be elected to serve on two standing committees and no more."

(b) Rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"RULE XI

"Powers and duties of committees

"(1) All proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the subjects listed under the standing committees named below shall be referred to such committees, respectively:

"(A) COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE

"1. Agriculture generally.

"2. Inspection of livestock and meat products.

"3. Animal industry and diseases of animals.

"4. Adulteration of seeds, insect pests, and protection of birds and animals in forest reserves.

"5. Agricultural colleges and experiment stations.

"6. Forestry in general, and forest reserves other than those created from the public domain.

"7. Agricultural economics and research.

"8. Agricultural and industrial chemistry.

"9. Dairy industry.

"10. Entomology and plant quarantine.

"11. Human nutrition and home economics.

"12. Plant industry, soils, and agricultural engineering.

"13. Agricultural educational extension services.

"14. Extension of farm credit and farm security.

"15. Rural electrification.

"16. Agricultural production and marketing and stabilization of prices of agricultural products.

"17. Crop insurance and soil conservation.

"(B) COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS

"1. Appropriation of the revenue for the support of the Government.

"(C) COMMITTEE ON ARMED SERVICES

"1. Common defense generally.

"2. The War Department and the Military Establishment generally.

"3. The Navy Department and the Naval Establishment generally.

"4. Soldiers' and sailors' homes.

"5. Pay, promotion, retirement, and other benefits and privileges of members of the armed forces.

"6. Selective service.

"7. Size and composition of the Army and Navy.

"8. Forts, arsenals, military reservations, and navy yards.

"9. Ammunition depots.

"10. Maintenance and operation of the Panama Canal, including the administration, sanitation, and government of the Canal Zone.

"11. Conservation, development, and use of naval petroleum and oil shale reserves.

"12. Strategic and critical materials necessary for the common defense.

"(D) COMMITTEE ON BANKING AND CURRENCY

"1. Banking and currency generally.

"2. Financial aid to commerce and industry, other than matters relating to such aid which are specifically assigned to other committees under this rule.

"3. Deposit insurance.

"4. Public and private housing.

"5. Federal Reserve System.

"6. Gold and silver, including the coinage thereof.

"7. Issuance of notes and redemption thereof.

"8. Valuation and revaluation of the dollar.

"9. Control of prices of commodities, rents, or services.

"(E) COMMITTEE ON CIVIL SERVICE

"1. The Federal civil service generally.

"2. The status of officers and employees of the United States, including their compensation, classification, and retirement.

"3. The postal service generally, including the railway mail service, and measures relating to ocean mail and pneumatic-tube service; but excluding post roads.

"4. Postal-savings banks.

"5. Census and the collection of statistics generally.

"6. The National Archives.

"(F) COMMITTEE ON THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

"1. All measures relating to the municipal affairs of the District of Columbia in general, other than appropriations therefor, including—

"2. Public health and safety, sanitation, and quarantine regulations.

"3. Regulation of sale of intoxicating liquors.

"4. Adulteration of food and drugs.

"5. Taxes and tax sales.

"6. Insurance, executors, administrators, wills, and divorce.

"7. Municipal and juvenile courts.

"8. Incorporation and organization of societies.

"9. Municipal code and amendments to the criminal and corporation laws.

"(G) COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION AND LABOR

"1. Measures relating to education or labor generally.

"2. Mediation and arbitration of labor disputes.

"3. Wages and hours of labor.

"4. Convict labor and the entry of goods made by convicts into interstate commerce.

"5. Regulation or prevention of importation of foreign laborers under contract.

"6. Child labor.

"7. Labor statistics.

"8. Labor standards.

"9. School-lunch program.

"10. Vocational rehabilitation.

"11. United States Employees' Compensation Commission.

"12. Columbia Institution for the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind; Howard University; Freedmen's Hospital; and St. Elizabeths Hospital.

"13. Welfare of minors.

"(H) (1) COMMITTEE ON EXPENDITURES IN THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS

"(A) Budget and accounting measures, other than appropriations.

"(B) Reorganizations in the executive branch of the Government.

"(2) Such committee shall have the duty of—

"(A) receiving and examining reports of the Comptroller General of the United States and of submitting such recommendations to the House as it deems necessary or desirable in connection with the subject matter of such reports;

"(B) studying the operation of Government activities at all levels with a view to determining its economy and efficiency;

"(C) evaluating the effects of laws enacted to reorganize the legislative and executive branches of the Government;

"(D) studying intergovernmental relationships between the United States and the States and municipalities, and between the United States and international organizations of which the United States is a member.

"(I) COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS

"1. Relations of the United States with foreign nations generally.

"2. Establishment of boundary lines between the United States and foreign nations.

"3. Protection of American citizens abroad and expatriation.

"4. Neutrality.

"5. International conferences and Congresses.

"6. The American National Red Cross.

"7. Intervention abroad and declarations of war.

"8. Measures relating to the diplomatic service.

"9. Acquisition of land and buildings for embassies and legations in foreign countries.

"10. Measures to foster commercial intercourse with foreign nations and to safeguard American business interests abroad.

"11. United Nations Organization and international financial and monetary organizations.

"12. Foreign loans.

"(J) (1) COMMITTEE ON HOUSE ADMINISTRATION

"(A) Employment of persons by the House including clerks for Members and committees, and reporters of debates.

"(B) Expenditure of the contingent fund of the House.

"(C) The auditing and settling of all accounts which may be charged to the contingent fund.

"(D) Measures relating to accounts of the House generally.

"(E) Appropriations from the contingent fund.

"(F) Measures relating to services to the House, including the House restaurant and administration of the House Office Buildings and of the House wing of the Capitol.

"(G) Measures relating to the travel of Members of the House.

"(H) Measures relating to the assignment of office space for Members and committees.

"(I) Measures relating to the disposition of useless executive papers.

"(J) Except as provided in paragraph (o) 8, matters relating to the Library of Congress and the House Library; statuary and pictures; acceptance or purchase of works of art for the Capitol; the Botanic Gardens; management of the Library of Congress; purchase of books and manuscripts; erection of monuments to the memory of individuals.

"(K) Except as provided in paragraph (o) 8, matters relating to the Smithsonian Institution and the incorporation of similar institutions.

"(L) Matters relating to printing and correction of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

"(M) Measures relating to the election of the President, Vice President, or Members of Congress; corrupt practices; contested elections; credentials and qualifications; and Federal elections generally.

"(2) Such committee shall also have the duty of—

"(A) examining all bills, amendments, and joint resolutions after passage by the House; and, in cooperation with the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration, of examining all bills and joint resolutions which shall have passed both Houses, to see that they are correctly enrolled; and when signed by the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate, shall forthwith present the same, when they shall have originated in the House, to the President of the United States in person, and report the fact and date of such presentation to the House;

"(B) reporting to the Sergeant at Arms of the House the travel of Members of the House;

"(C) arranging a suitable program for each day observed by the House of Representatives as a memorial day in memory of Members of the Senate and House of Representatives who have died during the preceding period, and to arrange for the publication of the proceedings thereof.

"(K) COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

"1. Interstate and foreign commerce generally.

"2. Regulation of interstate railroads, busses, trucks, and pipe lines.

"3. Communication by telephone, telegraph, radio, and television.

"4. Civil aeronautics.

"5. Weather Bureau.

"6. Interstate oil compacts.

"7. Railroad labor and railroad retirement and unemployment, except revenue measures relating thereto.

"8. Public health and quarantine.

"9. Inland waterways.

"10. Bureau of Standards, including standardization of weights and measures and the metric system.

"(L) COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

"1. Judicial proceedings, civil and criminal, generally.

"2. Constitutional amendments.

"3. Federal courts and judges.

"4. Local courts in the Territories and possessions.

"5. Revision and codification of the statutes of the United States.

"6. National penitentiaries.

"7. Protection of trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies.

"8. Holidays and celebrations.

"9. Bankruptcy, mutiny, espionage, and counterfeiting.

"10. State and Territorial boundary lines.

"11. Meetings of Congress, attendance of Members, and their acceptance of incompatible offices.

"12. Civil liberties.

"13. Patents, copyrights, and trade-marks.

"14. Patent Office.

"15. Immigration and naturalization.

"16. Apportionment of Representatives.

"17. Measures relating to claims against the United States.

"18. Interstate compacts generally.

"19. Presidential succession.

"(M) COMMITTEE ON THE MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

"1. Merchant marine generally.

"2. Registering and licensing of vessels and small boats.

"3. Navigation and the laws relating thereto, including pilotage.

"4. Rules and international arrangements to prevent collisions at sea.

"5. Merchant marine officers and seamen.

"6. Measures relating to the regulation of common carriers by water and to the inspection of merchant marine vessels, lights and signals, lifesaving equipment, and fire protection on such vessels.

"7. The Coast Guard, including lifesaving service, lighthouses, lightships, and ocean derelicts.

"8. United States Coast Guard and Merchant Marine Academies.

"9. Coast and Geodetic Survey.

"10. Except as provided in paragraph (c), the Panama Canal and interoceanic canals generally.

"11. Fisheries and wildlife, including research, restoration, refuges, and conservation.

"(N) COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS

"1. Public lands generally, including entry, easements, and grazing thereon.

"2. Mineral resources of the public lands.

"3. Forfeiture of land grants and alien ownership, including alien ownership of mineral lands.

"4. Forest reserves and national parks created from the public domain.

"5. Military parks and battlefields, and national cemeteries.

"6. Preservation of prehistoric ruins and objects of interest on the public domain.

"7. Measures relating generally to Hawaii, Alaska, and the insular possessions of the United States, except those affecting the revenue and appropriations.

"8. Irrigation and reclamation, including water supply for reclamation projects, and easements of public lands for irrigation projects.

"9. Interstate compacts relating to apportionment of waters for irrigation purposes.

"10. Mining interests generally.

"11. Mineral land laws and claims and entries thereunder.

"12. Geological survey.

"13. Mining schools and experimental stations.

"14. Petroleum conservation and conservation of the radium supply in the United States.

"15. Relations of the United States with the Indians and the Indian tribes.

"16. Measures relating to the care, education, and management of Indians, including the care and allotment of Indian lands and general and special measures relating to claims which are paid out of Indian funds.

"(O) COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC WORKS

"1. Flood control and improvement of rivers and harbors.

"2. Public works for the benefit of navigation, and bridges and dams (other than international bridges and dams).

"3. Water power.

"4. Oil and other pollution of navigable waters.

"5. Public buildings and occupied or improved grounds of the United States generally.

"6. Measures relating to the purchase of sites and construction of post offices, customhouses, Federal court houses, and Government buildings within the District of Columbia.

"7. Measures relating to the Capitol Building and the Senate and House Office Buildings.

"8. Measures relating to the construction or reconstruction, maintenance, and care of the buildings and grounds of the Botanic Gardens, the Library of Congress, and the Smithsonian Institution.

"9. Public reservations and parks within the District of Columbia, including Rock Creek Park and the Zoological Park.

"10. Measures relating to the construction or maintenance of roads and post roads, other than appropriations therefor; but it shall not be in order for any bill providing general legislation in relation to roads to contain any provision for any specific road, nor for any bill in relation to a specific road to embrace a provision in relation to any other specific road.

"(P) COMMITTEE ON RULES

"1. The rules, joint rules, and order of business of the House.

"2. Recesses and final adjournments of Congress.

"(Q) (1) COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES

"(A) Un-American activities.

"(2) The Committee on Un-American Activities, as a whole or by subcommittee, is authorized to make from time to time investigations of (i) the extent, character, and objects of un-American propaganda activities in the United States, (ii) the diffusion within the United States of subversive and un-American propaganda that is instigated from foreign countries or of a domestic origin and attacks the principle of the form of government as guaranteed by our Constitution, and (iii) all other questions in relation thereto that would aid Congress in any necessary remedial legislation.

"The Committee on Un-American Activities shall report to the House (or to the Clerk of the House if the House is not in session) the results of any such investigation, together with such recommendations as it deems advisable.

"For the purpose of any such investigation, the Committee on Un-American Activities, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized to sit and act at such times and places within the United States, whether or not the House is sitting, has recessed, or has adjourned, to hold such hearings, to require the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, and to take such testimony, as it deems necessary. Subpenas may be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee or any subcommittee, or by any member designated by any such chairman, and may be served by any person designated by any such chairman or member.

"(r) Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

"1. Veterans' measures generally.

"2. Pensions of all the wars of the United States, general and special.

"3. Life insurance issued by the Government on account of service in the armed forces.

"4. Compensation, vocational rehabilitation, and education of veterans.

"5. Veterans' hospitals, medical care, and treatment of veterans.

"6. Soldiers' and sailors' civil relief.

"7. Readjustment of servicemen to civil life.

"(s) Commitee on Ways and Means.

"1. Revenue measures generally.

"2. The bonded debt of the United States.

"3. The deposit of public moneys.

"4. Customs, collection districts, and ports of entry and delivery.

"5. Reciprocal trade agreements.

"6. Transportation of dutiable goods.

"7. Revenue measures relating to the insular possessions.

"8. National social security.

"(2) (a) The following-named committees shall have leave to report at any time on the matters herein stated, namely: The Committee on Rules—on rules, joint rules, and order of business; the Committee on House Administration—on the right of a Member to his seat, enrolled bills, on all matters referred to it of printing for the use of the House or the two Houses, and on all matters of expenditure of the contingent fund of the House; the Committee on Ways and Means—on bills raising revenue; the Committee on Appropriations—on the general appropriation bills; the Committee on Public Works—on bills authorizing the improvement of rivers and harbors; the Committee on the Public Lands—on bills for the forfeiture of land grants to railroad and other corporations, bills preventing speculation in the public lands, bills for the reservation of the public lands for the benefit of actual and bona fide settlers, and bills for the admission of new States; the Committee on Veterans' Affairs—on general pension bills.

"(b) It shall always be in order to call up for consideration a report from the Committee on Rules (except it shall not be called up for consideration on the same day it is presented to the House, unless so determined by a vote of not less than two-thirds of the Members voting, but this provision shall not apply during the last 3 days of the session), and, pending the consideration thereof, the Speaker may entertain one motion that the House adjourn; but after the result is announced he shall not entertain any other dilatory motion until the said report shall have been fully disposed of. The Committee on Rules shall not report any rule or order which shall provide that business under paragraph 7 of rule XXIV shall be set aside by a vote of less than two-thirds of the Members present; nor shall it report any rule or order which shall operate to prevent the motion to recommit being made as provided in paragraph 4 of rule XVI.

"(c) The Committee on Rules shall present to the House reports concerning rules, joint rules, and order of business, within three legislative days of the time when ordered reported by the committee. If such rule or order is not considered immediately, it shall be referred to the calendar and, if not called up by the Member making the report within seven legislative days thereafter, any member of the Rules Committee may call it up as a question of privilege, and the Speaker shall recognize any member of the Rules Committee seeking recognition for that purpose. If the Committee on Rules shall make an adverse report on any resolution pending before the committee, providing for an order of business for the consideration by the House of any public bill or joint resolution, on days when it shall be in order to call up motions to discharge committees it shall be in order for any Member of the House to call up for consideration by the House any such adverse report, and it shall be in order to move the adoption by the House of said resolution adversely reported notwithstanding the adverse report of the Committee on Rules, and the Speaker shall recognize the Member seeking recognition for that purpose as a question of the highest privilege.

"(d) The Committee on House Administration shall make final report to the House in all contested-election cases not later than 6 months from the first day of the first regular session of the Congress to which the contestee is elected except in a contest from the Territory of Alaska, in which case the time shall not exceed 9 months.

"(e) A standing committee of the House shall meet to consider any bill or resolution pending before it (A) on all regular meeting days selected by the committee; (B) upon the call of the chairman of the committee; (C) if the chairman of the committee, after 3 days' consideration, refuses or fails, upon the request of at least three members of the committee, to call a special meeting of the committee within even calendar days from the date of said request, then, upon the filing with the clerk of the committee of the written and signed request of a majority of the committee for a called special meeting of the committee, the committee shall meet on the day and hour specified in said written request. It shall be the duty of the clerk of the committee to notify all members of the committee in the usual way of such called special meeting.

"(f) The rules of the House are hereby made the rules of its standing committees so far as applicable, except that a motion to recess from day to day is hereby made a motion of high privilege in said committees."

Delegates and Resident Commissioner

SEC. 122. Rule XII of the Standing Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"RULE XII

"Delegates and Resident Commissioner

"1. The Delegates from Hawaii and Alaska, and the Resident Commissioner to the United States from Puerto Rico shall be elected to serve as additional members on the Committees on Agriculture, Armed Services, and Public Lands; and they shall possess in such committees the same powers and privileges as in the House, and may make any motion except to reconsider."

Reference of private claims bills

SEC. 123. Paragraph 3 of rule XXI of the Standing Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"3. No bill for the payment or adjudication of any private claim against the Government shall be referred, except by unanimous consent, to any other than the following committees, namely: To the Committee on Foreign Affairs and to the Committee on the Judiciary."

PART 3—PROVISIONS APPLICABLE TO BOTH HOUSES

Private bills banned

SEC. 131. No private bill or resolution (including so-called omnibus claims or pension bills), and no amendment to any bill or resolution, authorizing or directing (1) the payment of money for property damages, for personal injuries or death for which suit may be instituted under the Federal Tort Claims Act, or for a pension (other than to carry out a provision of law or treaty stipulation); (2) the construction of a bridge across a navigable stream; or (3) the correction of a military or naval record, shall be received or considered in either the Senate of the House of Representatives.

Congressional adjournment

SEC. 132. Except in time of war or during a national emergency proclaimed by the President, the two Houses shall adjourn sine die not later than the last day (Sundays excepted) in the month of July in each year unless otherwise provided by the Congress.

Committee procedure

SEC. 133. (a) Each standing committee of the Senate and the House of Representatives shall fix regular weekly, biweekly, or monthly meeting days for the transaction of business before the committee, and additional meetings may be called by the chairman as he may deem necessary.

(b) Each such committee shall keep a complete record of all committee action. Such record shall include a record of the votes on any question on which a record vote is demanded.

(c) It shall be the duty of the chairman of each such committee to report or cause to be reported promptly to the Senate or House of Representatives, as the case may be, any measure approved by his committee and to take or cause to be taken necessary steps to bring the matter to a vote.

(d) No measure or recommendation shall be reported from any such committee unless a majority of the committee were actually present.

(e) Each standing committee shall, so far as practicable, require all witnesses appearing before it to file in advance written statements of their proposed testimony, and to limit their oral presentations to brief summaries of their argument. The staff of each committee shall prepare digests of such statements for the use of committee members.

(f) All hearings conducted by standing committees or their subcommittees shall be open to the public, except executive sessions for marking up bills or for voting or where the committee by a majority vote orders an executive session.

Committee powers

SEC. 134. (a) Each standing committee of the Senate, including any subcommittee of any such committee, is authorized to hold such hearings, to sit and act at such times and places during the sessions, recesses, and adjourned periods of the Senate, to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such correspondence, books, papers, and documents, to take such testimony and to make such expenditures (not in excess of $10,000 for each committee during any Congress) as it deems advisable. Each such committee may make investigations into any matter within its jurisdiction, may report such hearings as may be had by it, and may employ stenographic assistance at a cost not exceeding 25 cents per hundred words. The expenses of the committee shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman.

(b) Every committee and subcommittee serving the Senate and House of Representatives shall report the name, profession, and total salary of each staff member employed by it, and shall make an accounting of funds appropriated to it and expended by it to the Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House of Representatives, as the case may be, at least once every 6 months, and such information shall be published periodically in the Congressional Directory when and as the same is issued and as Senate and House documents, respectively, every 3 months.

(c) No standing committee of the Senate or the House, except the Committee on Rules of the House, shall sit, without special leave, while the Senate or the House, as the case may be, is in session.

Conference rules on amendments in nature of substitute

SEC. 135. (a) In any case in which a disagreement to an amendment in the nature of a substitute has been referred to conferees, it shall be in order for the conferees to report a substitute on the same subject matter; but they may not include in the report matter not committed to them by either House. They may, however, include in their report in any such case matter which is a germane modification of subjects in disagreement.

(b) In any case in which the conferees violate subsection (a), the conference report shall be subject to a point of order.

Legislative oversight by standing committees

SEC. 136. To assist the Congress in appraising the administration of the laws and in developing such amendments or related legislation as it may deem necessary, each standing committee of the Senate and the House of Representatives shall exercise continuous watchfulness of the execution by the administrative agencies concerned of any laws, the subject matter of which is within the jurisdiction of such committee; and, for that purpose, shall study all pertinent reports and data submitted to the Congress by the agencies in the executive branch of the Government.

Decisions on questions of committee jurisdiction

SEC. 137. In any case in which a controversy arises as to the jurisdiction of any standing committee of the Senate with respect to any proposed legislation, the question of jurisdiction shall be decided by the Presiding Officer of the Senate, without debate, in favor of that committee which has jurisdiction over the subject matter which predominates in such proposed legislation; but such decision shall be subject to an appeal.

Legislative budget

SEC. 138. (a) The Committee on Ways and Means and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Finance and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, are authorized and directed to meet jointly at the beginning of each regular session of Congress and after study and consultation, giving due consideration to the budget recommendations of the President, report to their respective Houses a legislative budget for the ensuing fiscal year, including the estimated over-all Federal receipts and expenditures for such year. Such report shall contain a recommendation for the maximum amount to be appropriated for expenditure in such year which shall include such an amount to be reserved for deficiencies as may be deemed necessary by such committees. If the estimated receipts exceed the estimated expenditures, such report shall contain a recommendation for a reduction in the public debt. Such report shall be made by March 1.

(b) The report shall be accompanied by a concurrent resolution adopting such budget, and fixing the maximum amount to be appropriated for expenditure in such year. If the estimated expenditures exceed the estimated receipts, the concurrent resolution shall include a section substantially as follows: "That it is the sense of the Congress that the public debt shall be increased in an amount equal to the amount by which the estimated expenditures for the ensuing fiscal year exceed the estimated receipts, such amount being $."

Hearings and reports by appropriations committees

SEC. 139. (a) No general appropriation bill, other than deficiency appropriation bills, shall be considered in either House unless, prior to the consideration of such bill, printed committee hearings and reports on such bill have been available for at least three calendar days for the Members of the House in which such bill is to be considered.

(b) The Committees on Appropriations of the two Houses are authorized and directed, acting jointly, to develop a standard appropriation classification schedule which will clearly define in concise and uniform accounts the subtotals of appropriations asked for by agencies in the executive branch of the Government. That part of the printed hearings containing each such agency's request for appropriations shall be preceded by such a schedule.

(c) No general appropriation bill or amendment thereto shall be received or considered in either House if it contains a provision reappropriating unexpended balances of appropriations; except that this provision shall not apply to appropriations in continuation of appropriations for public works on which work has commenced.

(d) The Appropriations Committees of both Houses are authorized and directed to make a study of (1) existing permanent appropriations with a view to limiting the number of permanent appropriations and to recommend to their respective Houses what permanent appropriations, if any, should be discontinued; and (2) the disposition of funds resulting from the sale of Government property or services by all departments and agencies in the executive branch of the Government with a view to recommending to their respective Houses a uniform system of control with respect to such funds.

Records of Congress

SEC. 140. (a) The Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives are authorized and directed, acting jointly, to obtain at the close of each Congress all of the noncurrent records of the Congress and of each committee thereof and transfer them to the National Archives for preservation, subject to the orders of the Senate or the House, respectively.

(b) The Clerk of the House of Representatives is authorized and directed to collect all of the noncurrent records of the House of Representatives from the First to the Seventy-sixth Congress, inclusive, and transfer such records to the National Archives for preservation, subject to the orders of the Senate or the House, respectively.

Preservation of committee hearings

SEC. 141. The Librarian of the Library of Congress is authorized and directed to have bound at the end of each session of Congress the printed hearings of testimony taken by each committee of the Congress at the preceding session.

Effective date

SEC. 142. This title shall take effect on January 2, 1947; except that this section and sections 140 and 141 shall take effect on the date of enactment of this act.

TITLE II—MISCELLANEOUS

PART I—STATUTORY PROVISIONS RELATING TO CONGRESSIONAL PERSONNEL

Stenographic pool

SEC. 201. The Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House of Representatives shall establish a stenographic pool in each of the Senate and House Office Buildings for the use of Members during peak periods when their existing clerical facilities are inadequate to their needs, and shall make its facilities available, within proper limits, to the Members of Congress, under such rules and regulations as they may prescribe.

Increase in compensation for certain congressional officers

SEC. 202. (a) Effective January 1, 1947, the annual basic compensation of the elected officers of the Senate and the House of Representatives (not including the Presiding Officers of the two Houses) shall be increased by 50 percent; and the provisions of section 4501 of the Federal Employees Pay act of 1945, as amended by section 5 of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1946, shall not be applicable to the compensation of said elected officers.

(b) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated annually for the "Office of the Vice President" the sum of $23,130; and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated annually for the "Office of the Speaker" the sum of $20,025.

(c) The Speaker, the majority leader, and the minority leader of the House of Representatives are each authorized to employ an administrative assistant, who shall receive basic compensation at a rate not to exceed $8,000 a year. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for the payment of such compensation.

Committee staffs

SEC. 203. (a) Each standing committee of the Senate and the House of Representatives (other than the Appropriations Committees) is authorized to appoint by a majority vote of the committee not more than four professional staff members in addition to the clerical staffs on a permanent basis without regard to political affiliations and solely on the basis of fitness to perform the duties of the office; and said staff members shall be assigned to the chairman and ranking minority member of such committee as the committee may deem advisable. Each such committee is further authorized to discharge by a majority vote of the committee any such professional staff member as it may see fit. Professional staff members shall not engage in any work other than committee business and no other duties may be assigned to them.

(b) The Committee on Appropriations of each House and each subcommittee thereof is authorized to appoint by a majority vote of the committee not more than four professional staff members in addition to the clerical staff on a permanent basis without regard to political affiliations and solely on the basis of fitness to perform the duties of the office; and said staff members shall be assigned to the chairman and ranking minority member of each committee on appropriations and each subcommittee thereof as the committee or subcommittee may deem advisable. Such committee or subcommittee is further authorized to terminate by a majority vote of the committee or subcommittee the services of any such professional staff member as it may see fit. Professional staff members shall not engage in any work other than committee business and no other duties may be assigned to them. In addition to other duties, such professional staff members shall aid the chairmen and ranking minority members in making careful studies of budget requests with a view to eliminating unnecessary expenditures.

(c) The clerical staff of each standing committee, which shall be appointed by a majority vote of the committee, shall consist of not more than six clerks, to be attached to the office of the chairman, to the ranking minority member, and to the professional staff, as the committee may deem advisable; and the position of committee janitor is hereby abolished. The clerical staff shall handle committee correspondence and stenographic work, both for the committee staff and for the chairman and ranking minority member on matters related to committee work.

(d) All committee hearings, records, data, charts, and files shall be kept separate and distinct from the congressional office records of the Member serving as chairman of the committee; and such records shall be the property of the Congress and all members of the committee and the respective Houses shall have access to such records. Each committee is authorized to have printed and bound such testimony and other data presented at hearings held by the committee.

(e) The professional staff members of the standing committees shall receive annual compensation, to be fixed by the chairman, ranging from $6,000 to $8,000 and the clerical staff shall receive annual compensation ranging from $2,000 to $6,000.

(f) No committee shall appoint to its staff any experts or other personnel detailed or assigned from any department or agency of the Government, except with the written permission of the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate or the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives, as the case may be.

(g) No individual who is employed as a professional staff member of any committee as provided in this section shall be eligible for appointment to any office or position in the executive branch of the Government for a period of 1 year after he shall have ceased to be such a member.

Legislative Reference Service

SEC. 204. (a) The Librarian of Congress is authorized and directed to establish in the Library of Congress a separate department to be known as the Legislative Reference Service. It shall be the duty of the Legislative Reference Service—

(1) upon request, to advise and assist any committee of either House or any joint committee in the analysis, appraisal, and evaluation of legislative proposals pending before it, or of recommendations submitted to Congress, by the President or any executive agency, and otherwise to assist in furnishing a basis for the proper determination of measures before the committee;

(2) upon request, or upon its own initiative in anticipation of requests, to gather, classify, analyze, and make available, in translations, indexes, digests, compilations and bulletins, and otherwise, data for or bearing upon legislation, and to render such data serviceable to Congress, and committees and members thereof, without partisan bias in selection or presentation;

(3) to prepare summaries and digests of public hearings before committees of the Congress, and of bills and resolutions of a public general nature introduced in either House.

(b) (1) A director and assistant director of the Legislative Reference Service and all other necessary personnel, shall be appointed by the Librarian of Congress without regard to the civil-service laws and without reference to political affiliations, solely on the ground of fitness to perform the duties of their office. The compensation of all employees shall be fixed in accordance with the provisions of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended: Provided, That the grade of senior specialists in each field enumerated in paragraph (2) of this subsection shall not be less than the highest grade in the executive branch of the Government to which research analysts and consultants without supervisory responsibility are currently assigned. All employees of the Legislative Reference Service shall be subject to the provisions of the civil-service retirement laws.

(2) The Librarian of Congress is further authorized to appoint in the Legislative Reference Service senior specialists in the following broad fields: Agriculture; American government and public administration; American public law; conservation; education; engineering and public works; full employment; housing; industrial organization and corporation finance; international affairs; international trade and economic geography; labor; mineral economics; money and banking; price economics; social welfare; taxation and fiscal policy; transportation and communications; and veterans' affairs. Such specialists, together with such other members of the staff as may be necessary, shall be available for special work with the appropriate committees of Congress for any of the purposes set out in section 204 (a) (1).

(c) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the work of the Legislative Reference Service the following sums: (1) For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, $550,000; (2) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948, $650,000; (3) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, $750,000; and (4) for each fiscal year thereafter such sums as may be necessary to carry on the work of the Service.

Office of the Legislative Counsel

SEC. 205. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the work of the Office of the Legislative Counsel the following sums:

(1) For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, $150,000;

(2) For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948, $200,000;

(3) For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, $250,000;

(4) For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, $250,000; and

(5) For each fiscal year thereafter such sums as may be necessary to carry on the work of the Office.

Studies by Comptroller General

SEC. 206. The Comptroller General is authorized and directed to make a full and complete study of restrictions placed in general appropriation acts limiting the expenditure of specified appropriations therein, with a view to determining the cost to the Government incident to complying with such restrictions, and to report to the Congress his estimate of the cost of complying with such restrictions and such other recommendations with respect thereto as he deems necessary or desirable.

Expenditure analysis by Comptroller General

SEC. 207. The Comptroller General is authorized and directed to make an expenditure analysis of each agency in the executive branch of the Government (including Government corporations), which, in the opinion of the Comptroller General, will enable Congress to determine whether public funds have been economically and efficiently administered and expended. Reports on such analyses shall be submitted by the Comptroller General, from time to time, to the Committees on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, to the Appropriations Committees, and to the legislative committees having jurisdiction over legislation relating to the operations of the respective agencies, of the two Houses.

Correction of military and naval records

SEC. 208. The Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Treasury with respect to the Coast Guard, respectively, under procedures set up by them, and acting through boards of civilian officers or employees of their respective departments, are authorized to correct any military or naval record where in their judgment such action is necessary to correct an error or to remove an injustice.

PART 2—STATUTORY PROVISIONS RELATING TO COMMITTEES OF CONGRESS

Improvement of Congressional Record

SEC. 221. The Joint Committee on Printing is authorized and directed to provide for printing in the daily RECORD the legislative program for the day, together with a list of congressional committee meetings and hearings, and the place of meeting and subject matter; and to cause a brief résumé of congressional activities for the previous day to be incorporated in the RECORD, together with an index of its contents. Such data shall be prepared under the supervision of the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives, respectively.

Joint Committee on Printing

SEC. 222. Section 1 of the act entitled "An act providing for the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents," approved January 12, 1895 (28 Stat. 601), is amended to read as follows: "That there shall be a Joint Committee on Printing, consisting of the chairman and two members of the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate and the chairman and two members of the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives, who shall have the powers hereinafter stated."

Joint Committee on the Library

SEC. 223. The Joint Committee of Congress on the Library shall hereafter consist of the chairman and four members of the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate and the chairman and four members of the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives.

Transfer of functions

SEC. 224. The functions, powers, and duties imposed by statute, resolution, or rule of either House of Congress on the effective date of this section on a standing committee of the Senate or the House of Representatives (or the chairman thereof) are, insofar as they are consistent with this act, thereby transferred to that standing committee created by this act (or the chairman thereof) to which is transferred the legislative jurisdiction over the subject matter to which such functions, powers, and duties relate; except that the respective chairmen of the Committees on Civil Service of the two Houses created by this act shall be members of the National Archives Council.

Joint Committee on the Economic Report

SEC. 225. Section 5 (b) (3) (relating to the time for filing the report of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report) of the Employment Act of 1946 is amended by striking out "May 1" and inserting in lieu thereof "February 1."

Economic report of the President

SEC. 226. Section 3 (a) (relating to the time for filing the economic report of the President) of the Employment Act of 1946 is amended by striking out "within 60 days after the beginning of each regular session" and inserting in lieu thereof "at the beginning of each regular session."

PART 3—PROVISIONS RELATING TO CAPITOL AND PAGES

Remodeling of caucus rooms and restaurants

SEC. 241. The Architect of the Capitol is authorized and directed to prepare plans and submit them to Congress at the earliest practicable date for the remodeling (a) of the caucus rooms in the Senate and House Office Buildings to provide improved acoustics and seating facilities and for the presentation of motion pictures or other visual displays on matters of national interest; and (b) of the Senate and House restaurants to provide for more convenient dining facilities.

Assignment of Capitol space

SEC. 242. The President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives shall cause a survey to be made of available space within the Capitol which could be utilized for joint committee meetings, meetings of conference committees, and other meetings, requiring the attendance of both Senators and Members of the House of Representatives, and shall recommend the reassignment of such space to accommodate such meetings.

Senate and House pages

SEC. 243. (a) The Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives, acting jointly, are authorized and directed to enter into an arrangement with the Board of Education of the District of Columbia for the education of congressional pages and pages of the Supreme Court in the public-school system of the District. Such arrangement shall include provision for reimbursement to the District of Columbia for any additional expenses incurred by the public-school system of the District in carrying out such arrangement.

(b) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to reimburse the District of Columbia in accordance with the arrangement referred to in subsection (a).

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsections (a) and (b) of this section, said page or pages may elect to attend a private or parochial school of their own choice: Provided, however, That such private or parochial school shall be reimbursed by the Senate and House of Representatives only in the same amount as would be paid if the page or pages were attending a public school under the provisions of paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section.

Effective date

SEC. 244. This title shall take effect on the date of its enactment; except that sections 203 (a), (b), (c), (e), and (f), 222, 223, 224, and 243 shall take effect on the day on which the Eightieth Congress convenes.

TITLE III—REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

Short title

SEC. 301. This title may be cited as the "Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act."

Definitions

SEC. 302. When used in this title—

(a) The term "contribution" includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money or anything of value and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution.

(b) The term "expenditure" includes a payment, distribution, loan, advance, deposit, or gift of money or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make an expenditure.

(c) The term "person" includes an individual, partnership, committee, association, corporation, and any other organization or group of persons.

(d) The term "Clerk" means the Clerk of the House of Representatives of the United States.

(e) The term "legislation" means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House.

Detailed accounts of contributions

SEC. 303.(a) It shall be the duty of every person who shall in any manner solicit or receive a contribution to any organization or fund for the purposes hereinafter designated to keep a detailed and exact account of—

(1) all contributions of any amount or of any value whatsoever;

(2) the name and address of every person making any such contribution of $500 or more and the date thereof;

(3) all expenditures made by or on behalf of such organization or fund; and

(4) the name and address of every person to whom any such expenditure is made and the date thereof.

(b) It shall be the duty of such person to obtain and keep a receipted bill, stating the particulars, for every expenditure of such funds exceeding $10 in amount, and to preserve all receipted bills and accounts required to be kept by this section for a period of at least 2 years from the date of the filing of the statement containing such items.

Receipts for contributions

SEC. 304. Every individual who receives a contribution of $500 or more for any of the purposes hereinafter designated shall within 5 days after receipt thereof render to the person or organization for which such contribution was received a detailed account thereof, including the name and address of the person making such contribution and the date on which received.

Statements to be filed with Clerk of House

SEC. 305. (a) Every person receiving any contributions or expending any money for the purposes designated in subparagraph (a), (b), or (c) of section 307 shall file with the Clerk between the first and tenth day of each calendar quarter, a statement containing complete as of the day next preceding the date of filing—

(1) the name and address of each person who has made a contribution of $500 or more not mentioned in the preceding report; except that the first report filed pursuant to this title shall contain the name and address of each person who has made any contribution of $500 or more to such person since the effective date of this title;

(2) the total sum of the contributions made to or for such person during the calendar year and not stated under paragraph (1);

(3) the total sum of all contributions made to or for such person during the calendar year;

(4) the name and address of each person to whom an expenditure in one or more items of the aggregate amount or value, within the calendar year, of $10 or more has been made by or on behalf of such person, and the amount, date, and purpose of such expenditure;

(5) the total sum of all expenditures made by or on behalf of such person during the calendar year and not stated under paragraph (4);

(6) the total sum of expenditures made by or on behalf of such person during the calendar year.

(b) The statements required to be filed by subsection (a) shall be cumulative during the calendar year to which they relate, but where there has been no change in an item reported in a previous statement only the amount need be carried forward.

Statement preserved for 2 years

SEC. 306. A statement required by this title to be filed with the Clerk—

(a) shall be deemed properly filed when deposited in an established post office within the prescribed time, duly stamped, registered, and directed to the Clerk of the House of Representatives of the United States, Washington, D. C., but in the event it is not received, a duplicate of such statement shall be promptly filed upon notice by the Clerk of its nonreceipt;

(b) shall be preserved by the Clerk for a period of 2 years from the date of filing, shall constitute part of the public records of his office, and shall be open to public inspection.

Persons to whom applicable

SEC. 307. The provisions of this title shall apply to any person (except a political committee as defined in the Federal Corrupt Practices Act, and duly organized State or local committees of a political party), who by himself, or through any agent or employee or other persons in any manner whatsoever, directly or indirectly, solicits, collects, or receives money or any other thing of value to be used principally to aid, or the principal purpose of which person is to aid, in the accomplishment of any of the following purposes:

(a) The passage or defeat of any legislation by the Congress of the United States.

(b) To influence, directly or indirectly, the passage or defeat of any legislation by the Congress of the United States.

Registration with Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House

SEC. 308. (a) Any person who shall engage himself for pay or for any consideration for the purpose of attempting to influence the passage or defeat of any legislation by the Congress of the United States shall, before doing anything in furtherance of such object, register with the Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate and shall give to those officers in writing and under oath, his name and business address, the name and address of the person by whom he is employed, and in whose interest he appears or works, the duration of such employment, how much he is paid and is to receive, by whom he is paid or is to be paid, how much he is to be paid for expenses, and what expenses are to be included. Each such person so registering shall, between the first and tenth day of each calendar quarter, so long as his activity continues, file with the Clerk and Secretary a detailed report under oath of all money received and expended by him during the preceding calendar quarter in carrying on his work; to whom paid; for what purposes; and the names of any papers, periodicals, magazines, or other publications in which he has caused to be published any articles or editorials; and the proposed legislation he is employed to support or oppose. The provisions of this section shall not apply to any person who merely appears before a committee of the Congress of the United States in support of or opposition to legislation; nor to any public official acting in his official capacity; nor in the case of any newspaper or other regularly published periodical (including any individual who owns, publishes, or is employed by any such newspaper or periodical) which in the ordinary course of business publishes news items, editorials, or other comments, or paid advertisements, which directly or indirectly urge the passage or defeat of legislation, if such newspaper, periodical, or individual, engages in no further or other activities in connection with the passage or defeat of such legislation, other than to appear before a committee of the Congress of the United States in support of or in opposition to such legislation.

(b) All information required to be filed under the provisions of this section with the Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate shall be compiled by said Clerk and Secretary, acting jointly, as soon as practicable after the close of the calendar quarter with respect to which such information is filed and shall be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Reports and statements to be made under oath

SEC. 309. All reports and statements required under this title shall be made under oath, before an officer authorized by law to administer oaths.

Penalties

SEC. 310. (a) Any person who violates any of the provisions of this title, shall, upon conviction, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than 12 months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(b) In addition to the penalties provided for in subsection (a), any person convicted of the misdemeanor specified therein is prohibited, for a period of 3 years from the date of such conviction, from attempting to influence, directly or indirectly, the passage or defeat of any proposed legislation or from appearing before a committee of the Congress in support of or opposition to proposed legislation; and any person who violates any provision of this subsection shall, upon conviction thereof, be guilty of a felony, and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000, or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Exemption

SEC. 311. The provisions of this title shall not apply to practices or activities regulated by the Federal Corrupt Practices Act nor be construed as repealing any portion of said Federal Corrupt Practices Act.

TITLE IV—FEDERAL TORT CLAIMS ACT

PART 1—SHORT TITLE AND DEFINITIONS

Short title

SEC. 401. This title may be cited as the "Federal Tort Claims Act".

Definitions

SEC. 402. As used in this title, the term—

(a) "Federal agency" includes the executive departments and independent establishments of the United States, and corporations whose primary function is to act as, and while acting as, instrumentalities or agencies of the United States, whether or not authorized to sue and be sued in their own names: Provided, That this shall not be construed to include any contractor with the United States.

(b) "Employee of the Government" includes officers or employees of any Federal agency, members of the military or naval forces of the United States, and persons acting on behalf of a Federal agency in an official capacity, temporarily or permanently in the service of the United States, whether with or without compensation.

(c) "Acting within the scope of his office or employment," in the case of a member of the military or naval forces of the United States, means acting in line of duty.

PART 2—ADMINISTRATIVE ADJUSTMENT OF TORT CLAIMS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES

Claims of $1,000 or less

SEC. 403. (a) Subject to the limitations of this title, authority is hereby conferred upon the head of each Federal agency, or his designee for the purpose, acting on behalf of the United States, to consider, ascertain, adjust, determine, and settle any claim against the United States for money only, accruing on and after January 1, 1945, on account of damage to or loss of property or on account of personal injury or death, where the total amount of the claim does not exceed $1,000, caused by the negligent or wrongful act or omission of any employee of the Government while acting within the scope of his office or employment, under circumstances where the United States, if a private person, would be liable to the claimant for such damage, loss, injury, or death, in accordance with the law of the place where the act or omission occurred.

(b) Subject to the provisions of part 3 of this title, any such award or determination shall be final and conclusive on all officers of the Government, except when procured by means of fraud, notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary.

(c) Any award made to any claimant pursuant to this section, and any award, compromise, or settlement of any claim cognizable under this title made by the Attorney General pursuant to section 413, shall be paid by the head of the Federal agency concerned out of appropriations that may be made therefor, which appropriations are hereby authorized.

(d) The acceptance by the claimant of any such award, compromise, or settlement shall be final and conclusive on the claimant, and shall constitute a complete release by the claimant of any claim against the United States and against the employee of the Government whose act or omission gave rise to the claim by reason of the same subject matter.

Reports

SEC. 404. The head of each Federal agency shall annually make a report to the Congress of all claims paid by such Federal agency under this part. Such report shall include the name of each claimant, a statement of the amount claimed and the amount awarded, and a brief description of the claim.

PART 3—SUITS ON TORT CLAIMS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES

Jurisdiction

SEC. 410. (a) Subject to the provisions of this title, the United States district court for the district wherein the plaintiff is resident or wherein the act or omission complained of occurred, including the United States district courts for the Territories and possessions of the United States, sitting without a jury, shall have exclusive jurisdiction to hear, determine, and render judgment on any claim against the United States, for money only, accruing on and after January 1, 1945, on account of damage to or loss of property or on account of personal injury or death caused by the negligent or wrongful act or omission of any employee of the Government while acting within the scope of his office or employment, under circumstances where the United States, if a private person, would be liable to the claimant for such damage, loss, injury, or death in accordance with the law of the place where the act or omission occurred. Subject to the provisions of this title, the United States shall be liable in respect of such claims to the same claimants, in the same manner, and to the same extent as a private individual under like circumstances, except that the United States shall not be liable for interest prior to judgment, or for punitive damages. Costs shall be allowed in all courts to the successful claimant to the same extent as if the United States were a private litigant, except that such costs shall not include attorney's fees.

(b) The judgment in such an action shall constitute a complete bar to any action by the claimant, by reason of the same subject matter, against the employee of the Government whose act or omission gave rise to the claim. No suit shall be instituted pursuant to this section upon a claim presented to any Federal agency pursuant to part 2 of this title unless such Federal agency has made final disposition of the claim: Provided, That the claimant may, upon 15 days' notice given in writing, withdraw the claim from consideration of the Federal agency and commence suit thereon pursuant to this section: Provided further, That as to any claim so disposed of or so withdrawn, no suit shall be instituted pursuant to this section for any sum in excess of the amount of the claim presented to the Federal agency, except where the increased amount of the claim is shown to be based upon newly discovered evidence not reasonably discoverable at the time of presentation of the claim to the Federal agency or upon evidence of intervening facts, relating to the amount of the claim. Disposition of any claim made pursuant to part 2 of this title shall not be competent evidence of liability or amount of damages in proceedings on such claim pursuant to this section.

Procedure

SEC. 411. In actions under this part, the forms of process, writs, pleadings, and motions, and the practice and procedure, shall be in accordance with the rules promulgated by the Supreme Court pursuant to the act of June 19, 1934 (48 Stat. 1064); and the same provisions for counterclaim and set-off, for interest upon judgments, and for payment of judgments, shall be applicable as in cases brought in the United States district courts under the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. 505).

Review

SEC. 412. (a) Final judgments in the district courts in cases under this part shall be subject to review by appeal—

(1) in the circuit courts of appeals in the same manner and to the same extent as other judgments of the district courts; or

(2) in the Court of Claims of the United States: Provided, That the notice of appeal filed in the district court under rule 73 of the Rules of Civil Procedure shall have affixed thereto the written consent on behalf of all the appellees that the appeal be taken to the Court of Claims of the United States. Such appeals to the Court of Claims of the United States shall be taken within 3 months after the entry of the judgment of the district court, and shall be governed by the rules relating to appeals from a district court to a circuit court of appeals adopted by the Supreme Court pursuant to the act of June 19, 1934 (48 Stat. 1064). In such appeals the Court of Claims of the United States shall have the same powers and duties as those conferred on a circuit court of appeals in respect to appeals under section 4 of the act of February 13, 1925 (43 Stat. 939).

(b) Sections 239 and 240 of the Judicial Code, as amended, shall apply to cases under this part in the circuit court of appeals and in the Court of Claims of the United States to the same extent as to cases in a circuit court of appeals therein referred to.

Compromise

SEC. 413. With a view to doing substantial justice, the Attorney General is authorized to arbitrate, compromise, or settle any claim cognizable under this part, after the institution of any suit thereon, with the approval of the court in which such suit is pending.

PART 4—PROVISIONS COMMON TO PART 2 AND PART 3

One-year statute of limitations

SEC. 420. Every claim against the United States cognizable under this title shall be forever barred, unless within 1 year after such claim accrued or within 1 years after the date of enactment of this act, whichever is later, it is presented in writing to the Federal agency out of whose activities it arises, if such claim is for a sum not exceeding $1,000; or unless within 1 year after such claim accrued or within 1 year after the date of enactment of this act, whichever is later, an action is begun pursuant to part 3 of this title. In the event that a claim for a sum not exceeding $1,000 is presented to a Federal agency as aforesaid, the time to institute a suit pursuant to part 3 of this title shall be extended for a period of 6 months from the date of mailing of notice to the claimant by such Federal agency as to the final disposition of the claim or from the date of withdrawal of the claim from such Federal agency pursuant to section 410 of this title, if it would otherwise expire before the end of such period.

Exceptions

SEC. 421. The provisions of this title shall not apply to—

(a) Any claim based upon an act or omission of an employee of the Government, exercising due care, in the execution of a statute or regulation, whether or not such statute or regulation be valid, or based upon the exercise or performance or the failure to exercise or perform a discretionary function or duty on the part of a Federal agency or an employee of the Government, whether or not the discretion involved be abused.

(b) Any claim arising out of the loss, miscarriage, or negligent transmission of letters or postal matter.

(c) Any claim arising in respect of the assessment or collection of any tax or customs duty, or the detention of any goods or merchandise by any officer of customs or excise or any other law-enforcement officer.

(d) Any claim for which a remedy is provided by the act of March 9, 1920 (U. S. C., title 46, secs. 741–752, inclusive), or the act of March 3, 1925 (U. S. C., title 46, secs. 781–790, inclusive), relating to claims or suits in admiralty against the United States.

(e) Any claim arising out of an act or omission of any employee of the Government in administering the provisions of the Trading With the Enemy Act, as amended.

(f) Any claim for damages caused by the imposition or establishment of a quarantine by the United States.

(g) Any claim arising from injury to vessels, or to the cargo, crew, or passengers of vessels, while passing through the locks of the Panama Canal or while in Canal Zone waters.

(h) Any claim arising out of assault, battery, false imprisonment, false arrest, malicious prosecution, abuse of process, libel, slander, misrepresentation deceit, or interference with contract rights.

(i) Any claim for damages caused by the fiscal operations of the Treasury or by the regulation of the monetary system.

(j) Any claim arising out of the activities of the military or naval forces, or the Coast Guard, during time of war.

(k) Any claim arising in a foreign country.

(l) Any claim arising from the activities of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Attorneys' fees

SEC. 422. The court rendering a judgment for the plaintiff pursuant to part 3 of this title, or the head of the Federal agency or his designee making an award pursuant to part 2 of this title, or the Attorney General making a disposition pursuant to section 413 of this title, as the case may be, may, as a part of the judgment, award, or settlement, determine and allow reasonable attorneys' fees, which, if the recovery is $500 or more, shall not exceed 10 percent of the amount recovered under part 2, or 20 percent of the amount recovered under part 3, to be paid out of but not in addition to the amount of judgment, award, or settlement recovered, to the attorneys representing the claimant. Any attorney who charges, demands, receives, or collects for services rendered in connection with such claim any amount in excess of that allowed under this section, if recovery be had, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to a fine of not more than $2,000 or imprisonment for not more than 1 year, or both.

Exclusiveness of remedy

SEC. 423. From and after the date of enactment of this act, the authority of any Federal agency to sue and be sued in its own name shall not be construed to authorize suits against such Federal agency on claims which are cognizable under part 3 of this title, and the remedies provided by this title in such cases shall be exclusive.

Certain statutes inapplicable

SEC. 424. (a) All provisions of law authorizing any Federal agency to consider, ascertain, adjust, or determine claims on account of damage to or loss of property or on account of personal injury or death, caused by the negligent or wrongful act or omission of any employee of the Government while acting within the scope of his office or employment, are hereby repealed in respect of claims cognizable under part 2 of this title and accruing on and after January 1, 1945, including, but without limitation, the provisions granting such authorization now contained in the following laws:

Public Law No. 375, Sixty-seventh Congress, approved December 28, 1922 (42 Stat. 1066; U. S. C., title 31, secs. 215–217).

Public Law No. 267, Sixty-sixth Congress, approved June 5, 1920 (41 Stat. 1054; U. S. C., title 33, sec. 853).

Public Law No. 481, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved March 20, 1936 (49 Stat. 1184; U. S. C., title 31, sec. 224b).

Public Law No. 113, as amended, Seventy-eighth Congress, approved July 3, 1943 (57 Stat. 372; U. S. C., title 31, secs. 223b, 223c, and 223d).

Public Law No. 182, as amended, Sixty-fifth Congress, approved July 1, 1918 (40 Stat. 705; U. S. C., title 34, sec. 600).

Section 4 of Public Law No. 18, Sixty-seventh Congress, approved June 16, 1921 (42 Stat. 63), as amended by Public Law No. 456, Seventy-third Congress, approved June 22, 1934 (48 Stat. 1207; U. S. C., title 31, sec. 224c).

(b) Nothing contained herein shall be deemed to repeal any provision of law authorizing any Federal agency to consider, ascertain, adjust, settle, determine, or pay any claim on account of damage to or loss of property or on account of personal injury or death, in cases in which such damage, loss, injury, or death was not caused by any negligent or wrongful act or omission of an employee of the Government while acting within the scope of his office or employment, or any other claim not cognizable under part 2 of this title.

TITLE V—GENERAL BRIDGE ACT

Short title

SEC. 501. This title may be cited as the "General Bridge Act of 1946."

Consent of Congress

SEC. 502. (a) The consent of Congress is hereby granted for the construction, maintenance, and operation of bridges and approaches thereto over the navigable waters of the United States, in accordance with the provisions of this title.

(b) The location and plans for such bridges shall be approved by the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War before construction is commenced, and, in approving the location and plans of any bridge, they may impose any specific conditions relating to the maintenance and operation of the structure which they may deem necessary in the interest of public navigation, and the conditions so imposed shall have the force of law.

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsections (a) and (b), it shall be unlawful to construct or commence the construction of any privately owned highway toll bridge until the location and plans thereof shall also have been submitted to and approved by the highway department or departments of the State or States in which the bridge and its approaches are situated; and where such bridge shall be between two or more States and the highway departments thereof shall be unable to agree upon the location and plans therefor, or if they, or either of them, shall fail or refuse to act upon the location and plans submitted, such location and plans then shall be submitted to the Public Roads Administration and, if approved by the Public Roads Administration, approval by the highway departments shall not be required.

Tolls

SEC. 503. If tolls shall be charged for the transit over any interstate bridge of engines, cars, streetcars, wagons, carriages, vehicles, animals, foot passengers, or other passengers, such tolls shall be reasonable and just, and the Secretary of War may, at any time, and from time to time, prescribe the reasonable rates of toll for such transit over such bridge, and the rates so prescribed shall be the legal rates and shall be the rates demanded and received for such transit.

Acquisition by public agencies

SEC. 504. After the completion of any interstate toll bridge constructed by an individual, firm, or corporation, as determined by the Secretary of War, either of the States in which the bridge is located, or any public agency or political subdivision of either of such States, within or adjoining which any part of such bridge is located, or any two or more of them jointly, may at any time acquire and take over all right, title, and interest in such bridge and its approaches, and any interest in real property for public purposes by condemnation or expropriation. If at any time after the expiration of 5 years after the completion of such bridge the same is acquired by condemnation or expropriation, the amount of damages or compensation to be allowed shall not include good will, going value, or prospective revenues or profits, but shall be limited to the sum of (1) the actual cost of constructing such bridge and its approaches, less a reasonable deduction for actual depreciation in value; (2) the actual costs of acquiring such interests in real property; (3) actual financing and promotion costs, not to exceed 10 percent of the sum of the cost of constructing the bridge and its approaches and acquiring such interests in real property; and (4) actual expenditures for necessary improvements.

Statements of cost

SEC. 505. Within 90 days after the completion of a privately owned interstate toll bridge, the owner shal file with the Secretary of War and with the highway departments of the States in which the bridge is located, a sworn itemized statement showing the actual original cost of constructing the bridge and its approaches, the actual cost of acquiring any interest in real property necessary therefor, and the actual financing and promotion costs. The Secretary of War may, and upon request of a highway department shall, at any time within 3 years after the completion of such bridge, investigate such costs and determine the accuracy and the reasonableness of the costs alleged in the statement of costs so filed, and shall make a finding of the actual and reasonable costs of constructing, financing, and promoting such bridge. For the purpose of such investigation the said individual, firm, or corporation, its successors and assigns, shall make available all of its records in connection with the construction, financing, and promotion thereof. The findings of the Secretary of War as to the reasonable costs of the construction, financing, and promotion of the bridge shall be conclusive for the purposes mentioned in section 504 of this title, subject only to review in a court of equity for fraud or gross mistake.

Sinking fund

SEC. 506. If tolls are charged for the use of an interstate bridge constructed or taken over or acquired by a State or States or by any municipality or other political subdivision or public agency thereof, under the provisions of this title, the rates of toll shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the amount paid therefor, including reasonable interest and financing costs, as soon as possible under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 20 years from the date of constructing or acquiring the same. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls. An accurate record of the amount paid for acquiring the bridge and its approaches, the actual expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected, shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

Applicability of title

SEC. 507. The provisions of this title shall apply only to bridges over navigable waters of the United States, the construction of which is hereafter approved under the provisions of this title; and the provisions of the first proviso of section 9 of the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. 1151; U. S. C., title 33, sec. 401), and the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906, shall not apply to such bridges.

International bridges

SEC. 508. This title shall not be construed to authorize the construction of any bridge which will connect the United States, or any Territory or possession of the United States, with any foreign country.

Eminent domain

SEC. 509. There are hereby conferred upon any individual, his heirs, legal representatives, or assigns, any firm or corporation, its successors or assigns, or any State, political subdivision, or municipality authorized in accordance with the provisions of this title to build a bridge between two or more States, all such rights and powers to enter upon lands and acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use real estate and other property in the respective States needed for the location, construction, operation, and maintenance of such bridge and its approaches, as are possessed by railroad corporations for railroad purposes or by bridge corporations for bridge purposes in the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, upon making just compensation therefor to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of such State, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation or expropriation of property for public purposes in such State.

Penalties

SEC. 510. Any person who fails or refuses to comply with any lawful order of the Secretary of War or the Chief of Engineers issued under the provisions of this title, or who fails to comply with any specific condition imposed by the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War relating to the maintenance and operation of bridges, or who refuses to produce books, papers, or documents in obedience to a subpena or other lawful requirement under this title, or who otherwise violates any provisions of this title, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not to exceed $5,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 1 year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Rights reserved

SEC. 511. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this title is hereby expressly reserved as to any and all bridges which may be built under authority hereof.

TITLE VI—COMPENSATION AND RETIREMENT PAY OF MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

Compensation of Members of Congress

SEC. 601. (a) Effective on the day on which the Eightieth Congress convenes, the compensation of Senators, Representatives in Congress, Delegates from the Territories, and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico shall be at the rate of $15,000 per annum each; and the compensation of the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Vice President of the United States shall be at the rate of $20,000 per annum each.

(b) The sentence contained in the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1946, which reads as follows: "There shall be paid to each Representative and Delegate, and to the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico, after January 2, 1945, an expense allowance of $2,500 per annum to assist in defraying expenses related to or resulting from the discharge of his official duties, to be paid in equal monthly installments.", is hereby repealed, effective on the day on which the Eightieth Congress convenes.

(c) The sentence contained in the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1947, which reads as follows: "There shall be paid to each Senator after January 1, 1946, an expense allowance of $2,500 per annum to assist in defraying expenses related to or resulting from the discharge of his official duties, to be paid in equal monthly installments.", is hereby repealed, effective on the day on which the Eightieth Congress convenes.

RETIREMENT PAY OF MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

SEC. 602. (a) Section 3 (a) of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, is amended by inserting after the words "elective officers" the words "in the executive branch of the Government."

(b) Such act, as amended, is further amended by adding after section 3 the following new section:

"SEC. 3A. Notwithstanding any other provision of this act—

"(1) This act shall not apply to any Member of Congress until he gives notice in writing, while serving as a Member of Congress, to the disbursing officer by whom his salary is paid of his desire to come within the purview of this act. Such notice may be given by a Member of Congress within 6 months after the date of enactment of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 or within 6 months after any date on which he takes an oath of office as a Member of Congress.

"(2) In the case of any Member of Congress who gives notice of his desire to come within the purview of this act, the amount required to be deposited for the purposes of section 9 with respect to services rendered after the date of enactment of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, shall be a sum equal to 6 percent of his basic salary, pay, or compensation for such services, together with interest computed at the rate of 4 percent per annum compounded on December 31 of each year; and the amount to be deducted and withheld from the basic salary, pay, or compensation of each such Member of Congress for the purposes of section 10 shall be a sum equal to 6 percent of such basic salary, pay, or compensation.

"(3) No person shall be entitled to receive an annuity as provided in this section until he shall have become separated from the service after having had at least 6 years of service as a Member of Congress and have attained the age of 62 years, except that any such Member who shall have had at least 5 years of service as a Member of Congress, may, subject to the provisions of section 6 and of paragraph (4) of this section, be retired for disability, irrespective of age, and be paid an annuity computed in accordance with paragraph (5) of this section.

"(4) No Member of Congress shall be entitled to receive an annuity under this act unless there shall have been deducted and withheld from his basic salary, pay, or compensation for the last 5 years of his service as a Member of Congress, or there shall have been deposited under section 9 with respect to such last 5 years of service, the amounts specified in paragraph (2) of this section with respect to so much of such 5 years of service as was performed after the date of enactment of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 and the amounts specified in section 9 with respect to so much of such 5 years of service as was performed prior to such date.

"(5) Subject to the provisions of section 9 and of subsections (c) and (d) of section 4, the annuity of a Member of Congress shall be an amount equal to 2½ percent of his average annual basic salary, pay, or compensation as a Member of Congress multiplied by his years of service as a Member of Congress, but no such annuity shall exceed an amount equal to three-fourths of the salary, pay, or compensation that he is receiving at the time he becomes separated from the service.

"(6) In the case of a Member of Congress who becomes separated from the service before he completes an aggregate of 6 years of service as a Member of Congress, and who is not retired for disability, the total amount deducted from his basic salary, pay, or compensation as a Member of Congress, together with interest at 4 percent compounded as of December 31 of each year shall be returned to such Member of Congress. No such Member of Congress shall thereafter become eligible to receive an annuity as provided in this section unless the amounts so returned are redeposited with interest at 4 percent compounded on December 31 of each year, but interest shall not be required covering any period of separation from the service.

"(7) If any person takes office as a Member of Congress while receiving an annuity as provided in this section, the payment of such annuity shall be suspended during the period for which he holds such office; but, if he gives notice as provided in paragraph (2) of this section, his service as a Member of Congress during such period shall be credited in determining the amount of his subsequent annuity.

"(8) Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to prevent any person eligible therefor from simultaneously receiving an annuity computed in accordance with this section and an annuity computed in accordance with section 4, but in computing the annuity under section 4 in the case of any person who (A) has had at least 6 years' service as a Member of Congress, and (B) has served as a Member of Congress at any time after the date of enactment of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, service as a Member of Congress shall not be credited.

"(9) No provision of this or any other act relating to automatic separation from the service shall be applicable to any Member of Congress.

"(10) As used in this section, the term 'Member of Congress' means a Senator, Representative in Congress, Delegate from a Territory, or the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico; and the term 'service as a Member of Congress' shall include the period from the date of the beginning of the term for which a Member of Congress is elected or appointed to the date on which he takes office as such a Member."

CONGRESSIONAL REORGANIZATION

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, let me concur in the observations made by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY]. I think we bring you a fairly good bill. We have recognized the difficulties under which we work. We have had a good many conferences. What will be inserted in the RECORD is a committee print and represents a splendid first compromise in an attempt to improve the procedure of the Congress. I hope every Member will take the opportunity tomorrow or the next day to examine all the provisions of the bill. We hope it will be considered very early next week and that we may have favorable action by the House, since it has already been passed by the Senate.

THE LATE JOSEPH M. PRATT

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, it is with deep regret that I have to announce to the House the sudden death of a former colleague of ours from the State of Pennsylvania, Joseph M. Pratt, who died this morning at the Statler Hotel as the result of a heart attack.

Mr. Pratt was a constituent of mine and was elected in a special election in January 1944 to fill the unexpired term of our colleague from the Second District at that time, Mr. McGranery. He served well and ably for the balance of that term.

Due to the Reapportionment Act he and I were placed in the same district and were opponents in the congressional election last year. Our campaign was characterized by complete friendliness and amity between us. There was nothing said or nothing occurred which in any way marred the sincere and intimate friendship which had existed and did exist between us up until the time of his death this morning.

I know that I express the sincere sympathy of the delegation from Philadelphia, and I am sure of the State of Pennsylvania, when I say to his family that we were profoundly shocked and grieved by his death. He was active for years in Republican politics. He was a ward leader in the Eighth District, my district. He was nominated this year by his party as the candidate for Senator in my senatorial district. He was a man of sterling worth and great character, who, as a public servant, rendered sincere and conscientious service to his community and who was always active in advancing the civil and business life of our community.

I sincerely pray that God will give him eternal rest and that in His divine mercy He will grant comfort and consolation to the members of his family.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM].

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. Speaker, on the 8th day of February 1944 there stood in the well of this House two new Representatives, Hon. SAMUEL K. MCCONNELL and Hon. Joseph M. Pratt. They were sworn in at that time. Today we mourn the passing of our former colleague. His time here in the House was short, but I never knew a man that had a higher conception of his duties as a Member of this great body than did Mr. Pratt. He was anxious to learn all the details of his work. He was faithful in his attendance. But it was the personal qualities of the man that endeared him to us, particularly on the Republican side, who knew him so intimately. We, of course, associated with him daily. We came to know him as a quiet, modest man; a man of high character, keen sense of humor and yet a man of wonderful character and kindness of heart. We all grew to love him, and the more we saw him, and the larger our contacts, the better we liked him.

So, in speaking for and on behalf of my Republican brethren from Pennsylvania, we will miss him, and we say in deepest sincerity to the bereaved widow and members of his family that our most sincere prayers go out for them, and may Almighty God in His loving kindness and sympathy have mercy on his soul and comfort his bereaved relatives.

Rest assured that his was the heritage of a good man and a Christian gentleman.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. Speaker, the announcement of the sudden death of our former colleague Joseph M. Pratt has affected me with particular force.

Mr. Pratt and I were elected to Congress on the same day at special elections to fill vacancies in Congress. We stood together in the well of the House as we were sworn into office February 8, 1944, during the second session of the Seventy-eighth Congress. We often referred to one another as congressional twins.

Former Congressman Pratt was born in Paterson, N. J., and moved to Philadelphia in 1892. He went to work at an early age, and by his own efforts rose from obscurity to success in business and political life.

His pleasing personality, good humor, and unbounded energy won him a host of loyal friends. He will be missed by all of us who knew him. I personally feel that I have lost a real friend, and I feel grateful that circumstances brought us together. Our association here in the House of Representatives will remain a very pleasant memory throughout the future years.

Mr. BRUMBAUGH. Mr. Speaker, the sudden death of Hon. Joseph M. Pratt, formerly a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania, has grieved me deeply. Shortly after my election to Congress, Representative Pratt became a Member of the House of Representatives and since we were both freshmen we had many things in common.

I enjoyed the almost daily companionship of Joe Pratt as he was affectionately called by those of us who prided ourselves on being regarded as his close personal friends.

It became a frequent custom for both of us to have lunch together and the pleasure derived from such happy occasions is a pleasant memory.

Representative Pratt had the happy faculty of making and holding friends and during his service in Congress he demonstrated this fact by winning the admiration and respect of those of us who were privileged to know him intimately.

His sudden passing is a grim reminder that life is uncertain and that death stalks its prey without any regard to personality or position in life.

I feel a deep personal loss in the death of Joe Pratt whom I regarded as a cherished friend and an able, honest, and courageous colleague.

SUBSIDY RELIEF

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, there is one thing that must be done before the House recesses, and that is to make sure that relief be given to the people in the sum of $2,644,000,000 in taxes that are used for subsidies. Now that the subsidies are off, certainly the people should not pay twice.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DIRKSEN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include tables.

Mr. McDONOUGH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances; in one to extend his remarks on the McMahon bill, and in the other on the British loan.

Mr. COLE of Missouri asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial appearing in the Washington News today.

Mr. REED of New York asked and was given permission to revise and extend the remarks he made on the McMahon bill in Committee of the Whole today and include certain printed lists and quotations.

Mr. DWORSHAK asked and was given permission to revise and extend the remarks he made in Committee of the Whole today and include a brief dispatch from the New York Times.

Mr. CLASON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and to include an editorial.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a petition with reference to pending Indian legislation.

Mr. JUDD asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include certain excerpts.

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that tomorrow, at the conclusion of the legislative program of the day and following any special orders heretofore ordered, I may be permitted to address the House for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

PRICE CONTROL

Mr. BRYSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. BRYSON. Mr. Speaker, in all the time of my service in the House of Representatives I doubt if we have ever been confronted with a legislative and economic decision as complex and difficult as the decision on price controls. All of us, of course, realized that the period of reconversion would be a critical one, but I do not believe even the wisest of us realized just how serious the situation would be. Price control has become a national issue of the first magnitude, and it behooves all Americans, whether they work on farms, in factories, in offices, or whether they sit with the lawmaking bodies, to consider seriously all the far-reaching implications of any legislation which is brought up for consideration.

It is generally conceded—even by critics of OPA—that some kind of inflation controls must be maintained in order to curb serious speculative boom prices. How to maintain these controls until the right time, on the right items, and then taper off so as to prevent too rapid a deflation is a problem calling for the highest degree of courage and sagacity. The situation in Congress with regard to price control is, to be perfectly frank, discouraging to those of us who believe that effective controls are essential for a limited period in order to avoid the manifold dangers of inflation.

After a great deal of debate and a series of conferences the Senate and the House finally agreed upon an amended and reamended Price Control Act, which I and my other Democratic colleagues voted for reluctantly, because it was quite apparent that we must accept that act or none at all. Our Democratic leaders in both Houses advised the President that said amended act was the best that could be had. President Truman vetoed the act choosing to allow OPA to die rather than to approve a measure which he believed would have disastrous effects on our national economy.

I have since been criticized for the way that I voted on the OPA question. I should like to take this opportunity to clarify my position for the voters of this district. First, let me state quite emphatically that I believe in effective price control during the period in which there in any danger of uncontrolled inflation. I am anxious, however, as I know all of you are anxious, to terminate these controls just as soon as it is safe and practical. I do not believe that the time has yet arrived when we can safely dispense with price control over the great majority of our consumer goods. However, there is a very peculiar and difficult situation in Congress. Price control has a great deal of strong opposition. It became apparent early in the debate that an attempt was being made to allow OPA to die before any congressional action could be taken. This would leave the Nation, as it is today, under no controls. The friends of price control then faced this dilemma: They could vote against this measure with its amendments and thus eliminate any possibility of obtaining any type of price-control legislation, or they could vote for the measure in the hope of salvaging some small degree of merit and effectiveness. I was one of many loyal Democrats who chose the latter course. I voted to extend price control, not as I would have liked it to be extended but because I realized that it was this bill or nothing. As it developed, we received nothing, since the Congress failed to override President Truman's veto.

I shall continue to fight for effective price control during this period of our reconversion to a stable economy. Nevertheless, I long for the day when we can safely rely upon the law of supply and demand. Free enterprise made our Nation great, but it cannot long survive under a rigidly controlled economy. Eventually, the shackles must be eliminated, our economy must seek a natural level. The essential problem which confronts the country, therefore, is not how to prevent the rise in prices but how to keep the rise moderate and to keep it orderly and free from speculative excesses.

Successful control of prices during the difficult days ahead requires a combination of policies and the cooperation of government, business, and labor. Government price controls need to be continued, though on a progressively more liberal basis, trade unions need to refrain from pressing demands which increase money wages without increasing real wages, and need to do what they can to increase output per man-hour. No one of these policies is sufficient, but all of them together would prevent a disorderly rise in prices. There is a natural temptation on the part of various groups to put special interests ahead of the common interest of avoiding a speculative rise and collapse of prices. Cooperation, however, is essential. The voters, therefore, should expect legislators, public administrators, manufacturers, retailers, and union leaders to do their part toward averting a repetition of the boom and collapse which followed the last war. Failure to do this will have disastrous consequences for the entire country.

Such is my outlook on the price-control issue. My position has been reached after much deliberation and study. I welcome any constructive criticism which any of my constituents have to offer. To the present time, however, I can honestly say that my stand has received the approval of the vast majority of those who have favored me with their comments. I shall continue to reflect in all my actions the manifest will of those whom I represent. This is your Government, your democracy, and I am your representative. I shall continue to speak for you and fight for the ideals which all of us hold dear.

I have been in contact daily with members of the free conference committee now considering price control. Hope is entertained that soon a satisfactory, acceptable bill will be worked out. It is my purpose to vote for any reasonable fair control measure which is presented to the Congress.

SENATE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

Bills and a joint resolution of the Senate of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. 2083. An act to amend section 6 of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended; to the Committee on Civil Service.

S. 2085. An act to amend title V of the act entitled "An act to expedite the provision of housing in connection with the national defense, and for other purpose," approved October 14, 1940, as amended, to authorize the Federal Works Administrator to provide needed educational facilities, other than housing, to educational institutions furnishing courses of training or education to persons under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

S. 2125. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to establish a code of law for the District of Columbia," approved March 3, 1901, and the acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

S. 2220. An act to authorize the United States Park Police to make arrests within Federal reservations in the environs of the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

S. 2253. An act to further amend the act of January 16, 1936, as amended, entitled "An act to provide for the retirement and retirement annuities of civilian members of the teaching staff at the United States Naval Academy and the Postgraduate School, United States Naval Academy"; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 2256. An act to amend the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

S. 2260. An act for the relief of Roy M. Davidson; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 2265. An act to make criminally liable persons who negligently allow prisoners in their custody to escape; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 2306. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to grant Georgia Power Co. a 100-foot perpetual easement across certain land in the State of Alabama constituting a portion of the military reservation designated as Fort Benning, Ga.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 2310. An act to further extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Friar Point, Miss., and Helena, Ark.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

S. 2326. An act to incorporate the Amvets, American Veterans of World War II; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 2348. An act to authorize the continuance of the acceptance by the Treasury of deposits of public moneys from the Philippine Islands; to the Committee on Insular Affairs.

S. 2349. An act to permit the Secretary of the Navy to delegate the authority to compromise and settle claims for damages to property under the jurisdiction of the Navy Department, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 2359. An act to close the Office of the Recorder of Deeds on Saturdays; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

S. 2369. An act for the relief of Col. S. V. Constant, General Staff Corps; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 2375. An act to change the name of the Chemical Warfare Service to the Chemical Corps; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. J. Res. 153. Joint resolution providing for the comprehensive observance of the bicentennial of John Paul Jones; to the Committee on the Library.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 31 minutes p. m.), under its previous order, the House adjourned until tomorrow, Saturday, July 20, 1946, at 10 o'clock a. m.

COMMITTEE MEETINGS

COMMITTEE ON WORLD WAR VETERANS' LEGISLATION

There will be a meeting of the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation, on Monday, July 22, 1946, at 10:30 a. m., in executive session, in the committee room, 356 House Office Building.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. JACKSON: Committee on Indian Affairs submits a supplemental report on S. 115, an act to modify sections 4 and 20 of the Permanent Appropriation Repeal Act, 1934, with reference to certain funds collected in connection with the operation of Indian Service irrigation projects, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 2489, pt. 2). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. JACKSON: Committee on Indian Affairs submits a supplemental report on S. 1235, an act to authorize the use of the funds of any tribe of Indians for insurance premiums; without amendment (Rept. No. 2490, pt. 2). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. EBERHARTER: Committee on Ways and Means submits a supplemental report on H. R. 7037, a bill to amend the Social Security Act and the Internal Revenue Code, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 2526, pt. 2). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 1477. An act to authorize relief in certain cases where work, supplies, or services have been furnished for the Government under contracts during the war; with amendments (Rept. No. 2576). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. HEALY: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 5756. A bill for the retirement of public-school teachers in the District of Columbia; without amendment (Rept. No. 2579). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. BARRETT of Wyoming: Committee on the Public Lands. H. R. 7038. A bill to provide for the sale of certain public lands in the States for the use and benefit of the State public educational institutions; with amendment (Rept. No. 2580). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. MAY: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 225. An act to authorize the carrying of Civil War battle streamers with regimental colors; without amendment (Rept. No. 2581). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. BYRNE of New York: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 496. An act to make it a criminal offense for certain escaped convicts to travel from one State to another; without amendment (Rept. No. 2582). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Joint Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 2587. Report on the disposition of certain papers of sundry executive departments. Ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. CHENOWETH: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4374. A bill for the relief of Rudolph K. Bartels; with amendments (Rept. No. 2566). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. STIGLER: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4924. A bill for the relief of Joseph A. Brown; with amendment (Rept. No. 2567). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. STIGLER: Committee on Claims. H. R. 5031. A bill for the relief of Ernest C. Heine and Harriet W. Heine; without amendment (Rept. No. 2568). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. STIGLER: Committee on Claims. H. R. 5166. A bill for the relief of Raphael Elder; with amendments (Rept. No. 2569). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. STIGLER: Committee on Claims. H. R. 5288. A bill for the relief of Warren M. Miller; without amendment (Rept. No. 2570). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. CHENOWETH: Committee on Claims. H. R. 5463. A bill for the relief of Hiram H. Wilson; with amendments (Rept. No. 2571). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. CHENOWETH: Committee on Claims. H. R. 6255. A bill for the relief of Thomas A. Beddingfield and his wife, Opal May Beddingfield; with amendments (Rept. No. 2572). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. STIGLER: Committee on Claims. H. R. 6381. A bill for the relief of Thomas L. Brett; with amendments (Rept. No. 2573). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. STIGLER: Committee on Claims. H. R. 6399. A bill for the relief of Caeser Henry; with amendments (Rept. No. 2574). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. DURHAM: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 528. An act for the relief of Thaddeus C. Knight; without amendment (Rept. No. 2583). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. MAY: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 1640. An act to provide for the acquisition by the United States of certain real property in the District of Columbia; without amendment (Rept. No. 2584). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BONNER: Committee on War Claims. H. R. 1144. A bill for the relief of Jesse A. Lott; without amendment (Rept. No. 2585). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. DAUGHTON of Virginia: Committee on War Claims. H. R. 1633. A bill for the relief of Raymond Crosby; without amendment (Rept. No. 2586). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN:

H. R. 7080. A bill to provide for the construction of a highway bridge across the Bois de Sioux River to replace the Blackmer Bridge which was destroyed by fire; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. ROBERTSON of North Dakota:

H. R. 7081. A bill to provide for the construction of a highway bridge across the Bois de Sioux River to replace the Blackmer Bridge which was destroyed by fire; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. TRAYNOR:

H. R. 7082. A bill to provide for the distribution to hospitals, asylums, or other charitable or reformatory institutions, undeliverable ornamental cards of greeting held by the postal service; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. CAMPBELL:

H. R. 7083. A bill to amend section 7 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, and for other purposes," approved July 1, 1902, as amended; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. MANSFIELD of Texas:

H. Res. 716. Resolution directing that the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors prepare a revised edition of a compilation of all preliminary examination and survey and review reports transmitted to Congress prior to July 31, 1946; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BEALL:

H. R. 7084. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Della Hogue; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BUCK:

H. R. 7085. A bill for the relief of Evangelos G. Pappadatos; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. EBERHARTER:

H. R. 7086. A bill for the relief of Rudolf K. Weiler, to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. JUDD:

H. R. 7087. A bill for the relief of W. A. Chisholm; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KING:

H. R. 7088. A bill for the relief of Ralph Adams; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MARCANTONIO:

H. R. 7089. A bill for the relief of George Pavoloyanis; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. BALDWIN of New York:

H. R. 7090. A bill for the relief of Tsung Tsai Chen; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2110. By Mr. CASE of South Dakota: Petition of Mr. F. G. Wilson, Martin, S. Dak., and 172 other Indian voters and Indian veterans respectfully petitioning both Houses of Congress to press all Indian legislation now pending or hereafter introduced and to concur and support such legislation to early passage during this session of Congress; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

2111. By Mr. ROWAN: Petition of members of the board of governors of the Metropolitan Housing Council of Chicago regarding rent control; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

SENATE

SATURDAY, JULY 20, 1946

(Legislative day of Friday, July 5, 1946)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

Dr. Ralph D. Smith, Ph. D., district superintendent, Washington West District, Methodist Church, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, unto whom all hearts are open and from whom no secrets are hid, we ask Thy blessing upon our lives as we seek to do Thy will. Cause the light of Thy countenance to shine upon us and upon all mankind. Give us courage to be sacrificial in our living, as so many have been on the battle fronts of the world. Make us worthy of every sacrifice that has been made for us.

May our faith look up to Thee, O God. May real brotherhood prevail everywhere. Let peace again come among all nations.

Bless our President and all who lead in our national life. Above all, make us good servants of our Lord and mankind.

This and every prayer we offer in His name. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Friday, July 19, 1946, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

NOTICE OF HEARING ON NOMINATION OF GEORGE D. NEILSON TO BE ASSOCIATE JUDGE, MUNICIPAL COURT, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, on behalf of the Committee on the Judiciary, and in accordance with the rules of the committee, I desire to give notice that a public hearing has been scheduled for Saturday, July 27, at 10:30 a. m., in the Senate Judiciary Committee room, upon the nomination of the Honorable George D. Neilson, of the District of Columbia, to be associate judge of the municipal court for the District of Columbia. At the indicated time and place, all persons interested in the nomination may make such representations as may be pertinent. The subcommittee consists of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], chairman; the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. EASTLAND]; and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STANFILL].

NOTICE OF HEARING ON NOMINATION OF GERALD R. CORBETT TO BE SIXTH JUDGE, FIRST CIRCUIT, CIRCUIT COURTS, HAWAII

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, on behalf of the Committee on the Judiciary, and in accordance with the rules of that committee, I desire to give notice that a public hearing has been scheduled for Saturday, July 27, at 10:30 a. m., in the Senate Judiciary Committee room, in the Capitol, upon the nomination of Gerald R. Corbett, of Hawaii, to be sixth judge of the First Circuit, Circuit Courts, Territory of Hawaii. This is a new position. At the indicated time and place, all persons interested in the nomination may appear and make such representations as may be pertinent. The subcommittee consists of the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], chairman; the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. EASTLAND]; and the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STANFILL].

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States submitting nominations were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Megill, one of its clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 346) to amend section 21 of the act of May 28, 1896 (29 Stat. 184; 28 U. S. C., sec. 597), prescribing fees of United States commissioners.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1801) authorizing the appointment of an additional judge for the district of Delaware.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to each of the following bills of the House:

H. R. 6372. An act to amend the Federal Credit Union Act; and

H. R. 6983. An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render judgment in any and all claims which the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes of Indians of the Flathead Reservation in Montana, or any tribe or band thereof, may have against the United States, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled bill (H. R. 5452) making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, and it was signed by the President pro tempore.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

The Secretary of the Senate reported that on July 19, 1946, he presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 141. An act to clarify the law relating to the filling of the first vacancy occurring in the office of district judge for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, and to provide for the appointment of an additional United States district judge for the eastern, middle, and western districts of Pennsylvania; and

S. 1516. An act to amend section 12 of the Bonneville Project Act, as amended.

SUSPENSION AND DEPORTATION OF ALIENS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a letter from the Attorney General, withdrawing a certain name from a report relating to aliens whose deportation he suspended more than 6 months, heretofore transmitted by him to the Senate pursuant to law, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

PETITION AND MEMORIAL

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a petition and a memorial, which were referred as indicated:

A petition of sundry citizens of Los Angeles County, Calif., praying for the enactment of legislation to continue the Office of Price Administration; ordered to lie on the table.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of State, transmitting a memorial signed by sundry citizens of the Azores, remonstrating against the closing of the American consulate at Horta, Fayal, Azores (with an accompanying memorial); to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

GI SUBSISTENCE ALLOWANCE AT UNIVERSITY OF MISSISSIPPI

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to present for appropriate reference and to have printed in the RECORD a letter from Vernon Broom, president, Ole Miss Veterans' Organization, and a resolution signed by GI students at the University of Mississippi, requesting an increase in their subsistence allowance.

There being no objection, the letter and resolution were received, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

OLE MISS VETERANS' CLUB,
University, Miss., June 26, 1946.

Hon. THEODORE G. BILBO,
United States Senator,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Enclosed are photostatic copies of the signatures of veterans currently enrolled at the University of Mississippi who signed the attached resolution, also enclosed.

Veterans at this university and at other institutions have found that the present subsistence allowed veterans by Public Laws 16 and 346 is inadequate to meet the common necessities of life. At a recent meeting of the veterans at Ole Miss the enclosed resolution was adopted by a majority vote; also a motion was passed directing that the resolution be circulated and signed and forwarded to all Mississippi Congressmen and Senators as a petition. We urge you to act accordingly.

As president of the Ole Miss Veterans' Organization I present this matter for your serious consideration. We believe that in the light of present costs of living you will understand the difficulty veteran students are facing. We hope that action you may take will cause subsistence allowed veterans by Public Laws 16 and 346 to be raised according to the enclosed resolution. If such action is not taken many veterans will be forced to withdraw from colleges and universities.

We will greatly appreciate your early consideration of this petition. If we can furnish you with any further information that you may desire, we shall be happy to do so.

Yours sincerely,

VERNON BROOM,
President, Ole Miss Veterans' Organization.

Since the original enactment and revisions of Public Law 346 and Public Law 16 the cost of living has risen to a manifest degree. The recent removal of many OPA restrictions has caused the cost of living to rise to even a higher degree. As a result students enrolled under the above laws in the University of Mississippi have found that the present subsistence allowance is inadequate to meet the common necessities of life; this inadequacy is forcing many to depend upon their savings or borrow from other sources or withdraw from school.

Now in the light of all the foregoing facts be it resolved by the Ole Miss Veterans Club and all the veterans at the University of Mississippi, that a petition setting forth this general situation be forwarded to the various Mississippi Members of Congress, memorializing them to introduce legislation to increase the subsistence allowance for the veterans attending schools from $65 to $90 per month for single veterans and from $90 to $115 per month for married veterans.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. HILL, from the Committee on Military Affairs:

H. R. 6817. A bill to provide for the appointment of additional commissioned officers in the Regular Army, and for other purposes; with an amendment (Rept. No. 1765).

By Mr. ANDREWS, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds:

S. 2286. A bill to amend the act entitled "An act for the acquisition, establishment, and development of the George Washington Memorial Parkway along the Potomac from Mount Vernon and Fort Washington to the Great Falls, and to provide for the acquisition of lands in the District of Columbia and the States of Maryland and Virginia requisite to the comprehensive park, parkway, and playground system of the National Capital," approved May 29, 1930; with an amendment (Rept. No. 1766).

REPORT ON DISPOSITION OF EXECUTIVE PAPERS

Mr. BARKLEY, from the Joint Select Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers, to which was referred for examination and recommendation a list of records transmitted to the Senate by the Archivist of the United States that appeared to have no permanent value or historical interest, submitted a report thereon pursuant to law.

REPORT OF JOINT COMMITTEE ON INVESTIGATION OF PEARL HARBOR ATTACK (S. DOC. NO. 244)

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, from the Joint Committee on the Investigation of the Attack at Pearl Harbor, I ask unanimous consent to submit a report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the report will be received and printed.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, at the same time I ask unanimous consent to file the views of the two minority Members on the part of the Senate, the Senator from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER] and myself.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the minority views will be received and printed.

PERMISSION TO FILE A REPORT DURING THE RECESS

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to file a report on a bill from the Committee on Military Affairs before midnight today. The reason for making the request is in order that the bill and report may be printed, so that every Senator will have a copy on Monday. The bill is S. 1974, to provide for the selection for elimination and retirement of officers of the Regular Army, for the equalization of retirement benefits for members of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes, and I merely ask permission to file it before midnight so it can be printed and be on the desks of Senators on Monday next.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. STANFILL:

S. 2461. A bill to revive and reenact the act entitled "An act granting the consent of Congress to the State Highway Commission, Commonwealth of Kentucky, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Cumberland River at or near Burkesville, Cumberland County, Ky.," approved May 18, 1928; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. GUFFEY:

S. 2462. A bill to increase the compensation of postmasters and employees of the postal service; to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

S. 2463. A bill to increase the rates of compensation of officers and employees of the Federal Government; to the Committee on Civil Service.

By Mr. TAYLOR:

S. 2464. A bill to provide for the uniform administration of efficiency ratings; to the Committee on Civil Service.

S. 2465. A bill for the relief of Lydia Stoner; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. FERGUSON:

S. 2466. A bill for the relief of Ghetel Pollak Kahan, Magdalena Linda Kahan (wife), and Susanna Kahan (daughter), 10 years old); to the Committee on Immigration.

PRINTING OF ADDITIONAL COPIES OF SENATE DOCUMENT 206, ENTITLED "ECONOMIC CONCENTRATION AND WORLD WAR II"

Mr. MURRAY submitted the following concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 73), which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That in accordance with paragraph 3 of section 2 of the Printing Act, approved March 1, 1907, the Senate Special Committee to Study Problems of American Small Business be, and is hereby, authorized and empowered to have printed for its use 5,000 additional copies of Senate Document No. 206, Seventy-ninth Congress, second session, entitled, "Economic Concentration and World War II."

INDIAN CLAIMS COMMISSION

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives announcing its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4497) to create an Indian Claims Commission, to provide for the powers, duties, and functions thereof, and for other purposes, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the President pro tempore appointed Mr. O'MAHONEY, Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, and Mr. LA FOLLETTE conferees on the part of the Senate.

INFERIOR FEDERAL COURTS—ARTICLE BY JUDGE CURTIS L. WALLER

[Mr. PEPPER asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "These Inferior Federal Courts," written by Hon. Curtis L. Waller, judge of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, and published in the Mississippi Law Journal for December 1945, which appears in the Appendix.]

LOW COMPENSATION OF AMERICAN DAIRY FARMERS

[Mr. WILEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an advertisement from the Washington Post of July 20 entitled "The Dairy Farmer Makes Less Than 53 Cents An Hour," which appears in the Appendix.]

NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION—EDITORIAL FROM SEATTLE STAR

[Mr. MAGNUSON asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "A Bill More Important to You Even Than OPA," published in the Seattle Star of July 13, 1946, which appears in the Appendix.]

VOTING RECORDS OF SENATORS—EDITORIAL FROM WASHINGTON POST

[Mr. TAYLOR asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "Voting Records," published in the Washington Post of July 12, 1946, which appears in the Appendix.]

SOVIET FOREIGN POLICY—ARTICLE BY SCOTT NEARING

[Mr. TAYLOR asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article on Soviet foreign policy entitled "As Others See Us," written by Scott Nearing, which appears in the Appendix.]

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. BARKLEY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hayden	Overton
Andrews	Hill	Pepper
Ball	Hoey	Radcliffe
Barkley	Huffman	Reed
Bilbo	Johnson, Colo.	Revercomb
Brewster	Knowland	Robertson
Brooks	La Follette	Shipstead
Burch	Langer	Smith
Bushfield	Lucas	Stanfill
Capehart	McCarran	Swift
Capper	McClellan	Taft
Carville	McKellar	Taylor
Connally	McMahon	Thomas, Okla.
Cordon	Magnuson	Thomas, Utah
Donnell	Maybank	Tunnell
Downey	Millikin	Vandenberg
Ferguson	Mitchell	Wagner
Fulbright	Moore	Wherry
George	Morse	White
Gerry	Murdock	Wiley
Green	Murray	Willis
Guffey	Myers	Wilson
Gurney	O'Daniel	Young
Hart	O'Mahoney

Mr. HILL. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. GOSSETT] are absent because of illness.

The Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] is absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] is absent because of a death in his family.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. BRIGGS], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. EASTLAND], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSTON], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KILGORE], the Senator from Arizona [Mr. MCFARLAND], the Senator from New York [Mr. MEAD], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. STEWART], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] are detained on public business.

The Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] and the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ] are absent on official business.

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are absent on official business, having been appointed to the commission on the part of the Senate to participate in the Philippine independence ceremonies.

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a member of the Special Committee on Atomic Energy.

The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BUTLER] is absent on official business, being a member of the commission appointed to attend the Philippine independence ceremonies.

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN], the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HAWKES] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. BUCK] is absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] is absent on official business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Seventy-one Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to be excused from further attendance on the Senate today.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, leave is granted.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to be absent from the Senate on next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, leave is granted.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR, FEDERAL SECURITY AGENCY, ETC., APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. MCCARRAN submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate numbered 39 to the bill (H. R. 6739) making appropriations for the Department of Labor, the Federal Security Agency, and related independent agencies, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

Amendment numbered 39: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 39, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out by said amendment insert the following: ": Provided further, That no part of the funds appropriated in this title shall be available to organize or assist in organizing agricultural laborers, or used in connection with investigations, hearings, directives, or orders concerning bargaining units composed of agricultural laborers as referred to in section 2 (3) of the Act of July 5, 1935 (49 Stat. 450), and as defined in section 3 (f) of the Act of June 25, 1938 (52 Stat. 1060)"; and the Senate agree to the same.

PAT MCCARRAN,
KENNETH MCKELLAR,
WALLACE A. WHITE, JR.,
JOSEPH H. BALL,
STYLES BRIDGES
(by J. H. B.),
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

BUTLER B. HARE,
MATTHEW M. NEELY,
FRANK B. KEEFE,
H. CARL ANDERSEN,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. MCCARRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the conference report.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. MCCARRAN. I move that the Senate agree to the report.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, may we have the amendment read?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will read the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In lieu of the matter stricken out by amendment numbered 39, it is proposed to insert a colon and the following: "Provided further, That no part of the funds appropriated in this title shall be available to organize or assist in organizing agricultural laborers, or used in connection with investigations, hearings, directives, or orders concerning bargaining units composed of agricultural laborers as referred to in section 2 (3) of the act of July 5, 1935 (49 Stat. 450) and as defined in section 3 (f) of the act of June 25, 1938 (52 Stat. 1060)."

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the amendment from the Senator from Nevada? I have no objection to the report.

Mr. MCCARRAN. Mr. President, the Senate and the House were in complete disagreement after vote after vote had been taken in both Houses on what is known as the Elliott rider. The House conferees suggested the language which the conference committee has now agreed to, and which the Senate has heard read to it. That was referred to the National Labor Relations Board. It seemed satisfactory to the Board. I am advised, without having talked to the parties, that it was satisfactory to the Members of the House who had suggested and supported the Elliott amendment. It goes as far as we thought we could go and at the same time carry out the spirit of the law.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MCCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. AIKEN. May I ask, Does it have the effect of removing this group of workers from under the protection of the Wagner Act?

Mr. MCCARRAN. I would say in a sense yes, but principally no, because they can organize in every way; but they are not placed under the National Labor Relations Board to the full extent they otherwise would be.

Mr. BALL. In commenting on the question asked by the Senator from Vermont, I would say that the main change in the amendment as proposed by the House is that instead of using the definition of "agricultural laborer," contained in the Social Security Act, which was a very broad definition, excluding a great number of processing employees, this language uses the definition of "agriculture" contained in the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MCCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. This is a very vital matter and we are all interested in it. I wish we could have order and that Senators would speak loud enough so we could all hear.

Mr. BALL. Instead of using the definition of "agricultural laborer" contained in the Social Security Act the definition is a very broad one, covering, as the Senator knows, a great many processing employees, packing shed workers, and so forth—this change substitutes the definition of "agriculture" contained in the Fair Labor Standards Act, which is a much narrower definition. I believe the Senator from Nevada has before him the exact section referred to. We conferred with one of the members and the counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, who said that it might require a few minor changes in their present procedure and definition, but they would be very minor, and they felt they could get along under it very well.

Mr. PEPPER. Will the Senator from Nevada be good enough to read the language?

Mr. MCCARRAN. Section 3 (f) of the act of June 25, 1938, the Fair Labor Standards Act, provides as follows:

"Agriculture" includes farming in all its branches and among other things includes the cultivation and tillage of the soil, dairying, the production, cultivation, growing, and harvesting of any agricultural or horticultural commodities (including commodities defined as agricultural commodities in section 15 (g) of the Agricultural Marketing Act, as amended), the raising of livestock, bees, furbearing animals, or poultry, and any practices (including any forestry or lumbering operations) performed by a farmer or on a farm as an incident to or in conjunction with such farming operations, including preparation for market, delivery to storage or to market or to carriers for transportation to market.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for an inquiry?

Mr. MCCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. In the last part of that definition the reference is only to farming or matters incident to a farming operation. In other words, is the preparation for market which is exempted that preparation for market which is carried out on a farm or as an incident to a farming operation? If it is so limited—and we understand it as being so limited—then the vice of the former amendment does not appear, because where a packing house or a packing shed is operated away from the farm and carried on not as a farming operation, but as an independent enterprise, it could well be and I assume would be construed as an industrial operation, and not a farming operation, so as to give the employees the protection of the National Labor Relations Act and the National Labor Relations Board.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator that that is the construction the committee put upon it; that this provision confines itself to operations that are actually on the farm, any farm operation.

Mr. PEPPER. A part of the farming operation.

Mr. McCARRAN. Yes; a part of the farming operation.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I understand that this is a change from the so-called Elliott rider.

Mr. McCARRAN. It is in place of the Elliott rider.

Mr. MAGNUSON. And a clarification of it.

Mr. McCARRAN. That is correct.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. ANDREWS. What effect would this have on large growers, for instance, in any State who own their own farms, and their own packing houses, and who use the same employees to cultivate the ground and do the packing and the picking and everything in connection with the operation?

Mr. McCARRAN. I will give my interpretation as I see it. If the process is on the farm and a part of the production that belongs to the farm, then it is a farm activity. But if it is off the farm, or if an agency even comes on the farm and, acting by itself, processes on the farm, but is separate entirely from the producer, the production, or the farm activity, then it comes in a different category. If the farmer cultivates, produces, and at the same time crates his product on his farm, then he is engaged in a farming activity, in agriculture, and remote from the effect of the National Labor Relations Act.

Mr. ANDREWS. I would say that in nearly half the citrus industry in Florida the man who owns the grove owns his packing house and his men operate as packers and pickers and do all the work incident to the operation. Sometimes the packing and picking is done by the same persons.

Mr. McCARRAN. When the activity has left the farm and is in a packing house remote from the farmer's activity, then it comes under the effect of the National Labor Relations Act.

Mr. ANDREWS. I think what I have said applies also to tomatoes and celery and other products of that kind.

Mr. McCARRAN. That is probably true.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, in view of what my able colleague has said, as one Senator from Florida I desire it to be made clear that I want, and I hope the RECORD will so show, these workers to have the largest possible protection under the National Labor Relations Act and the National Labor Relations Board. I believe, fundamentally, that a worker who is working in a packing house or in a canning factory is an industrial worker. The character of the work he does shows that he is an industrial worker. The habit of the operation, the characteristics of the operation make him in substance an industrial worker. I hope that the definition will not be construed to be so restrictive as to deprive any appreciable number of such workers of the right of redress for their industrial and economic wrongs before any administrative tribunal, such as the National Labor Relations Board, and that they will not be stripped of the protection which I think they are entitled to under the National Labor Relations Act.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, in the Appropriations Committee the chief complaint was that the definition of "laborer" was that used in the Social Security Act. This gets away from that definition, and provides a much better definition.

Mr. TUNNELL. The change, as I understand it, was made to meet the objection which was raised here on the floor, and the chairman of the committee believes that it has been met.

Mr. McCARRAN. I think it meets it as well as we could possibly meet it.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. HILL. As I understand, it takes the definition of farming as set out in the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Mr. McCARRAN. Yes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair desires to congratulate each and every member of the Committee on Appropriations for the fine work done by the committee at this session of Congress, and for completing that work today. The Chair thanks the members of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, as one member of the Committee on Appropriations I wish to say that it was the untiring effort, the able leadership, and the devotion to duty of the chairman of the Appropriations Committee which made possible what we have been able to accomplish.

TITLE TO LANDS BENEATH TIDAL AND NAVIGABLE WATERS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 225) to quiet the titles of the respective States, and others, to lands beneath tidewaters and lands beneath navigable waters within the boundaries of such States and to prevent further clouding of such titles.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 3, after line 21, it is proposed to add the following new paragraph:

The United States excepts from this disclaimer and retains all right, title, and interest claimed and asserted by Presidential Proclamation No. 2667 of September 28, 1945, or otherwise, to the subsoil and sea bed of or the resources in the Continental Shelf lying oceanward from the area described in the first clause (1) of the preceding paragraph.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, there are two questions involved in this debate. The first question has to do with lands beneath the waters within the 3-mile zone. The other question has to do with the Continental Shelf lying beyond the 3-mile limit or the State boundary.

Last year the President of the United States by proclamation assured the sovereignty of the United States over what is known as the Continental Shelf. That is a subsoil area which extends out into the ocean in some places as much as 100 or 200 miles. It has never heretofore been claimed on behalf of the United States or of any State.

Senators know, of course, that the 3-mile limit, of which so much has been said, is merely an outgrowth of the days of warfare involving the old-fashioned cannon, which could shoot only 3 miles.

No one knows what the contents of the Continental Shelf may be. Whatever they may be, they are not involved in the litigation which is now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States. I believe that they are not involved in the joint resolution as reported by the Committee on the Judiciary; but the language of that resolution is such, and the state of the law is such, that, in my judgment, the United States might suffer a most serious loss unless it were made clear in the joint resolution that by any disclaimer of any right, title, or interest to the subsoil within the 3-mile limit the United States is not surrendering the subsoil of the Continental Shelf beyond that limit.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. DOWNEY. When California was admitted to the Union, its constitution, in line with the constitutions of most of the other States bordering on the ocean, asserted the right to land underneath the ocean for 3 miles from the high or low watermark—I do not recall which. So, of course, this amendment is entirely satisfactory to us, and I think it is a very advisable amendment. But I should like to ask the distinguished Senator about this condition: As I understand, the Constitution of Texas at the time it was admitted to the Union had a provision asserting title out into the ocean for a distance of 3 marine leagues, or about 9 miles. May I ask the distinguished Senator, as a matter of information only, and not for the purpose of argument, what would be the effect of his proposed amendment in relation to a State which, by its constitution or laws, had theretofore asserted title to a greater extent of land than would be covered by 1 league?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, before the Senator answers that question, allow me to interpose that the State of Florida is affected in exactly the same way. Under our constitution of 1868, under which the State was admitted back into the Union after the Civil War, the western boundary of the State of Florida is defined as running from the Dry Tortugas northeastwardly to a point within 3 leagues of the mainland, thence along the shore a distance of 3 leagues from the mainland to the mouth of the Perdido River, defining a strip substantially 10 miles in width off the Gulf coast of Florida. That boundary was recognized by the Congress when the State was admitted into the Union. That territory is within the jurisdiction of Florida, and the State supreme court has recognized criminal jurisdiction over that area.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I had no intention of becoming involved in a controversy of that kind. Therefore, in drafting this amendment I have confined myself to the language of the joint resolution which is before the Senate. I now read to the Senate the provisions of the last paragraph of the joint resolution as reported by the Committee on the Judiciary, to be found on page 3, beginning in line 8:

As used in this joint resolution, the phrase "lands beneath tidewaters" shall include (1) all lands permanently or periodically covered by tidal waters up to but not above the line of mean high tide and oceanward to a line three geographical miles distant from the coast line and to the boundary line of each respective State where in any case such boundary line extends oceanward beyond three geographical miles, and (2) all lands formerly beneath tidewaters, as herein defined, which have been filled or reclaimed; the phrase "lands beneath navigable waters" shall include (1) all other lands covered by waters which are navigable under the laws of the United States, and (2) all lands formerly beneath navigable waters, as herein defined, which have been filled or reclaimed.

Having that definition of lands beneath tidewaters in mind, I drafted my amendment as a new paragraph to read as follows:

The United States excepts from this disclaimer and retains all right, title, and interest claimed and asserted by Presidential proclamation No. 2,667 of September 28, 1945, or otherwise to the subsoil and sea bed of or the resources in the Continental Shelf lying oceanward from the area described in the first clause (1) of the preceding paragraph.

The "first clause of the preceding paragraph" is the one I have just read.

So this amendment does not raise any question of boundaries. I will say personally for myself that I am inclined to believe that the claims of States such as Texas and Florida to ownership of the subsoil of the boundary waters beyond the 3-mile limit is not a desirable policy, so far as we are now concerned. But I do not raise the question, because I feel sure that the Senate does not wish to pass upon that point.

I only desire to make clear that this joint resolution will protect the sovereignty of the United States as a nation to the subsoil of the Continental Shelf which comes to us solely because of the assertion of the Federal power.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. Does the Senator think there is any doubt about that being the purpose and effect of the measure as it is now drafted? Does it not merely give a quitclaim from the Federal Government to the several States in respect to the lands underneath tidal waters, as the Senator has read the language from page 3 of the measure?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think so.

Mr. PEPPER. So the Senator is offering his amendment out of an abundance of caution, I assume.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I wish to be completely certain, because I am confident that unless this amendment is adopted, a claim might afterward be asserted that ownership of the subsoil within the submerged area would give a right to the adjoining area beyond. That is the danger.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. There are three subdivisions of this area, parts of which are involved in the pending measure and in the pending litigation before the Supreme Court. One subdivision is made up of the tidelands, which are that part of the shore subject to the tide and to the rise and fall of the tide.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. That is correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. There is no question, so far as that part of the land is concerned, as between the Government of the United States and any State. The Government of the United States is not asserting title to that little strip of land that is subject to the flow of the tides in and out.

Then there is a so-called 3-mile limit, which is known as the marginal land, and which is involved in the litigation and in the pending legislation.

Beyond that 3-mile limit is what the Senator calls the Continental Shelf, which is the subject of his amendment. That in no way involves the so-called 3-mile limit, which is the strip between the tidelands which are subject to the flow of the tides and the 3-mile limit out from the shore.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Precisely.

Mr. BARKLEY. So the Senator's amendment only affects, possibly, lands beyond the 3-mile limit.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator is quite correct.

I offer this amendment, not because it affects in any way the controversy over the lands between the low-tide mark and the 3-mile limit, or whatever the limit may be, and not because it involves the issue now in the Supreme Court, but only because I wish to make clear that this joint resolution does not purport to invade the right of the Government of the United States to the Continental Shelf, which has never been claimed by any State.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. MAGNUSON. The Senator's amendment is also very important and timely for the reason, not that it might involve differences between the States and the Federal Government, but that it involves an international situation. The amendment will be a legislative reassertion of the fact that we have now claimed as American Federal territory the so-called Continental Shelf.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Precisely.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I point out to the Senator that prior to the war there was much discussion of this matter. The late President Roosevelt took a great interest in it, and he had drawn up a Presidential proclamation declaring the Continental Shelf to be American territory. Due to his untimely death the matter was held up. But President Truman has reasserted that, and has issued the proclamation which the Senator has mentioned.

Moreover, prior to the war there was question as to the Bering Sea. In that region the Continental Shelf extends some 200 miles from shore, and there lies the greatest fishing area in the world. Prior to this proclamation, the Japanese claimed that as open sea, and they fished there and caused a great deal of trouble with American fishermen. But now that we have claimed it as ours, not only is that difficulty taken care of but the area is opened up for American fishermen.

I say this measure is very important because it is a legislative reassurance and reassertion of the fact that the Federal Government claims the Continental Shelf.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I am very happy the Senator has made that statement, because at the hearings of the Special Committee To Investigate Petroleum Resources, evidence was presented to us by scientists of the Geological Survey and the Coast and Geodetic Survey and by other scientists that the Continental Shelf, which never heretofore has been claimed by or on behalf of any State, may be the last resort of the United States for petroleum. Inasmuch as this area can be defended only by the American Navy and inasmuch as we have burdened ourselves with the largest debt that any nation in the history of the world has ever carried, it seems to me that in acting upon this joint resolution we should make it abundantly clear that the Government of the United States does not intend, either directly or indirectly, to convey away the Continental Shelf, to which there has heretofore been no claim.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. OVERTON. In answer to the question propounded by the Senator from Kentucky, I understood the Senator from Wyoming to state that the purpose of his amendment was, in effect, to assert title to all lands that are distant beyond 3 miles from the coast line. But in his opening statement he said that the amendment was not intended to affect the definition of "lands beneath tidewaters," as contained in the pending measure.

The definition of tidewater lands, as contained in the pending measure, applies in certain cases to lands which extend beyond the 3-mile limit, and by that definition tidewater lands extend to the boundary line of each respective State, where in any case such boundary line extends oceanward beyond three geographical miles.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator heard me read that language a few minutes ago.

Mr. OVERTON. Yes. But I should like to make it clear that the Senator's amendment does not affect the last phrase I have read, where the boundary line of a State may extend beyond the 3-mile limit.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I wish to make the situation as clear as possible. The amendment refers in its terms only to "the subsoil and sea bed of or the resources in the Continental Shelf lying oceanward from the area described in the first clause (1) of the preceding paragraph." That means oceanward from the 3-mile limit and oceanward from any boundary claimed by any State.

Mr. CAPEHART and Mr. PEPPER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Wyoming yield, and if so, to whom?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. If the Senator from Florida will pardon me, I yield to the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART], who was first on his feet.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I should like to describe a situation and ask the able Senator if his amendment covers the point which I have in mind.

The State of Texas, when admitted to the Union, was given the limit of 3 leagues, which is approximately 9 miles, from the shore. Recently the Texas Legislature passed a law extending the boundary to 31 miles. The State of Louisiana, when originally admitted to the Union, had a limit of 3 miles. That State has likewise recently passed a law extending its limit to 27 miles. Does the Senator's amendment limit Texas to 9 miles and Louisiana to 3 miles, or does it permit those States to go out, in the case of Texas, to 31 miles and, in the case of Louisiana, to 27 miles?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. My amendment does not attempt to settle that disputed question. I doubt very much whether I have sufficient information to attempt such a settlement. So in the amendment we are using the precise language of the measure reported by the Judiciary Committee, and are accepting and retaining for the United States the subsoil oceanward from the boundary line of each respective State.

The question which the Senator propounds to me is a legal question as to whether or not the State legislature, by law, after the admission of the State into the Union, may by its own action, and without the concurrence of the United States, extend its boundaries. I do not propose to settle that question. I could not settle it. It is a legal question to be settled by the courts if and when the question is presented to them.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, if I may, I should like to ask one of the Senators from California what is the offshore limit of the State of California?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. A moment ago the senior Senator from California asserted that the State of California claims three geographical miles.

Mr. CAPEHART. The State of California claims three geographical miles?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes.

Mr. CAPEHART. The Senator's amendment would have no effect on that situation one way or the other?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No.

Mr. CAPEHART. The amendment would have no effect on whether Texas is entitled to 9 miles or 31 miles?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. None whatever.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] has been trying to speak, and I yield to him.

Mr. FERGUSON. I should like to propound a question to the Senator. I wish to know if the record is clear with respect to a definition of the Continental Shelf, about which we have been speaking. As I understand, the Continental Shelf extends out to different distances at different places.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes.

Mr. FERGUSON. The Senator is attempting to say through his amendment that the proposed quitclaim deed would not cover that land.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It would not cover it oceanward from the boundary.

Mr. FERGUSON. So, if the amendment is adopted, it will cover only the original 3-mile limit, or whatever the State had claimed.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It would cover whatever the State had claimed within the boundary, whatever that boundary may be. The term "Continental Shelf," I may say to the Senator, is a scientific term, or a term which has been applied by the scientists to that geologic shelf which extends outward from the seacoast in some cases a hundred miles, and, in the case of Alaska, as the Senator from Washington has said, about 200 miles, where it drops off very suddenly into the depths of the ocean. So "Continental Shelf" is merely a phrase which is used to describe the area under the sea which is at a very shallow depth.

Mr. FERGUSON. And which is considered as a part of the continent rather than as a part of the ocean.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes. If the Senator has seen a map of the Coast and Geodetic Survey of the Atlantic Ocean immediately east of New York City, he has noted that the soundings which were taken by the Coast and Geodetic Survey show clearly that the Hudson River at one time ran out a great distance beyond what is now the coastal line. From the soundings which have been taken, it is clear that that area was at one time above the ocean.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. For the purpose of the question which I am about to propound, I invite the attention of the able chairman of the committee.

Beginning in line 12, on page 3, of the joint resolution, the definition of lands beneath tidewaters reads, in part, as follows:

> And to the boundary line of each respective State where in any case such boundary line extends oceanward beyond three geographic miles—

And so forth. I wish it to be understood that "oceanward," as used in that sentence, also means gulfward, because, while the Gulf of Mexico is not an ocean, I am sure the Senator intends that "oceanward" means a large body of water, as well as what is ordinarily referred to as the ocean.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. When we go into the Gulf we are going oceanward.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. A moment ago I understood the Senator to disclaim any effort of trying to solve the legal question of what the boundary line of a State may be.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The question which I disclaimed any attempt to solve, because it could not be solved very well without the concurrence of the State, is whether or not a State legislature may, by statute, extend the boundary which it had at the time it was admitted to the Union.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I believe that the Senator is quite right in his contention, and it seems to me that the same reasoning which he has employed applies to the problem of the ownership of the land within the 3-mile limit. I cannot see any logical distinction between the character of the question there involved and the one in the joint resolution now before the Senate.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator may be correct in that respect, but I am deliberately not raising that question, because, as the Senator from Kentucky has said, there are three zones which have been in controversy. There is the zone oceanward concerning which this amendment has ben offered. There is the zone which lies within the 3-mile limit of the boundary and low tide, and there is the zone between low tide and the coast.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I understand that, but it seems to me that the Senator's reasoning with reference to the question being a legal one is also applicable to this instant question, and all we are doing is to usurp the function of the Supreme Court in the first instance.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, that question will arise under another amendment.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. My opinion is that both questions should be settled by the Supreme Court.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. When the question is before the Supreme Court it becomes a legal question. It may be doubted seriously whether the decision of the court will be rendered in favor of the United States as against the State, inasmuch as it can be shown with respect to a certain portion of this area that the United States apparently acquiesced in the development of the area inside the so-called 3-mile limit.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. MAGNUSON. What the Senator from Wyoming is attempting to do is to nail down a claim of title from the shore to the end of the Continental Shelf for the Federal Government.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Not from the shore.

Mr. MAGNUSON. From the boundary.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. From the boundary.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Which should have been done a long time ago.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, has the Senator a copy of the Presidential proclamation to which he referred a few moments ago?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No; I do not have it. It can be obtained. I will get the number and insert it later on. It was a Presidential proclamation issued last year by President Truman, as the Senator from Washington has stated, in which he asserted on behalf of the United States the sovereignty of the United States over this area.

Mr. OVERTON. I have not read the proclamation, but I understand that the Continental Shelf embraces offshore waters where the depth is 600 feet or more. I also understand that off the shore of California there are, in certain areas, depths of as great as 600 feet before the 3-mile limit is reached. But as I interpret the Senator's amendment, even if that be true, his amendment does not affect the claim of California.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It is made as clear as day that it does not affect that, nor does it affect any claim that the State of Louisiana or the State of Texas may make to this other boundary.

Mr. CONNALLY. I inquire then, Mr. President, what is the purpose of the Senator's amendment.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The purpose of it is to assert title in the United States to the Continental Shelf beyond these boundaries.

Mr. CONNALLY. It seems to me it is not very clear.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, when the Senator from Wyoming first had his amendment printed it was rather in the negative form. He has now changed it, and to my mind it is a very acceptable amendment; to my mind it is a clarifying amendment; to my mind it is an amendment that should go in the bill while it is before the Senate.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, this whole matter has been before the Congress heretofore. I think it was in 1939 that there was a bill pending before the Committee on Public Lands, introduced in behalf of the Navy Department, in which it was sought to declare that all offshore oil resources were the property of the United States and not of States. After exhaustive hearings before the Public Lands Committee, that bill was rejected.

Mr. President, in the case of my State, Texas, we feel that we are in the strongest position of any of the other States; but we still are willing to maintain the principle involved in the general legislation proposed in order to aid the other States. In the case of Texas, it will be remembered that Texas was a republic from 1836 to 1845 and, as a republic, it owned whatever rights there were from its shores as far as they could extend into the ocean without the intervention of the jurisdiction of any other nation. We do not want those rights disturbed. They were retained when we went into the Union in 1845, and it is our contention that whatever rights anyone has to the offshore oil in the Continental Shelf, or whatever else one may wish to call it, that extends out into the ocean from the boundary of Texas, belong to the State of Texas, and that the Federal Government has no jurisdiction whatever over them. So we are perfectly willing to support the bill, and have the United States relinquish any claim, and give a quitclaim to the offshore oil resources of all the other States.

But the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming, it seems to me, is an exception to the usual clear and explicit language employed by the Senator in drafting amendments and legislation which he sponsors.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator is very kind. I take it he means with a few qualifications, however.

Mr. CONNALLY. I am trying to be just.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. That makes it all the better.

Mr. CONNALLY. The amendment reads:

> The United States excepts from this disclaimer and retains all right, title, and interest claimed and asserted by Presidential Proclamation No. 2667 of September 28, 1945, or otherwise to the subsoil and sea bed of or the resources in the Continental Shelf lying oceanward from the area described in the first clause (1) of the preceding paragraph.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. And clause (1) of the preceding paragraph clearly protects Texas, because it describes the boundary line of each respective State. So all that this amendment does, I will say to the Senator, is to assert the title of the United States to the subsoil and resources of the Continental Shelf oceanward from the boundary of Texas so far as Texas is concerned.

Mr. CONNALLY. I understand that is the contention of the Senator.

Clause (1) to which reference is made reads:

> All lands permanently or periodically covered by tidal waters up to but not above the line of mean high tide and oceanward to a line three geographical miles distant from the coast line.

In the case of Texas——

Mr. PEPPER. I suggest to the Senator that the amendment goes on further than that.

Mr. CONNALLY. In the case of Texas her territory extends beyond three geographical miles.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Will the Senator read the next clause?

Mr. CONNALLY. I am going to read further in just a moment but I want to analyze this provision:

> Three geographical miles distant from the coast line—

In the case of Texas, the Federal Government has already recognized her right to 3 marine leagues which is more than 9 miles out into the sea—> and to the boundary line of each respective State where in any case such boundary line extends oceanward beyond three geographical miles.

How is that boundary line established? What is the boundary line of all the respective States? It will be strenuously contended regardless of the adoption of the Senator's amendment by the interests adverse to this bill that there can be no boundary line beyond three geographical miles. That contention will be urged.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator has just said that the Federal Government has recognized the claim of Texas to three marine leagues. That being the case, I do not see how any such question could arise with respect to that boundary.

Mr. CONNALLY. Probably not that particular boundary, but this affects all the States, and I am anxious that the Senate realize its significance and its implications. If we are going to grant this at all we certainly ought to grant it to the States as far as their rights extend into the ocean. I do not know what the power of the State is. The Senator from Indiana referred to a legislative act——

Mr. O'MAHONEY. If the Senator will permit me to interrupt him, I think that is precisely what this language does.

Mr. CONNALLY. I hope it does; I hope that is true. The Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART] cited an act of the State Legislature of Louisiana, I believe he said, and also of Texas, extending their boundaries 27 and 31 miles, respectively, into the ocean. It will be contended that they had no right to do that. It will be contended that their boundaries ended at the 3-mile limit and that the State legislatures had no authority to extend the boundary. This language would seem to me not to be inconsistent with such a claim. While the boundary lines of the respective States are mentioned, the assumption is that in some cases the line may extend more than three geographical miles, because it says "Where in any case such boundary line extends oceanward beyond three geographical miles." Still, it will be asserted, no doubt, the State also has no power arbitrarily to extend its boundaries more than three geographical miles into the sea.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. OVERTON. I am as much interested in this matter as is the Senator from Texas——

Mr. CONNALLY. I am sure of that.

Mr. OVERTON. Because Louisiana has enacted legislation on the same subject matter. It seems to me, however, that if there be any fault at all the fault does not lie in the phraseology of the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming, but lies in the wording of the joint resolution reported by the committee. If any change is to be made, it should be made in the language of the joint resolution defining lands beneath tidewaters. The amendment of the Senator from Wyoming does not affect the definition contained in the joint resolution as reported by the committee.

Mr. CONNALLY. In paragraph 1.

Mr. OVERTON. Yes. It does not do so. The Senator might offer an amendment to paragraph 1 which would cover the situation to which he refers.

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, that is all I have to suggest at this time.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Texas yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Of course, whatever is decided to be the boundary line of the State—there may be some dispute—whether it is 3 miles or 3 leagues, the Senator from Wyoming has said that the Government of the United States, the people of America, the States and the Federal Government, are between them going to own all the land to the end of the Continental Shelf.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Beyond the State boundary.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Beyond the State boundary; and I think that is very desirable.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I do not care to interfere with the adoption of the amendment, but I desire to speak on the joint resolution generally.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I should like to have the amendment disposed of.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think the amendment can be adopted.

Mr. OVERTON. If I can be recognized as soon as the amendment is acted upon, I shall be glad to yield for action on the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, as a contribution to the discussion of the pending joint resolution, I wish to call attention to certain statements which have come from the General Land Office and from the Department of the Interior in respect to the ownership of the marginal tidewater lands concerned. I think these declarations on the part of this agency and department of the Federal Government dealing with this subject matter are entitled to very grave consideration by the Members of the Senate. They set forth uniformly the policy which has prevailed in the Federal Government.

The letters I am going to read are taken from the Land Office and the archives of the State of Louisiana because they deal with Louisiana marginal lands. Possibly other States have similar letters, but the letters I read announce definitely and clearly the policy and the attitude of the Federal Government in respect to these tidelands.

I quote from a letter dated December 8, 1908, written by the Commissioner of the General Land Office to the United States Surveyor General, as follows:

> You were directed not to report the lands as inuring to the State under the swamp grant, for * * * tidelands belong to the State by its right of sovereignty.

Here is a declaration made back in 1908 by an agency of the Federal Government recognizing the fact that tidelands belong to the State by its right of sovereignty.

The attorney general of Louisiana has supplied me copies of these letters, and I am indebted to him for being able to present them to the Senate.

I give the following excerpts from the published decisions of the General Land Office relating to tidelands:

> It has never been questioned that a State upon its admission to the Union immediately acquires title to and jurisdiction over all lands within its limits below high-water mark. This title and control is not acquired by mere assertion of right and ownership, but by virtue of its sovereignty.

So, Mr. President, it was the statement of the General Land Office that there had never been any question at all with respect to the title and authority of the State over tidelands.

There is in the possession of the Land Office in Louisiana an exemplification of a letter written by C. C. Moore, who was then Commissioner of the General Land Office, in which, among other things, he advised a certain company as follows:

> The State is the owner of all land below the line of ordinary high tide extending seaward coexistensive with its municipal dominion, and in the land-locked bays from headland to headland, and from the line of ordinary high tide on the shore of the open ocean seaward, a distance of 3 miles, or a marine league.

Therefore, so far as the General Land Office is concerned, there has never been any question but that the sovereignty of the State extends 3 miles, or a marine league, from the shore line, and that the title to these lands vests in the State by virtue of its sovereignty.

There are some letters written by the Department of the Interior, and not merely by its General Land Office, on the subject matter to which I wish to call the attention of the Senate. The first of these relates to land in Louisiana and in California, and under date of April 9, 1931, Mr. C. C. Moore, who was then the Commissioner of the General Land Office, wrote as follows:

> I have your letter of March 31, 1931, requesting the status of submerged lands within the limits of territorial waters and off the shores of Louisiana and California.
>
> The title to the beds of the navigable waters is vested in the State by virtue of its sovereignty if the body of water was navigable when the State was admitted into the Union, and the laws of the State will control as to the minerals in the land under the waters. This jurisdiction is, however, subject to the paramount power of Congress to control navigation between the States and with foreign powers.

Of course, there is no dispute as to the authority of the Federal Government in respect to navigation over navigable waters.

> The State is the owner of all land below the line of ordinary high tide extending seaward coextensive with its municipal dominion, and in the land-locked bays from headland to headland, and from the line of ordinary high tide on the shore of the open ocean seaward, a distance of 3 miles, or a marine league. Title to the soil under such tidal waters belonging to the State may be disposed of by the State, provided such disposal and the purposes for which it is made may be accomplished without detriment to the public rights of navigation.
>
> The Mineral Leasing Act of February 25, 1920 (41 Stat. 437), has no application to lands within the 3-mile limit and are, therefore, not under the jurisdiction of this Department.

That is the Department of the Interior.

> As to nonnavigable waters, the rights of the riparian proprietors are determined by the laws of the particular State in which the stream is located.

Here is another letter, dated December 8, 1908, from the Department of the Interior, General Land Office, written to the United States Surveyor General, New Orleans, La., in which this statement is made:

> By office decision G of August 21, 1908, action was taken in the matter of the survey and examination of certain lands—

Describing them—

> Louisiana meridian, made by Warren B. Reed, deputy surveyor, and designed on the maps and plats submitted with the case as Point Au Fur Shell Reef.
>
> You were directed not to report the lands as inuring to the State under the swamp grant, for the reason that Mr. Reed found the lands to be subject to daily tidal overflow, and that tidelands belong to the State by its right of sovereignty. You were directed to advise the State and to allow the usual right appeal.
>
> I am in receipt of your letter of the 23d ultimo, in which you report that, by letter of August 25, 1908, you sent a copy of said office decision to the Governor and informed him that he would be allowed 60 days within which to appeal and that the State has taken no action in the matter.
>
> The case is therefore closed, and you will so note on the records of your office.

That letter is signed by the assistant commissioner.

The following excerpts are taken from a letter dated July 26, 1915, from the Department of the Interior, General Land Office, addressed to the Register of the State Land Office of Louisiana on the subject Tidelands.

> It appears as a result of this examination that the lands in question are entirely overflowed lands and that no agricultural areas exist in the townships under consideration. After a careful study of the character and conditions of these lands, it is our opinion that they constitute lands subject to tidal overflow and, therefore, should inure to the State under her rights of sovereignty.
>
> In view of the facts in the case as shown by the surveyors' report, the lands in these townships—

Describing them—

are hereby decided, subject to all valid adverse claims, if any, to be tidelands, belonging to the State of Louisiana under its right of sovereignty.

I am reading these letters into the RECORD because they show a consistent attitude on the part of the Department of the Interior, representing the Federal Government, that these tidelands belong to the States off the shores of which they are located. There has never been any other policy, so far as I know, on the part of the Federal Government. This joint resolution is merely a legislative recognition, a congressional declaration, of a policy which has always obtained in the Federal Government.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield.

Mr. AIKEN. I notice that the joint resolution provides for the quitclaiming of all lands beneath the navigable waters within the boundaries of each of the respective States. I know the experience which the Senator from Louisiana has had with flood control and other allied matters, and I am wondering if the United States Government claims title to lands beneath the navigable waters that are within the States. I have not understood that the Government makes such a claim. Does the Senator know whether the United States Government does in any case lay claim to the lands beneath the navigable waters?

Mr. OVERTON. There is no case that has been brought to my attention in which the Federal Government has asserted ownership of the beds of streams that were navigable at the time of the admission of the State into the Union.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, it might with equal emphasis be said that in no case, until Mr. Ickes came along, was there any contention made that the Government owned the tidelands; but that they belonged to the State in each instance. Every expression even, as read by the able Senator from Louisiana, on the part of the Land Office, and indeed by Mr. Ickes himself in his letter prior to the time when he changed his mind, held that these lands in question belonged to the States, including the beds of navigable streams.

Mr. AIKEN. I realize that the definition of "navigable" seems to have become extended considerably in the past 15 years, but I did not know that the Government laid claim to the land beneath any of the small streams which they maintain to be navigable because at some times during the year they will float pulpwood.

Will the Senator tell me what the situation is in regard to the Great Lakes? Are the beds of the Great Lakes a part of the States adjoining them. For example, do Michigan and Wisconsin own the bed of Lake Michigan, or does the Federal Government claim the ownership of the bed of Lake Michigan, or what is the situation in that respect?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, may I answer the Senator's question?

Mr. OVERTON. I am glad to yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. The cases dealing with the Great Lakes are also direct authority for this proposition. That is because the Great Lakes have been specifically held to be in contemplation of law open seas. In many cases the court has held that the Great Lakes have "all the characteristics of the open sea." The decisions as to the ownership of the beds of the Great Lakes along open coasts is square authority on the question of the ownership of the Atlantic, the Pacific, and the Gulf of Mexico along the open coast. Indeed, in the Great Lakes cases, the Court specifically holds that the same doctrine applies to all these waters regardless of whether they are fresh or salt. The following quotation from the leading case of Illinois Central Railroad v. Illinois (146 U. S. 387), which deals with Lake Michigan, is conclusive on the point:

> It is the settled law of this country that the ownership of and the dominion and sovereignty over lands covered by tidewaters, within the limits of the several States, belong to the respective States within which they are found, with the consequent right to use or dispose of any portion thereof, when that can be done without substantial impairment of the interest of the public in the waters, and subject always to the paramount right of Congress to control their navigation so far as may be necessary for the regulation of commerce with foreign nations and among the States. This doctrine has been often announced by this court (Pollard's Lessee v. Hagan (3 How. (44 U. S.) 212); Weber v. Harbor Commissioners (18 Wall. (85 U. S.) 57)).

Mr. AIKEN. Will the Senator yield for one more question?

Mr. OVERTON. I shall be pleased to.

Mr. AIKEN. I will ask what the situation is with regard to Lake Champlain, which, as the Senator knows, is about 100 miles long and from 1 to 13 miles wide. The New York-Vermont line goes up through the middle of the lake. Am I right in assuming that in this case of this very long narrow lake, the bed of the lake properly belongs to the States? I know all the maps show the State line going up through the lake itself.

Mr. OVERTON. It is my understanding that the beds of the lakes belong to the States. I may possibly be in error.

Mr. McCARRAN. The floors of the lakes.

Mr. AIKEN. The floors of the lakes belong to the States.

Mr. OVERTON. Yes; the floors of the lakes belong to the States.

Mr. AIKEN. I wanted to make sure about that. I thank the Senator.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, as I undertook to observe a moment ago, I think the letters I have read have shown a uniform policy of the United States with respect to these tidelands. There never has been any assertion at all of ownership of these tidelands by the Federal Government until recently when the Department of the Interior undertook to claim them in order, as has been pointed out by the Senator from Nevada, at least for one reason, in order to enter into a contract with some oil company with respect to the tidelands or portions of the tidelands off the coast of California.

The purpose of this joint resolution is to carry out the uniform policy of the United States and to settle forever what has now become unnecessarily a controversial matter. It was not controversial until Mr. Ickes, at the head of the Department of the Interior, suddenly and overnight, as it were, undertook to change the policy of the United States and the policy of his own department with respect to these tidelands. In consequence of his attitude the Attorney General, after a joint resolution had been introduced and, I think, had been passed by the House, instituted a suit for the purpose of asserting title by the United States Government to these lands. This joint resolution will settle the matter for all time to come. I hope it will be passed practically unanimously.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD in connection with this discussion a statement from the hearings by Hon. Grover Sellers, attorney general of Texas. I think it points out very clearly the position of the State of Texas.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT OF GROVER SELLERS, ATTORNEY GENERAL OF TEXAS

Mr. SELLERS. On behalf of the people of Texas, permit me to express appreciation to the committee for the opportunity to present the position of our State regarding House Joint Resolution 225.

I also appear before you as the personal representative of the Governor of Texas, Hon. Coke Stevenson, who has asked me to represent him at this hearing. By the committee's leave I should like permission to read into the record the Governor's letter to me of January 25, 1946. It reads as follows:

JANUARY 25, 1946.

Hon. GROVER SELLERS,
Attorney General of Texas,
Austin, Tex.

DEAR GENERAL SELLERS: I find that I will be unable, due to pressing engagements here in Texas, to attend the hearing in Washington, D. C., before the Senate Judiciary Committee, on Tuesday, February 5, 1946, on House Joint Resolution 225, proposing to quiet the title of the several littoral States to the submerged lands off of their respective coasts and within their territorial boundaries.

I therefore request that you represent me at this hearing and present to the committee the claims of Texas with reference to her submerged lands. I am particularly interested in stressing to the committee that the territorial boundaries of Texas as agreed upon by the United States at the time Texas was admitted to the Union, in 1845, have never been questioned, and that the minerals under the submerged lands of Texas have been dedicated to the permanent school fund of this State. Millions of dollars have been, and will be, made available in the future to the permanent school fund through oil and gas leases on these lands, and the loss of such source of revenue to the State would seriously impair our educational program.

All the people of Texas will be tremendously interested in the action taken with reference to this resolution. I most certainly hope that some resolution of this character will be passed by the present Congress.

Sincerely yours,

COKE STEVENSON.

The people of Texas are vitally interested in the passage of this resolution by the Congress. To that end, the attorney general of Texas has joined with the attorneys general of 45 other States in voicing vigorous opposition to the recent claims of the Federal Government to the States' tidelands and lands submerged by the marginal sea. See brief of 46 attorneys general filed with House Judiciary Committee and Special Senate Subcommittee, Seventy-ninth Congress, at hearings held June 18, 19, and 20, 1945, pages 12 to 17 of record. The attorneys general of these States are solidly united in opposition to this claim which the Government has chosen to call "entirely novel." See page 3, Motion for Leave to File Complaint and Complaint, U. S. v. California, No. 12 Original, United States Supreme Court, October Term, 1945. This opposition is shared by the American Bar Association which organization has passed a resolution urging the Congress "to take immediate action recognizing and confirming" State ownership of navigable waters, inland, and off-shore, at its 1945 meeting at Cincinnati, Ohio. A similar resolution was passed by the National Association of Attorneys General, at thirty-ninth annual conference at Jacksonville, Fla., November 27, 1945.

This entirely novel claim of the Government, not asserted for 150 years of Federal sovereignty, had its inception in the hopeful speculation of certain persons, who, with a what-is-there-to-lose attitude, applied to the Federal Government for leasing rights under the Federal Leasing Act of February 15, 1920 (41 Stat. L. 437). First, such applications were met with rebuff, the executive department of the Government concerned pointedly informing these individuals that the title to lands beneath the marginal sea was in the respective States, and not the Federal Government. (For example, see letter from Secretary Ickes to Olin S. Proctor, appearing at page 18 of record made before hearings of House Judiciary Committee and Special Senate Subcommittee held June 18, 19, and 20, 1945, on submerged lands resolutions.) Eventually, however, the what-is-there-to-lose psychology began to germinate in the Interior and Navy Departments, resulting in the first steps by responsible Federal officials to assert a claim. (See statements of Capt. H. A. Stuart and Philip Buettner of Navy Department and Harry M. Edelstein of Interior Department, at hearings held before House Judiciary Committee, Seventy-fifth Congress, on S. J. Res. 208, February 23, 24, and 25, 1938.) It is the purpose of the proponents of House Journal Record 225 to renounce and forever put to rest "entirely novel" theories, and quiet the titles of the respective States to their submerged lands inland and offshore.

I have noted that the attorneys general of 46 States, together with the members of the American Bar Association, stand together in opposing this "novel" claim asserted by the Government. It is not our purpose, however, to overwhelm you by force of numbers, but rather to persuade you by the many legal, equitable, and moral reasons for the passage of the resolution.

The legal and equitable grounds asserted by Texas have been offered several times for the consideration of committees of the Congress. First, in 1938 by the Governor, the attorney general, and representatives of the State teachers association; again, in 1939 by the Honorable Tom CONNALLY, United States Senator from Texas, by the attorney general, land commissioner, and representatives of the State teachers association (see record of hearings held before Subcommittee No. 4, House Judiciary Committee, 76th Cong., on H. J. Res. 176 and H. J. Res. 181 on March 22 and 23, 1939); finally, in 1945, by the attorney general, also representing the Governor, and the land commissioner of Texas (see record of joint hearings before House Judiciary Committee and Special Senate Subcommittee, 79th Cong., on a number of joint resolutions regarding submerged lands, June 18, 19, and 20, 1945). It is my purpose to summarize these offerings for the benefit of this committee.

First, however, permit me to call to the attention of the committee what I perceive to be be an underhanded attack upon the purpose and integrity of House Joint Resolution 225. Certain individuals opposing the passage of this resolution have caused the rumor to be circulated that some ulterior motive may lie behind the sponsorship of the resolution, that it is a case of gain for the oil interests as opposed to loss for the Federal Government. Such attacks are, perhaps, to be expected. The committee is well familiar with the ends resorted to in furthering or opposing legislation. It is but natural that those oil companies that have made investments in State submerged lands should be interested in seeing their titles sustained. But make no mistake, the controversy here is the integrity of long recognized and unchallenged State titles as opposed to the claims of certain Federal officials which have served to cloud those titles.

This resolution is sponsored by the States to protect that which is rightfully theirs, and to safeguard those benefits which should rightfully accrue to them in the future. In the case of Texas, the benefits accrue to the permanent school fund of our State (article 5421c–3, Vernon's Annotated Texas Civil Statutes). Each State appeals to you in its proprietary capacity as one whose title has been clouded, and asks that you confirm and quitclaim unto the States that which has long been recognized as rightfully theirs.

What is the basis for this cloud cast by the Government on the States' long recognized titles to their submerged lands? By admission, it is upon a theory "entirely novel"; since the Government has asserted its claim to be based on grounds "never adjudicated" (see p. 3, Motion for Leave to File Complaint and Complaint, U. S. A. v. California, No. 12 Original in the Supreme Court of the United States, October term, 1945) by the Supreme Court. It is apparently asserted without benefit of legal precedent by that Court. In Texas, the story is told of the young attorney who defended his client charged with horse stealing on the ground that no statute made it illegal to steal a white horse. We accept as true the claim that the Government's contention is "entirely novel." We hold it be untrue that applicable principles of law have never been handed down by the Supreme Court

The States' long recognized and unchallenged titles are grounded upon certain fundamentals of government in this country, the most important consideration being that in its internal sovereignty the rights and powers of the Federal Government are not unlimited or plenary, but strictly circumscribed by those delegations of power set forth in our Constitution. All other rights and powers remain in the States—in the people. That is the plain language of article 10 of the Bill of Rights.

It would seem to be without serious dispute by anyone, that under English law prior to the American Revolution, and under international law generally, a littoral sovereign nation was the owner in the complete, proprietary sense, of the submerged lands bordering its coast line to a distance into the sea of at least three maritime miles (Oppenheim, I International Law, 3d ed., pp. 394–396; Wilson on International Law, pp. 91–92; Hurst, "Whose Is the Bed of the Sea?", British Yearbook of International Law, 1923, 1924, 4th issue; I Wheaton on International Law, 6th ed., p. 368; id, 8th ed., 177; Vattel's Law of Nations; Hall, International Law, 7th ed., p. 157; Manchester v. Mass. (139 U. S. 240); Story, J. in the Anna, 1 F. Cas. No. 397, I Gall. 62, 63.) The titles of the Original Thirteen States are grounded upon this well-established principle of public law.

How these States came to be the proprietors of their submerged lands, or, indeed, any of their lands, is reflected in the history of the formation of our country, the American Revolution, the Declaration of Independence, and the Constitution of the United States. The American Revolution was not fought by one nation against England, but by individuals from each of the Thirteen Colonies. These colonies perfected their titles by a successful war for independence. Each colony, as a separate nation, retained all of its hard-fought rights and lands, and gave to the new nation they created only those rights and powers expressly delegated by the compact between the States called our Constitution. No surrender of land rights is to be found in the Constitution; all such rights and titles were retained by the States. Each new State was, of course, admitted upon an equal footing with the Original States with identical rights and powers, including submerged land rights, the concept being that the Federal Government held all such lands in trust for the new States until their formation. (Pollard v. Hagan (3 How. 212); Hardin v. Jordan (140 U. S. 371); Shively v. Bowlby (151 U. S. 1, 58); Port of Seattle v. Oregon & W. Rr. Co. (255 U. S. 56, 63); and many other cases.)

These historic concepts and long established principles of law are implicit in the many decisions of the Supreme Court affirming the titles of the States to their submerged lands, both inland and offshore, which are referred to in the brief of the attorneys general of 46 States in support of the joint resolutions quieting the States' titles, made a part of the record at the hearings held on June 18, 19, and 20, 1945, before the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives and a special subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee. (Appearing at pp. 12–17 of record made before House Judiciary Committee and special Senate subcommittee, 79th Cong., at hearings held on June 18, 19, and 20, 1945, on titles to submerged lands.)

In your capacity as members of the Judiciary Committee, we appeal to your judicial temperament that this brief reflects the existing state of the law; in your capacity as Members of the Congress we urge our moral rights to a quitclaim.

It is my duty to emphasize however, that the title of the State of Texas rests not alone on the foregoing principles; but is strengthened by additional considerations, legal and historical. As you know, Texas is unique among the States in having attained statehood by solemn agreement with the United States permitting annexation of the territory comprising the Republic of Texas. After winning its independence from Mexico, Texas was a sovereign among the nations of the world enjoying all the attributes and privileges accorded by international law; a Republic to which the United States, among other nations, had an accredited minister. These two Nations therefore, dealt with each other at arm's length in their sovereign capacities while negotiating for annexation of the Republic of Texas. The proposals, conditions, and guarantees made by the United States to the Republic of Texas on March 1, 1845, include the offer and "guarantee" that, "said State, when admitted into the Union * * * shall lso retain all the vacant and unappropriated lands lying within its limits * * *." (5 Stat. L. 797.) In view of this guaranty, it is pertinent to examine into the territorial limits of the Republic of Texas.

Prior to annexation, Texas declared, by act of her congress, that the civil and political jurisdiction of the Republic of Texas extended to the following boundary along its seacoast:

"Beginning at the mouth of the Sabine River, and running west along the Gulf of Mexico 3 leagues from land, to the mouth of the Rio Grande." (Gammel's Laws 1193; vol. 1, Sayles Early Laws of Texas, art. 257.)

Let there be no dispute that the United States has any claim to the territory of the Republic of Texas other than by the annexation agreement, for by its treaty with Spain of 1819 the United States expressly renounced all claim to the territory which is now the State of Texas, in the following language:

"The United States hereby cede to his Catholic Majesty, and renounce forever, all their rights, claims, and pretensions to the territories lying west and south of the above described line."

The line referred to was fully described in the treaty as beginning on the Gulf of Mexico, at the mouth of the Sabine River, "in the sea," and continuing north. Whatever rights the Federal Government could claim to Texas' lands must therefore be found in its solemn agreement with the Republic of Texas; but, as pointed out, under its proposal all lands were to be retained by the State.

The Republic of Texas consented to the Federal proposals on June 23, 1845 (2 Gammel's Laws of Texas 1225–1227) and by a convention of delegates authorized to act for the people, by ordinance on July 4, 1845 (2 Gammel's Laws of Texas 1228–1230) did "assent to, and accept the proposals, conditions and guaranties" so offered by the National Government, and the Congress admitted Texas into the Union on December 29, 1845 (9 Stat. L. 797) specially reciting the above-mentioned understanding and guarantee. This national guaranty has never been repealed or set aside but still remains in full force and effect. Since the "limits" of the territory annexed had been defined as extending to a point along Texas' coast 3 leagues out, the title of the State of Texas to the land lying between low-water mark and the 3-league limit is no longer open to question by the express terms of its admission as a State.

Promptly after becoming a State, Texas through her legislature, reaffirmed its "exclusive right to the jurisdiction over the soil included in the limits of the late Republic of Texas" (2 Gammel's Laws of Texas, 1461), and has, to this date, continued to exercise jurisdiction over the territory within those defined limits. The right of Texas to exercise that jurisdiction has never been questioned by the United States. Even if there has been any doubt of its right to do so, that doubt has long since been dissipated, for it is a principle of public law universally recognized that long acquiescence in the possession of territory and the exercise of dominion and sovereignty over it, is conclusive of the title and rightful authority of Texas (Indiana v. Kentucky, 136 U. S. 479).

We submit, therefore, that whatever may be the title of the other littoral States, the title of the State of Texas to the submerged lands and the minerals under them, situated below low-water mark and within at least three leagues from her coast line, is no longer open to question.

But despite all these reasons which would seem unanswerable, it is apparent that at least some in the executive departments of the Federal Government consider there is even doubt as to Texas' title. For example, the distinguished Attorney General of the United States had the following to say in a press interview as reported in the Dallas News of November 6, 1945:

"We intend to restore all lands to which the Federal Government lays claims, and will prosecute the suit with everything we have. We don't intend to leave out any State. But there are a lot of problems, because of annexations and treaties. Texas has a different situation from the other States. Louisiana's case is a little different, and so is Florida's."

We recognize and respect the earnestness and sincerity of our Attorney General, as well as his obligation to prosecute all meritorious claims of the United States. Not the slightest reflection upon him is here intended. But his unqualified statement leaves no doubt that a multiplicity of suits is intended; that one decision, as the many in the past, will not suffice; that each State will be treated separately. How long must Texas and her sister States suffer their titles to be brought in question and clouded? How long must this impending threat, retarding development, hang over their heads?

Since the introduction of Senate bill 2164 on April 15, 1937, by Senator Nye under which Congress would have declared the States' submerged lands to be a part of the public domain, no ingenuity has been spared in advancing theories, sometimes conflicting, derogatory of the States' titles. All of these have been unburdened upon various committees of the Congress. All have served to undermine confidence in previously unchallenged State titles.

Some laid claim that no sovereign—State or Federal—owned any land beneath the sea from low tide out; that, therefore, the territory beneath the sea from low-water mark was ripe for "appropriation" by the Government. (See remarks of Congressman Hobbs and statement of Mr. Philip Buettner of Navy Department at hearing held before House Judiciary Committee, 75th Cong., on February 23, 24, and 25, 1938, on S. J. Res. 208, pp. 41–57 record.) This theory seems to have beat a hasty retreat when faced with the suggestion that some power other than the United States might be pleased to hear such an assertion by the Congress. The Navy then advanced the theory that while there might be no title to such areas in the proprietary sense; nevertheless, there was latent power in the Federal Government to assume "control" for the purpose of national defense, the maintenance of a navy, and interstate and foreign commerce; that this power of "control" included the right in the Government to take oil underlying submerged lands without compensation when the Congress had declared an emergency. (See statement of Mr. Philip Buettner, Navy Department, referred to in preceding note.)

In justice to the Navy Department, it should be pointed out that the Secretary of the Navy quite frankly stated that there were many adjudicated decisions on the matter when he said:

"Opposition to legislation of this kind is based largely on the belief that the submerged lands belong to the respective States under the well-established and accepted principle of law that is generally expressed in court decisions on the general subject that the several States own the tidelands—that is, the land between high- and low-water marks—and the submerged lands under the navigable waters within their respective territorial limits, subject to the right of the United States to control and use the navigable waters and submerged lands for purposes of commerce and navigation. The principle cases in which this principle of law is announced and reiterated as the basis for the courts' decisions are: (Citing cases). An examination of the cases enumerated and the cases therein cited will disclose that the controversies therein concern submerged lands located under bays, harbors, rivers, or other inland waters within the respective territorial limits of the several States, as referred to in Senate Joint Resolution 208, now under discussion. However, the principle of law referred to is equally applicable, for reasons hereinafter indicated, and the decisions in the cases above cited concerning navigable waters and submerged lands within the respective territorial limits of the States are controlling in the subject matter of this legislation. (From Secretary of the Navy Swanson's letter to chairman, House Judiciary Committee, dated February 2, 1938, set forth at pp. 54–59 of record referred to in note 21, supra.)"

The Interior Department representative was likewise frank to state that although for long past that Department had denied applications for leasing rights on the ground that title was in the States and not the Federal Government; nevertheless,

"For about a year we have been reconsidering the whole question at the instigation of some persons whose applications have been rejected in the past and of new applicants. We are still considering the question. We have not yet decided it. * * * the doubt is with regard to the correctness of our past decisions in view of the insistence of various applicants * * *." (From statement of Mr. Harry M. Edelstein, Assistant Solicitor, Interior Department, at hearing held on S. J. Res. 208 before House Judiciary Committee in 1938; pp. 61–66 of record.)

In 1938 the position taken by a Justice Department representative before the House Judiciary Committee was that—

"We do not know whether title is in the State or whether title is in the United States, or whether there is no title there at all; any fee-simple title or anything in the nature of a property interest." (From statement of Mr. Frank Chambers, Special Assistant to Attorney General, at hearings referred to in note 25, pp. 59–61 record.)

It is well known, of course, that the Justice Department presently asserts that the United States is the owner of the submerged lands within the marginal sea in fee simple; that the States are mere trespassers on these Federal lands. (See pp. 6 and 7, Motion for leave to file complaint and complaint, U. S. v. Calif., No. 12 Original, U. S. Supreme Court, October Term, 1945.)

Based on such testimony, the interest of the executive departments of the Government in the matter would seem to be this: that the Navy wants to "appropriate" the oil within the land underlying the marginal sea without compensation for defense purposes; the Interior Department is interested because of recurring claims presented by prospective lessees; and the Justice Department, as attorney for the other departments in prosecuting their claims. To this we answer that the Navy was not without adequate oil during the war emergency and that its failure to effect the desired "appropriation" will not cause it to want for oil in the future; that the Interior Department should cease speculating about novel theories of Federal ownership at the instance of prospective lessees and should return to its long-standing administrative interpretation of the law.

Texas has much to lose by the clouding of her title. For over a hundred years the State of Texas, through its legislature, has claimed the boundary of the State as being at least three leagues out in the Gulf of Mexico. The title to the submerged land within the 3-league limit has been consistently asserted without any protest or objection from the United States and the minerals in the submerged lands have been dedicated to the permanent school fund of the State (art. 5421c–3, Vernon's Annotated Texas Civil Statutes). Leases for oil and gas have been made on these submerged lands by the Commissioner of the General Land Office at a price fixed by the School Land Board, composed of the Governor, the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and the Attorney General (art. 5421c–5, Vernon's Annotated Texas Civil Statutes). Millions in royalties have already accrued and have been deposited to the credit of the permanent school fund of Texas.

Texas has indeed much to lose by the continued clouding of her title. I cannot speak for the other States, but so far as Texas is concerned, the real parties at interest are its million and a half school children whose public free school system over the years has become so dependent upon the mineral development of Texas' lands. Countless acres of these public lands are submerged by navigable waters, both inland and offshore. All of these areas are jeopardized by the Government's claim. True it is, that the Government has limited its claim to the marginal sea, which claim, it says, is to be sharply distinguished from a claim of title to all lands beneath navigable waters. A line may be drawn and the land classified as inland or offshore. Not so lightly cast aside, however, is the basis of the decided cases, as Secretary of the Navy Swanson concluded when he said that the decisions of the Supreme Court in the matter are controlling as to the lands within the 3-mile limit. (From Secretary of the Navy Swanson's letter to chairman, House Judiciary Committee, dated February 2, 1938, set forth at pp. 54–59 of record referred to in notes 25 and 26, supra.)

I have addressed you at some length upon the legal, equitable, and moral reasons for the passage of House Joint Resolution 225. The policy in this matter, to be determined by the Congress, would seem to be governed by the equitable and moral reasons given. If it be sound policy to confirm to the States these property rights which have been allowed to remain unchallenged for a century and a half; if it be sound policy to say to the executive department of the Government that there shall not be a multiplicity of expensive, interminable litigation with each State, and that that which has been supposed true for so long, based on so many legal and historical principles, shall forever stand affirmed as true in the future; then the Members of this Senate should join in the action taken by Members of the House of Representatives and pass House Joint Resolution 225. We urge that you do so.

The CHAIRMAN. What was your treaty or arrangement with Mexico when you broke away from Mexico?

Mr. SELLERS. That is when we established this boundary I speak of between Mexico and the United States.

The CHAIRMAN. That was acceded to you by Mexico?

Mr. SELLERS. That is right. We came into the United States as an independent nation and we were allowed to keep all of our public lands and the boundaries were recognized as the boundaries then between the United States and Mexico. Since that time two treaties between the United States and Mexico have redesignated the same south boundary at a distance of three marine leagues into the Gulf of Mexico as being the boundary between the United States and Mexico.

It was stated here yesterday by Secretary Ickes that we had no precedent in the submerged land. We do have precedent in the bays and harbors.

What I want to call to the attention of this committee is that the very precedent which gave you the rivers and harbors and bays was the one going out to the 3-mile limit. When he says we do not have precedent, I think all of the cases referred to are just as much a precedent for the 3-mile limit as they are on the rivers, bays, and submerged land. The original cases based it on the fact there was a sovereign right out to the 3-mile limit. The only reason we have not had any determination beyond low-water tide is the fact that we had no actual situation involved prior to this time. I think the cases, and there are many of them, that have decided his question, have decided upon the very ground which we are contending here for today—that the original 13 States came into the Union with their sovereign rights out to the 3-mile limit and every State since then has been admitted at least on an equal footing.

We have continued to exercise jurisdiction over these submerged lands, leasing our lands out into the Gulf of Mexico a distance of 9,000 feet. We have producing wells out in the Gulf of Mexico at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. You have given leases?

Mr. SELLERS. Yes; and have producing wells out there, and have had for years, the farthest out being 9,000 feet. We have received millions of dollars of royalties in the State of Texas from those wells out in that Gulf of Mexico area.

We have possibly more oil development in Texas than in any other State. Our whole Gulf coast has turned into an oil basin, and going out into the Gulf of Mexico. I anticipate that it will be but a few years when they will drill much farther out into the Gulf of Mexico.

The Senator mentioned rights of the State as against the Federal Government. We do not have any uniform royalty return. We receive, I think, as high as 50 percent on some of our mineral-producing lands in Texas from oil companies. We just do not give it to somebody for the value of one-eighth, as a lot of times is the case when you lease before the oil is discovered, but we get as high as 50 percent.

I am a member of the Texas Land Board. This board makes mineral leases on our State lands. These clouds on our title by virtue of this suit are seriously handicapping us in the leasing and developing of our Gulf coast area.

We just simply cannot find any law in the whole jurisprudence of the United States that would sanction taking the lands that are covered by the suit involved.

We hope that this committee will support the quitclaim resolution.

The commissioner of the General Land Office of the State of Texas is here and he would like to make a statement.

Mr. McCARRAN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SWIFT in the chair). The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hayden	Pepper
Andrews	Hill	Radcliffe
Ball	Hoey	Reed
Barkley	Huffman	Revercomb
Bilbo	Johnson, Colo.	Robertson
Brewster	Knowland	Shipstead
Brooks	Langer	Smith
Burch	Lucas	Stanfill
Bushfield	McCarran	Swift
Capehart	McClellan	Taft
Capper	McKellar	Taylor
Carville	McMahon	Thomas, Okla.
Connally	Magnuson	Thomas, Utah
Cordon	Maybank	Tunnell
Donnell	Millikin	Vandenberg
Downey	Mitchell	Wagner
Ferguson	Moore	Wherry
Fulbright	Morse	White
George	Murdock	Wiley
Gerry	Murray	Willis
Green	Myers	Wilson
Guffey	O'Daniel	Young
Gurney	O'Mahoney
Hart	Overton

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventy Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

FEES OF UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. McCARRAN submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 346) to amend section 21 of the act of May 28, 1896 (29 Stat. 184, 28 U. S. C., sec. 597), prescribing fees of United States commissioners, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the House and agree to the same.

PAT MCCARRAN,
JAMES W. HUFFMAN,
W. A. STANFILL,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

HATTON W. SUMNERS,
EMANUEL CELLER,
LOUIS E. GRAHAM,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I ask for the present consideration of the report.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. McCARRAN. I now move the adoption of the report.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, may we have an explanation?

Mr. McCARRAN. This report relates to a bill which after it was passed by the Senate was amended by the House of Representatives in certain particulars. I move that a conference be requested, and a conference was had. Upon further examining the bill, it seems that probably I should not have made that motion, but should have moved that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House. The bill fixes the fees for United States Commissioners.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. Will the Senator explain what change has been made by the conference committee?

Mr. McCARRAN. The following explanation is submitted by the conferees:

Seven amendments were made by the House to the Senate bill, the first two of which were approved, that the increase authorized by the Federal Employees' Pay Act of 1945, as amended by the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1946, should be applied to the Office of Commissioners prescribed by the bill. The other five amendments were made to correct the language of the bill. The Senate disagreed to those amendments and requested a conference, to which the House agreed. Later the House language was agreed to.

Mr. FERGUSON. Will the Senator explain the manner in which the Pay Act of 1945 and the Pay Act of 1946 would apply to the Office of Commissioners?

Mr. McCARRAN. I cannot do so because I do not have the information before me upon which I can base an answer, but I shall have the report temporarily laid aside.

Mr. FERGUSON. I should like to have it temporarily laid aside.

Mr. McCARRAN. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The conference report will be temporarily laid aside.

Mr. McCARRAN subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the conference report.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I should like to ask the able Senator from Nevada, the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, whether or not, as the report is now proposed, the fees of the Commissioners would be increased by the amount of the 1945 and 1946 acts if they are not under $7,500.

Mr. McCARRAN. The salary, or fee, or whatever it may be called, would be increased if it is under $7,500, but not if it is in excess of that amount.

Mr. FERGUSON. Let me take a hypothetical case. If the fee were $6,000, it would be increased up to but not to exceed $7,500?

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator is correct.

Mr. FERGUSON. But if the fees regularly amount to $7,500, then there would be no increase?

Mr. McCARRAN. The Commissioners would get no increase.

Mr. FERGUSON. Under those circumstances, I have no objection.

Mr. McCARRAN. I move the adoption of the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

ADDITIONAL JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF DELAWARE—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. McCARRAN submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1801) authorizing the appointment of an additional judge for the district of Delaware, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "Provided, That the first vacancy occurring in the office of district judge in said district shall not be filled: Provided further, That unless the President shall submit a nomination to the Senate or make a recess appointment to fill the office hereby created within ninety days after the effective date of this Act, then in that event this Act shall be of no force and effect."

And the House agree to the same.

PAT MCCARRAN,
ABE MURDOCK,
E. H. MOORE,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

HATTON W. SUMNERS,
FRANCIS E. WALTER,
JOHN JENNINGS, Jr.,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the conference report.

There being no objection, the conference report was considered and agreed to.

TITLE TO LANDS BENEATH TIDAL AND NAVIGABLE WATERS

The Senate resumed consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 225) to quiet the titles of the respective States, and others, to lands beneath tidewaters and lands beneath navigable waters within the boundaries of such States and to prevent further clouding of such titles.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to House joint resolution 225. The resolution resolves two things. First—

The United States of America hereby renounces and disclaims any right, title, interest, or claim, except as hereinafter excepted and retained, in and to all lands beneath tidewaters and all lands beneath navigable waters within the boundaries of each of the respective States.

And secondly—

The United States of America hereby releases, remises, and quitclaims all right, title, interest, claim, or demand of the United States of America in and to all lands beneath tidewaters, and all lands beneath navigable waters within the boundaries of each of the respective States, unto each of such States or the persons lawfully entitled thereto under the law as established by the decisions of the courts of such State, and unto the respective grantees or successors in interest thereof, and under the respective present lawful owners of such lands of which title has been confirmed by official action of the United States of America.

The joint resolution recognizes, by its very terms, a difference between lands beneath tidewaters and lands beneath navigable waters within the boundaries of each of the respective States.

At once, Mr. President, the inquiry is raised as to whether or not the rule, which the report of the Judiciary Committee states has been established by 54 United States Supreme Court decisions, applies not only to navigable waters within the boundaries of each of the respective States but also to tidewater lands alongside and adjacent to such States.

Mr. President, it may well be that the courts have held that, as to navigable waters within the State of Missouri, for illustration, the title to the waters and to the land thereunder resides in the State of Missouri. There may be quite another question as to whether, alongside the State of Georgia the land extending 3 miles into the ocean beyond what is ordinarily shown on the map as the boundary of the State of Georgia, is embraced within the same rule and that the title to that 3-mile extraneous portion rests within the State of Georgia.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. CORDON. Does the Senator believe that his argument would apply in a case where, upon admission of a State into the Union, the boundary line of the State was specifically described as being one marine league into the sea, and around the borders of the State as prescribed?

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, in my judgment, in the case which the Senator cites, the boundary line has been recognized, and I think the same rule would apply there that would apply in the State of Missouri, for illustration.

But obviously, from the Federal court decision to which I referred yesterday in the colloquy with the distinguished Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], at least one State has found it advisable and, I judge, necessary, to pass a specific statute extending its boundaries into the ocean in order to make its ocean front a part of the State. I refer to the State of New Jersey which was dealt with in a decision by the Circuit Court of the Southern District of New York in a case entitled United States v. Newark Meadows Improvement Company (173 Fed. 429). It is my understanding, from reading a citation in 16 Corpus Juris at page 170, that the act by which the State of New Jersey brought a certain area under the ocean within its own jurisdiction, was not enacted until the year 1906. It may well be, Mr. President, that there are other States which have not enacted the legislation which will be necessary in order to bring ocean property, water, and the land thereunder, within the jurisdiction of the State.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. Does the Senator believe that if the land in question did not belong to the State, by passing a statute extending the State boundary 3 miles, or, as Texas has done, 31 miles or, as Louisiana and Mississippi have done, that the State could take title to the land from the Federal Government?

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I may say to the distinguished Senator from Michigan that precisely that question occured to me when I read the decision of United States against Newark Meadows Improvement Company. I may call the Senator's attention to the language which appears in that decision. The court which handed down the decision was a circuit court, and I do not know whether the decision was ever acted upon by any appellate court. The court, however, did use this language:

Both from the language quoted and from the nature of the decision in the Manchester case—

That refers to the decision in the case of Manchester v. Massachusetts (139 U. S. 240)—

it seems to me to follow that New Jersey may, in the exercise of its sovereignty, extend its own borders for the space of one marine league from low-water mark and make the region so annexed as much a portion of the State as any other part of its territory.

Mr. President, I may say further to the Senator from Michigan that, to my mind, there occurs a question as to the validity of the statement made by the district jurist. It would seem to me to be permissible to argue that a State may not raise itself by its own bootstraps and create in itself a property right which does not already belong to it.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. FERGUSON. If the land does not belong to the State, the legal problem, as I see it, is that it cannot extend its jurisdiction over it. If it does belong to the State, then no extension is necessary, and I wondered whether or not the Senator from Missouri had any authority on the point as to why the State could extend its boundary 1 league. Why not out 10 leagues, 50 leagues, or any number of leagues? Is there any reason for the 1-league rule other than the old idea of a 3-mile limit?

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I think the question of the Senator is extremely pertinent and important, and should be passed upon by the Supreme Court of the United States, rather than leaving the matter as decided by a circuit court of the United States. I may say that I know of no indication as to why it is that a State could not extend its ownership for any distance out into the ocean, under the reasoning of the case from which I have read in 173 United States Reports. To my mind the very point the Senator makes illustrates the doubt as to the validity of the conclusion which was arrived at by the judge in that case.

Of course, as the Senator indicates, there was the old rule with respect to the cannon shot and in that connection I read again, as I did yesterday, from 16 Corpus Juris, at page 169, where it is stated:

It has often been said that the jurisdiction of a nation to punish offenders extends into the ocean to the distance of a cannon shot, which is estimated as one marine league from low-water mark on the shore—

But I call to the attention of the Senate this very significant utterance immediately thereafter in Corpus Juris—but it is doubtful whether there is any jurisdiction to punish for offenses committed within this marine league limit, if the place of the offense is not an arm of the sea and within the body of a country, unless the jurisdiction is expressly conferred by statute.

Mr. President, I may say that when I read that yesterday the question immediately occurred to me, as it has to the distinguished Senator, as to whether a State statute can have force or validity to extend the border of the State out into the ocean.

With that question largely in mind, I sent for this decision from which I have read, and I have stated accurately and correctly what the holding of the court is. But regardless of that fact, until the Supreme Court of the United States shall have spoken finally upon the question, my judgment is along the line the Senator from Michigan has indicated, that, to say the least, there is the gravest doubt whether a State may by its own act extend its boundary out into the ocean.

Mr. President, I was outlining the fact that the pending joint resolution undertakes to renounce and disclaim any right, title, interest, or claim except as specifically excepted in the measure "to all lands beneath tidewaters." There is a rather extended definition of tidewaters on page 3 of the joint resolution, but for the moment, at any rate, I shall not trespass on the time of the Senate to read it.

I had mentioned the fact that the joint resolution itself in two places, from which I have already read, recognizes a distinction between lands beneath tidewaters and lands which are within the boundaries of each of the respective States. The very authors of the joint resolution realized, obviously, that the meaning of the words "lands under tidewaters," in common acceptance, at any rate, is entirely different from what is meant by lands within the boundaries of a State. So we start with the doubt itself as to whether or not the rule as to navigable waters confined within the boundaries of a State would apply to waters alongside, adjacent, in the ocean, inferentially recognized by the authors of the joint resolution in differentiating between the two.

Mr. President, I was about to say, when the colloquy began, that yesterday I was raising the question, for information, as to whether or not the rule to the effect that the States do own the navigable waters and the lands thereunder applies to the land underneath the ocean adjacent. The Senate will recall perhaps that yesterday I quoted this language from 45 Corpus Juris, at page 540:

Unquestionably it is true that—

And I emphasize the language I am about to read, although it is not italicized in the book—within its territorial limits a State owns the land underlying tidal waters, including the seashore and the land under a stream or river insofar as the tide ebbs and flows, and its ownership extends to high-water mark, except in some jurisdictions where it extends only to low-water mark.

The Senate will note that in what I have just read is included the seashore, and that, as I understand it, modifies the expression "within its territorial limits." It requires no stretch of the imagination, by looking over the seacoast of our country on the map, to realize that there is a great deal of water adjacent to some of our States which, strictly speaking, and visually, from an inspection of the maps, is not out in the ocean as we ordinarily consider it, but is within the State itself.

Mr. President, the report of the Committee on the Judiciary at page 8 makes one citation under the heading "Coastal waters," and, so far as I have been able to observe, this portion of the report is all that specifically refers to coastal waters, except one sentence, to which I shall refer in a moment, which appears on page 3.

The quotation to which I refer appears on page 8 of the report. It does not appear from the report from what case it comes, but I have learned this morning by inspection that it comes from the case of Smith v. Maryland (19 How. 71), local citations 74 and 75, which is the next case cited in the next succeeding paragraph of the report. The language reads as follows:

Whatever soil below low-water mark is the subject of exclusive propiety (property) and ownership, belongs to the State on whose maritime border—

And again I emphasize, although it is not italicized in the decision—and within whose territory it lies, subject to any lawful grants of that soil by the State, or the sovereign power which governed its territory before the declaration of independence.

So, Mr. President, this very quotation, which is cited at page 8 of the report of the committee, itself includes the language substantially as contained in Corpus Juris from which I have read, reading at page 8, "within whose territory it lies."

So, Mr. President, I recur to the question whether or not the rule which has been laid down by the courts, and which is stated in the report to have been supported by 54 United States Supreme Court decisions, applies to land under waters in the ocean adjacent to the States.

Mr. President, I said there was another sentence in the report referring to this subject. That sentence is on page 3 of the report, and I shall read it. It appears, I may say, after the discussion in which it is stated:

In 54 decisions, over a period of 100 years, the Supreme Court of the United States has held that the ownership of lands beneath navigable waters lies in the States and in those to whom the States granted them.

Then a little further down the page occurs this sentence:

And, likewise, it has been decided that lands underlying the bordering oceans within the 3-mile limit belong to the States within their respective boundaries.

The case that is cited in support of that proposition on page 3 of the report is the case of Martin v. Waddell (41 U. S. 366–410).

I indicated yesterday that I was unable to tell, and I do not think anyone can tell, from the portions of the decision I have read, unless far better acquainted with the geography of this particular neighborhood than am I, whether the waters in question were out in the ocean proper, or whether they were back in some bay or inlet of the ocean. As a matter of fact, the decision itself refers to the fact that the property included in the litigation was that in the Raritan Bay and River, and which, in itself, as I noted this morning from an inspection of the map of New Jersey, would appear to be not out in the open sea, but back in the recess of a bay or portion of the water which is not out in the open sea.

Mr. President, that is the only specifical citation of authority contained in the committee's report in support of the very vital and tremendously important proposition that lands "underlying the bordering oceans within the 3-mile limit belong to the States within their respect boundaries."

Yesterday afternoon the distinguished Senator from Nevada was very courteous and kind in giving me information and statements with respect to these matters, and he said then, very appropriately, as appears at page 9437 of the RECORD:

If the Senator will read the report of the Judiciary Committee he will find there cited a number of cases which will throw much light on the question in the Senator's mind.

Mr. President, I propose in a few minutes to examine those cases. I may say that the only cases I have found—and if I am in error, I am sure the Senator from Nevada will correct me—the only cases I have found in the report which purported to bear upon the question of coastal waters, and the lands underneath coastal waters, are those authorities set forth on page 8 of the report, beginning with the case of Weber against Harbor Commissioners and ending with Mobile Transportation Company against Mobile. Added to that may be the fact that the writer of the report, or of the appendix—for, after all, it is an appendix, and not the report proper—intended to report, and doubtless did, the case of Smith v. Maryland (18 Howard, 71) from which I have quoted, and in the decision is the language, "within whose territory it lies."

So, Mr. President, I address myself this afternoon to the question as to whether or not it is an open and shut question, one that is settled by 54 or any other number of decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, that lands underlying the bordering oceans within the 3-mile limit belong to the States within their respective boundaries.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. CORDON. I take it that the question at issue in the Senator's mind is as to whether or not the State's exterior or coastal-side boundary is in fact 3 miles at sea or at some other place closer to the shore.

Mr. DONNELL. I think I understand the Senator's question. The question as I understand it is, do I understand that the boundaries of a State extend 3 miles out in the ocean? Is that the question?

Mr. CORDON. Yes.

Mr. DONNELL. My point is, Mr. President, that, as I understand, there is no rule of law declaring that ipso facto the boundary of a State extends any distance out into the ocean. There is no such rule. The language as stated in Corpus Juris, from which I have read, with respect to offense, it will be recalled said:

> It is doubtful whether there is any jurisdiction to punish for offenses committed within this marine-league limit, if the place of the offense is not an arm of the sea and within the body of a country, unless the jurisdiction is expressly conferred by statute.

Furthermore, Mr. President, I submit that the question by what jurisdiction the statute must be enacted, to my mind is a very grave question, and as I indicated in my response to the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] notwithstanding the action of the supreme court in New York, an inferior court, the issue so far as I know not having been passed upon by an appellate court, to my mind the question is of great difficulty and of great doubt as to the right of the State itself to bring to itself property which did not otherwise belong to it.

I want in frankness to state that I have this morning located one further decision, namely, that in the case of People v. Stralla (96 Pac. 2541), decided by the Supreme Court of California, which set out a portion of the Constitution of the State of California, in which the ocean boundary of the State is fixed as running west to the Pacific Ocean and "extending therein three English miles." I have not had the time carefully to study this decision, but from the fact that a conviction, apparently for an offense committed in this particular area, in a State court in California was sustained by its supreme court, I judge that the court understood, and at least tacitly agreed, that the State of California had the right by its constitution to establish its own boundaries.

But may I say to the Senator from Oregon, and to the Senator from Michigan, that this, as I have indicated, is not a decision of a Federal court, not a decision even of a lower Federal court, and certainly not of the Supreme Court. It is a decision of the Supreme Court of California, and to my mind, until there is secured an adjudication by the Supreme Court of the United States upon the question as to whether or not, if the property out in the ocean belongs to the Federal Government it can be taken by the State, either by constitution or statute, we are unable to say with certainty or definiteness what is the status of the respective property rights of the State and the Federal Government.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. CORDON. I take it that the Senator is directing his argument wholly to the question of where the boundary line lies of States which border on the ocean; but that with reference to the States whose boundaries are specifically fixed in the act which admits the States into the Union, there is no question in his mind with reference to the proposition?

Mr. DONNELL. I will say, Mr. President, that there is no question in my mind upon that proposition, but I also add that I have confined my study of the matter, which has been hasty, specifically to the question as to seacoast lands, and I should not want my present impressions as to the law with respect to navigable waters wholly within the boundaries of a State to preclude me from later arriving at a different conclusion, if after further search I should find my present view to be incorrect.

My present judgment, I may say, is as set forth in 45 Corpus Juris:

> Unquestionably it is true that within its territorial limits a State owns the land underlying tidal waters, including the seashore and the land under a stream or river, insofar as the tide ebbs and flows, and its ownership extends to high-water mark, except in some jurisdictions where it extends only to low-water mark.

That is my present opinion.

Mr. CORDON. I thank the Senator. I understand the point to which he is directing his argument.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. The Senator has quoted a case from California. Is it not true that that was a criminal case, and does not the question of the jurisdiction of the State in relation to crimes present an entirely different question than the qustion of the ownership of the land and the ownership of the minerals under the land?

Mr. DONNELL. I think that is an exceedingly pertinent question, and one which has not occurred to me, and I am very much pleased that the Senator has suggested that thought. I may say that this was a criminal case. It was upon an indictment for the keeping and operation of a gambling ship, and it was evidently determined, by reason of the affirmation that the indictment was properly brought, that the State had jurisdiction to the limit within which the gambling ship was operated.

Mr. FERGUSON. But is it not true that the State might take jurisdiction over crimes within a certain territory when the State is not the owner of the land and is not entitled to the minerals under the land?

Mr. DONNELL. I should say, Mr. President, that that proposition certainly is one which is entitled the most careful thought and consideration, and that before undertaking to release valuable property rights we should have the judgment of the Supreme Court thereon. I am very grateful to the Senator for his comments.

Mr. REVERCOMB. The able Senator from Michigan has raised a very interesting point, and I think the Senator from Missouri will find that criminal jurisdiction and general civil jurisdiction are very distinctly different with respect to land which has been ceded to the Federal Government by the States. Very frequently, with regard to land where, for instance, locks and dams are built by the Federal Government on a navigable stream, the State will cede jurisdiction over the land, convey it to the Federal Government, but will retain power to punish crimes and the right to go in and make arrests on that land. The same is true of reservations.

Mr. DONNELL. May I interrupt the Senator to say that my mind instantly recurs to specific illustrations of the correctness of that statement in my own State, where the governor of the State a few years ago signed legislation ceding to the United States Government jurisdiction over such areas as Fort Leonard Wood and Camp Crowder, and yet the title to the land did not pass under any possible construction.

Mr. REVERCOMB. And very frequently in such cessions of jurisdiction the State will retain the right to serve warrants and make arrests on the lands so ceded.

Mr. DONNELL. The right to serve warrants and make arrests was retained in the instance I cited. In addition, the State of Missouri retained the right to exercise the powers of taxation within that jurisdiction, income taxation, possibly the imposition of sales taxes, but certainly the State retained jurisdiction independent of that which was ceded to the United States Government.

Mr. REVERCOMB. The conclusion upon that point, then, is that there is a difference between strictly criminal jurisdiction over an area which has been ceded by a State and general jurisdiction and control over the land.

Mr. DONNELL. I think the Senator is correct, and I am very greatly obliged to both the Senator from West Virginia and the Senator from Michigan for their very substantial contribution to the question now being discussed.

Mr. President, I was discussing the question as to whether or not this rule with respect to coastwise property has been laid to rest by the 54 decisions of the United States Supreme Court. There is one man in the United States, at any rate, who does not think it has been laid at rest. He was referred to in the statement made in the opening of this debate. The letter written by Mr. Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, under date of December 22, 1933, was cited, and later on certain testimony given by him before the Senate Committee on the Judiciary on February 5, 1946, was mentioned. I should like to refer briefly to the contents, both of the original opinion of Mr. Ickes in 1933 and the testimony which he gave before the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, with the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] presiding, on February 5, 1946. The letter, which is set forth at page 9430 of the RECORD of July 19, 1946, from Mr. Ickes to Mr. Olin S. Proctor, Long Beach, Calif., contains, among other things, the following:

As to the jurisdiction of the Federal Government over lands, bordering on tidewater, the Supreme Court of the United States has held in the case of Hardin v. Jordan (140 U. S. 371), as follows:

"With regard to grants of the Government for lands bordering on tidewater, it has been distinctly settled that they only extend to high-water mark, and that the title to the shore and lands under water in front of lands so granted inures to the State within which they are situated, if a State has been organized and established there. Such title to the shore and lands under water is regarded as incidental to the sovereignty of the State—a portion of the royalties belonging thereto and held in trust for the public purposes of navigation and fishery—and cannot be retained or granted out to individuals by the United States."

Mr. President, in connection with the decision, in the case of Hardin against Jordan, I undertake to say that it does not remotely decide the question as to the title to lands along the seacoast of a nation.

As a matter of fact, as will be observed from the map at page 373 of the volume in which appears this decision, and as is stated specifically in the body of the decision, which was delivered by Mr. Justice Bradley, the proceeding was an action in ejectment to recover possession of certain fractional sections of land lying on the west and south sides of a small lake in Cook County, Ill., situated about a dozen miles south of Chicago. I call attention to this language, "and 2 or 3 miles from Lake Michigan." So obviously, the case of Hardin against Jordan, which was cited by Mr. Ickes, and which is cited in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD could not, no matter what its dicta may have been—and there are dicta in it—have been decisive of the question of the ownership of lands or waters along the seacoast, because it related to inland water in Cook County, Ill., which, as nearly everyone will recall, is the county in which Chicago is located, which water was not even connected with Lake Michigan.

That was the case on which Mr. Ickes based his statement. He further stated in the letter set forth at page 9430 of the RECORD:

The foregoing is a statement of the settled law, and therefore no rights can be granted to you—either under the Leasing Act of February 25, 1920 (41 Stat. 437), or under any other public-land law to the bed of the Pacific Ocean either within or without the 3-mile limit. Title to the soil under the ocean within the 3-mile limit is in the State of California, and the land may not be appropriated except by authority of the State. A permit would be necessary to be obtained from the War Department as a prerequisite to the maintenance of structures in navigable waters of the United States, but such a permit would not confer any rights to the ocean bed. I find no authority of law under which any right can be granted to you to establish your proposed structures in the ocean outside the 3-mile limit of the jurisdiction of the State of California, nor am I advised that any other branch of the Federal Government has such authority.

To Mr. Proctor—

That letter was signed—and I assume delivered or caused to be delivered—by Mr. Ickes under date of December 22, 1933, that being the date of the actual execution of the letter.

That was the opinion of Mr. Ickes back in 1933. He based it upon the decision in the case of Hardin v. Jordan (140 U. S. 371). As I have indicated, that case could not have decided what the law is with respect to coastal properties along the seacoast, because it related to inland waters in Cook County, Ill.

Mr. Ickes, like most Senators—I hope all of us—discovered in time that humanity is fallable, and that he had erred in his conclusion, or, to put it perhaps more accurately, that there was a substantial doubt as to the correctness of the ruling which he had made. So a day or so ago the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] quoted this from the testimony of Mr. Ickes on February 5, 1946:

Until 1937 these applications were denied—

I take it he was referring to applications similar to those made by Mr. Proctor dealing with rights out in the ocean.

Until 1937 these applications were denied by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and in those cases where appeals were taken to the Department his decisions were affirmed. But applicants and their lawyers continued to insist that the United States does own the land and the oil, and that the Department does have the power to grant them oil and gas leases. So we began to have doubts. Consequently since 1937 action on all those applications, of which there are about 200, has been suspended pending a judicial determination.

So, I say, Mr. President, that although the Committee on the Judiciary lays down categorically the proposition that 54 United States Supreme Court decisions support the resolution, and lays down categorically the proposition that the same rule that applies to navigable waters within a State applies to lands underlying the bordering oceans within the 3-mile limit, nevertheless, the Secretary of the Interior of the United States at least determined that there was such grave doubt as to the proposition and as to the correctness of his previous ruling that in the case of about 200 applications he subsequently declined to issue permits. I believe the very fact that Mr. Ickes had held to one opinion in 1933 and thereafter changed his ruling is significant, because every motive of the pride of opinion would have led him to sustain his own previous ruling, and would have caused him to grant the permits rather than to overturn an official ruling which had been issued under his own hand on December 22, 1933. But Mr. Ickes came to the contrary conclusion. I shall read somewhat more in detail than is set forth in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of July 19 from what Mr. Ickes had to say on this subject. I shall omit the portions set out in the RECORD, which I have read.

I invite the attention of the Senate to this language, after that which says that applicants and their lawyers continued to insist that the United States does own the land and the oil. Mr. Ickes said this:

So we began to have doubts. At the same time Congress had before it proposed legislation which would in one way or another have resulted in judicial proceedings to decide the issue. Consequently, since 1937 action on all these applications, of which there are about 200, has been suspended pending a judicial determination. It is true that I have on occasions considered the issuance of a single oil lease on submerged coastal lands as a possible way of precipitating a test suit to settle the issue, but the pending Government suit has made any such device unnecessary.

I should like to have this language noted with care:

So as soon as I realized that there were substantial doubts as to the validity of the States' claim to submerged coastal lands below low-water mark, I stopped all action in the Department which was based on the assumption that the States owned these submerged lands, and began to press for a judicial solution of the debated issue of law. This I most readily concede was a change from the earlier action of myself and of the Department.

I digress to note the fact that he stated that he realized that there were substantial doubts. In the earlier portion of his testimony he had referred to applicants and their lawyers continuing to insist that the United States does own the land. He mentioned the fact that "We began to have doubts." Then he made the further, stronger statement:

As soon as I realized that there were substantial doubts as to the validity of the States' claim to submerged coastal lands below low-water mark, I stopped all action in the Department which was based on the assumption that the States owned the submerged lands and began to press for a judicial solution of the debated issue of law.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUFFMAN in the chair). Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from West Virginia?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. REVERCOMB. I should like to ask the able Senator from Missouri if Mr. Ickes stated what led him to change his view, or what raised these doubts in his mind as to the rights of the States. Is that stated?

Mr. DONNELL. I do not find it. I shall read rather extensively, however, and I may come to some such statement.

Mr. REVERCOMB. This is the point I make: The very fact that doubt has been raised makes necessary a definite declaration of policy by the Congress. I submit that thought to the Senator.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I do not agree with the Senator in that statement. To my mind the question as to who is the owner of this property is one of law. To my mind that is a judicial question to be settled by the Supreme Court of the United States. If the United States has any rights the Congress of the United States should not give them away. If it does not have such rights, Congress should not unnecessarily quitclaim rights which the United States does not possess.

Mr. REVERCOMB. The distinguished Senator is an able lawyer. He knows that each case which comes before the Supreme Court must stand on its own basis, and on the single set of facts presented in the given case. When the Court makes its decision in a particular case it decides a principle only so far as that case covers a similar set of circumstances, whereas the Congress in declaring the policy of the Government upon this subject declares it as to all cases, and establishes a basic policy.

It seems to me that this whole question, with respect to which doubt has been raised and expressed by the former Secretary of the Interior, presents a very sound reason why the Congress should act and put the whole subject at rest forever, and not have cases continuing to go to the Supreme Court. We have been told that 54 of them have gone there already. The decision in one case did not settle the other 53; and the decision in the pending case will not settle cases in the future.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. Is it not likewise true that if we enact the proposed law we shall also find that the question is not settled? Under the new statute cases will be brought before the Supreme Court.

Mr. DONNELL. I think that observation is exactly correct.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield, but I should like to respond to the Senator from West Virginia before he puts another query.

Mr. REVERCOMB. I am not putting another query. I wish to comment on the statement of the Senator from Michigan. If there were a statute, at long last the Supreme Court would have a basic principle upon which to make its decisions.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I do not agree with that statement. I do not think that that would be a basis for the Supreme Court to make a decision upon. It would be a declaration of law. It is true that the Supreme Court would be called upon to determine the law, but the policy would have been determined by the Congress, under the procedure suggested by the distinguished Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at this point?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. MORSE. Does the Senator agree with me that, as of now, legal rights to this property do exist either in the States or in the Federal Government?

Mr. DONNELL. I agree.

Mr. MORSE. And does the Senator also agree that, as of now, if I understand correctly the cases the Senator from Missouri has been citing, that particular legal determination has not in fact ever been made by the Supreme Court of the United States?

Mr. DONNELL. I say to the distinguished Senator from Oregon that I cannot categorically say it has not, because I have not examined every decision of the Supreme Court; but I undertake to say that, in my opinion, every case cited in the report of the Judiciary Committee in support of its proposition with respect to coastal waters is subject to distinction, and not one of them, in my judgment, decides the question as to the ownership of coastal lands.

Mr. MORSE. Does the Senator from Missouri also agree that as we as a Senate come tc pass upon the question of what the public policy should be as to the relationship between the Federal Government and the State governments over title to these lands, we do not have any carefully reasoned decision of the Supreme Court of the United States on the legal rights of the respective jurisdictions to guide us in considering and determining that question of public policy?

Mr. DONNELL. That is my opinion, and to the best of my knowledge and belief the Senator's statement is correct.

Mr. MORSE. Does the Senator also agree that conceivably it is to be expected that if we had such a decision before us, we would be in a better position to pass valid judgment on the question of what should be the public policy in the matter?

Mr. DONNELL. I think the Senator is correct.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. MURDOCK. If I correctly recall the Senator's answer to the question of the Senator from Oregon, it was that there is absolutely no question in the mind of the Senator from Missouri that the title to the oils under the tidelands is vested in the United States Government or in the State governments.

Mr. DONNELL. That is correct—unless it has been conveyed by one or the other of them to some grantee.

Mr. MURDOCK. But I was assuming that that has not occurred.

Mr. DONNELL. That is correct.

Mr. MURDOCK. I know that when the question first came up, so far as I was concerned, it was when I was a member of the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives. At that time I think the position was taken by a Government attorney that the title to the oil was not vested in either the United States Government or the State governments, and that, therefore, if the United States Government by statute asserted ownership to the oil, that in the opinion of that attorney, would have great weight before any court in regard to the question of the ownership of the oil.

Mr. DONNELL. I may add in that connection that I was not familiar with that opinion of an employee of the United States Government.

Mr. MURDOCK. I was reading it yesterday in some of the old hearings, and I wanted to have the Senator bear that contention in mind in his discussion.

Mr. DONNELL. That is a very interesting contention, and I am glad to have it before me.

Mr. President, I may say that if the title is not vested in either the Government of the United States or the government of a State, but is hanging in nubilous, so to speak, certainly the Government by quit claim would release whatever title might ultimately be determined to belong to it.

Mr. MURDOCK. Yes. I do not wish the Senator to gain the impression that I agree with the theory I have mentioned, but I merely wished to point out that it was discussed before the House committee.

Mr. DONNELL. I appreciate the Senator's position, and I thank him for the information.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. MORSE. Do I correctly understand that it is the opinion of the Senator from Missouri that inasmuch as this matter involves a great many legal questions and also is inherently a matter of public policy, the Senate of the United States should first have a decision of the United States Supreme Court as to the pure questions of legal rights and liabilities which are involved with respect to the tidelands, after which the Senate will be in just as good a position as it is now to pass judgment on whether it wishes to change by statute the Federal-State relationship over those lands?

Mr. DONNELL. Precisely.

Mr. President, referring again to the question asked by the distinguished Senator from West Virginia (Mr. Revercomb), let me point out that he referred to the 54 decisions which, as it would appear from the comments which previously have been made in this body, prior to this afternoon, have set this question at rest. Again I wish to say that, to my mind, none of the 54 decisions which I have seen do set this question at rest. They do not pertain to this question. They may contain dicta, but of the ones which are specifically cited in the committee report, which are the only ones I have taken time, thus far, to read—and I refer to the cases mentioned on page 8 of the report and also the case of Martin against Waddell, mentioned on page 3—none of them relates to the ownership of coast land, as I see it.

The Senator suggested that each case will come up upon its own set of facts. I realize that is true. It is true in the event of any litigation. We might very well say that in connection with any matter which might ultimately result in a declaration of policy, the Congress of the United States should first express its policy, before the Supreme Court of the United States should indicate in whom reside the respective rights which are involved in such policy. To my mind, the Senator from Oregon and the Senator from Michigan have clearly indicated what, to my point of view, is the sounder view, namely—and I think I am correctly quoting the Senator from Michigan, and I am quite sure I am correctly quoting the Senator from Oregon—that we should have the benefit of the judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States in respect to the rights of the parties.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I should like to make one other comment in connection with the question of the Senator from West Virginia, and then I shall yield to the Senator from Michigan.

I wish to say that I believe that a case can be presented to the Supreme Court of the United States which will enable that body to lay down the law and will enable us to read it, in the same way that the members of the Judiciary Committee in the report claim that the 54 decisions they mention have established the law. I undertake to say that the Supreme Court can lay down a decision which will be understandable and will declare the law, and that everyone in the United States will understand it from beginning to end as declaring the law; and I see no indication that the Supreme Court has attempted to avoid making a decision of a case along that line, or along any other line, for that matter, which would at least be intelligible and would answer the questions which may be presented.

I think I should add that with respect to the Supreme Court decisions, criticisms have been made of the Supreme Court. Perhaps some of them have been just, because the Supreme Court of the United States, like the Senate of the United States, is composed of human beings, and it may be that some of the decisions of the Court have been unsound. I say that the Supreme Court itself has frankly and honestly recognized the fact that it has made errors, in that without manifesting any pride of opinion, it has overruled some previous decisions, and has given us its best opinion.

While this is a digression from the points strictly at issue, I wish to stand here today and announce my confidence in the Supreme Court of the United States. Let me say that, if I am not mistaken, the distinguished Senator from Oregon enunciated—not on the floor of the Senate, but elsewhere—something of confidence in the Supreme Court.

I wish to say that regardless of the frictions or difficulties which may have developed, after all the people of the United States should and can and do look to the Supreme Court as the final arbiter of the questions which under the Constitution are eligible to be submitted to it. I express the hope that there may be no consideration in the Senate of the United States which undertakes in any way to lower the estimation of the Supreme Court of the United States in the minds of the people of the Nation. I rejoice that we have a Supreme Court of the United States. I rejoice in its history. I rejoice at the list of great men who have served upon it. I think great men will serve on it in the future, and I think great men are now serving on it, among them being a former distinguished Member of this body, former Senator Burton of Ohio, who went to the Court just a few months ago.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. MORSE. I commend the Senator from Missouri for his statement in regard to the United States Supreme Court, because I think that in the troubled days which lie ahead, the great check and balancer of this Government will be the Supreme Court of the United States.

Along the line of the question which I was pursuing a few moments ago, let me inquire whether it is the position of the Senator from Missouri that if, as a matter of law, it should be determined that title to these properties vests in the Federal Government, does that mean that they belong to all the people of the United States?

Mr. DONNELL. That is correct.

Mr. MORSE. And if they belong to all the people of the United States, is it the position of the Senator from Missouri that those people are entitled to have a judicial determination made of the question, before the Senate of the United States acts upon it?

Mr. DONNELL. I think the Senator is precisely correct.

Mr. MORSE. Does the Senator from Missouri believe that the strong movement for a determination of this question legislatively prior to a determination of the legal rights by the Supreme Court of the United States grows out of a motivation of doubt on the part of many State officials that perhaps, after all, these properties do not belong to the States, and therefore they would like to have the matter settled legislatively before the Supreme Court has an opportunity to pass judgment upon legal rights belonging to all the people of the country?

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, in answer to the question propounded by the Senator from Oregon, let me state that I am unable to express myself as to the motivation which has induced the filing and presentation of the pending joint resolution. I do not know the motives behind it. But I repeat that in my opinion the Senator from Oregon and the Senator from Michigan have hit the nail on the head when they have pointed out that before the Congress of the United States expresses a declaration of policy with respect to these lands, it should know what the respective legal rights of the parties are.

As the situation is now, Mr. President, if we pass this joint resolution, there will not be a Member of the Senate who will be able to say, in view of the decisions of the Supreme Court, whether we have given away something or whether we have given away nothing. Why should we not first ascertain whether we own the property before we determine whether it is our right to give it away?

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I will yield in a moment.

In addition to the question of a possible ownership, to which I referred, namely, ownership by the Federal Government or by the State government, we have the very interesting point which was suggested by the distinguished Senator from Utah [Mr. MURDOCK] that perhaps the ownership lies nowhere. Mr. President, I submit that before the Congress undertakes to express itself by irrevocable policy, or if not revocable, at least one which would confer private rights which could not be divested without the passage of further legislation, and probably not without payment to those who had acted on the legislation already passed, it should know in whom ownership lies. It would be, to my mind, the height of unwisdom for Congress to express a policy concerning these valuable rights until it has learned from the Supreme Court of the United States in whom the ownership of the property is vested.

I now yield to the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, a moment ago the able Senator from Oregon suggested that the motive behind this issue might be the doubt in the minds of State officials that the property belongs to the States. I do not know the motive behind this issue, but I might suggest that the real reason for bringing forth the pending joint resolution is the just apprehension that the Federal court may, in rendering the decision in the case now before it, further the program of constantly encroaching on the powers and, in this instance, the properties of the States.

But, Mr. President, that is not the real point which I wish to make in this debate.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REVERCOMB. With the permission of the Senator from Missouri, I will yield in a minute.

A few minutes ago the able Senator from Missouri said that the opinions which he had read in the 54 cases which had been referred to did not settle the question. No, Mr. President, those opinions did not settle the question. I am gravely in doubt that the case now pending before the Supreme Court will settle the question.

Mr. DONNELL. May I ask the Senator from West Virginia if the issues in any one of those cases involved the question which is here involved?

Mr. REVERCOMB. That is the point I wish to make. So long as we allow this question to go unsettled by not adopting a definite declaration of basic policy, the question will arise continually. The question before us now involves the coastal lands of the State of California. Allow me to read only the title of the joint resolution in order to give a picture of what the joint resolution covers. The joint resolution does not involve only the coastal lands of the State of California. Its title reads:

> To quiet the titles of the respective States, and others, to lands beneath tidewaters and lands beneath navigable waters within the boundaries of such States and to prevent further clouding of such titles.

Any decision which may be made in the pending case with respect to the tidal lands of California will not put at rest the question of the ownership of the lands beneath the navigable streams of the State of Missouri or of any other inland State. Therefore, I assert that the statement made during the course of the able Senator's argument that the 54 decisions and the one now pending have not settled this question, and will not settle it, is the very basic reason for passing the joint resolution.

The case now pending involves the California tidelands and will not settle the question of the ownership of the waters beneath the Missouri River, or the lands beneath the waters of the rivers in my State. For that reason, among others, the pending joint resolution, which covers more than the question pertaining to the tidelands of California, should be passed so that the question may forever be put at rest.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, does the Senator know of any one of the 54 decisions, which have been referred to in the report of the committee, which presented to the court for decision the question as to the ownership of lands along the seacoast?

Mr. REVERCOMB. No; I do not know of any one of the cases having similar facts. That is the very point I am trying to make.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, if the Senator does not know of any one of the 54 cases involving a set of facts embracing questions with reference to coastal lands, I submit that there have been so far no decisions of the Supreme Court on that particular question. So the argument that 54 decisions have already been made on the question falls to the ground. I have not read all the decisions, but I have examined some of them sufficiently to believe that they do not settle the question with reference to coastal waters. I have examined the decisions sufficiently to satisfy my own mind that they do not decide that question. The case involving Cook County, Ill., certainly does not decide the question as to the ownership of land 3 miles out from the seacoast of La Jolla, Calif.

Mr. REVERCOMB. I may say to the Senator that when I said the facts in any one of the 54 cases did not fit the facts of this particular case, I meant to say that I did not recall that they did. I did not say that they did not. Does the Senator believe that if the pending case from California with regard to coastal tidelands is decided one way or the other, it will put at rest the question concerning the ownership of the lands beneath navigable waters within a State?

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, in the first place, I have not seen the pleadings in that particular case. In the second place, doubtless the issues would be different because they would pertain to coastal lands. In the third place, I assume that the law is well settled, as stated in 45 Corpus Juris, that within its territorial limits the State-owned land, includes the seashore, and so forth.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. MORSE. I make two comments in reply to the Senator from West Virginia. In the first place, I do not believe that I fully understood the implications of his remarks concerning the fear which he stated State officials may be entertaining with reference to further encroachments upon the rights of the States if this matter goes to a judicial determination by the Supreme Court, instead of being settled by legislative processes in the halls of Congress. Am I to infer that what the Senator from West Virginia means is that the Supreme Court of the United States will not settle the issue on the basis of the law, but will settle it on the basis of some other factor?

Mr. REVERCOMB. No, of course not. I did not mean, and neither do I think that what I said would carry such an implication. I said that the States are interested in this matter because they see an effort on the part of the executive side of the Government—and this effort was instituted through the executive side of the Government and not the Supreme Court—to reach out into the powers of the State, as it has done in the past several years, and seek to control matters which have been within the province of the State governments. I do not know what their motive is, but I say that that could well be their motive. I have not intimated or said anything from which any conclusion could be drawn that the Supreme Court, once having this case before it would not apply the law.

Mr. MORSE. But the fact is that whenever the issue is brought before the United States Supreme Court there will be no justification for fear such as that to which the Senator has referred because, presumably, the Court will decide the case on the basis of the established law.

Mr. REVERCOMB. That is true. As I say, the States are interested. I think they should be considerably interested, and particularly those States in which, as the Senator from Missouri has said, the law in the past has settled the question as to the ownership of land under navigable streams. When the States see an issue of this kind they have a right to come to Congress and say, "Put the question at rest by the adoption of a proper statute."

Mr. MORSE. They would have the right to do that, but I think that if their fear is that the situation may involve greater Federal jurisdiction over matters which they would like to have within the State jurisdiction, it arises out of the fact that they are not sure, as a matter of law, that they now have title to the property in dispute.

Mr. REVERCOMB. They want to be relieved of any possibility arising in the future of the Federal Government, through its executive department, disturbing the rights which they believe to be theirs.

Mr. MORSE. But, they are protected by the Supreme Court if, in fact, the Federal Government seeks to encroach upon the rights which they are entitled to have protected.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Why should the Federal Government step in and say, "We claim this or that"? Why should any doubt be left open with respect to that?

Mr. MORSE. I understand that question is pretty well settled; but the question as to the ownership of tidelands is not well settled. That leads me to my second comment on the Senator's remarks. Although I have not seen the pleadings, the case to which the Senator has referred has been instituted for the specific purpose of securing a legal determination of who does have title to tidelands. It seems to me that is predominantly a legal question.

Mr. REVERCOMB. My point is that as to the question of tidelands in California, the joint resolution covers not only the question of tidelands, but lands under navigable streams.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado in the chair). Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. DONNELL. I shall yield, but before doing so, let me say that I want it distinctly understood that I did not mean in the slightest to imply that the Senator from West Virginia claimed to have read the 54 decisions, any more than I claim to have read them. I have taken the decisions, which, as I understand from the report, are therein cited, as applicable to the particular matter of coastal waters, and have examined them sufficiently to determine whether or not in my opinion the decisions are in point on the question. I want it perfectly clear that I was not making any statement to the effect that the Senator had done something he had not done.

Mr. REVERCOMB. In other words, that the Senator was claiming there was something in those decisions which would absolutely exclude them from the consideration of this subject. I cannot say that.

Mr. DONNELL. I understand that. I now yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. FERGUSON. I apologize for interrupting the able Senator from Missouri, but I find great difficulty in keeping out of legal arguments.

Mr. DONNELL. I am sure the Senator's participation is always welcome, and it adds valuable contribution to the discussion.

Mr. FERGUSON. I thank the Senator. I should like to comment at this particular moment on the colloquy between the able Senator from West Virginia and the able Senator from Oregon.

It appears to me that the arguments ran somewhat like this, that the Supreme Court is going to decide one issue over one particular area of tidewater land off the coast of California which includes oil deposits, and that as that would not settle the question of the entire border of the United States, the Senate should deed all the oil it has in submerged coastal lands, if it has any, to the State of California.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator from Missouri yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I am glad to yield.

Mr. REVERCOMB. I am not interested in oil, and I am not interested in California tideland oil in the least. I am principally interested in seeing saved to the States the ownership of the bottom of the navigable streams; and the Senator is leading up to it. Very well. I reiterate, the decision as to the ownership of the land in California, and whatever may be in it, is not a case which would decide the ownership of lands under navigable streams of this country.

Mr. FERGUSON. To continue the thought I had in mind, it was that the mere fact that that case would not settle the ownership of all oil, is no reason why the Senate, without all the facts and all the law, should determine that the Government shall deed that oil.

It would be analogous to Congress saying if litigation involving 1 acre of federally owned land were pending, "We will stop this litigation. We will deed all the federally owned land to the States, merely because there is litigation over 1 acre of land."

In my own time I should like to discuss what this case is before the Supreme Court, but it appears to me that there is one question we have to determine. We have to settle this question: If the United States of America, the Federal Government, owns the oil under the particular tidewater lands in question, should we now, as a matter of public policy, realizing defense necessities, realizing the age in which we are living, without knowing more about it, deed all that oil, all those resources, to the various States, and say we have no interest in them?

I wish to say that the able Senator from Missouri quoted me correctly on the proposition that the Supreme Court, which has the balance of power between the respective branches, the executive and the legislative, should look into this question, and we should trust the Supreme Court—and I do—to settle the legal problems, to determine at the next fall term in October who owns this oil, and then, if Congress wants to deed the oil, it will be a different matter from deeding it today. I believe that if Senators who are now on the floor, and many who are not here present at the moment, deed this oil today, they will not know whether they are deeding oil which belongs to the Government of the United States or are merely allowing it to remain in the States.

Mr. HUFFMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Missouri yield?

Mr. DONNELL. In a moment. I trust the Senator from Michigan will have no objection to my referring to a conversation between him and myself, but not during the debate. The Senator from Michigan has been most helpful to me in clarifying my thought along this line. He himself—and I think I quote him correctly—made a suggestion to this general effect, first, that there is at least doubt as to whether Senators would desire to convey away rights if the Federal Government owned them. On the other hand, if the Federal Government does not own them, there is no need of conveying them away. I think that is a correct statement, is it not?

Mr. FERGUSON. That is a correct statement.

Mr. DONNELL. I appreciate very much the succinct, clear statement the Senator has given to me, and which I have thus used, but I trust with appropriate recognition of him.

I now yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. HUFFMAN. Mr. President, I am glad to associate myself with the argument which has been presented by the able Senator from Michigan in this regard. I wish further to state to my able colleague from West Virginia that if all that were involved in the proposed measure were the rights in the lands underneath the navigable streams and lakes of the various States, about which he has so ably presented his views, there would be no difficulty in my supporting the joint resolution. My difficulty lies in the very field in which the Senator from Michigan expresses his doubt, that is, as to the minerals, the oil in particular, underneath the tidewater lands. If that were eliminated from the joint resolution, I would have no difficulty in supporting it.

Mr. DONNELL. I may say, Mr. President, that the report says, among other things:

> The testimony before the committee indicates that there are petroleum deposits in lands under navigable waters in quite a number of States; these include Texas, Louisiana, California, Mississippi, Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, and others.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator from Missouri yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. REVERCOMB. On the point that is made about the ownership of oil, as I have said, I am not interested in oils or other minerals. That is not the question we are here facing. This proposal does not involve holding oil or anything else for governmental use. If the property belonging to the United States, permits to individuals to drill would be granted right here, in the Federal Government, under the Department of the Interior, just as I take it they are granted under the State of California today. I do not know anything about who grants them there. But leases are made. The oil is not kept for defensive purposes. It is a question of a tussle between the Federal Government and the State government in California as to which one has the right to make leases to individuals or companies to drill. That is all there is to it.

As for the navigable streams, let us take my own State, for example. Since the great Northwest Territory agreements, prior to the creation of the Federal Government, the ownership of those streams has been in the States, and whatever minerals were there belonged to the States. We do not want to see a program of the National Government go into effect, first, upon the tidelands and next on the navigable streams, to take over those properties from the States. That is the question. That is the whole gravamen of this issue as I see it.

Mr. DONNELL. I am pleased to have the comment of the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. HUFFMAN. Mr. President, may I comment on that remark?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. HUFFMAN. It is my understanding that the law is pretty well settled as to the rights beneath navigable streams and lakes of the inland States, and I see no reason why it is necessary to call upon the Federal Government to issue a quit claim deed.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, will the Senator from Missouri yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield to the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Is it the Senator's understanding that the statement just made by the Senator from West Virginia is correct? Is it the Senator's understanding that the Federal Government has no interest in these oil deposits for the purpose of national defense?

Mr. DONNELL. Is the Senator talking about oil deposits in tidelands, in the ocean?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. DONNELL. I do not know whether the Senator from Arkansas was present during the earlier part of the discussion, but the question which was discussed in the earlier portion of the debate was the question whether or not the States owned the lands out in the ocean to any considerable distance, 3 miles, as I understand.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I think the Senator misunderstood me. If I understood the Senator from West Virginia, the implication of his remarks is that the Federal Government has no interest in reserves of petroleum for national defense, that that is not at all involved here.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator from Missouri yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. REVERCOMB. We have heard the statement of Secretary of the Interior Ickes, who spoke of refusing to issue permits—what was the number, some 200?

Mr. DONNELL. About 200.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Because he did not think that the Federal Government owned the land, he was not going to issue permits for the drilling of the lands for oil. Who would those permits have been issued to had he issued them? To individuals or to companies to drill for and to produce oil. I cannot say that they are not interested in the oil for defense purposes. The Secretary certainly can say "I set aside this part of the land and will not issue any permits on it." But the very fact that Secretary Ickes stated that during the course of years he had turned down 200 permits—and I think they were permits to drill; were they not?

Mr. DONNELL. He calls them applications.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Yes; applications to drill—is indication enough to me to disclose that permits will be issued to individuals to drill.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I understood the Senator to say that oil was not at all involved in this matter.

Mr. REVERCOMB. I did not mean to say that oil was not involved. The principal tussle here seems to be who is going to issue the permits to drill—the State or the Federal Government. The Federal Government itself could drill for oil on these lands if it wanted to. But the Secretary would not have talked about refusing to issue 200 permits to drill on the land if that was the Department's sole policy.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I do not think it is all one way or the other in this respect, so far as public lands are concerned. In some of our lands in the Southwest—lands not involving water—certain areas have been set aside for what are called naval reserves, such as Elk Hills. Other areas have been opened for prospecting and for development. So, it seems to me, in exactly the same way, in some of the oil lands further reserves may be set aside for the Federal Government, such as naval reserves, and in other places the Government has a right to lease the land for prospecting or development. My statement was directed to what I thought was the implication of the Senator's remarks—that this has nothing to do with defense.

Mr. REVERCOMB. If the Federal Government owned the land, it could do with it anything it wanted to do. It could drill on it itself, it could leave the oil in the ground, or it could issue permits to drill. But the evidence of the Secretary of the Interior that he turned down the permits that were applied for, not because he wanted to keep the oil for the Government, but because he did not think the Government owned the oil, certainly is sufficient implication for me that he would let somebody else drill for oil.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. One further point: Could the Senator say about when the present pending case may be decided? Is it anticipated it will be decided this fall?

Mr. DONNELL. I am unable to answer that question. I understood the Senator from Michigan was going to discuss the case which is now in the Supreme Court. Perhaps he has some information as to the state of the pleadings.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. I am informed that the case is ready for argument in the October term. That will be the first term. That means that the Supreme Court could decide it any time after argument. There is always the question of getting a continuance, amending the pleadings, and so forth, but I am informed that it is ready for argument.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. DONNELL. Yes.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. It seems rather curious that we should be in such a hurry to anticipate the decision in that case. I think the Senator's argument in that respect has been very persuasive.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I think I should say in response to the question from the distinguished Senator from Arkansas that the Committee on the Judiciary evidently feared a very extended period of time yet to elapse before a decision. I think it is only fair to state that that is what is in the report. I quote from page 4 of the report:

> An examination of 26 cases in which the Supreme Court of the United States has taken original jurisdiction reveals that it took that Court an average of over 9 years to decide those cases.

Mr. President, I do not know what the 26 cases are. The report does not indicate whether they are cases on this subject matter. I may say—this is perhaps without due consideration—that to my mind it is inconceivable that on a question of this consequence the Supreme Court of the United States would hold this case, now before it ready for argument, 9 years within its breast before deciding it. I should say that if we give the Supreme Court the presumption of the ordinary good judgment that any Member of the Senate has, we must disregard the fear of 9 years elapsing before there should be a decision.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. Does the able Senator know of any real need for haste? This situation has, in effect, been in existence since the birth of the Nation. We now find, when for the first time it is brought up in the Supreme Court for decision, a desire for great haste in securing action by the legislative body prior to the judicial decision. I have not been able to find any real reason for such haste.

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Senator from Michigan for his statement. I think I should quote also from the report another sentence in which I have the greatest difficulty in agreeing even in substance or even remotely, and that is this:

> It is not reasonable to assume that the Supreme Court will decide this, one of the most complicated of cases of original jurisdiction, within its average period of 9 years.

Mr. President, I cannot conceive that the Supreme Court of the United States is going to spend 9 years on it. But may I say that if this case is one which is so complicated as to take nine solid years of thought, certainly we ought not to be called upon to say here that the whole matter has been set at rest and decided, and that the law is decided by 54 decisions.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Just a word relative to the point raised by my distinguished colleague from Michigan, with whom I very seldom disagree on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. DONNELL. The Senator is not intending to indicate that he frequently disagrees with the Senator from Michigan off the floor, I take it?

Mr. KNOWLAND. We very seldom disagree either on or off the floor. I stand corrected. But I wish to say to the distinguished Senator from Michigan that it was not until Mr. Ickes very recently put forth the claim of sovereignty for the Federal Government that the Federal Government has claimed sovereignty over land belonging to the State of California. So far as rushing in with the joint resolution is concerned, the measure was introduced prior to any dispute being tried in the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. CORDON. I hope the distinguished Senator from Missouri, before he closes his argument, will give the Senate the benefit of his conclusion as to the meaning of the language used by the United States Supreme Court—and I call attention to the fact that it is the court of last resort—in the case of Shively v. Bowlby (decided in 1893 (152 U. S. 1, p. 29)), in which the Court said:

> Although the title to the soil under the tidewaters of the bay was acquired by the United States by cession from Mexico, equally with the title to the upland they held it only in trust for the future State. Upon the admission of California into the Union upon equal footing with the original States, absolute property in, and dominion and sovereignty over, all soils under the tidewaters within her limits passed to the State——

Mr. DONNELL. If I may interrupt the Senator, he will note, of course, the words "within her limits."

Mr. CORDON. I shall comment on that, if the Senator will permit me to finish the quotation. I continue to read:

> with the consequent right to dispose of the title to any part of said soils in such manner as she might deem proper, subject only to the paramount right of navigation over the waters, so far as such navigation might be required by the necessities of commerce with foreign nations or among the several States, the regulation of which was vested in the General Government.

I call attention to the fact that that case arose in connection with a contest as to title to property in San Francisco Bay, but, of course, as is known, the tide ebbs and flows in San Francisco Bay just as it does outside the bay, and I do not know who could tell exactly where the bay ends and where the ocean begins. In any event the language used was general.

Referring to the particular matter, which I take it is the major thing of interest to the Senator from Missouri, of where lies the line that bounds territorial limits, in the State of California that would appear to me to be settled by the fact that at the admission of the State it was set at three English miles seaward. If that be the case—and I believe I am correct in saying that the language was three English miles seaward, continuing up the coast three English miles seaward—if that be the line set by the Congress when it admitted the State of California into the Union. I should be interested in the comments of the Senator with reference to the applicability of the language I have read to the proposition which is here under consideration.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, the particular case to which the Senator refers I find is mentioned in the course of the appendix to the report. It is not mentioned in the list of cases that purport to bear upon the subject of coastal waters. I have not read the case to which the Senator refers. I note, however, that he mentioned that it applies to San Francisco Bay, and I pointed out at the outset of the argument that there may very well be a difference in rules with respect to lands underlying the adjacent seacoast outside the boundaries of the State, and the line which is embraced in bays or rivers such as, for example, in New Jersey, Raritan River and Bay which was referred to in connection with the Waddell case earlier this afternoon. I have not read the case referred to by the Senator from Oregon. I shall be glad to study it. But I would not undertake to pass an opinion upon a statement which may be dictum, or may be in point. Certainly, according to what the Senator has thus far read, it does not pertain to land alongside the seacoast adjacent to the State of California or any other State, but refers to the Bay of San Francisco, as I understand.

Mr. CORDON. The Senator speaks of coastal waters adjacent to the State of California. Does he mean coastal waters outside the established boundary of the State?

Mr. DONNELL. No; I am speaking of lands outside the land of the State, as it is currently considered according to common acceptation. I mean to say the land under the water adjacent to the State itself. That is what I refer to as land under coastal waters.

Mr. CORDON. Does the Senator give any meaning to the line of boundary which was placed around the State of California by the Congress? Did that mean anything?

Mr. DONNELL. I think so. Earlier I referred to that fact in response to a question from the Senator from Oregon, and stated that in my judgment, if the enabling act under which the State of California was admitted to the Union declared that the 3 miles of land under water in the ocean outside the State are part of the State, to my mind it was a part of the State. But in that connection let me say that the very fact that the Federal Government undertook to put into the act of Congress a provision that the land outside the boundary should belong to the State indicated that the Federal Government itself in the first instance, at any rate, had some rights in that land outside the boundary of the State.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. SMITH. To clear up that point, on what theory would the Federal Government have title to such land?

Mr. DONNELL. I think the theory is that the Federal Government is a sovereign, bounded by oceans, and that as a sovereign—just as in the Federal case involving New Jersey from which I read—it has the right to determine what its boundaries are. I think that is the theory of it.

Mr. SMITH. If that theory is sound, would it not be true that the Thirteen Original States, which were independent sovereignties before the Constitution was adopted, would have a different status from that of the States which came in later under the Federal Constitution?

Mr. DONNELL. That sounds logical, and may be correct; yet I invite the attention of the Senator to the fact that his own State of New Jersey, which was one of the original 13 colonies, found it advisable in 1906 to enact a statute declaring that its boundaries were out in the ocean for the particular space, I think, of 3 miles.

Mr. SMITH. I am aware of that fact. It does not necessarily settle the point as to whether or not the sovereign State of New Jersey, prior to the Constitution, had whatever boundaries went with a sovereign State at that time, including the cannon ball 3-mile limit.

Mr. DONNELL. I invite the attention of the Senator to the language which I read from Corpus Juris earlier this afternoon, to this effect:

> It has been often said that the jurisdiction of a nation to punish offenses extends into the ocean to the distance of a cannon shot, which is estimated as one marine league, from low-water mark on the shore; but it is doubtful whether there is any jurisdiction to punish for offenses committed within this marine league limit if the place of the offense is not an arm of the sea—

I take it San Francisco Bay is an arm of the sea—> and within the body of the country, unless that jurisdiction is expressly conferred by statute.

That would seem to indicate that the Colonies did not ipso facto have jurisdiction out in the ocean, unless they determined it by statute, or unless the Federal Government, as in the case cited by the Senator from Oregon, has by an enabling act vested the State with ownership in the land adjacent to the coast.

Mr. SMITH. Let me ask a further question. If prior to the Constitution the sovereign State of New Jersey did not have such jurisdiction, by what possible authority could the Federal Government have acquired it? Certainly it cannot be claimed that the sovereign State of New Jersey turned that authority over to the Federal Government due to anything contained in the Constitution. There must have been some new origin of power, after the Constitution, which gave the Federal Government some different kind of sovereignty than the independent States had prior to the Constitution.

Mr. DONNELL. An interesting question has been presented by the able Senator from New Jersey, who has distinguished himself not only here, but in his career at Princeton University. The question indicates that we have before us a complex problem, one on which we should have the decision of the United States Supreme Court before we undertake to give away property rights—if the United States Government owns them—which are of tremendous value, as indicated by the State, under waters adjacent to which are petroleum deposits.

Mr. SMITH. I agree with the Senator that there may be some question as to whether the sovereign State of New Jersey had jurisdiction out to the 3-mile limit; but he has in no way answered my question as to the possible source from which the Federal Government could have obtained jurisdiction if it was not conceded to a sovereign State before that time under international usage.

Mr. DONNELL. I have given the best answer I can, namely, that the Federal Government is a sovereign. It has obviously been considered that it has the right to determine the boundaries of its own sovereignty. If the Federal Government were to send forth an explorer it might take land, determine the boundaries of the land, and assert ownership. I may say, however, that this question is one which I think would require far more study than could be adequately given here in the course of a few hours or a few days.

The question of ownership of land, the question of the rights of the Federal Government, the question of the rights of the Colonies, the question of the rights of the States, the question of the necessity for statutes, the question as to whether State statutes or Federal statutes are necessary, the question as to the operation of enabling acts and of State constitutions—all these questions indicate to my mind the great importance of having a decision by the Supreme Court of the United States on the questions involved.

Mr. SMITH. I am very glad to concede to the Senator that those are very important questions, and that they do raise certain doubts. But, because such doubts have been raised, and because in the past many States, acting on the theory that the States have this jurisdiction, have made vast investments in harbor developments, the question becomes extremely important. I have a letter from the Port of New York Authority, which embraces both New Jersey and New York, calling attention to the fact that if some action of this kind is not taken, we shall have complete confusion in the harbor of New York the day after a decision is rendered by the Supreme Court.

Mr. DONNELL. The facts presented by the Senator indicate the importance of Congress ultimately determining its policy. In cases in which States have acted upon that presumption, whether it be well-founded or ill-founded, and whether it be based upon dictum or decision, it may well be that Congress will determine that as a matter of public policy some recognition should be given to the investments which have been made. But to my mind that is entirely different from saying that the United States Government shall, without our knowing what our rights are, what our title is, and whether the title is in the States or in the Federal Government, quitclaim to the States all title which we may have in and to all these properties, without regard to the facts, and without regard to whether individuals have acted in good faith or bad faith. The question is whether we shall by this legislation forever divest ourselves of ownership.

Mr. SMITH. I agree with the fine argument which the Senator is making on this point, and I share his doubts and difficulties. But he has not yet stated how a possible case could be framed upon which the Supreme Court could decide this question as a final matter of law for the entire country. It will ultimately have to be a matter of congressional policy, which we shall have to decide sooner or later.

Mr. DONNELL. It is like the Biblical injunction to "Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's." Certainly the Supreme Court of the United States can decide the questions that shall be submitted to it. It would seem to be true that the Attorney General of the United States could frame adequate pleadings to present the important issues involved. I have sufficient confidence in the chief officer in our legal department to believe that that can be done.

Mr. SMITH. I thank the Senator.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President——

Mr. DONNELL. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. CORDON] may wish to pursue his inquiry further.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Missouri for this opportunity to make another observation with reference to this very interesting question.

I am still of the opinion that the Supreme Court of the United States has determined this question. I wish to read from what I believe to be the leading case on the subject, which happened to concern tidelands within my own State of Oregon. I refer to the case of Shively against Bowlby, which is found in One Hundred and Fifty-second United States Supreme Court Reports, page 1. I read from page 57 of the opinion, and I call attention to this particular language because this is the conclusion of the Supreme Court after a most exhaustive consideration of the principles involved and the application of those principles to numerous States——

Mr. DONNELL. May I interrupt to ask the Senator if the title to lands was involved in that case?

Mr. CORDON. The title to lands was involved in that case.

Mr. DONNELL. Where were the lands located?

Mr. CORDON. At the mouth of the Columbia River—either in or outside the mouth of the river, depending upon where that is. Again I say I do not know; nor can anyone tell where the river ceases to be a river and becomes an ocean. The same tide ebbs and flows in both.

Mr. DONNELL. It was, however, at the mouth of the river.

Mr. CORDON. Yes.

Mr. DONNELL. And not in some portion of the river extraneous from the mouth of the Columbia River.

Mr. CORDON. I do not know where the mouth stops.

Mr. DONNELL. As I understand it, this was at the mouth of the river, wherever that was.

Mr. CORDON. Near the mouth of the river, and under tidewater. The court said:

> Lands under tidewaters are incapable of cultivation or improvement in the manner of lands above high-water mark. They are of great value to the public for the purposes of commerce, navigation, and fishery. Their improvement by individuals, when permitted, is incidental or subordinate to the public use and right. Therefore the title and the control of them are vested in the sovereign for the benefit of the whole people.
>
> At common law, the title and the dominion in lands flowed by the tide were in the King for the benefit of the nation. Upon the settlement of the Colonies, like rights passed to the grantees in the royal charters, in trust for the communities to be established. Upon the American Revolution, these rights, charged with a like trust, were vested in the original States within their respective borders, subject to the rights surrendered by the Constitution to the United States.
>
> Upon the acquisition of a territory by the United States, whether by cession from one of the States, or by treaty with a foreign country, or by discovery and settlement, the same title and dominion passed to the United States, for the benefit of the whole people, and in trust for the several States to be ultimately created out of the territory.
>
> The new States admitted into the Union since the adoption of the Constitution have the same rights as the original States in the tidewaters, and in the lands under them, within their respective jurisdictions. The title and rights of riparian or littoral proprietors in the soil below high-water mark, therefore, are governed by the laws of the several States, subject to the rights granted to the United States by the Constitution.

There are two more paragraphs of like tenor appearing on page 58, but that quotation is adequate for my purpose.

Just before the Senator was kind enough to yield to me, the distinguished Senator from New Jersey raised a question with reference to littoral or riparian rights, as the case might be, of the original States. In this case the Court seems to have so completely and directly answered that proposition that I thought it might be valuable to the distinguished Senator from Missouri in his consideration of the matter to have that case brought to his attention.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I appreciate very much having the Senator call it to my attention.

I may say that the case to which he has referred is cited in the report of the committee, but is not cited with respect to lands underlying the bordering oceans within the 3-mile limit. I call the Senator's attention to the fact that the language of the report reads as follows on page 3, under the heading "Fifty-four United States Supreme Court decisions support the resolution," and following several brief paragraphs:

> This same rule applies to lands under rivers. (See Shively v. Bowlby (152 U. S. 1); United States v. Utah (283 U. S. 64).)
>
> And, likewise, it has been decided that lands underlying the bordering oceans within the 3-mile limit belong to the States within their respective boundaries (Martin v. Waddell (41 U. S. 366, 410).)

In the first place, Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Oregon has cited this case which is nowhere cited in the committee report in support of the proposition as to the applicability of the rule to coastal waters. This case is cited in the report as applying to lands under rivers.

In the second place, the distinguished Senator from Oregon frankly stated that the land involved was at the mouth of the Columbia River, and then he qualified that statement somewhat, I take it, by saying the land was near there. It may make a considerable difference whether the land is outside, in the ocean, or whether it is a few miles inside.

At any rate, the authors of the majority committee report evidently considered that the case was applicable to lands under rivers. It is equally obvious that they did not consider that the case was in support of the proposition as to the lands bordering the oceans within the 3-mile limit, because the case is not cited in support of it, and the next sentence of the report discriminates between the two, as follows:

> And, likewise, it has been decided that lands underlying the bordering oceans within the 3-mile limit belong to the States within their respective boundaries.

Mr. President, at this point I wish to refer briefly to the testimony of Mr. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior. I desire to read one paragraph on page 7 of his testimony, which I think is of importance, particularly in view of the reading of the decision from which the Senator from Oregon has quoted. Mr. Ickes said:

> The advocates of House Joint Resolution 225—
>
> Which is the measure now before us—
>
> have insisted that many decisions of the Supreme Court have laid the question at rest. This is simply not the case.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, let me inquire whom the Senator from Missouri is quoting.

Mr. DONNELL. I am quoting Mr. Harold Ickes. I realize that Mr. Ickes is not the Court, but I point out that the Secretary of the Interior gave us a very categorical statement of his view. His view may have been wrong. The distinguished Senator from Oregon may be quite right. It may well be that the Supreme Court of the United States, basing its action on the two cases cited and on other cases, may ultimately determine that the ownership of these lands is in the States. If so, we shall know where we stand.

I am not arguing this afternoon whether the ownership is in the States or is in the Federal Government. My point is that until the Supreme Court of the United States has passed upon the question under a set of facts which will make its observations more than mere dicta, we are not able to say with finality in whom the title rests or whether, as the Senator from Oregon has said, the title to oil in those lands rests in no one, or, as I expressed it, using the Latin term, whether the matter is in nubibus.

Mr. President, I now quote from Mr. Ickes' statement:

> The advocates of House Joint Resolution 225 have insisted that many decisions of the Supreme Court have laid the question at rest. This is simply not the case. These decisions have dealt with the lands under inland lakes and rivers, and with bays and harbors. No one is claiming these lands on behalf of the United States, and no one doubts that the courts have held that they are owned by the States. California and the oil companies insist that these decisions with reference to the lands beneath inland waters apply to the submerged lands off the coast; the Attorney General says that they do not. This question is the heart of the pending lawsuit, and the advocates of this resolution have not and cannot produce a single decision by the Supreme Court which has settled this question.

Mr. President, perhaps Mr. Ickes is wrong. I do not know whether he is a lawyer. He may be entirely wrong in the matter. But the fact that the Secretary of the Interior and the Attorney General of the United States, according to the Secretary of the Interior—and the Attorney General of the United States is a lawyer—have said that these decisions with reference to the lands beneath inland waters do not apply to the submerged lands off the coast, to my mind indicates very persuasively that it will be necessary to have a decision by the Supreme Court of the United States before that question can be answered.

Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Nevada referred to the change of heart or change of opinion of Mr. Ickes. I do not recall that there was the slightest intimation that the change of heart was captious or capricious; but not very much was said in the discussion the other day, as I recall, about the reason for it. At page 9430 in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for yesterday, July 19, we find the following statement by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN]:

Applicants for oil leases "and their lawyers" caused Mr. Ickes to decide that the "settled law" of 1933 had changed by 1937.

Mr. President, I have no doubt that the opinion of lawyers presented to Mr. Ickes had some weight. I have no doubt also that the opinion of the Attorney General, the lawyer for the United States of America, had some weight; and I doubt exceedingly, although I do not know the facts, whether the Secretary of the Interior was moved solely by the counsel for the contending parties who desired to obtain grants from the Federal Government.

Be that as it may, however, I think it is of importance to present to the Senate not merely the statement that—

Applicants for oil leases "and their lawyers" caused Mr. Ickes to decide that the "settled law" of 1933 had changed by 1937.

But I think it well to read at this point in the RECORD what Mr. Ickes said with reference to his own mental attitude. He said this to the Judiciary Committee:

I did not, when I assumed office a good many years ago, take an oath that I would always be right, nor even that I would never change my mind. I did take an oath to do my duty, and I viewed my duty in this matter as plain, once I realized that the ownership of submerged coastal lands had not in fact been settled by the courts. Show me a man who takes stubborn pride in the fact that his mind, once made up, is unchangeable, and I will show you a man who is not fit to be a public servant.

I should point out, however, that I have never attempted, myself, to resolve this difficult question of law, but have simply refused to renounce any claims which the United States might have to these lands. It has always seemed to me to be a legal question, not appropriate for either legislative or executive decision, but exactly the sort of question which the Federal courts were created by the Constitution to decide.

If I may digress, Mr. President, I take it that there is certainly some sound judgment in that view.

I continue reading what Mr. Ickes said:

I have, indeed, been attacked not only by the officials of California, but also by those who disagreed with California because of my insistence that we had created courts to decide questions of law. Two applicants for leases off the California coast, whose applications have been among those held in suspense pending a judicial determination of the issue, commenced proceedings in the courts to compel me to issue leases to them.

I defended those two suits, because, until the title issue was decided in an appropriate judicial proceeding, neither I nor anyone else could say whether the Federal Government or California owned the lands or the oil in them. The courts refused to interfere with my decision to suspend the applications: Dunn v. Ickes (115 F. (2d) 36, certiorari denied 311 U. S. 698), and Jordan v. Ickes (143 F. (2d) 152, certiorari denied 320 U. S. 801, 323 U. S. 759).

Mr. Ickes continued:

In 1937, the Senate Committee on Public Lands favorably reported and the Senate passed Senate Joint Resolution 208. It provided that the Attorney General by appropriate proceedings was to establish the title of the United States to the submerged lands along the coast below low-water mark and up to the 3-mile limit.

Mr. President, I call your attention to the fact that although the Senate Judiciary Committee has told us that this matter has been decided by 54 decisions, 9 years ago the Senate Committee on Public Lands favorably reported, and the Senate passed, Senate Joint Resolution 208.

Again reading from the testimony of Mr. Ickes:

It provided that the Attorney General by appropriate proceedings was to establish the title of the United States—

Not the States, Mr. President—to the submerged lands along the coast below low-water mark and up to the 3-mile limit.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. The Senator has referred to the decisions as being included in the report of the Judiciary Committee. He has not indicated whether the report was unanimous. I wish to advise him that the report was not unanimous. There were some dissenting opinions with reference to the report and to the statements which it contained.

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, Mr. Ickes proceeded to refer to the resolution by which the Senate was asked by the Judiciary Committee to quitclaim to the States all those lands on the ground that 54 decisions of the Supreme Court had set at rest the question, showing that the Federal Government had no title. Nine years ago the Senate Committee on Public Lands reported a resolution providing that the Attorney General was to establish the title to submerged lands along the coast and below the low-water mark up to the 3-mile limit, not in the States—the Judiciary Committee now tells us that, by an unbroken line of 54 decisions, the title is in the States—but in the United States.

Mr. Ickes proceeded as follows:

While the resolution was being considered by the House Judiciary Committee, the Navy Department and the Departments of Justice and Interior drafted and supported an amended version of it. This version would have authorized the President to establish naval petroleum reserves in these territorial water areas and it made similar provision for judicial proceedings to be brought by the Attorney General.

In other words, Mr. President, it is quite obvious, as I infer from this testimony, that the Committee on Public Lands, together with the Navy Department, the Department of Justice, the House Judiciary Committee, and the Department of the Interior drafted a document which would have authorized not the States, which we are told own these lands, but the President of the United States to establish naval petroleum reserves in those territorial water areas, and have judicial proceedings brought by the Attorney General.

I wish to read further from Mr. Ickes, I want it to be in the RECORD because I think it is only fair to Mr. Ickes that his position be known. But, far beyond that, Mr. President, I think that as Senators are about to vote on the matter of quitclaiming title, if any the Government has, and without knowing whether it has them, they should know whether or not this public official acted with reasonable discretion, or acted arbitrarily and captiously in refusing those applications.

Mr. Ickes proceeds as follows:

In 1938 the House Judiciary Committee by a divided vote favorably reported Senate Joint Resolution 208—

That is the resolution to establish title of the United States to the submerged lands—with certain amendments not now important. (H. Rept. No. 2378, 75th Cong., 3d sess.) The committee said:

"The Departments of the Navy, the Interior, and Justice are one in requesting that this resolution be passed, so that the courts may determine the question involved while fully protecting by their decrees all lawfully vested rights. There seems to be no good reason to deny their reasonable request that they be permitted to have the courts decide whether or not the Nation has a permanent right to take and use the oil in question. The House, however, never acted on this resolution."

In 1939 Senate Joint Resolution 92, containing substantially the same provisions recommended by the House Judiciary Committee, was introduced in the Senate. After extended hearings the Senate Public Lands Committee in 1940 reported a committee version, which in effect merely requested the Attorney General to seek a judicial determination of the rights of the United States in the submerged lands under the territorial waters.

Mr. Ickes then said:

I think that you will find its report a valuable guide to your action now. The committee said:

"The property involved in this conflict of opinion is of very great value. The controversy, in the opinion of the committee, is purely a legal one and its decision of much importance."

Mr. President, I pause in my reading to say that if the matter has already been decided by fifty-odd decisions I cannot see why any other decision would be greatly important. However, this committee said that the decision of the controversy was of much importance. I proceed with its observation.

The committee concluded as a legislative committee that it would not attempt to pass judgment on the legal question involved, and was of the opinion—

By the way, Mr. President, it should be remembered that this was the House Judiciary Committee passing upon a legal question.

I repeat:

The committee concluded as a legislative committee that it would not attempt to pass judgment on the legal question involved and was of the opinion that the matter should be referred to the Attorney General of the United States in order that he might take such action as he thought proper to protect the interests of the United States.

Not of the separate States of the United States.

Mr. Ickes continued as follows:

It is true that no action has ever been taken by both Houses of the Congress on any of these resolutions, yet the Senate and its Public Lands Committee are on record as favoring a judicial determination of this issue with respect to the submerged lands in coastal waters below low tide.

Mr. President, I invite attention to this language of Mr. Ickes:

Obviously, they were not at all certain of the law. But they did recognize that contest over the ownership of property are matters for the courts and not for Congress.

Mr. President, I shall attempt not to weary the Senate by reading much more, but I do wish to read the following language. Mr. Ickes said:

I am not here to argue the law with California or the oil companies; indeed, I could not do so with propriety while the case is pending in the Supreme Court and under the control of the Attorney General. But I do insist that the ownership of the submerged coastal lands below the low-water mark has never been settled and that it is a very difficult question. Two Attorneys General of the United States have taken the position that these submerged lands belong to the United States and not to the States.

I could read considerably more. I wish to read one further sentence from the statement of Mr. Ickes. On page 7 of the hearings, on February 5 of this year, Mr. Ickes said:

The House—

Meaning the House of Representatives—passed House Joint Resolution 225—

That is the joint resolution which is now before the Senate—

under the mistaken belief that the law was settled beyond any doubt. It also acted after a series of misrepresentations as to what the Federal Government claimed and as to what I proposed to do.

And so forth.

(At this point Mr. DONNELL yielded to Mr. BARKLEY, who asked and obtained unanimous consent that the Senate meet on Monday at 11 o'clock a. m. and that a final vote on the pending joint resolution, H. J. Res. 225, be taken at 3 o'clock on that day; all of which appears at the conclusion of Mr. DONNELL's speech.)

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I was in process of reading certain quotations from the testimony of Mr. Ickes. There are a few further observations made by him in the course of his testimony, to which I should like to address myself. In the first place I made the statement a little while ago that I did not know whether Mr. Ickes is a lawyer. I doubtless should know that, and I find that at page 7 of his testimony he said:

I have no doubt that most of the State attorneys general are thoroughly learned men, but when I was a practicing lawyer I signed briefs only when I had thoroughly studied the problem and never in response to telegraphic solicitation.

I call attention to this statement first, because of the fact that to my mind Mr. Ickes' membership in the legal profession entitles his statements with respect to the law to even greater weight than if he were giving those expressions as a layman who had never studied or practiced law.

In the second place, I cite this observation because of its mention of a very wholesome rule, it appears to me, of thorough study of the problem. He states that he signed briefs only when he had thoroughly studied the problem and never in response to telegraphic solicitation, and I judge from his testimony that he thinks at any rate that he had given thorough study to this problem before he reversed the decision which he had given in writing over his own signature in 1933.

Mr. President, some reference has been made here to the States. I do not see upon the floor the distinguished Senator from West Virginia [Mr. REVERCOMB], but I am confident he would have no objection to my reading this with reference to his remarks. Mr. Ickes said:

In the process of building up support based on emotion, rather than upon fact, I am thus accused of wanting to "seize" these lands and ultimately to complete the "conquest" in all of the States.

I digress, Mr. President, to say that by reading this I do not in any sense mean to imply that the Senator from West Virginia was attempting to play upon emotion or was actuated by anything other than the highest of motives, but I wanted to read this because of the observation Mr. Ickes makes with respect to the respective rights of the States and the Federal Government. He says further:

To the supporters of this resolution, my insistence for 8 years that this troublesome problem should be settled by the courts is the equivalent of a seizure vi et armis, and our doubts about the true ownership of these submerged lands amount to an assault on State's rights. I have been an advocate of legitimate States' rights for well over half a century, but it has never occurred to me that one of the inalienable rights of a State is to escape litigation when it claims land to which the National Government also asserts title.

Then he proceeds:

The committee will note that I persist in viewing this contest as one over oil, and one between the United States and California. This does not mean that I have not heard that the attorneys general of 46 States, to say nothing of the American Association of Port Authorities, and the oil company lessees of California, have joined in supporting this legislation. I have certainly heard of this vocal group, every member of which is opposed to an invasion of State's rights and to overruling settled law, although apparently none of them has troubled to investigate whether either issue is in truth involved.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. AIKEN. I notice that the Senator from Missouri refers to Mr. Ickes' statement that the oil companies support this proposed legislation. Can the Senator tell us whether representatives of the oil companies appeared before the Judiciary Committee in support of the proposed legislation, and what reason they gave for preferring to deal with the States rather than the Federal Government?

Mr. DONNELL. I may say to the distinguished Senator that I am not a member of the Judiciary Committee and cannot answer his question as to who appeared before the committee. I am hastily glancing through the list of witnesses, but I am unable to identify some of the persons mentioned, and do not know their connections.

Mr. AIKEN. Perhaps we will get that information before the debate is concluded.

Mr. DONNELL. I trust so. Then Mr. Ickes a little further on states:

Once California embarked on the united-front tactic—

I want to say to the distinguished Senator from California [Mr. KNOWLAND], whose colleague does not appear to be present, that I mean no disrespect to California in reading this testimony, not in the slightest; but I think it is well for us to understand the views of Mr. Ickes and his comments as to the support which the joint resolution has received. He said:

Once California embarked on the united-front tactic it forced into prominence, not the merits of its case, but the fact that some have refused to go along. The attorneys general of Washington and Arizona never did join up. The attorneys general of Missouri and Georgia, I am informed by the press, took another look and withdrew from the attempt to high-pressure the Congress into deciding a law case in favor of California and the oil companies.

I digress, Mr. President, by reason of the fact that I come from the State of Missouri, to say that until I read this testimony I did not know the attitude of the attorney general of Missouri, and I do not know whether this is a correct statement or not, though I have no doubt of Mr. Ickes' sincerity in stating it. He says this:

If the law is in truth so well settled against the United States, why not permit the court to speak? Is California, or are the oil companies, apprehensive that the Supreme Court cannot find or will fail to apply a rule so thoroughly settled as they claim this to be? Or do they prefer to make their statements about settled law to a legislative body, composed of busy men who have not had both sides of the legal question extensively argued before them and who lack the time to study the case thoroughly themselves? Finally, if the law is so well settled, why did California ask for a delay of 1 month, in addition to the two first allowed by the Supreme Court, in order to file an answer to the complaint? One would have imagined that the brief printed in Los Angeles, and signed in the spaces indicated for their signature by accommodating State attorneys general, would have already proved beyond the peradventure of a doubt what the law is, if it is in fact as well settled as that brief so vigorously and repetitiously asserts.

I call further attention to this language from Mr. Ickes:

Whatever the motives of those who advocate the passage of H. J. Res. 225, without waiting for orderly judicial procedures, and whatever the strength or weakness of their case before the courts, there is a compelling reason why the Congress should not enact this legislation at this time. Its sole effect would be to give away a claim of the United States which is now pending before the Supreme Court for decision.

The Congress has deprived the Supreme Court of its jurisdiction of a pending case only once in our history. That episode occurred in the heat of the reconstruction passions after the Civil War. Then a Mississippi editor, held for trial by the military authorities, had a petition for a writ of habeas corpus pending in the Supreme Court.

The Congress, fearful of the possible decision, took away the Court's jurisdiction (Ex parte McCardle (6 Wall. 318, 7 Wall. 506; 1869)). Despite the veto of President Johnson, the bill was passed. Later generations have considered this to be a "shameful abuse" of the powers of Congress. (Charles Warren, History of the Supreme Court, II, p. 480, quoting John W. Burgess.)

Mr. President, I pass to several pages later in Mr. Ickes' testimony, where he said this:

The United States and California are now litigating in the Supreme Court their opposing claims to ownership. The question has never before been decided, and no one knows the outcome. It would be an almost unprecedented abuse of legislative power if Congress were to take the issue away from the Supreme Court by presenting to the defendant State the Government's claims. The result would be bad government, not only because it would be an invasion by the legislative branch of the judicial function, but because it would constitute the waste of a national asset which might some day be crucial to our survival.

Thus it is that the Department of the Interior has reversed the decision of 1933. As indicated earlier this afternoon, it seems to me that the very fact that it had made a ruling in writing over the signature of the Secretary of the Interior, and the very fact that thereafter there was an overruling of that decision by the refusal on the part of the Department to grant some 200 applications are themselves indicative of the sincerity of the Department in taking the action by which it overruled the former decision. The case is now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States.

Yesterday in the course of the discussion the Senator from Nevada stated:

If the Senator will read the report of the Judiciary Committee he will find there cited a number of cases which will throw much light on the question in the Senator's mind.

He was referring to the question which I had presented, as to whether or not the same rule which has been supported by these various decisions of the United States Supreme Court with respect to title to lands under navigable rivers within the borders of a State applies likewise to coastal lands. I therefore searched the report of the committee to ascertain what decisions were therein cited as bearing on this particular problem. As I indicated a while ago, I found that in the body of the report of the committee the only case cited to the effect that land underlying the bordering ocean within the 3-mile limit belonged to the States within their respective boundaries was that of Martin v. Waddell (41 U. S. 366, 410). Inasmuch as that case was discussed yesterday to some extent, I shall only say with respect to it that, as indicated twice today, that case referred to lands in the Raritan Bay and River, and therefore to my mind may be very properly distinguished on the ground that it did not involve necessarily, nor in its terms, the title to lands along the coastal region not embraced within bays or rivers.

The first case to which I shall pay attention among those which are cited in the Appendix is that of Weber v. Harbor Commissioners (18 Wall. 57, 65–66). I point out that at page 65 the Court said this:

The complainant is not the proprietor of any land bordering on the shore—

The word "shore" is italicized—

of the sea in any proper sense of that term. His land is situated nearly half a mile from what was the shore of the bay of San Francisco at the time California was admitted into the Union, and over it the water at the lowest tide then flowed at a depth sufficient to float vessels of ordinary size.

So I submit that that case is one in which the court itself distinctly shows, by the statement which I have just read, that the land involved is not the coastal area to which I have referred in my argument.

The next case to which reference is made in the appendix to the report is that of St. Clair v. Lovingston (23 Wallace 46, 68). This case almost makes me homesick, because it goes back to Illinois, our neighbor to the east of Missouri. It refers to a piece of land in the county of St. Clair, Ill., which I take it, obviously, notwithstanding the patriotic claims of our Illinois brethren with respect to their State, cannot be claims to be upon an ocean bank.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. CORDON. Am I to understand that it is the Senator's position that some distinction can be made between the law as it may apply to the ocean flowing along, let us say, the shore of my home State of Oregon, and the same ocean in a bay along that coast line?

Mr. DONNELL. I will answer that question by saying two things: In the first place, the decisions themselves, as I read them, are not based on lands outside, alongside, and adjacent to the boundary of a State, as distinguished from lands within bays, and so forth. Secondly, I do not know whether the Senator was in the Chamber when this was read, but it is an observation of Mr. Ickes which I think is entitled to weight, as indicating whether he thinks there is any distinction. He said this:

The advocates of House Joint Resolution 225 have insisted that many decisions of the Supreme Court have laid the question at rest. This is simply not the case. These decisions have dealt with the lands under inland lakes and rivers, and with bays and harbors. No one is claiming these lands on behalf of the United States, and no one doubts that the courts have held that they are owned by the States. California and the oil companies insist that these decisions with reference to the lands beneath inland waters apply to the submerged lands off the coast; the Attorney General says that they do not. This question is the heart of the pending lawsuit, and the advocates of this resolution have not and cannot produce a single decision by the Supreme Court which has settled this question.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. CORDON. A bay is defined as an indentation in a shore line, or as the water between two headlands. As I think the Senator well knows—and certainly as I know—there are many bays along the Pacific coast which represent little more than the deviation of a shore line from a tangent. If someone did not call them bays they would be a part of the shore line of the Pacific Ocean. That happens frequently. I am at a loss to understand upon what theory or reasoning any claim can be made that a distinction can be drawn between the water within such an indentation and that on either side. Certainly the cases are silent as to any distinction. I have sought information on the subject, and have been unable to find it. The courts truly have not, so far as I have been able to determine, had occasion to pass specifically upon a state of facts the situs of the question of which was somewhere out in the open sea. Of course, there is a practical reason for that. There is no particular purpose in anyone having any question out in the open sea. So I suspect that the Senator is entirely correct in his suggestion that there are no cases involving the open sea. They involve places where men's interests may center. Now for the first time they center in an area which is separated from the shore line itself; but the decisions being, as they are, directed to navigable waters, to tide lands, and to lands flowed by navigable waters which themselves make no distinction, I cannot quite understand how we can create a distinction which never has been previously considered, and make it a matter of importance in an adjudication such as the Senator suggests, or in connection with the passage of such legislation as we now have under consideration.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I am sure that the observations of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. CORDON] are certainly worthy of respectful thought and consideration, and they carry great weight. I can well understand his position. It may well be that the Supreme Court of the United States will sustain that position. But according to Mr. Ickes testimony, while California and the oil companies insist that these decisions bearing upon inland rivers and bays and harbors apply to the submerged lands off the coast, according to Mr. Ickes, "The Attorney General says they do not."

Regardless of the fact that the distinguished Senator from Oregon or any other Member of the Senate may take a view along the line that he indicates, which is logical, and I can well understand it, and he may well be correct, nevertheless, it would appear to me that in the absence of a decision by the Supreme Court upon the facts relating to coastal lands, and with the Attorney General of the United States taking the contrary view, and with the Secretary of the Interior taking the contrary view, and with the Supreme Court itself, in the case from which I read a few moments ago, thinking that it was of sufficient importance even to italicize the word "shore" when it said—

> The complainant is not the proprietor of any land bordering on the shore of the sea in any proper sense of that term—

All these facts, Mr. President, it seems to me, point inevitably to the conclusion that in order for us to know with certainty, as distinguished from having an opinion, well based though it may be, we should have a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States as to coastal lands. That would not be a decision as to St. Clair County, Ill., or as to Cook County, Ill., or as to Raritan Bay and River, N. J., or as to property which was not even on the shore, in the city of San Francisco, or as to oyster beds located in a bay or inlet; but until we have a decision of the Supreme Court as to coastal lands, as to which the Attorney General of the United States and the Secretary of the Interior of the United States took the position that the authorities relative to rivers, lakes, and bays do not govern——

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I should like to ask the distinguished Senator from Missouri, for whose opinion I have a high regard, and who has made a very able presentation here, whether he knows of any case, up until the time when Attorney General Biddle filed the first suit, in which an Attorney General has claimed jurisdiction over these tide lands, which we feel certainly belong in the sovereignty of the State of California.

Mr. DONNELL. I do not. I am not informed of the action taken by the various Attorneys General. But I know that Mr. Ickes testified, as shown at page 6 of the hearings—

> The Attorneys General of the United States have taken the position that these submerged lands belong to the United States and not to the States.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Is it not a fact that the two Attorneys General to whom the former Secretary of the Interior referred are Mr. Biddle and his successor, Mr. Clark?

Mr. DONNELL. I judge that to be the case by reason of the fact that in the first paragraph preceding the statement to which I have just referred, Secretary Ickes testified as follows:

> On May 29, 1945, Attorney General Biddle filed suit against a lessee of California in the California Federal District Court. On October 19 Attorney General Clark, on my recommendation, filed an original suit against California in the United States Supreme Court and dismissed the district court suit against the State's lessee.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Does the able Senator from Missouri know of any Secretary of the Interior other than Mr. Ickes who made a claim to territory belonging to the jurisdiction of the State of California?

Mr. DONNELL. I do not. As indicated in the debate, in 1933 Mr. Ickes himself regarded the question as settled, and so stated in his written opinion. He regarded the question as settled in favor of the States.

Mr. KNOWLAND. In other words, during more than 150 years of our existence as a Republic, as well as during the period of life of the Thirteen Colonies as such, and down through the period when the newer States have been admitted into the Union, the question of whether the States have jurisdiction over their adjacent waters out to the 3-mile limit, or, as in the case of Texas, perhaps to the three-league limit, which is 9 miles, has never been raised by an Attorney General of the United States or by a Secretary of the Interior of the United States. Is that correct?

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I am not able to answer that question. I know of no question that has been raised by any official, but I am not informed in particular about the matter. It would require an extensive search of the opinions of the various Attorneys General and of the rulings of the various Secretaries of the Interior.

Let me say in further answer to the question that, as mentioned by the Senator from Oregon a few minutes ago, inasmuch as it has not been until recent years that there has been a question which makes determination with respect to coastal properties necessary, it is entirely possible that there was no occasion, until the matter of oil in land under the coastal waters became of such consequence, to establish the law on the subject. It may well be that the opinion of the attorney general of California is correct. It may well be that the opinion of the distinguished Governor of California, whom I know and highly regard, is correct. But the point I make is that here is a question as to which two Attorneys General of the United States, according to Mr. Ickes, have taken the opposite position. Now we have a situation in which one Secretary of the Interior, at least, has said that an opinion which he previously gave was wrong or, at any rate that it should be disregarded—perhaps I should more exactly state the situation in that way—in view of the doubts which had arisen.

Mr. President, therefore it seems to me that, regardless of whether previous decisions have been obtained or requested, here we have a situation which, so far as I know, has not been passed upon by the courts, and therefore would require and should require a decision by the Supreme Court of the United States, before we can say "Yes" or "No" as to the question of ownership.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I simply say to the distinguished Senator from Missouri, that if the contention of the former Secretary of the Interior is correct, namely, that the Federal Government has jurisdiction and has a legal right to these lands, which we believe belong to the State of California, and if the opinion of Mr. Biddle and Mr. Clark are correct, then it seems to me, as a layman, not as a lawyer, that for 150 years of our national existence all the other Attorneys General and all the other Secretaries of the Interior were asleep on the job.

The fact of the matter is, I may say to my distinguished colleague, that there was no secret about the fact that the State of California has considered these lands to belong to her, since the time of her admission to statehood in 1850. For a period of approximately two decades or more, certain drillings have taken place in the State-owned tidelands of California. During the 13 years that Mr. Ickes was Secretary of the Interior, it was common knowledge that those drillings were taking place. So if there had been any doubt in the minds of the various Secretaries of the Interior or of the various Attorneys General who preceded Mr. Ickes and Mr. Biddle, certainly they should have taken action before 1935 to clarify that point.

However, the fact of the matter is that they, as did all the coastal States, assumed—and I believe they rightfully assumed—that that was a settled question and that there was no doubt that this land out to the 3-mile limit, so far as the State of California was concerned, was just as much a part of the State of California as are her great interior valleys.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from California. Of course, as indicated a few minutes ago, it is impossible for me to assure the Senator what have been the opinions of previous Attorneys General. I have taken the evidence presented before the committee by a former Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Harold Ickes; and he has testified that two Attorneys General of the United States did take the position which I indicated, and which I shall not detail to a further extent.

To my mind, what other Attorneys General may have done or may not have done is not established before the Senate; and, also, it is not at all legally conclusive as to the rights of the respective parties.

In the second place, Mr. President, it may doubtless be true that, until recent years, neither California nor any other State has abstractly claimed ownership of the land beneath the 3-mile area; and so it is entirely possible that no litigation has arisen in the case of our country as to whether that position is justifiable.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, let me say that both opinions of the Attorneys General who have been mentioned came about as a result of the initiation by the Secretary of the Interior of questioning of the claims of California. So the action of the three parties involved—the two Attorneys General and the Secretary of the Interior—grew out of the original action by Mr. Ickes.

Mr. DONNELL. I may say in that connection, Mr. President, that I am not informed as to what motivated or caused Attorney General Biddle to take the action which he took. The recommendation made by Secretary Ickes, which I read a few moments ago, was made to Attorney General Clark on October 19. Mr. Ickes said, as shown by the hearings:

On October 19, Attorney General Clark, on my recommendation, filed an original suit—

And so forth. The preceding sentence reads as follows:

On May 29, 1945, Attorney General Biddle filed suit against a lessee of California in the California Federal district court.

Mr. President, I do not know what were the conferences between the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Interior. I do not know whether the Secretary of the Interior was advised by Attorney General Biddle before the reversal of the position taken in 1933 occurred. I have no means of knowing that. So far as I have been able to observe, that point is not brought out in the testimony given by Mr. Ickes before the committee.

The next case referred to in the appendix to the report of the Committee on the Judiciary is the case of McCready v. Virginia (94 U. S. 391). At page 394 I find the following sentence:

The precise question to be determined in this case is, whether the State of Virginia can prohibit the citizens of other States from planting oysters in the Ware River, a stream in that State, where the tide ebbs and flows, when its own citizens have that privilege.

Obviously, Mr. President, that case did not involve the question of coastwise lands.

I now pass to the next case cited in the appendix, namely, Hoboken v. Pennsylvania Railroad Company (124 U. S. 656), and I invite attention to the fact that, as I read this case, it involves six actions in ejectment with respect to certain lands on the western shore of the Hudson River where the city of Hoboken—quoting from the decision—"now stands." If my understanding of the decision is correct, it does not pertain to coastwise marginal real estate.

I now pass to the next case cited in the appendix to the report, namely, Knight v. U. S. Land Association (142 U. S. 161, loc. cit. 193). I find, Mr. President, from the opinion of Mr. Justice Lamar, that it is strenuously insisted that the patent for the San Francisco Pueblo is void to the extent it embraces lands below the ordinary high-water mark of Mission Creek as that line existed at the time of the conquest from Mexico in 1846.

I note also on page 182 of the decision the following language:

The only remaining question in the case, as we understand it, and as we desire to consider it, may be thus stated: Admitting that the Von Leicht survey is correct and follows the decree of confirmation; admitting also that the patent followed the survey and the decree, and that the premises in dispute are embraced in the patent: Was parol evidence admissible to show that these premises were below the ordinary high-water mark—not of the bay of San Francisco, but of Mission Creek, a navigable arm of the bay, as that line existed at the date of the conquest from Mexico in 1846.

So, Mr. President, it would appear that this case is likewise one in which the question of coastal waters, the so-called marginal area, is not involved.

I now pass to the case of Mann v. Tacoma Land Company (153 U. S., p. 273, loc. cit. 283). I find that this case, as I understand it, relates to property in what is called Commencement Bay, at the head of Puget Sound, in Pierce County, State of Washington, and that it is near the city of Tacoma. I recall the old admonition, "Watch Tacoma grow." However, I do not believe that Tacoma ever grew clear out to the marginal area which is involved here.

The final case cited in the appendix is Mobile Transportation Company v. Mobile (187 U. S. 479, at p. 482). I observe from a reading of that case that it relates to a portion of the shore and bed of the Mobile River in the city of Mobile. As I understand, the river empties into a bay between Mobile and the ocean.

Mr. President, earlier in the day I referred to a case on which I could not place my hands at the time, but which I now have before me. It is the case of Smith against Maryland, which is the case from which the quotation appears on page 8 of the appendix. The quotation reads:

Whatever soil below low-water mark is the subject of exclusive propiety [property] and ownership belongs to the State on whose maritime border and within whose territory it lies, subject to any lawful grants of that soil by the State or the sovereign power which governed its territory before the Declaration of Independence.

Mr. President, I may say that this case comes about as close to the question as does any other. It relates to the question of the power of the State of Maryland with respect to the owner of a schooner which had been dredging for oysters in the Chesapeake Bay. Because of some violation of a statute of Maryland the owner of the schooner was punished by being required to forfeit his schooner. Yet, Mr. President, in this case it will be observed—quoting from the decision:

The purpose of the law is to protect the growth of oysters in the waters of the State by prohibiting the use of particular instruments in dredging for them. No question was made in the court below whether the place in question be within the territory of the State.

I wish to repeat that sentence.

No question was made in the court below whether the place in question be within the territory of the State.

I digress to say that the very fact that the court emphasized that no question was raised in the court below as to whether the place in question was within the territory of the State, to my mind is very significant as indicating that the court itself thought that the proposition might be of some importance. Indeed, Mr. President, counsel obviously thought so as it will be observed later. The court continued as follows:

No question was made in the court below whether the place in question be within the territory of the State. The law is, in terms, limited to the waters of the State. If the county court extended the operation of the law beyond those waters, that was a distinct and substantive ground of exception, to be specifically taken and presented on the record, accompanied by all the necessary facts to enable the court to determine whether a voyage of a vessel, licensed and enrolled for the coasting trade, had been interrupted by force of a law of a State while on the high seas, and out of the territorial jurisdiction of the State.

To present to this Court—

That is the Supreme Court of the United States—

such a question upon a writ of error to a State court, it is not enough that it might have been made in the court below; it must appear by the record that it was made, and decided against the plaintiff in error.

As we do not find from the record that any question of this kind was raised, we must consider that the acts in question were done, and the seizure made, within the waters of the State; and that the law, if valid, was not misapplied by the county court by extending its operation, contrary to its terms, to waters within the limits of the State. What we have to consider under the writ of error is, whether the law itself, as above recited, be repugnant to the Constitution or laws of the United States.

Mr. President, my recollection is that there are certain dicta in this case which I presume are the reasons for the citation of the case in the appendix of the report of the committee. But the observations of the court show that the court itself did not go into the question of whether or not the action of the defendant took place within the territory of the State, a decided question, as is obvious in the language of the decision which reads, in part:

What we have to consider under this writ of error is, whether the law itself, as above recited, be repugnant to the Constitution or laws of the United States.

So, Mr. President, these are all the cases that are cited on the proposition of coastal waters in the Appendix, and the only other case cited in the report itself on the question of coastal waters is the case of Martin against Waddell which was mentioned previously.

Mr. President, I wish to say only a few words in conclusion. I appreciate the points made today by the distinguished Senators. It may well be that the Supreme Court of the United States will follow their theory. But in light of the contrary view taken by distinguished counsel such as the Attorney General of the United States, and the distinguished Secretary of the Department of the Interior who himself had been a practicing lawyer, I submit that there is at least room for doubt with reference to the proposition.

The Newark case referred to yesterday pointed out that the State of New Jersey had passed a law extending its boundaries into the ocean. Mr. President, we do not know whether—at least I do not know from the evidence which I have read; it may be present somewhere, but I did not read the report until it came into my possession this afternoon—there is anything in the report of the committee as to any other State extending its boundaries into the ocean. I know that the State of California, according to the decision to which reference was made, and which I believe I mentioned earlier in 96 Pennsylvania 2d, at page 941, has a constitutional provision by which its boundary goes three English miles into the Pacific Ocean. It may well be that all the Pacific Coast States may have been the recipients of enabling acts similar to that to which the senior Senator from Oregon referred. There is no evidence in the report of the committee before the Senate as to whether that is true with respect to all the coastwise States of the Union. There are a great many of them on the Atlantic Ocean, on the Gulf of Mexico, and on the Pacific Ocean. In order for us to know whether in any given case the lands which are sought to be quit-claimed away, given away, by House Joint Resolution 225, are within the boundaries of the States, we must know, first, whether or not any attempt has been made, either by the States themselves or by the Federal Government, respectively, to extend the boundaries of the States out into the ocean adjacent to those several States, each one by itself. We would have to know that.

We would have to know, further, whether or not the States, either by their constitutions or by their statutes, undertook to extend their boundaries.

We would have to know whether they could do it along the line of the inquiry of the Senator from Michigan this afternoon. Whether or not a State can lift itself by its own bootstraps, whether by its own declaration it can vest title in itself to lands is a question which would have to be determined.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HOEY in the chair). Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. As I understand the decisions involving cases where the States did try to extend their boundaries, they were only doing it for the purpose of getting territory or sovereignty to enforce criminal statutes.

Mr. DONNELL. That is a very interesting point, and involves the distinction which was made both by the Senator from Michigan and the Senator from West Virginia this afternoon, namely, as to whether or not, even though it be true that a State shall have acquired jurisdiction for the enforcement of criminal laws out in the coastwise waters, it follows that the State has power to bring to itself property rights in and to real estate which did not belong to it in advance.

Mr. FERGUSON. I think the distinction is that they can do it for one purpose, to extend their criminal-law jurisdiction, but not to add territory to the States.

Mr. DONNELL. That is entirely possible, and it is a proposition which certainly should be placed before the Supreme Court of the United States before we determine the question of the effect of these various statutes, constitutional provisions, and enabling acts with respect to each and all the States of the Union which are adjacent to oceans or the Gulf of Mexico.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator from Missouri yield so that I may ask a question of the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I should like to ask the Senator from Michigan whether he thinks that a State could extend its criminal jurisdiction outside its own territorial area.

Mr. FERGUSON. I will answer that in this way, that it might extend it out of its territory, out of its land sovereignty, putting it that way, because we have the same situation in connection with public lands, in parks, in military reservations, where the land title and sovereignty is in the United States. The Federal Government sometimes permits a State to extend its jurisdiction.

Mr. KNOWLAND. But that particular military reservation or whatever it may be is within the territorial confines and boundaries of the particular State in question, is it not?

Mr. FERGUSON. I will have something to say about that on Monday, in relation to criminal jurisdiction on the Great Lakes. It was a good many years ago that I had this subject under consideration, but as I understand, criminal jurisdiction might be in either the Federal Government or in a State on the Great Lakes. If the United States desired to take jurisdiction, the jurisdiction of Michigan would not apply, but if the Federal Government did not proceed, the State was allowed to go ahead. We had to give up jurisdiction in case the Federal Government desired to take jurisdiction.

So, I would answer the question by saying that I am of the opinion that with the consent of the Federal Government, a State might extend its criminal jurisdiction outside its physical boundaries. We do that, for instance, in regard to a conspiracy that is committed, with one man in the State and another out of the State, when we make a certain act a crime. I shall be glad to look that matter up specifically, and on Monday answer some of the questions asked.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I appreciate the patience of the Members of the Senate in listening to my presentation this afternoon, and I conclude with the expression, as I began, that I rose then and I stand now in opposition to the adoption of House Joint Resolution 225.

During the delivery of Mr. DONNELL's speech,

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Missouri yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is obvious that we will not be able to obtain a vote on the pending joint resolution today. I have consulted with the Senator from Nevada, the minority leader, the Senator from Maine, and other Senators, with reference to attempting to fix an hour on Monday when we might vote on the pending joint resolution.

Looking to that end, I ask unanimous consent that the requirement for a quorum call be waived, and I ask that when the Senate conclude its deliberations today it stand in recess until 11 o'clock a. m. Monday, that the Senate proceed at not later than 2 o'clock p. m. on Monday to vote on the pending joint resolution and any and all amendments thereto, and that the time on Monday be equally divided between the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN] and, perhaps, myself.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I am informed that the Senator from Michigan desires to be heard upon the joint resolution. I think it will take me from 45 minutes to an hour to complete my presentation. I assume that the distinguished majority leader, and possibly others, in addition to the Senator from Nevada, will desire to discuss the matter further. I am wondering whether 3 o'clock would not suggest itself to the Majority Leader as a better hour for a vote.

Mr. BARKLEY. I accept the modification. I will say also that if I control the time in opposition to the joint resolution, I shall be glad to yield to the Senator from Michigan and others, within the limitation.

Mr. FERGUSON. I thank the Senator.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, does the proposed agreement contemplate that no other business shall be transacted this afternoon?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes, I would include that in the request, that the rest of this afternoon be devoted to discussion of the joint resolution, not to be interfered with by other legislation or business.

I should like to make it plain that we are not recessing now. The proposal is that when the Senate concludes its deliberations today it stand in recess until Monday. As it is only 4 o'clock, we may proceed for an hour or two yet.

Mr. WHITE. Still pursuing the subject, of course it has been a pretty long week. We are all anxious to bring this subject to a termination within a reasonable time, but I feel, nevertheless, that if we ran for an hour from this time it would make it a pretty full day for Saturday, and I would hope we might take a recess then.

Mr. BARKLEY. I would suppose that the Senator from Missouri would want to conclude his remarks.

Mr. DONNELL. I am quite willing to abide by the judgment of the distinguished Majority Leader.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think that in view of the fact that it is only 4 o'clock, the Senator might proceed and conclude today if possible.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kentucky? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, is it the understanding that the Senate will recess when the Senator from Missouri concludes, and there will be no business taken up in the meantime except the pending joint resolution?

Mr. BARKLEY. The order is that no other business shall be considered this afternoon. I suppose that if the Senator from Missouri should consume 45 minutes more, it would be agreeable to the Senate to recess at that time.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, I inquire whether a request has been made to have the joint resolution, as amended today, printed for use by the Senate on Monday. If not, I ask unanimous consent that the joint resolution, as amended, be printed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator refer to the joint resolution as amended on the floor today?

Mr. CORDON. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No request of that kind has been made.

Mr. CORDON. I ask unanimous consent that the joint resolution, as amended, be printed for use of the Senate on Monday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I had intended to offer an amendment to House Joint Resolution 225. The purpose of the amendment was to limit the distance any State could go oceanward to 3 miles, excepting in the instances where States were allotted more than 3 miles when they became members of the Union.

I have been told that the amendment which was offered today by the able Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], and which was agreed to by the Senate, in substance accomplishes the same purpose. The amendment which the Senate adopted this afternoon, submitted by the Senator from Wyoming, limits, as I understand it, the distance that any State may acquire oceanward, and for that reason I do not believe it will be necessary to offer my amendment. If any Senator feels that the amendment which was adopted this afternoon does not do exactly that, I should appreciate very much his calling it to my attention. I do not wish to take up the time of the Senate in voting upon language which is already covered in a previous amendment. It is my distinct understanding that the amendment which has been adopted does what my amendment proposes. I would appreciate it if any Senator would make a statement to the contrary, if he feels that the statement I have made is not correct.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAPEHART. I yield.

Mr. CORDON. I want to talk for a moment on the matter adverted to by the Senator from Indiana. For what it is worth, I should like to state that after a rather careful study of the original joint resolution and of the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming which has now become a part of the measure, there can be no longer any question that the joint resolution is limited to those submerged lands within the boundaries of the several States, with this exception, that if there should be—and there conceivably cannot be a State whose boundary did not go 3 miles at sea—then it would cover 3 miles at sea. But 3 miles at sea plus any additional territory within the legally presently established boundary of the State, is all the territory that can possibly be affected by the joint resolution as it originally was drawn, and as it now is.

Mr. CAPEHART. I thank the Senator.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions, and they were signed by the President pro tempore:

H. R. 247. An act for the relief of E. D. Williams;

H. R. 271. An act for the relief of Eleanor McCloskey, also known as Evelyn Mary Mikalauskas;

H. R. 844. An act for the relief of John P. Hayes, postmaster, and the estate of Edward P. McCormack, former postmaster, at Albany, N. Y.;

H. R. 1322. An act for the relief of the Marine Engine Works & Shipbuilding Corp., of Tarpon Springs, Fla.;

H. R. 1331. An act for the relief of the Hatheway Patterson Corp.;

H. R. 1345. An act for the relief of David M. Matteson;

H. R. 1469. An act for the relief of Cox Bros.;

H. R. 1480. An act for the relief of the S. G. Leoffler Operating Co., of Washington, D. C., and for other purposes;

H. R. 1498. An act to correct the naval record of former members of the crews of the revenue cutters Algonquin and Onondaga;

H. R. 1673. An act for the relief of the Superior Coach Corp.;

H. R. 1797. An act for the relief of Arcadio Saldaña Agosto;

H. R. 1850. An act for the relief of Louise Zerweck;

H. R. 1957. An act for the relief of the Ohio Valley General Hospital, Wheeling Clinic, Rosetta Snyder, Virginia Barron, Dr. Paul H. Cope, and Dr. J. E. Ricketts;

H. R. 2130. An act for the relief of Daniel S. Bagley, Jr., and Daniel S. Bagley, Sr.;

H. R. 2243. An act for the relief of Arthur A. Guarino;

H. R. 2269. An act for the relief of Dr. William A. Schumacher and Magdalen M. Schumacher;

H. R. 2287. An act for the relief of Susan S. Wiseman;

H. R. 2319. An act for the relief of J. B. Shropshire;

H. R. 2423. An act to authorize the exchange of lands acquired by the United States for the Silver Creek recreational demonstration project, Oregon, for the purpose of consolidating holdings therein, and for other purposes;

H. R. 2489. An act for the relief of Gaylon Dhu;

H. R. 2962. An act for the relief of Justin P. Hopkins;

H. R. 3065. An act for the relief of Standard Dredging Corp.;

H. R. 3145. An act for the relief of A. C. McMeans;

H. R. 3158. An act for the relief of Leonard J. Fox and Milford G. Fox, a partnership, doing business as Fox Co.;

H. R. 3341. An act for the relief of J. E. and Minerva Mitchell, and Rosie Monroe;

H. R. 3360. An act for the relief of Mrs. W. H. (Agnes) Holmes;

H. R. 3397. An act for the relief of Claude S Crouse;

H. R. 3400. An act for the relief of Herbert W. Rogers;

H. R. 3420. An act to provide for refunds to railroad employees in certain cases, so as to place the various States on an equal basis, under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, with respect to contributions of employees;

H. R. 3455. An act for the relief of Chatham M. Towers;

H. R. 3480. An act for the relief of Miss Ruth Lois Cummings;

H. R. 3484. An act for the relief of the Poultry Producers of central California;

H. R. 3492. An act to amend further the Civil Service Retirement Act, approved May 29, 1930, as amended;

H. R. 3533. An act to authorize revisions in the boundary of the Hopewell village national historic site, Pennsylvania, and for other purposes;

H. R. 3623. An act for the relief of William A. Pixley;

H. R. 3821. An act to amend sections 4 and 8 of the act of September 2, 1937, as amended;

H. R. 3827. An act for the relief of Fred W. Grant;

H. R. 3848. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Johnnie Pollock, a minor;

H. R. 3857. An act for the relief of Warren H. Thompson and Madeline Parent;

H. R. 3988. An act for the relief of Decatur County in the State of Indiana;

H. R. 3993. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to sell and convey to the Southern Pacific Railroad Co. a right-of-way and easement for railroad purposes across a portion of Camp Cooke Military Reservation, Calif.;

H. R. 4090. An act for the relief of Roy Hesselmeyer;

H. R. 4180. An act to amend the law relating to larceny in interstate or foreign commerce;

H. R. 4215. An act for the relief of Jane O'Malley;

H. R. 4247. An act for the relief of Jesús Lassalle and Mrs. America Bonet Medina;

H. R. 4357. An act for the relief of the estate of the late Alberto Lopez Ramos;

H. R. 4458. An act for the relief of Rosella J. Masters;

H. R. 4484. An act relating to the construction and maintenance of building and improvements for banking purposes on the Fort Ord Military Reservation, Calif.;

H. R. 4486. An act to abolish the Santa Rosa Island National Monument and to provide for the conveyance to Ecambia County, State of Florida, of that portion of Santa Rosa Island which is under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior;

H. R. 4492. An act for the relief of Charles Marvin Smith;

H. R. 4577. An act for the relief of Dolores Joyce;

H. R. 4651. An act to amend section 6 of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended;

H. R. 4660. An act for the relief of Mrs. Georgia Lanser and Ensign Joseph Lanser;

H. R. 4673. An act for the relief of Mrs. Minnie Jenkins Ward;

H. R. 4701. An act granting the consent of Congress to the States of Utah, Idaho, and Wyoming to negotiate and enter into a compact for the division of the waters of the Bear River and its tributaries;

H. R. 4834. An act for relief of the estate of Katherine Delores Booth and Agnes Jane True;

H. R. 4862. An act for the relief of Walter R. Newcomb, Sr., Corbin A. Newcomb, and Walter R. Newcomb, Jr.;

H. R. 4917. An act for the relief of the Western Union Telegraph Co.;

H. R. 4919. An act for the relief of Archibald J. Alcorn;

H. R. 4996. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Joan Esther Hedin, a minor;

H. R. 5026. An act for the relief of the estate of Drury Lee Jordan;

H. R. 5030. An act for the relief of Mrs. Lim Shee Chang;

H. R. 5112. An act to authorize the city of Anchorage, Alaska, to issue bonds in a sum not to exceed $5,000,000 for the purpose of constructing, reconstructing, improving, extending, bettering, repairing, equipping, or acquiring public works of a permanent character, and to provide for the payment thereof, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5178. An act for the relief of Marian Antoinette McCloud;

H. R. 5228. An act for the relief of Stephen Lisay;

H. R. 5324. An act for the relief of Mrs. Mary Francoline and Mrs. Rose Wallace;

H. R. 5351. An act for the relief of Charles Booker;

H. R. 5352. An act for the relief of Joseph Ippolito;

H. R. 5398. An act for the relief of Walter J. Barnes Electric Co. and Maritime Electric Co., Inc.;

H. R. 5510. An act for the relief of Newton William Lowery;

H. R. 5538. An act for the relief of Mae Maxine Stone;

H. R. 5539. An act for the relief of Andrew M. Halvorsen;

H. R. 5541. An act for the relief of F. B. Sweat;

H. R. 5640. An act to reestablish the status of funds of the midshipmen's store, barber shop, cobbler shop, and tailor shop at the United States Naval Academy, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5722. An act for the relief of Charles L. Cannon;

H. R. 5739. An act for the relief of Frances Fitzgerald;

H. R. 5792. An act for the relief of certain postmasters;

H. R. 5800. An act to authorize school districts in Alaska to issue bonds for school construction, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5806. An act for the relief of Etta Yoakam;

H. R. 5820. An act relating to mail service on Lake Winnepesaukee, N. H.;

H. R. 5831. An act to include the heads of executive departments and independent agencies within the purview of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930;

H. R. 5840. An act to authorize an exchange of land in Eagle County, Colo.;

H. R. 5872. An act for the relief of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Keaton;

H. R. 5878. An act for the relief of Elsie Elmhorst;

H. R. 5884. An act for the relief of Frances Krzys;

H. R. 5958. An act to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended;

H. R. 6041. An act authorizing the State of Indiana to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Wabash River at or near Montezuma, Ind.;

H. R. 6065. An act authorizing the Indiana State Toll Bridge Commission to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge or a free bridge across the Ohio River at or near Cannelton, Ind.;

H. R. 6081. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Iowa State Highway Commission to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Des Moines River at or near the town of Eddyville, Iowa;

H. R. 6213. An act for the relief of Bvt. First Lt. Margaret Utinsky;

H. R. 6222. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Calcasieu River at or near Lake Charles, La.;

H. R. 6324. An act to amend and supplement the Federal-Aid Road Act of July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, to provide for the design and construction of dams so that they will serve as foundations for highway bridges, to provide for the design and construction of highway bridges upon and across such dams, to authorize the granting of easements and rights-of-way in connection therewith, and for other purposes;

H. R. 6442. An act for the relief of Mrs. Elizabeth J. Patterson, Joy Patterson, and Roberta Patterson;

H. R. 6459. An act to extend the period within which the Secretary of Agriculture may carry out the purposes of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act by making payments to agricultural producers;

H. R. 6472. An act for the relief of John E. Peterson, James M. Hiler, Vivian Langemo, Floy Sibrie, and Ross Lee Brown;

H. R. 6486. An act to authorize an appropriation for the establishment of a geophysical institute at the University of Alaska;

H. R. 6515. An act to amend the act entitled "An act authorizing the Nebraska-Iowa Bridge Corp., a Delaware corporation, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Missouri River between Washington County, Nebr., and Harrison County, Iowa," approved March 6, 1928;

H. R. 6627. An act for the acquisition of buildings and grounds in foreign countries for the use of the Government of the United States of America;

H. R. 6673. An act to amend section 6 of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended;

H. R. 6689. An act to extend for an additional year the provisions of the Sugar Act, as amended, and the taxes with respect to sugar;

H. R. 6751. An act authorizing Gus A. Guerra, his heirs, legal representatives, and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Rio Grande at or near Rio Grande City, Tex.;

H. R. 6889. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a toll bridge across the St. Louis River between the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin, and for other purposes;

H. R. 6903. An act to provide benefits for certain employees of the United States who are veterans of World War II and lost opportunity for probational civil-service appointments by reason of their service in the armed forces of the United States;

H. J. Res. 321. Joint resolution to authorize the making of settlement on account of certain currency destroyed at Fort Mills, Philippine Islands, and for other purposes;

H. J. Res. 336. Joint resolution relating to marketing quotas under the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended;

H. J. Res. 359. Joint resolution relating to peanut marketing quotas under the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended; and

H. J. Res. 364. Joint resolution to provide for the establishment of an international animal quarantine station on Swan Island and to permit the entry therein of animals from any country and the subsequent importation of such animals into other parts of the United States, and for other purposes.

EFFECT OF TERMINATION OF OPA ON THE CORN MARKET

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I wish to take a minute of the time of the Senate to call attention to the effect that has been had upon the free movement of corn by virtue of decontrol. There was much discussion in the Senate, particularly by the New England Senators, who are much concerned, about the effect of the continuance of controls on feed for dairy herds and poultry.

I asked the grain people to tell me the effect of decontrol upon corn, and from information furnished me I find that during the month of June the Chicago market, which is the great corn market of the world, received an average of 56.5 cars a day. For the first 17 days of July receipts at Chicago, stated in carloads, amounted to 118.5 cars, a little more than double the number received during June.

Similar figures were collected from eleven large corn markets, which included Chicago, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Omaha, Peoria, Sioux City, St. Joseph, St. Louis, and Wichita.

During the 30 days of June the average amount of corn received at these 12 markets was 379,500 bushels a day. In the first 17 days of July the average was 630,000 bushels, again almost double.

Mr. President, I call particular attention to the fact that during the last 3 days shown on this report, namely, July 15, 16, and 17, more than a million bushels of corn went into these 12 primary markets on each of those days.

Up to the time when corn was decontrolled, no corn of any consequence moved, except in the black market, for perhaps 6 or 9 months. Immediately after corn was decontrolled and could be handled in a free market, there began a great flow of corn from the farms through the regular channels to the deficit areas, such as New England, the central Atlantic coast, and the southeast territory.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the two statements to which I have been referring be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the tables were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Chicago corn receipts

[Carloads]

Date	June	July
1	56	75
2	Sunday	29
3	130	27
4	50	Holiday
5	88	122
6	104	87
7	117	Sunday
8	88	195
9	Sunday	201
10	159	152
11	49	125
12	74	128
13	50	142
14	76	Sunday
15	52	332
16	Sunday	197
17	123	183
18	45	136
19	44
20	65
21	63
22	25
23	Sunday
24	92
25	24
26	38
27	25
28	39
29	18
30	Sunday
Average daily	56.5	118.5

Receipts of corn at reporting primary markets [1]

[In bushels]

Day	June	July
1	761,000	329,000
2	Sunday	239,000
3	641,000	252,000
4	568,000	Holiday
5	458,000	460,000
6	550,000	610,000
7	558,000	Sunday
8	534,000	1,058,000
9	Sunday	738,000
10	895,000	962,000
11	642,000	946,000
12	484,000	791,000
13	411,000	863,000
14	499,000	Sunday
15	455,000	1,299,000
16	Sunday	1,061,000
17	544,000	1,099,000
18	481,000
19	353,000
20	302,000
21	314,000
22	329,000
23	Sunday
24	361,000
25	440,000

[1] Reporting primary markets include Chicago, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Omaha, Peoria, Sioux City, St. Joseph, St. Louis, and Wichita.

Receipts of corn at reporting primary markets—Continued

[In bushels]

Day	June	July
26	151,000
27	217,000
28	178,000
29	260,000
30	Sunday
Daily average	379,500	630,000

OPA AND THE LIVESTOCK AND GRAIN MARKETS

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD reports from the livestock market, the grain market, and other retail markets which I have collected for today. I ask to have printed also certain telegrams I have received, as well as clippings from newspapers, regarding OPA.

There being no objection, the matters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

There are four outstanding facts about cattle prices in the United States Department of Agriculture reports released from Chicago and New York today that I think you should pass along to the proper people:

1. Many medium to average good steers and yearlings sold from $2 to $5 under the week's high.

2. Practically all grades of cows, medium heifers and medium to good steers are selling at prices now well below compliance levels in force up to July 1. This indicates that the market is spreading out and that there are a good proportion of cattle selling at lower prices than the prices that prevailed during the last week in June, the period prior to the removal of OPA controls.

3. Some two-way cattle (cattle that can go either to slaughter or to the feed lot) of the quality that sold to slaughterers earlier in the week at $21 sold to feed-lot buyers today at $17 per hundredweight. This suggests that the market is getting to a point where feed-lot operators will again buy cattle for feeding operations this fall and winter. The result of this action will mean more beef next spring.

Upper limit quotations for beef carcasses at New York City indicate that the wholesale price of choice beef has dropped $13 per hundredweight and for good beef $15 per hundredweight since July 5. This indicates that former black-market price levels are being effectively destroyed by increased volume and by resistance on the part of consumers, under a free economy.

TOLEDO, OHIO, July 19, 1946.

Hon. K. S. WHERRY,
Washington, D. C.:

Ohio Farmers Grain Dealers Association, Defiance, Ohio, composed of 400 country and terminal grain and feed dealers, also 75,000 farmers plead that you do not put grain back under OPA and cut across unfilled contracts. It will break all country elevators in the country as they are all filled with high-priced wheat which is sold and cannot be shipped on account of car shortage. Wheat prices have been breaking daily and is now selling at about OPA ceiling prices and oats are now 8 cents under ceiling.

OHIO FARMERS GRAIN DEALERS ASSOCIATION,
C. S. LATCHAW, Secretary.

ST. PAUL, MINN., July 19, 1946.

Hon. KENNETH S. WHERRY,
Washington, D. C.:

Markets adjusting to supply and demand, gasoline 2 cents down, butter now from 66 to 80 cents, down 5 cents. Hogs and cattle down. Increases now reflect only subsidies which certainly could not be continued indefinitely. Resumption of OPA food controls wholly unjustified and would result in complete chaos in livestock and dairy products. If America is to survive, governmental controls must be eliminated and industry and agriculture given an opportunity to operate in free markets. Bureaucrats would make same arguments if controls were extended whenever any attempt was made to remove them. Now is the time to rid the country of its greatest handicap to production and return to normal supply and demand prices. Your splendid work along these lines greatly appreciated.

TWIN CITY MILK PRODUCERS ASSOCIATION,
W. S. MOSCRIP, President.

OMAHA, NEBR., July 19, 1946.

Senator KENNETH S. WHERRY,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Wheat broke sharply again today and few buyers. We are sure it will decline until Government buys. We feel there could never be a better time to drop OPA than now. The wheat crop we think is a record and that corn crop will exceed previous record by over 5 percent.

NEBRASKA CONSOLIDATED MILLS CO.,
R. S. DICKINSON.

CHICAGO, ILL., July 18, 1946.

E. B. KIXMILLER,
Mayflower Hotel, Washington, D. C.:

Poultry in New York declined an additional 2 cents today. This makes ice packed chickens under 3 pounds, 37 cents dressed. New York compared 52 cents open market June 29 market continues weak. Chicago November egg futures 39 cents compared to 46 cents 3 or 4 weeks ago. Chicago butter declined 1½ cents today to 69 cents which is 1½ cents under ceiling plus subsidy market weak.

N. R. CLARK,
Vice President, Swift & Co.

THINGS THAT GO UP MUST COME DOWN

[From the Washington Times-Herald of July 20, 1946]

OPENING BID, 77 CENTS—COST OF BUTTER "MELTS" TO 19 CENTS IN ST. PETERSBURG PRICE WAR

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA., July 19.—A butter price war raged between two retail stores on opposite sides of a street here today with the cost dropping from 77 to 19 cents before the day was over.

Figures were posted in large numerals on plate glass store fronts.

Store No. 1 had been selling butter at 77 cents a pound. Thursday morning store No. 2 opened up with an offer of 74. Store No. 1 dropped to 66.

At noon today No. 2 met the 66-cent offer. Fifteen minutes later No. 1 put up a price of 63. This was countered immediately with an offer at 59 at No. 2.

The decline went back and forth all day until 5:45 p. m., when No. 1 offered butter for 25 cents with the No. 2 quotation at 19 cents. At 6 p. m. No. 2 stopped selling butter.

J. H. Willis, general manager of No. 2, said 2,000 pounds of butter were sold at his store. C. W. Bragg, manager of No. 1, said he had disposed of 1,500 pounds.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, if my name were Chester Bowles, and not KENNETH WHERRY, and I was as dishonest in the use of statistics as he has been with his when he claimed that the price of steel plate rose 232 percent and bituminous coal rose 675 percent following World War I, and there were 106,000 business failures in 1920, then I would commandeer the radio networks and inform the American public that the price of butter had gone down to 19 cents.

[From the Washington Daily News of July 19, 1946]

THEY COULD BE WRONG

Back in the intimate recesses of Washington's cocktail lounges the small-fry President-makers speak of long-term strategy. It goes something like this:

Forget about OPA. Let prices skyrocket. Let the consumers get a bellyfull. They will then be in a mood for some real planned economy. That will be the clear-cut issue to elect a President in 1948.

This newspaper will do its best to avoid crystal grazing, but there are signs, however inconclusive, that these serious-minded and self-appointed architects of a new day may have their blueprints balled up.

Such signs as, for instance, strong resistance to rising prices dating from the end of OPA, including Wednesday's break in poultry quotations, Thursday's drop in Chicago livestock prices, reductions in butter prices when mama refused to pay 90 cents to a dollar a pound, a note in the Wall Street Journal that big retailers are beginning to worry about getting stuck with high-cost inventories, ads offering much-wanted goods at less than OPA prices, and so on.

It is basic in the philosophy of one type of "liberal" that the American consumer is a poor, forlorn lug with no spunk and less sense. If you don't hold his hand on the way to the grocery, he'll blow the roll on a pack of gum, with nothing left for such necessities as rent, gin, hamburger, nylon hose and thin little books about the wonderful world of tomorrow.

It could be that these "liberals" are right. If so, they may have something in this argument for a totalitarian planned economy as a desperate measure to save this American fool from his folly.

But even assuming the necessity, there is reason to fear that their cure may be at least as bad as the disease.

For planned economy requires planners—and planners, as well as consumers, may sometimes be mistaken.

Recall, for instance, the assumption that depression would follow the war's end. Unemployment would be eight million up. Disastrous deflation was on the way. So the plan called for wages to be forced up abruptly to provide "purchasing power" in this new 1933. The idea that wages had anything to do with retail prices was brushed aside as a mere detail. Get away boy, you're bothering me.

Instead of deflation we get inflation. Instead of unemployment we actually have labor shortage in many spots, men's clothing for instance.

The tendency toward runaway prices, which started well before the end of OPA, may be attributed, at least in major part, to this just slightly cockeyed plan.

We do not share this liberal low opinion of the American consumer.

We dislike to view this consumer as a digit in a Government book of statistics. We prefer to personify her in the form of mama, pay check in one hand and market basket in the other.

It is risky, we think, to assume that mama is fool enough to pay whatever is asked. In the first place she is limited by papa's pay check. In the second place, even if she had the money, her pride would prevent her from playing sucker.

Mama is the person the Washington storekeeper had in mind when he explained to a reporter why he still didn't have any meat.

"Meat at that price?" said the storekeeper. "I won't fool with it! My customers wouldn't stand for it.'

Multiply mama by a few million and you have what an economist might term a strong antiinflationary influence. Your merchant, your manufacturer, your farmer, are a lot more scared of mama than they ever were of Chester Bowles or Paul Porter.

And if mama and her tribe, who constitute the American people, are such fatheads as these liberals think, how did we ever do so well in the days before planned economy got into the language?

How did we ever cut down the trees, build the homes, farms, and factories which made us big and strong enough to lick Hitler, arm and feed the world?

If the country has lost the spunk and common sense which made it, may the Lord help us. We doubt if these long-term planners can.

We are not, as we said, going into the predicting business, but we think there is some slight justification for the belief, and hope, that these cocktail-room strategists may be wrong—again.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. GREEN. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HOEY in the chair) laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting several nominations, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Reports of committees are in order. If there be no reports of committees, the clerk will state the nominations on the Executive Calendar.

CALIFORNIA DEBRIS COMMISSION

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Col. George Mayo, Corps of Engineers, to be a member of the California Debris Commission.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

THE ARMY

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Army.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Army nominations are confirmed en bloc.

THE NAVY

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Navy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Navy nominations are confirmed en bloc; and, without objection, the President will be notified forthwith of all confirmations of today.

RECESS

Mr. GREEN. Mr. President, I move that the Senate take a recess until 11 o'clock a. m. on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 6 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess, the recess being, under the order previously entered, to Monday, July 22, 1946, at 11 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate July 20 (legislative day of July 5), 1946:

CIRCUIT COURTS, TERRITORY OF HAWAII

Gerald R. Corbett, of Hawaii, to be sixth judge of the first circuit, circuit courts, Territory of Hawaii, new position.

MUNICIPAL COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Hon. George D. Neilson, of the District of Columbia, to be associate judge of the municipal court for the District of Columbia. (Judge Neilson is now serving in this office under an appointment which expired April 29, 1946.)

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY

Dan B. Shields, of Utah, to be United States attorney for the district of Utah. (Mr. Shields is now serving in this office under an appointment which expired March 23, 1946.)

UNITED STATES MARSHAL

Donald A. Draughon, of Puerto Rico, to be United States marshal for the district of Puerto Rico. (Mr. Draughon is now serving in this office under an appointment which expired July 3, 1946.)

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate July 20 (legislative day of July 5), 1946:

CALIFORNIA DEBRIS COMMISSION

Col. George Mayo, Corps of Engineers, to be a member of the California Debris Commission.

IN THE ARMY

APPOINTMENTS IN THE REGULAR ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES

Brig. Gen. Henry Balding Lewis to be Assistant The Adjutant General, with the rank of brigadier general, for a period of 4 years from the date immediately following that upon which Brig. Gen. Thomas Jefferson Davis, the present incumbent, vacates his appointment as Assistant The Adjutant General.

Roger Gordon Alexander to be the dean of the academic board of the United States Military Academy, with the rank of brigadier general, Regular Army.

IN THE NAVY

APPOINTMENTS IN THE NAVY

To be assistant paymasters in the Navy with the rank of ensign

James E. Brown
William S. Benson 2d
John J. Caporaso
Wesley J. McClaren
Karl W. Fischer, Jr.
Arthur E. Linder
Sherman F. Drake

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

SATURDAY, JULY 20, 1946

The House met at 10 o'clock a. m.

Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., pastor of the Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

O Thou who hast revealed Thyself as a prayer-hearing and prayer-answering God, may we now in all simplicity and sincerity invoke Thy blessing and benediction, beseeching Thee that we may pursue and perform our duties with a steadfast and single-hearted devotion.

We pray that our President, our Speaker, and all the Members of this legislative body who have been entrusted with leadership in the life of our Republic may be blessed with capacities and powers equal to the difficult problems and tragic necessities of our generation and equal to the opportunities and responsibilities of lifting and leading humanity into a loftier idealism.

Grant that in our longing and search for a more brotherly world and a nobler social order we may be ready and willing to yield ourselves to the demands and disciplines of that quest. Help us to see more vividly that if this quest is ever to become a glorious conquest then we must surrender our lives to the spirit of self-denial and sacrifice which was the spirit of our Lord and Saviour.

In His name we pray. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Gatling, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6885) entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, to provide appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to the amendments of the Senate numbered 33, 34, 46, 52½, 62, 69, 81, and 86 to the foregoing bill.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 4497) entitled "An act to create an Indian Claims Commission, to provide for the powers, duties, and functions thereof, and for other purposes," disagreed to by the House; agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. O'MAHONEY, Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, and Mr. LA FOLLETTE to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the reports of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to bills of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 2192. An act for the relief of Andre Dachany;

H. R. 3543. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of James Thompson, a minor; and

H. R. 5452. An act making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the President pro tempore has appointed Mr. BARKLEY and Mr. BREWSTER members of the joint select committee on the part of the Senate, as provided for in the act of August 5, 1939, entitled "An act to provide for the disposition of certain records of the United States Government," for the disposition of executive papers in the following departments and agencies:

1. Department of Agriculture.
2. Department of the Interior.
3. Department of the Navy.
4. Department of the Treasury.
5. Department of War.
6. Post Office Department.
7. Alien Property Custodian.
8. Federal Communications Commission.
9. Federal Security Agency.
10. Federal Works Agency.
11. National Archives.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include therewith a brief statement by Mr. Fred P. Myers, of the Sons of Confederate Veterans.

Mr. LANE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. JOHNSON of California asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include an editorial.

Mr. PLOESER asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD.

Mr. BUTLER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include an address he made last Sunday.

Mr. MUNDT asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include an editorial from the Evening Star of last night dealing with the scuttling of the Preemployment Investigating Service of the United States Civil Service.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the Appendix of the RECORD an article from this morning's Post entitled, "Seventy-eight Miles per Hour Speed in Auto Costs Woman $175," and add my remarks thereto.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

ATOMIC ENERGY ACT OF 1946

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (S. 1717) for the development and control of atomic energy.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill S. 1717, with Mr. MILLS in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: On page 42, line 9, after the period, strike out the balance of the line, down to and including the period on line 12.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

COMPENSATION FOR PRIVATE PROPERTY ACQUIRED

SEC. 13. (a) The United States shall make just compensation for any property or interests therein taken or requisitioned pursuant to sections 5 and 11. The Commission shall determine such compensation. If the compensation so determined is unsatisfactory to the person entitled thereto, such person shall be paid 50 percent of the amount so determined, and shall be entitled to sue the United States in the Court of Claims or in any district court of the United States in the manner provided by sections 24 (20) and 145 of the Judicial Code to recover such further sum as added to said 50 percent will make up such amount as will be just compensation.

(b) In the exercise of the rights of eminent domain and condemnation, procedings may be instituted under the act of August 1, 1888 (U. S. C., title 40, sec. 257), or any other applicable Federal statute. Upon or after the filing of the condemnation petition, immediate possession may be taken and the property may be occupied, used, and improved for the purposes of this act, notwithstanding any other law. Real property acquired by purchase, donation, or other means of transfer may also be occupied, used, and improved for the purposes of this act, prior to approval of title by the Attorney General.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 45, line 12, insert:

"JUDICIAL REVIEW AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEDURE

"SEC. 14. (a) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 12 of the Administrative Procedure Act (Public Law 404, 79th Cong., approved June 11, 1946), which provide, when such act shall take effect, section 10 of such act (relating to judicial review) shall be applicable, upon the enactment of this act, to any agency action under the authority of this act or by any agency created by or under the provisions of this act.

"(b) Except as provided in subsection (a), no provision of this act shall be held to supersede or modify the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act.

"(c) As used in this section the terms 'agency action' and 'agency' shall have the same meaning as is assigned to such terms in the Administrative Procedure Act."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

JOINT COMMITTEE ON ATOMIC ENERGY

SEC. 14. (a) There is hereby established a Joint Committee on Atomic Energy to be composed of nine Members of the Senate to be appointed by the President of the Senate, and nine Members of the House of Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives. In each instance not more than five members shall be members of the same political party.

(b) The joint committee shall make continuing studies of the activities of the Atomic Energy Commission and of problems relating to the development, use, and control of atomic energy. The Commission shall keep the joint committee fully and currently informed with respect to the Commission's activities. All bills, resolutions, and other matters in the Senate or the House of Representatives relating primarily to the Commission or to the development, use, or control of atomic energy shall be referred to the joint committee. The members of the joint committee who are Members of the Senate shall from time to time report to the Senate, and the members of the joint committee who are Members of the House of Representatives shall from time to time report to the House, by bill or otherwise, their recommendations with respect to matters within the jurisdiction of their respective Houses which are (1) referred to the joint committee or (2) otherwise within the jurisdiction of the joint committee.

(c) Vacancies in the membership of the joint committee shall not affect the power of the remaining members to execute the functions of the joint committee, and shall be filled in the same manner as in the case of the original selection. The joint committee shall select a chairman and a vice chairman from among its members.

(d) The joint committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold such hearings, to sit and act at such places and times, to require, by subpena or otherwise, the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, to administer such oaths, to take such testimony, to procure such printing and binding, and to make such expenditures as it deems advisable. The cost of stenographic services to report such hearings shall not be in excess of 25 cents per hundred words. The provisions of sections 102 to 104, inclusive, of the Revised Statutes shall apply in case of any failure of any witness to comply with a subpena or to testify when summoned under authority of this section.

(e) The joint committee is empowered to appoint and fix the compensation of such experts, consultants, technicians, and clerical and stenographic assistants as it deems necessary and advisable, but the compensation so fixed shall not exceed the compensation prescribed under the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, for comparable duties. The committee is authorized to utilize the services, information, facilities, and personnel of the departments and establishments of the Government.

Committee amendments: Page 46, line 5, strike out "14" and insert "15."

Page 46, line 6, strike out "nine" and insert "eleven."

Page 46, line 8, strike out "nine" and insert "eleven."

Page 46, line 10, strike out "five" and insert "six."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

ENFORCEMENT

SEC. 15. (a) Whoever wilfully violates, attempts to violate, or conspires to violate, any provision of sections 4 (b), 4 (e), 5 (a) (3), or 6 (b) shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both, except that whoever commits such an offense with intent to injure the United States or with intent to secure an advantage to any foreign nation shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than $20,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 20 years, or both.

(b) Whoever wilfully violates, attempts to violate, or conspires to violate, any provision of this act other than those specified in subsection (a) and other than section 10 (c), or of any regulation or order prescribed or issued under sections 5 (b) (4), 10 (d), or 12 (a) (2), shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 2 years, or both, except that whoever commits such an offense with intent to injure the United States or with intent to secure an advantage to any foreign nation shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than $20,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 20 years, or both.

(c) Whenever in the judgment of the Commission any person has engaged or is about to engage in any acts or practices which constitute or will constitute a violation of any provision of this act, or any regulation or order issued thereunder, it may make application to the appropriate court for an order enjoining such acts or practices, or for an order enforcing compliance with such provision, and upon a showing by the Commission that such person has engaged or is about to engage in any such acts or practices a permanent or temporary injunction, restraining order, or other order shall be granted without bond.

(d) In case of failure or refusal to obey a subpena served upon any person pursuant to section 12 (a) (3), the district court for any district in which such person is found or resides or transacts business, upon application by the Commission, shall have jurisdiction to issue an order requiring such person to appear and give testimony or to appear and produce documents, or both, in accordance with the subpena; and any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof.

Committee amendment: Page 48, line 9, strike out "15" and insert "16."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 49, line 16, strike out "shall" and insert "may"; and strike out the words "without bond."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 50, add a new paragraph as follows:

"(e) All violations of this act shall be investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I have listened to the debate on this bill on atomic energy and have read a great deal of what I did not sit here and listen to during the past 3 or 4 days. I have never been so bewildered in my life or so disillusioned as I am about this legislation. I cannot find in my own mind why the bill has ever been brought here. I do not believe the ones who are sponsoring this legislation are for the legislation.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. REED of New York. Was not the gentleman astounded when he heard the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ELSTON] say that the provision relating to patents was not in accord with our patent laws but was in accord with the Russian patent laws?

Mr. RICH. I was not so much surprised at that statement because of the fact that the legislation has been brought in here without anybody wishing to be the father of it. No one wants to assume the responsibility for the bill. Where did it come from? Who wrote the legislation? Who is back of it now?

There is something rotten in Denmark, if I know anything about it. Why the membership of the House would sponsor legislation that so few Members know anything about is the most perplexing thing I have seen since I have been a Member of Congress.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. Not for the moment. I want to complete my statement because some of the fellows around this Chamber seem to think they know something about the atomic bomb. I know very little about it and the more I hear you fellows talk the less I know. Some men in the House know so much about the atomic bomb and the rest of us know so little about the atomic bomb that we are not qualified to vote for this bill. You had therefore better send it back to the committee where there will be an opportunity for the people of this country and the Members of the House to study it.

This world is in a terrible state of affairs. We are having uprisings, we are having revolutions, we have had wars. Who is fit to have destructive weapons more deadly than poison? This is supposed to be the most deadly weapon that has ever been presented to the Army of the United States, and no one is supposed to know anything about it but our own Army. The secrets are all supposed to be within our own Army, and that is the place where we ought to keep them. We should let the secrets remain in the hands of our Army until we know more about it, and until the Army is willing to convey information to us as to what the atomic bomb really is and what it will do, because they are experimenting with it and they are trying to find out just exactly what it will do. Certainly we should not give these deadly bombs to every nation to destroy other nations. If you had a deadly poison in your possession, you would not put it where it might harm another person. No, you would hide it so no one could get it. Let us do that with the bomb.

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GAVIN. We have faith in the War Department. That Department has handled this in a very satisfactory manner and until we find what direction world affairs are going to follow, we ought to mind our own business and keep this in the War Department. It belongs there. I agree with the gentleman from Pennsylvania that the proper thing to do is to recommit this bill and leave this matter lie for the time being.

Mr. RICH. I agree with the gentleman from Pennsylvania and I admire him because he and I think pretty much alike in most things. When I find that one thinks as I do I cannot help but take my hat off to him because a great many Members of Congress do not believe that I am right all the time, due to the fact they do not vote like I do. When it comes to this legislation, when I see the conditions that exist in the world today, and when I realize that the bomb and its secrets are held within our own Army, in my opinion, we ought to leave them there until we know more accurately what we are doing. Do not give the bombs to any nation that might use them against us. Do not give them to any other nation for fear they may be used against some other nation. If our Army retains them, then no others need to have them. They cannot harm any other nation. That seems to me to be just plain common sense. I shall vote to recommit the bill to the committee if given an opportunity.

For the best interests of the world in general and the United States in particular at this time, July 20, 1946, put the bill in committee, there to rest for a time, or else vote down the bill from passage at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, a point of order. The Members ought to be here to hear this debate and I make the point of order there is not a quorum present.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will count.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my point of order.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, as a result of the amendments that have been agreed to here in the last 2 days some of our friends in the world, if we can call them friends, and I hope we can, are beginning to give us some sugar-coated propaganda.

We read in the paper this morning that Andrei Gromyko, Soviet delegate, told the Atomic Energy Commission's scientists yesterday that nobody is asking for secrets; that what Russia wants now is a method of exchange of scientific data for the peaceful use of atomic energy. The chairman of that committee was Prof. Hendrik A. Kramers, of the Netherlands. The good professor had this to say:

With memories of 5 years under Nazi occupation, we are no longer idealists, we are realists.

That is just exactly what we want to be, realists. Irrespective of all the amendments that we have passed, I think we would be taking a tremendous risk if we permitted this bill to go to conference, because if the bill does go to conference we run the risk of having most of our amendments thrown out, opening the door for doing the very thing that we are trying to prevent; that is, opening the door to letting vital defense secrets go out to other nations of the world.

So, I say, irrespective of what amendments have been passed, let us not take a chance. Let us recommit this bill and put it in the safe of the Committee on Military Affairs until such time as that committee feels we have peace in the world, so that there will be no chance of the use of our vital secrets for war purposes.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DONDERO: Page 50, line 1, as a substitute amendment for the committee amendment, insert the following:

"All persons associated in any capacity with the development and control of atomic energy under the Commission and all violations of this act shall be investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice."

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, the amendment which has just been read at the Clerk's desk perhaps speaks louder than anything I could say from the floor. The bill as written provides that the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall investigate all violations under this act. The purpose of the amendment is that not only all violations should be investigated by the FBI, but that all personnel employed on this particular subject dealing with atomic energy shall have a fair and reasonable screening so that we will know that only Americans are on guard or interested in this mystic power. The national defense is involved in this legislation.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DONDERO. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. THOMASON. Does not the gentleman from Michigan think that the amendment offered yesterday by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH], and adopted, covers the entire field?

Mr. DONDERO. I think that amendment covers the field fairly well. I examined the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia again this morning, and the word omitted is the word "loyalty." It does speak of character; it does speak of association, and I think the amendment is fairly broad and to a very large degree would do what my amendment intends to do, with that one exception.

Mr. THOMASON. I supported the Smith amendment and I did it in the belief that you could surely trust the FBI about it. We give the FBI wide latitude to examine all personnel.

Mr. DONDERO. I have a very profound respect for the FBI, and I know that they do their work well. My purpose in offering the amendment is as I have stated. I desire to strengthen the hands of this agency. Of course, it was on the Clerk's desk before the amendment of the gentleman from Virginia was offered and adopted. This amendment would protect our Government and the secrets related to this awesome and strange power.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the Chair understand the gentleman to withdraw his amendment?

Mr. DONDERO. Not for the present, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, of course, I do not think that any amendments are going to help this bill. All the perfumes of Arabia would not sweeten it to where I could vote for it.

But if you are going to adopt any amendment at all, you should adopt the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan. If you are not going to test the loyalty of these men, how are you going to get rid of the traitors who are spying in every department of the Government? Look at what they caught out here at Aberdeen day before yesterday? What were they there for? Stealing military secrets to give to our enemies. If you are not going to test their loyalty, you might as well wipe out the Smith amendment.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. We have already provided for that in the amendment adopted yesterday.

Mr. RANKIN. I do not believe you did. Not only that, it is not provided for elsewhere. Everybody knows that when you permitted the commissioning of Communists you packed them into the War Department over the protest of our military leaders. They are packed into every department of this Government, if you want to know the truth of it, and the Committee on Un-American Activities knows it. Let us get rid of these subversive elements that are trying to undermine and destroy America.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. ELSTON. Does not the gentleman feel that it is just as essential that there be the strictest kind of supervision as it is to punish after the crime is committed?

Mr. RANKIN. Certainly. The way to prevent crime is to keep the criminals out.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MAY. I call the attention of the gentleman from Mississippi to the fact that the House Committee on Military Affairs participated in the investigation of those things, too, with good results.

Mr. RANKIN. Yes, and the House Committee on Military Affairs has been here all the time these subversive elements have been packed into the War Department. I am not criticizing the members of that committee, but our officials have not been on the alert as they should have been or they would not have had those subversive elements packed into the various departments of this Government.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. MUNDT. Does the gentleman agree with me that it is equally important to set up a suitable screening process to prevent those engaged in un-American activities from being employed in the first instance?

Mr. RANKIN. It is infinitely more so. What good did it do to arrest John Wilkes Booth after he had shot the President?

Mr. MUNDT. That is correct. For that reason, I called to the attention of the House this week the fact that the Budget Bureau has literally scuttled the whole preemployment investigative service of the United States Civil Service Commission. I think before we adjourn the Congress should take steps to set up that investigative service again.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman saw in the papers yesterday that five people were fired at the Aberdeen Proving Ground.

Mr. RANKIN. Yes; I spoke of that on the floor. I read the names into the RECORD. Not one of them is a real American.

Mr. RICH. If they are Communists, the War Department did the right thing in getting them out.

Mr. RANKIN. I understand, but the thing is they should not have been there in the first place. There has been too much laxity in permitting these subversive elements to crowd into the various departments. That is what I am kicking about. Just as sure as you leave any opening at all they will crowd in, and you will find that they will betray the American people, and the first thing you know if they have their way our people will be blown to pieces with this atomic bomb.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. The amendment I have offered is simply intended to strengthen the enforcement provisions of this bill.

Mr. RANKIN. I know that.

Mr. DONDERO. It seems to me that no harm can be done by adopting it.

Mr. RANKIN. Certainly not.

Mr. Chairman, you have just had an example. If there is a man in this House that does not know that communism is the enemy of everything for which America stands, he ought to drop over to St. Elizabeths and get a mental examination.

If there is a human being in this House that does not know by this time that communism is dedicated to the destruction of our form of government, our economic system, and our American way of life, as well as Christianity itself, then he ought to go over to St. Elizabeths and get a mental examination.

Just the other day one of the greatest crimes in all the history of mankind was perpetrated in Yugoslavia. They murdered Mihailovich. I have a picture here of the American airmen picketing the Yugoslav consulate. That is a picket line of which I approve.

It shows there that they were the ones that were saved by this man that the Communists murdered. And that is the gang that wants to get their hands on the atomic bomb.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

ATOMIC ENERGY INVESTIGATION SHOULD NOT BE LIMITED TO GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES ONLY

Mr. DOYLE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, on yesterday we turned back to any individual in this Nation the right to purchase secretly or acquire and control atomic energy at its source without regard to our national safety and also the right to manufacture military weapons for private gain. That naturally means that individuals in this country, and companies and corporations, and possibly Communists in this country have been given the right by your vote on yesterday in adopting the substitute on the section 11 to manufacture atomic energy for military weapons without prior disclosure to the United States Government. In fact, you opened the door by your deletion on yesterday of the patent section of the bill S. 1717 as it came from the Senate to subversive persons who do not wish to disclose their invention to the United States Government, of inventions for military purposes in the field of atomic energy. I challenge anyone to read the amendment you adopted in place of original section 11 as of yesterday, and show if my statement just now made is erroneous in any particular. I estimate that on yesterday, 90 percent of the Members of the House never had previously read the amendment or the substitute on which you voted relating to section 11 because there were not enough copies on the floor so that we could all read them. And, I know you cannot well contradict me when I say that the substitute of over 2 pages was a complete reversal of the policy of the original bill. My point is this: Why do you people keep talking about subversive elements only in the lists of Government employees when on yesterday you turned this over to any one, any place, and at any time to acquire, use, or produce—outside of the United States Government? Why do you not apply the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Michigan to the employees of private industry too? Why do you assume that there will be no subversive or unpatriotic influences in employment in private industry and let all who have anything to do with atomic energy outside Government go without being checked by the FBI? Do you not suppose that some private persons in and out of private industry may possibly be subversive or unpatriotic in their secret and undisclosed use of atomic energy for the purpose of making money? This proposed amendment to have the FBI only investigate employees of the Commission is entirely inadequate. I say to you, if you are going to turn over the control of the manufacture of military weapons as you yesterday voted to do to private industry for the purpose of making money out of war, then you are also under an obligation to have all who work in private industry with atomic power likewise investigated by the FBI. Can anyone tell me why it is sound to apply it to Government employees only?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOYLE. I yield.

Mr. RICH. Do you think for a minute that any employer in the United States would employ a Communist if he knew he was a Communist? There certainly is not an employer in the whole United States who would do that.

Mr. DOYLE. I will say to the gentleman I think there are people in America who would employ most any tactics to make piles of money. Yes, they certainly might.

Mr. RICH. That fellow then is not an American.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOYLE. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey, a member of the committee.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. I assume from what the gentleman from California says that he does not approve of the bill. Therefore, are you going to vote to recommit the bill?

Mr. DOYLE. I am not going to vote to recommit the bill even if the patent section is left out of the bill, the way it was originally. I am saying that I am opposed to any subversive influences in Government or in our American life any place. I am opposed to the sabotaging of any part of our American form of government. I am absolutely opposed to un-American activities of any kind anywhere, by anybody. But why do you men limit the FBI investigation for loyalty to Government business relative to atomic energy? You and I know—I know—I have practiced law for 25 years—that some men are said to have been subversive and unpatriotic enough for the purpose of making millions of dollars who have not been Government employees either. Why did you put in the death penalty yesterday if you did not think it was fundamentally necessary to protect all the people of our beloved Nation from unpatriotic treason in the matter of atomic energy? It is necessary to protect the American people against subversive activities regarding this atomic energy, in industry, as it is to protect against it in the departments of Government, when you turn the manufacture of military weapons out of atomic energy over for the purpose of making money. Yes, you voted yesterday to make it so American industry can make more money profits out of war. So thereby it encouraged war.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOYLE. I yield.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. We have already seen instances where the patents themselves were the principal elements in cartel agreements whereby we know there was an exchange of information between big corporations.

Mr. DOYLE. Certainly. In other words, by yesterday's vote we turned the manufacture of military weapons, with the element of atomic energy in them, over to the purpose of making money profit, so that they could be manufactured without let or hindrance by anybody subject to the Government buying them at fabulous prices by condemnation or otherwise. By yesterday's vote, the only time that you require disclosure by a man who has invented a military weapon that uses atomic energy, is 60 days after he makes up his mind that it has some military value and then he is only required to file a report with the United States Government. The Government does not even have an exclusive option to acquire the atomic weapon; no, not even for a day.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman from California if he is so concerned about the character of the people to be employed by private industry if he would support an amendment to the Wagner Act to give the private employer a chance to have a little discretion concerning the character of the people he employs.

Mr. DOYLE. I think the gentleman is going far afield in trying to here attack the Wagner Act. I do not think it is pertinent to this matter at all.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I am not going far afield. I know that that is one great problem that private industry is faced with in trying to eliminate subversive employees.

Mr. DOYLE. I will answer the gentleman that I am so concerned with the protection of this atomic energy for my beloved Nation in its need for control of it for military purposes, at least, that I am willing, I am anxious, I am insisting, if you please, that if you are going to investigate anybody that is concerned with the manufacture of atomic energy for military purposes, you investigate everybody by the FBI who is involved or associated with development of atomic energy. What are you afraid of? Surely no responsible manufacturer or patriotic businessman is afraid to be himself or have his employees all checked up.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE] has expired.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, and I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, the purpose is to say to the gentleman from California [Mr. DOYLE] that under the ruling of the National Labor Relations Board in interpreting the National Labor Relations Act, all through the war employers engaged in the manufacture of munitions were violating that act if they even questioned the loyalty or called attention to the criminal or subversive record of any employee who was working for them. Will the gentleman go far enough to support an amendment to the Wagner Act to make it possible for an employer to expose the traitorous activities of his employees?

Mr. DOYLE. Why are you trying to sidetrack the issue in this debate today? Why do you not stick to the subject?

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I am not trying to sidetrack it. You mentioned the specific instance of the manufacturer of atomic energy. Why do you not include the manufacturers of munitions of war, submarines, and all the rest of the things needed in war? Why do you not go the whole length? Why not protect the Nation from traitors in any and all factories? Are you just trying to raise a smoke screen?

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. RANKIN. I am of the opinion that the gentleman from California is supporting this crazy FEPC, that would close the mouth of every businessman when they would go to investigate their employees.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. The point I am making, and the only point I am making, is this: The gentleman from California [Mr. DOYLE] is deeply concerned, and rightly so, if I understand him correctly, by a condition which he believes exists where employees of private individuals who might be engaged in some phase of work looking toward the construction of the atomic bomb may be disloyal or engaged in subversive activities and might carry on their disloyal schemes without in any way being amenable under this act.

But the danger is not limited to the employees of those who may be engaged on some phase of the work looking toward the production of the atomic bomb.

Let me repeat, under the National Labor Relations Act, as interpreted and administered by the National Labor Relations Board, an employer is guilty of an unfair labor practice if he calls attention to the fact that an employee, or an organizer of the union seeking to organize his employees, or a bargaining agent chosen by the union, is or has been a traitor to our Government; has in the past or is at the moment engaged in disloyal or subversive activities.

Ten years ago attention was called to this situation; to the necessity of amending the National Labor Relations Act. But the Congress, either because of lack of courage or inclination, has refused to accept amendments which I have offered and which would have corrected this dangerous and outrageous situation.

The idea that a convict, a criminal, a man engaged in preventing industrial production, a man representing an organization seeking—not the good of the worker, not the welfare of the union or of the country, but endeavoring to put over a scheme whereby he may force workers to pay tribute for the exercise of their constitutional right to work for a livelihood, is so preposterous that it never would have been accepted had it been clearly understood by our people.

In my opinion, it would never have been permitted to exist and continue if the Members of Congress realized the situation and used their best judgment.

The denial of the right of the employer to tell the truth about one who is carrying on subversive activities, to expose an organizer who has a criminal record, is even more absurd.

Some day the Congress will be forced by public sentiment to rewrite the National Labor Relations Act. Such legislation was offered by me in 1939, and another bill looking toward the same purpose will be introduced by me in the opening days of the next session of Congress, if I am reelected.

It is my purpose to push amendments to this act as vigorously as lies within my power.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the remainder of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. PHILLIPS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment again be reported.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will again report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

There being no objection, the Clerk again reported the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DONDERO].

The CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DONDERO].

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the committee amendment, as amended.

The committee amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which is at the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ELSTON: On page 48, line 22, after the designation "C", strike out the remainder of line 22, and all of line 23 preceding the word "shall."

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, I do not know of anything that has been the subject of more complaint in this country during the past few years than the practice of Government agencies in making regulations, and then acting as judge, jury, and executioner with respect to their enforcement. Congress has been largely to blame, because Congress has consistently given to these Government agencies the power and the authority to make such regulations and to enforce them. In a great many cases the agencies have exceeded the power extended by Congress, and in that respect, of course, Congress is not to blame, but we will be at fault if we enact section 16 in its present form. If we do so, we will confer on the Atomic Energy Commission the power to make any kind of order or regulation it sees fit, within the sections of the bill referred to in this section. In subsection (b) of section 15 it is provided:

Whoever willfully violates, attempts to violate, or conspires to violate * * * any regulation or order prescribed or issued under sections 5 (b) (4), 10 (d), or 12 (a) (2), shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 2 years, or both.

If the act is committed with intent to injure the United States the penalty is much heavier.

This section, in my judgment, is unconstitutional, because the Supreme Court of the United States very definitely decided in the case of Schechter v. U. S. (295 U. S. 495), that Congress does not have the power to delegate to any agency of the Government lawmaking power unless Congress specifically lays down the policies and fixes the standards under which the regulations may be issued. We have not even attempted to do that. We simply give to this agency the power to make regulations or orders under certain sections of the bill and then provide that there may be prosecution and punishment for the violation of those orders. It is not even specified that the orders have to be in writing. Any kind of order that the Commission may make, within the authority of the sections mentioned, if violated, would subject the alleged offender to punishment. So if we pass this bill in its present form we will witness an extension of that much-criticized and un-American policy of charging American citizens with the violation of orders that they perchance never heard of. This section is a violation of the Constitution if the law as laid down by the Supreme Court of the United States in the Schechter case is still the law of the land.

The fact that we have not laid down the policies and established the standards requisite to conferring lawmaking authority upon the agency is just another reason why this bill should be recommitted to the Committee on Military Affairs for further study. Later on, after full consideration, if we want to confer on any agency the power to punish persons for violations of regulations and orders, we should fix the standards under which those prosecutions can be carried on. This will avoid such criticism as has been incident to prosecutions carried on by OPA and some other governmental agencies for a number of years.

The Military Affairs Committee did not have the time or the opportunity to set up any standards such as would be required if we were to make this act constitutional. This bill came to us from the other body and we were urged to report it out immediately. We were told to read the hearings before the committee. In other words, we were to place a rubber stamp on the bill and bring it to the House for consideration without amendment of any kind and without hearings. Some on the committee insisted that we at least read the bill for amendment. Had that not been insisted upon, there would have been no amendments. I am not criticizing our chairman because he permitted the bill to be read. What I am seeking to point out is that we did not have the opportunity to give this bill the consideration it deserves. If we recommit it, it will have that consideration.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Chairman, this amendment ought not to be adopted unless it is just a part of the general plan to kill or recommit the bill or wreck it with crippling amendments.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield.

Mr. ELSTON. I do not believe the gentleman wants to be unfair. There is no such idea as that in mind. We have offered amendments that have been adopted on the floor of the House time after time and the amendments that have been adopted were adopted because a majority of the members of the committee voted for them.

Mr. THOMASON. I do not want to be unfair, but I am taking the gentleman at his own word, because after he offered his amendment he said the thing to do is to recommit the bill. In other words, the big objective on the part of some seems to be to recommit the bill. That is all we hear. It seems to me, when it was admitted by those opposed to the bill at the beginning of the debate that it is perhaps the most important bill that has come up during this session of Congress or during the session of any Congress, because it involves the life and death of peoples of the world. It is our duty to meet this issue squarely. We have a solemn duty and should face it.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. BROOKS. The gentleman is a lawyer and a scholar, too. There is no law on the statute books at the present time regulating the handling of atomic energy. Does the gentleman feel no law is better for handling this matter than some law?

Mr. THOMASON. I disagree with what I am sure is the sincere conviction of my friends, especially those on the left, who want to recommit this bill. I certainly hope that does not happen. This bill ought to go to conference.

I do not know why the Congress of the United States, the House of Representatives and Senate, should not work its will and try to pass adequate legislation on this subject. You do not have to adopt any conference report if one should happen to come back here later. I do not think we should leave a power as tremendous as atomic energy in the hands of a few Army people when we are going to have a peace conference meeting in a few days, when we are having all these experiments out in the Pacific and we are going to have some more. We want to try to get the atomic-energy proposition developed for peacetime pursuits, for the development of electrical energy, power, and medical research. To say that we will not give it some kind of study and make an effort to get some kind of bill into conference is beyond my comprehension.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Ohio is not quite accurate as to what happened in the committee. I am certain that I am well within the truth when I say that for 6 weeks last fall we had hearings on the original so-called May-Johnson bill covering the entire field of atomic energy. Of course, it is a new subject, it is a great subject; nobody knows very much about it. When the Senate bill came to us a month ago, I must admit there was a deliberate filibuster in the committee, but even so, the filibuster succeeded until there developed a quorum. Every line in this bill was read. Amendment after amendment was offered to the bill. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ELSTON] and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. THOMAS] were always present demanding a quorum and when we lacked a quorum, a point of order was raised. So, nobody can say it has not had full and fair consideration.

The amendment now pending, offered by the gentleman from Ohio, would say that you set up a Commission, yet you will not give that Commission any power to issue regulations or to enforce its orders. I challenge you to go back into the history of this Government and find any department, whether it is the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Treasury Department, the Internal Revenue Department, the Commerce Department, Civil Aeronautics Authority, and many others that does not have the power to issue its own regulations and, also, the law carries with it the power of enforcement; otherwise there is no use having it for the simple reason you cannot write all details into the act itself.

Mr. Chairman, I sincerely hope the pending amendment will be defeated and that this bill will not be recommitted.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto do now close.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the pending amendment and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes, to be equally divided between the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. THOMAS] and myself.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. THOMAS].

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I think at the present time there is a movement on foot to make certain that this bill will go to conference. If it goes to conference, there will be a tremendous difference of opinion between the Senate bill and the House version, and one of two or three things will take place. One is that the conferees will continue to sit almost indefinitely and the adjournment of the House will be delayed probably at least a week, because it is my guess that the Senate conferees, particularly one of them, would never agree to these things in the House version, and that some of the House conferees would never agree to some of the things in the Senate version.

So the only thing to do, as the gentleman stated, is to recommit this bill to the Committee on Military Affairs for continued study and to make certain also that we keep the bill locked up until such time as we see what the world peace picture will be like.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAY].

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I do not care to discuss what a conference may do with respect to this legislation. But I would like to point out in defense of myself and my committee that we held 2 weeks of executive sessions, and I ultimately called a night session for the purpose of trying to get this legislation to the floor of the House, and that session was broken up by a filibuster.

What I want to say about the pending amendment is that section 5 (4) (B), section 10 (D), and section 12 (a) (2) refer to the question of reports relating to source material. They refer to records of activities of the Commission relating to civilian use of atomic energy. They relate to health and safety regulations. If those are not subjects on which the Commission ought to be permitted to write regulations, then the bill ought not to be passed, or anything at all in connection with it, because this is merely a simple, plain authorization of the Commission to do things that every other commission in the Government does without regard to the seriousness of the topic under consideration.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAY. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. ELSTON. I know the chairman wants to be fair in referring to the night session he has in mind, in which he said a filibuster occurred. Is not this the fact, that the chairman set the meeting at 7 o'clock and nobody made any move to even make a point of order that a quorum was not present until the time fixed by the chairman? The chairman indicated he would wait until 7:30, and the committee graciously waited until that time, and it was not until that time that the point of order was made that a quorum was not present, and a quorum was not present; is that not correct?

Mr. MAY. We were lacking one member of having a quorum, and about 1 minute before the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. LUCE] entered the room certain members of the committee got up and walked out.

Mr. ELSTON. There was no assurance that we would have a quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. ELSTON) there were—ayes 62, noes 45.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MICHENER. I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, this debate has resulted in confusion worse confounded. I think everybody in the House, on the committee and off the committee, know less today about the bill than they thought they knew when debate began. It is a sad condition.

I have heard no one on or off the committee reporting the bill who is satisfied with it. Without any desire to be critical, I do not recall that any member of the committee has attempted to explain all its provisions. The debate has been illuminating but not clarifying. The close attention I have given to the debate has not helped much.

The McMahon bill has been widely propagandized. The average citizen knows little about it other than that it has the approval of certain persons and certain groups, and that it was intended to assure civilian control, rather than military control, of atomic energy. I believe that most of the people in the country prefer civilian control. I am not unmindful of the fact that many of those addressing us within the last few days are convinced that for the present military control is preferable.

The fact that the Secretary of War and the military authorities appeared before the Military Affairs Committee and endorsed the McMahon bill as it came from the Senate is significant and persuasive, although in no sense conclusive.

It would appear that the longer the debate continues, the greater the uncertainty and the doubts arising in the minds of sincere, conscientious Members who want to do that which is best for our country in this crucial matter. Indeed, there is a growing sentiment in the House that the bill should be recommitted. In this case, as a practical matter, that means kill it now. There should be more consideration before the bill as reported, or the bill as amended, is placed on the statute books. That consideration can only be had in the Military Affairs Committee or in a conference committee composed of Members of the Military Affairs Committee of the House and the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate. This is the usual and the orderly procedure; that is, if this bill passes the House it will then go to conference for this needed reconsideration and rewriting. I usually favor such a course unless I want to kill a bill absolutely and put an end to its study.

I shall therefore vote to send the bill on to conference. It would seem that the debate has furnished abundant evidence that we will be doing an idle thing if we recommit the bill and have any serious expectation that it will come back to us in more acceptable form.

Mr. Chairman, it has been forcibly urged that time is not of the essence in disposing of this measure, and that inasmuch as there is so much confusion the wise course is to kill the bill and start all over again at some later date. If one is of that opinion, then a vote against the bill will make his position definite and understandable. The fact that a special committee in the Senate has worked long weeks on the Senate bill, that the House committee has done likewise, and that the Senate as a whole and the House in Committee of the Whole have freely changed and amended the bill, should have some weight in determining the course we are to pursue.

In these circumstances I am constrained to vote to pass the bill on to conference and against killing it. The final vote will then be on the conference report; that is, an opportunity will be given to vote for or against any bill which represents the result of an effort to compose the differences between the House bill and the Senate bill. There are many differences and they are vital. There is argument either way.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LANHAM: On page 48, line 11, after the figure "(3)", strike out "or", and after "6 (b)" insert "or 11 (g)."

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, I am sure there will be no conflict about this amendment.

Mr. MAY. No; we have no objection to that amendment.

Mr. LANHAM. It simply makes the enforcement provisions applicable to the pertinent paragraph of the patent section.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

REPORTS

SEC. 16. The Commission shall submit to the Congress, in January and July of each year, a report concerning the activities of the Commission. The Commission shall include in such report, and shall at such other times as it deems desirable submit to the Congress, such recommendations for additional legislation as the Commission deems necessary or desirable.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 50, line 5, strike out "16" and insert "17."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 17. As used in this act—

(a) The term "atomic energy" shall be construed to mean all forms of energy released in the course of or as a result of nuclear fission or nuclear transformation.

(b) The term "Government agency" means any executive department, commission, independent establishment, corporation wholly or partly owned by the United States which is an instrumentality of the United States, board, bureau, division, service, office, officer, authority, administration, or other establishment, in the executive branch of the Government.

(c) The term "person" means any individual, corporation, partnership, firm, association, trust, estate, public or private institution, group, the United States or any agency thereof, any government other than the United States, any political subdivision of any such government, and any legal successor, representative, agent, or agency of the foregoing, or other entity, but shall not include the Commission or officers or employees of the Commission in the exercise of duly authorized functions.

(d) The term "United States," when used in a geographical sense, includes all Territories and possessions of the United States.

(e) The term "research and development" means theoretical analysis, exploration, and experimentation, and the extension of investigative findings and theories of a scientific or technical nature into practical application for experimental and demonstration purposes, including the experimental production and testing of models, devices, equipment, materials, and processes.

(f) The term "equipment or device utilizing fissionable material or atomic energy" shall be construed to mean any equipment or device capable of making use of fissionable material or peculiarly adapted for making use of atomic energy and any important component part especially designed for such equipment or devices, as determined by the Commission.

(g) The term "facilities for the production of fissionable material" shall be construed to mean any equipment or device capable of such production and any important component part especially designed for such equipment or devices, as determined by the Commission.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 50, line 13, strike out "17" and insert "18."

Page 51, line 10, after "States" insert "and the Canal Zone."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 53, line 2, after "device", insert "peculiarly adapted for and."

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, in order to ask a question of the chairman of the committee.

If I read the text correctly, if the committee amendment on line 2 of page 52 is adopted, facilities for the production of fissionable material will have to be both capable of production of fissionable material and peculiarly adapted for that purpose. In other words, unless I am mistaken—and if I am, I want to be told so—the definition, if the committee amendment is adopted, would not cover a device which was capable of the production of fissionable material but which was not peculiarly adapted for such purpose. I wonder whether the committee did not really mean to say "peculiarly adapted for or capable of such production"? It seems to me that would make for good sense, but as it is, with the word "and" in there, it would not.

Mr. MAY. The committee felt that when it used the language "peculiarly adapted for and capable of such production" that would cover any equipment that was necessary to be used.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I am afraid it will not.

Mr. MAY. It would not take away from a business concern something that might be made that could possibly be used for that purpose when it is not being so used.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I think the gentleman is correct in what he just said, that it would not cover some method of producing fissionable material which was not peculiarly adapted for that purpose, but which might have been devised for some other purpose and later found to be capable of producing fissionable material.

Mr. MAY. The committee thought that it did not make any difference at all whether the word "and" was used or the word "or."

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I think it makes a great deal of difference, and I am therefore against the amendment.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, my purpose in rising is to urge that the bill be not recommitted, but that it be sent to conference. The passage of legislation in relation to the control of atomic energy is a matter of vital concern to our country. This bill is taking the regular legislative course that all legislation takes. It has been passed by the other body. It is now being considered by us and a large number of amendments have been put in the bill as a result of the exercise of the judgment of the majority of the Members of the Committee of the Whole. Of course, that is as it should be, under our form of government. No one can object to that procedure whether they agree with the amendments or not. That is the will of the majority. This is a bill not only of vital interest to the country but with far-reaching effects throughout the world. I hope the Members will not vote to recommit the bill but will send it to conference. I have refrained from saying much on the bill because I realized there were a lot of honest differences of opinion with respect to many aspects of the bill and with reference to many of the amendments that have been offered. I want to talk on what I consider to be the basic proposition involved here, which to me is the most important thing. We must think logically about the situation. This matter has been considered by the Committee on Military Affairs for many months. There were several weeks of hearings on the May-Johnson bill. When that was reported out I can testify as majority leader of the House that every effort was made to have the bill programmed at once. I would not agree to that. My friend, the gentleman from Kentucky, in carrying out the instructions of his committee, did everything he could. But I felt that this was a matter on which we had better hold back a little. I said, "Let us look into it further. A special committee has been appointed by the Senate and they have had extensive hearings on it."

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield.

Mr. MAY. If the bill goes to conference, the House will still have another opportunity to pass on it if a conference report comes back?

Mr. McCORMACK. Absolutely.

I urge the membership not to recommit the bill. It would be an unwise step to take. It would be construed as the defeat of the bill. Technically, of course, we know that that is not so, but actually you and I know when a bill is recommitted, so far as any bill is concerned and so far as this bill is concerned, it is defeated. The passage of the bill is defeated. This bill has taken the ordinary course through legislative processes. It has passed the Senate. It is about to be acted upon in the House with a number of amendments. We all agree that something should be done. We are all in agreement on that basic proposition. Certainly, we must have confidence in the members of the conference committee on this bill the same as we have in the members of conference committees on other bills. All they can do is their best. They are representing both branches of the Congress. Whether I agree with a conference report or not, I have confidence in the men who represent the legislative body of which I am a Member and of the other body. They are doing the best they can. They are following the dictates of their judgment and their conscience. We ought to follow the regular ordinary course with reference to this bill.

Every one of us is in agreement that something should be passed. I hope the bill will not be recommitted.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield.

Mr. COOLEY. I would like the gentleman to tell us some sound reason why it should not be recommitted.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is not the question.

Mr. COOLEY. That is exactly the question.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is not the question. Can the gentleman give me any sound reasons why it should be recommitted?

Mr. COOLEY. Yes.

Mr. McCORMACK. What are they?

Mr. COOLEY. If I had the time I could give you a hundred reasons.

Mr. McCORMACK. You could give me a hundred emotional reasons, but the fact is the country needs this legislation.

Mr. COOLEY. Why?

Mr. McCORMACK. Why? It is of vital importance.

Mr. COOLEY. Why?

Mr. McCORMACK. Oh, why. There are a hundred reasons why it is of vital importance. Oh, it is easy to sit there and ask the question "Why?" I am surprised at the gentleman from North Carolina who ordinarily has better judgment than that. The important fact is that this bill has been considered by this committee for several days. It has been considered by the Military Affairs Committee for weeks. It is a matter of vital importance to send it along to the conference committee.

Is the gentleman opposed to some legislation to control atomic energy?

Mr. COOLEY. At this time; yes.

Mr. McCORMACK. Are you opposed to it at any time?

Mr. COOLEY. No; not at any time.

Mr. McCORMACK. The gentleman admits that legislation is necessary. The gentleman can take his own responsibility.

Mr. COOLEY. That is exactly what I am doing.

Mr. McCORMACK. The gentleman can take his own responsibility. The fact remains that if this bill is recommitted, as far as the country is concerned they will consider it a defeat of the bill, and the people of the country are justified in considering that if the bill is recommitted, the bill has been defeated.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mrs. LUCE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, it seems perfectly plain to everyone in this House and in the Nation that there is confusion here about how to vote on this legislation. In passing, I have been reading the newspapers in the past 3 or 4 days, with close attention to their opinions and reporting of this subject, and I have yet to find anything in the papers which clarified the Congress' mind about this legislation, and much calculated further to confuse them.

Mr. RIVERS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. LUCE. I yield.

Mr. RIVERS. Will you please give the House the benefit of some of the reasons whereby you think it is so necessary at this time to pass this legislation?

Mrs. LUCE. I shall come to them later, although I have given them repeatedly during the course of this debate. Now the majority of the newspapers and their columnists, just like the Members, are often for or against this legislation, it seems to me in many instances, for altogether wrong reasons.

For example, there is one school that seems largely to advocate this bill as a peacetime measure for the cure of cancer and leukemia. Now, there happens to be a bill, H. R. 4502, on cancer research which has just been reported out of the Committee on Foreign Affairs of this House and I hope will be on the floor of this House today for our consideration, appropriating $100,000,000 for experiments and research in cancer.

The bill concerns an effort wholly devoted to the search to defeat the dread disease. I intend to vote for it, and I hope with all my heart that everyone else will vote for it. But the bill before us is not a medical therapy bill. If its passage does eventually result in further beneficial research in cancer, it will only do so incidentally. The main reason for this bill is the defense of our Nation, and for no other reason should it be considered as urgent.

I intend at the proper place in the bill to offer an amendment providing that this act shall expire at the end of 7 years. Seven years, I believe, is a most generous length of time in which to find out whether this bill will work or whether it will not; whether we need it or whether we do not; whether it will fulfill all the promises for welfare that are made in its name for science; or, most important of all, whether it will operate in a free country in peacetime without constricting both scientific research and our political and economic liberties.

Mr. EATON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. LUCE. I yield with great pleasure to our most distinguished colleague.

Mr. EATON. Will the lady please give us her judgment of what will become of the atomic bomb during the 7 years? Who will be in control of it?

Mrs. LUCE. I have first been asked by the gentleman from South Carolina to try to give some reasons for the urgency for the passage of this bill. I would feel in a weak position indeed if all I could say when asked that question was, Why that should be perfectly apparent; anybody ought to see why plainly. I believe that many Members of this House sincerely do not see why it is necessary. I will tell you why I think it is of great importance that we should pass a civilian-control bill now, although some provisions of the Senate bill have been stricken out that I would have left in and some put in that I would have left out, but the reason I think it is important to pass this bill is that, first, we must maintain and acquire complete control of the raw materials for making atomic bombs. Secondly, that control must be necessarily civilian, because civilian scientists and others who will be needed in a long-range atomic research and experiment plan just will not work in a brass-hat atmosphere. You can like it or not, but they will not work under such conditions.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. LUCE. I yield.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. Will the gentlewoman tell me why we cannot now obtain the materials for the manufacture of the atomic bomb just as well as if we had this legislation?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentlewoman from Connecticut has expired.

Mrs. LUCE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for three additional minutes and to revise and extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Connecticut?

There was no objection.

Mrs. LUCE. The gentleman's question was why can we not have Government control of raw materials?

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. No; that was not what I asked. Under the present emergency legislation, war emergency legislation, we are in a position now to get all the materials necessary to manufacture the bomb.

Mrs. LUCE. There are a great many corporations, companies, and businesses which have materials to sell, or mine, in the atomic field. For example, thorium happens to be fissionable material. Today the people producing thorium do not know whether to continue their operations or to stop them; they do not know whether to make contracts with the Army, or to wait and make contracts with some civilian authority, or whether they should make them under the old free-enterprise system; in fact, everybody who has fissionable material, plants, structures, or anything whatsoever to do with atomic energy is exactly in the same position the country is in about OPA now. There is confusion in the entire field owing to uncertainty about this legislation.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. That is because of the policy of the administration trying to force this bill through Congress at this time. If they adopted a definite policy I do not know why they could not get it. It must be mined in order to provide the material necessary for the manufacture of atomic bombs. We did it in war. We are still at war.

Mrs. LUCE. Yes; but the war acts must one day expire.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. LUCE. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. I wish to make two short observations. One is that we can buy the materials under the law we have on the statute books at the present time, the Strategic Material Stock Pile Act; the other is that if the main purpose of this bill is defense——

Mrs. LUCE. That is what I conceive is its proper purpose—defense; and I want an expiration date to it when there is genuine peace in the world.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. If the main purpose is defense, then 7 years is too long.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. LUCE. I yield.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. There is a great deal of difference between the Government being able to buy enough fissionable material to make bombs with on the one hand, and having a commission able to prevent somebody from possessing fissionable material that may prove very dangerous, on the other hand. Is it not the second reason, even more than the first one, with which we should be concerned?

Mrs. LUCE. That is quite correct. There must be a consistent, intelligent, coherent control over the export, ownership, and acquisition of fissionable material, and there also must be freedom to the scientists. I think there are provisions in this bill which are definitely socialistic in character. I consider that my position on this bill, that it is necessary to vote for it, while at the same time, I am concerned to point out its dangers in order to guard against them, is consistent.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentlewoman from Connecticut has again expired.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I have heard during the debate here much talk about confusion and I have also heard much talk about recommitting the bill. The question was asked just a short time ago, Why the necessity for this bill?

May I not refer those who wish to know of the necessity for this bill to the hearings, and particularly Secretary of War Patterson whose evidence is on page 17:

> In May 1945, in anticipation of the probable success of the atomic bomb and of the prospect of an early end of the war, the Secretary, with approval of the President, took steps to initiate a long-range policy on atomic energy. He appointed the following special committee to survey the subject and to submit it a program: Secretary Stimson, chairman; James F. Byrnes (then a private citizen); Will Clayton, Assistant Secretary of State; Ralph Bard, Under Secretary of Navy; George Harrison, Special Assistant to Secretary of War; Dr. Vannevar Bush, Chairman of the Office of Scientific Research and Development; Dr. Karl Compton, president, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Dr. James Conant, president, Harvard University.
>
> The special committee was assisted by a scientific panel drawn from the most eminent scientists working on the atomic energy project: Dr. J. R. Oppenheimer, Dr. E. O. Lawrence, Dr. Arthur H. Compton, Dr. Enrico Fermi.

This special committee made findings that are worthy of the attention of any man, the last one, No. 6, I should like to call your attention to, quoting:

> The activities of the commission to be consistent with foreign policy and national defense as communicated to the commission by the President.

Are we, merely by a cursory view or reading of this bill and the hearings, going to stand before the country today and say that we will put up our puny minds on this subject against the great scientists of this country? Are we, who have not studied this problem, for political or other purposes going to stand here today and say that with a matter involving as much as this we will disregard everything that has been said by those who know and cast it all away, and then say we do not need this legislation?

Ah, my colleagues, before you come to your conclusion, let me pray in behalf of this country of ours that we all love that you give serious consideration to the work of the Senate committee, the House committee, and the scientists of this country.

Mrs. DOUGLAS of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BULWINKLE. I yield to the gentlewoman from Illinois.

Mrs. DOUGLAS of Illinois. Is not one reason why we need at once a long-term program the retention of top-flight scientists and research workers? I had the privilege of visiting Oak Ridge in January, and the officers in charge insisted that the imperative need was to get at once a long-range program, because they were daily losing competent men on their staff, and without a plan they could not keep them.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Certainly, the lady is correct in her statement.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

> Amendment offerd by Mr. LANHAM: Page 50, line 16, insert a new subsection, as follows:
>
> "The term 'nuclear fission' shall be construed to mean that process which takes place in nuclei wherein the nucleus is split into fragments, at least two of which contain a substantial fraction of the mass of the original nucleus."

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, nuclear fission is referred to all through the bill, and I think there should be a definition of it. This definition is probably correct; if not, it could be changed; but it certainly has the approval of a very distinguished gentleman who from the very beginning has been connected with all of the operations with reference to atomic energy.

Does not the chairman think that there should be some definition of it, since you are giving definitions of the various other terms mentioned in the bill?

Mr. MAY. I have no objection whatsoever to defining the term; and if it is not properly defined in the gentleman's amendment, that is another reason why it ought to go to conference, where we can sit down deliberately and see what the exact, proper definition is or whether this is proper or not.

Mr. LANHAM. But the conference would have no authority unless there was something in the bill by way of definition.

Mr. MAY. I think that is possibly true, and this will certainly give them an opportunity to do it.

Mr. Chairman, I have no objection to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, mankind has always been afraid of the unknown, Mankind was afraid of influenza when it struck this country during the last war. It has been afraid of all diseases until a remedy has been found. Mankind is today afraid of cancer. Why? Because its cause is unknown. Its cure is not certain.

I think a great deal of the confusion in this House over atomic energy can be placed directly at the door of the unknown quantity. Research is nothing more than reaching out into the unknown, taking something that we have not known about and bringing it down to practical application. The scientists in this age have reached out and tapped the field of atomic energy and the many problems involving it. It seems to me that this House ought to do the thing that will take atomic energy and then use it for the benefit of mankind. How that is going to be done, I do not know, and I do not think this House knows. There are many unknown roads to travel before we reach the ultimate end of what will happen with atomic energy. That is one cause of the confusion today. We cannot pull back the curtain of tomorrow and see just what is to happen with this new-found force. It is a great destructive power. It should be harnessed for the benefit of mankind.

I wish the bill could have more study, but I will not stand in the way of progress represented by this great new discovery.

As Members of Congress we ought to approach this problem with open minds, with the hope of going down a road that will eventually take this great secret that scientists have reached out and brought down to us and use it for the benefit of the world. Perhaps we could outlaw atomic bombs in future wars. That would be ideal. Whether it can be done or not I do not know.

I heard the gentlewoman from Connecticut say that scientists would not work with the brass hats, or something like that, but I do not agree. Of course, scientific knowledge goes on regardless of this bill. I am not worried about whether cancer research will continue if we do not pass this bill. Scientists work, and have been working for years, on what causes cancer. Some day we may find out what causes cancer, we may find a cure for it. Neither do I think the knowledge of the atomic bomb will stay here in America. Science marches on and this knowledge of atomic energy will be universal. Scientists the world over are thinking along the lines of what atomic energy can do today. Other nations will have it, although they may have some difficulty in getting that intricate machinery that goes into the production of atomic bombs. But it does seem to me that with the peace conference to be held next week there perhaps is no hurry about passing this particular atomic-energy bill. What harm is there in waiting until the thing has had time to boil down and simmer a bit. Perhaps in 6 months we will be wiser and confusion will subside. The more you think about the unknown the less fearful you become about the unknown. If the bill is not recommitted for further study, I shall join with the majority and trust that, under the bill, science may march on and the powers and benefits of atomic energy will bring great benefits to the world.

Mr. EATON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I have been sitting here through every hour of this debate. I do not claim to have as much intellectual equipment or scientific knowledge as many of my colleagues, but I have managed through the past 22 years once in a while to vote intelligently. That privilege is going to be denied me today.

I have three convictions as a result of these weary days: First, we have created the atomic bomb. It was done with our money and our scientists under military control at the time. That is our responsibility as a people and a government, the gravest responsibility that has ever rested upon a nation in the history of the world.

Second, I am convinced that it is a serious mistake to have kept this legislation until the dying hours of this session of Congress, when we are harassed to death with a thousand claims and calls and are looking to get away from here, and are unable to give the attention and time to it that we ought to.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EATON. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MAY. I call the attention of my friend, when he says it was a mistake to keep the legislation back to this late hour, to the fact that the House Committee on Military Affairs reported a bill on the subject the 7th day of last November and urged its early consideration. I do not think we ought to be blamed for what has happened, in view of the fact that the Senate bill came to us, and we commenced hearings on it immediately.

Mr. EATON. I am not blaming anyone, I am just stating a fact.

Lastly, I join with the very brilliant and beautiful lady from Connecticut, if she will allow me to join with her, in being completely confused. When a mind such as she possesses is confused, what can you expect of a mere man?

So I say today that no matter how I vote I have not the slightest idea whether I am voting wisely or unwisely. I am inclined to cut the Gordian knot by voting to recommit this bill to the committee.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EATON. I yield.

Mr. HINSHAW. The gentleman has been a very distinguished representative of this body at the San Francisco Conference and at other conferences of an international character. Can the gentleman give us the benefit of his wisdom as to the immediate need for passing this legislation?

Mr. EATON. I am not profoundly acquainted with the reasons to be presented in answer to that question, but I can conceive of no immediate urgency from the point of view of the international organization at this time.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EATON. I yield.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Speaking of the alleged immediate urgency, the gentleman will recall that the War Department is now entering into contracts with universities for further research in this field so that research will not cease.

Mr. EATON. So you understand, then, that the urgency is not immediate?

Mr. WADSWORTH. It is not immediate; that is correct.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EATON. I yield.

Mr. CHURCH. The gentlewoman from Connecticut has said that there was much of the socialistic in this bill. Does the gentleman not believe that in the next year there will be less of that trend in the then membership and in the country and that it is better to delay legislation on this question?

Mr. EATON. I do not see any immediate urgency for the passage of the bill.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto do now close.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I move that the debate on this section and all amendments thereto do now close.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 18. (a) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary and appropriate to carry out the provisions and purposes of this act. The acts appropriating such sums may appropriate specified portions thereof to be accounted for upon the certification of the Commission only. Funds appropriated to the Commission shall, if obligated by contract during the fiscal year for which appropriated, remain available for expenditure for 4 years following the expiration of the fiscal year for which appropriated. After such 4-year period, the unexpended balances of appropriations shall be carried to the surplus fund and covered into the Treasury.

(b) Such part as the President may determine of the unexpended balances of appropriations, allocations, or other funds available for expenditure in connection with the Manhattan Engineer District are hereby transferred to the Commission and shall be available for expenditure for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against subparagraph (b) on page 52, lines 18 to 23, inclusive, on the ground that it constitutes an appropriation and may not be reported by the Committee on Military Affairs, which is without jurisdiction to report appropriations. I am constrained to make this point of order, Mr. Chairman, for two or three reasons. The appropriations now carried in the War Department appropriation bill for $375,000,000 were made in a larger amount than would have been made for 1 year only because the Budget request was for only $200,000,000. The additional $175,000,000 was added in place of contractual authorizations for obligations to mature in fiscal 1948. The total appropriation was made for the military features of the atomic service. It is now proposed that these appropriations be transferred for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act, which is much broader, providing for loans, providing for the development of civilian production and licensing, and many other features not contemplated in the appropriations for the Military Establishment. Consequently, this paragraph constitutes an appropriation, and I make the point of order that it may not be reported in this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Kentucky desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. MAY. I do not, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. MILLS). The Chair is ready to rule. In the opinion of the Chair, the language referred to by the gentleman from South Dakota, beginning on line 18, page 52, and extending through line 23, is in violation of clause 4 of rule 21. Therefore, the Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. MATHEWS. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MATHEWS. What was the correct number of the section just read by the Clerk?

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk had completed the reading of the bill through line 23 on page 52.

Mr. MATHEWS. But what is the correct number of the section just read?

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk has not yet reported the committee amendment.

The Clerk will now report the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 52, line 16, strike out "18" and insert "19."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, as most Members know, I have opposed the amendments, with one or two exceptions, which have been adopted to this bill.

I rise at this time, none the less, to beg the House not to recommit it. The confusion that has been referred to is largely confusion that has been created—I shall not say deliberately—in the course of debate. The conception of the bill as it came to us from the Senate is absolutely clear to anyone who really wants to understand it.

It was almost a year ago that the first atomic bomb was dropped. A Member of this body, responsible for the welfare of the Nation, who, 1 year after that greatest event since the birth of Christ himself upon this earth, is willing to tell his constituents that he does not understand the over-all problems of it well enough to legislate upon them, strikes a blow at democratic Government itself. We must be able to deal with this our greatest problem if we are to prove that democratic parliamentary legislative Government can justify its continuance in the new and admittedly dynamic and in some respect fearsome age in which we live.

The question is, Do we have the courage to face the world as it is; not as we would like it, but as it is? A vote to recommit this bill means that domestic control over fissionable material and atomic energy will not be adopted at least until the Congress meets next year. Such a vote will be tantamount of cause to defeating the bill and will mean that sporadic possession and sporadic use of this most dangerous element ever to face mankind can go on. Such a vote will mean a repudiation, in effect, of the official position of this Government as laid before the other nations of the world in the Baruch Proposal for the international control of atomic energy, because, unless we here establish domestic control first, we cannot expect other nations to agree with us for international control. And unless that international control be established during the period of America's unquestioned pre-eminence in this field, our chance to get that international control will be minimized immeasurably, and a continuing atomic race becomes inevitable.

Furthermore, the choice and alternative that we face is briefly this, if this legislation is recommitted, this House puts its stamp of approval on a continued armament race in atomic weapons. We would be resting the fate of this Nation in some miraculous stopping of the minds of scientists in every other nation in the world. For we would fail to make provision, as every bit of competent evidence tells us we must, for the continuance of atomic energy development at home. In other words, if we recommit this bill, we fail to say that we will do everything within the power of this House to stop an armament race in atomic weapons, and we will be saying instead that this House will have no part in what other agency of this Government has attempted and is striving to do, namely to get control in the hands of men over this engine of destruction, which otherwise will destroy him.

For my part, I am not willing to sell the future safety of my children and yours for any cheap political effort to save myself in the next few years. This is a matter for the ages. This House cannot turn this legislation down, Mr. Chairman, and be true to our duty.

For if we raise our sights even for a moment above the level of secrets that elementary reason teaches will be secret for only a moment of time, above the level of political slogans, about the level of the desires of some forces in this country for private profit—if we will raise our sights to the great stark facts we face we shall see beyond them but two visions, one is a vision of the four horsemen more terrible in mien than ever a World War I author could possibly paint them. The other is a vision of the stars themselves and the universe whence atomic energy has come, which of these visions will constitute the actual fact of our children and children's children, depends, believe me, on what we do in this solemn hour.

I cannot blame Members in the slightest for feeling this is most difficult; indeed, I cannot even blame them personally for wishing, as by their votes and speeches many of them have indicated they wished that atomic energy had never been released. But I can, and do most earnestly, beg them not to continue to commit their country's course on such a wish which they know is contrary to the basic facts of our life.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield.

Mr. HINSHAW. Will the gentleman tell me if any other nation of the world has transferred its atomic-energy program to the domestic field?

Mr. COOLEY. Not that I know of.

Mr. FOLGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. Very briefly.

Mr. FOLGER. What other nation has the atomic bomb besides this Nation?

Mr. COOLEY. I do not know of any.

Mrs. DOUGLAS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield.

Mrs. DOUGLAS of California. The question was asked if any countries had transferred their atomic-energy program underneath civilian control. The English have their entire program underneath civilian control, and the Army or the Navy does not appear anywhere in their program.

Mr. COOLEY. I hope the lady's answer is satisfactory to the gentleman who propounded the question.

I asked the majority leader to give the House one sound reason why this bill should not be recommitted. I did not do that with the idea of bringing about any embarrassing situation to him because he had the floor. In the hours and hours of debate I have listened for some sound reasons to be given by someone as to why it was not wise to recommit this bill.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I do not know whether the gentleman can give us any sound reason or not, but if he can, I am very glad to yield to him.

Mr. WILSON. The chairman of the committee just a few moments ago made the statement that this bill was reported out of the Committee on Military Affairs 8 months ago and had not been acted upon. Can anyone tell me now why there should be such haste to act upon it, when 5 months from now we will be back in session again?

Mr. COOLEY. I agree with the gentleman.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield.

Mr. BLOOM. I merely want to say that the very interesting speech made by the gentleman from California, I think, gives more than one reason why this bill should not be recommitted.

Mr. COOLEY. No, it does not. The gentleman from California did not give any reason except——

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. The first reason is to make sure that America continues to get fissionable material in the future.

The second reason is to prevent that fissionable material from getting scattered all over the Nation with people using it for all sorts of purposes.

The third reason is to establish a continuous centralized control in the hands of this Commission to prevent that thing from happening.

The fourth reason is that if you are going to talk at all about getting that international control then the first thing you have got first to do is to have domestic control.

The first reason is that the most distinguished people who studied this question, the scientists, the economists, the chiefs of staff, the President of the United States, the State Department, and everybody else who knows anything about it has told you that it was necessary to act now.

Mr. COOLEY. Now, to sum up the reasons that have just been given by the gentleman from California, he apparently is very much afraid at the present time that the secrets of the atomic bomb are being given away or that research in the field is being retarded or will soon be abandoned and that all of the scientists will cease to work on this newly discovered, mysterious, and most terrific of all powers. He recites the fact that others have been giving thought and consideration to the matter, that great scientists have worked on it, that the Military Affairs Committee members have considered it. I believe, and I hope he will agree, that the secret is now being safely guarded; research is continuing and will not be impeded and will not be abandoned.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DINGELL. The gentleman has asked why we should pass this? Will the gentleman state precisely why he is opposed to favorable action at this time?

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I will be very glad to tell the gentleman why I am opposed to it. The secret now is adequately safeguarded, it should be safeguarded, and should remain as a military secret until peace documents have been written and signed. We should hold this weapon of war.

I do not believe it has been recognized or established as a cure for cancer. The gentleman from Minnesota, Dr. JUDD, has not yet established his theory of mutating the species by radioactivity, on which the charming lady from Connecticut commented yesterday.

Mrs. LUCE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield to the gentlewoman from Connecticut.

Mrs. LUCE. I had not at that time read Dr. JUDD's exceedingly brilliant explanation of the processes of mutation as they appear in yesterday's RECORD. You will find there a complete description as to radioactivity in this field and how it may have brought about the creation of dinosaurs and other monsters in prehistoric times.

I want to say also that I welcome this opportunity to say that my own remarks on the subject were a humorous attempt to focus attention on the incredible potentialities of radioactive energy. If we do not control the bomb, it might be a good thing for someone to mutate the species, so we could all escape from it, and change us into groundhogs or moles or, better still, provide us with wings, because I am sure it would be nice to have them here. If we do not stop devising weapons of slaughter, we are not likely to have wings in the hereafter, that is certain.

What is much to be preferred to the mutation of the species is that we should all begin to use the gray matter and the brains with which the Lord so abundantly provided us many millions of years ago. If we will use our brains on this matter, we need not worry about mutation of the species, because we will not take any risks with human life, and we will send this bill to conference.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I want to answer the gentleman's question.

Mr. DINGELL. The gentleman stated that he feared the possible disclosure of secrets if this is placed in the hands of a commission. Is there anything in the bill that threatens any such possibility?

Mr. COOLEY. I do not think we need to take any others in with us to help share the secrets of the atomic bomb. I regard the atomic bomb as one of the greatest instrumentalities of death ever devised by the genius of man. You do not have to guess about it. All you have to do is to go to Nagasaki and Hiroshima and see the results of it there. If we are going to remain strong, if this is an instrumentality of defense, then pray tell me why should we give it up?

Mr. DINGELL. We are not giving it up.

Mr. COOLEY. Why should we be so anxious to let Russia or any other nation on earth know the secrets of this deadly weapon that we have in our hands? I would like to ask a question of the gentleman from California. Does the gentleman believe that if the situation were reversed and Russia had possession of this secret that she would give us full information about it?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. No; and I do not believe that there is a line or a dot in this bill that proposes to give it to anybody, and if there were, I would be against the bill. What there is in this bill is the establishment of the kind of control in the hands of a commission that will make it clear and to prevent that happening until such time as we have international control over it.

Mr. COOLEY. What is the gentleman's objection to the present method of control? What is the gentleman's objection to guarding it with soldiers and controlling it as it is now being controlled?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. The present method of control does not extend at all to development throughout the country. The present method of control, as I explained over and again in the debate, does not reach fissionable material in the hands of any Tom, Dick, and Harry in this Nation. It does not prevent the development of production of any weapon that anybody may want to produce.

Mr. COOLEY. My friend seems to be alarmed over the possibility that fissionable material may fall into the hands of individuals or private corporations and that such individuals or corporations might make greater strides in development and production than will be made under our present set-up, and he seems to be under the impression that this newly created Commission will guard more carefully both the material and its development. This is about the frankest expression that I have heard in support of the bill. Technically, we are still at war, and certainly, no individual or corporation would dare attempt to seize upon fissionable material or undertake experiments which would clash with the plans and programs of the armed forces. This is a deadly instrumentality, and it should be dealt with in deadly fashion. The atomic bomb was the weapon that ended, suddenly, the world's greatest conflict. While it destroyed human life, it likewise saved human life, because it ended the war. It was a climax to cruelty. Certainly it it not unreasonable to argue that atomic energy as a weapon of war or defense should be perfected before diverting our attention and the attention of scientists to a discovery of other peacetime uses in which it may be developed.

Is this bill an act of appeasement? Are we being forced by diplomatic pressure to surrender "the big stick," the atomic bomb, before even our allies will discuss the terms of peace? This country is tired of appeasement. This country is tired of pussyfooting. We should be more determined and insist upon free, frank, and open discussions. What do we know about Russia's postwar programs, demobilization plans, or experiments in the field of atomic energy? Will the passage of this bill cause Russia and other nations to abandon all experiments and discharge all scientists and abandon their exploratory efforts or even to submit to international control the information which they have obtained thus far? Why, Russia will not even permit American military men or civilians into Korea or into certain sections of Manchuria. It is not even safe for Members of this Congress to fly over territory which is now occupied by the Russians. They have not accorded us even the privileges of cooperation and understanding. There is constantly a tense feeling in China, and especially in the northern portion of that poverty-stricken nation. In China we seem to be playing both ends against the middle. We are told that we are equipping and supplying both armies—the army of the Central Government and the army of the Communists. Our men are still wondering why they are in China. They know that the war is over and they want to know why they are not permitted to return home. General Marshall has been given the world's greatest and most difficult diplomatic assignment, but I venture the assertion that there are areas with which he is dealing into which he would not even be permitted to travel in search of pertinent information. What kind of partnership is this? With what kind of ally are we dealing? Not even the members of our great Military Affairs Committee know anything at all about Russia's postwar programs, and yet we are about to run the risk of surrendering the greatest military secret of all times and even before the terms of peace have been agreed upon. Yes; I am for control of all the secrets of the atomic bomb and will continue to be for the control of such secrets until the terms of peace have been agreed upon and adequate international machinery has been provided for the future control of all phases of the development in the field of atomic energy.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina has expired.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto do now close.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CASE of South Dakota:

Page 52, line 13, strike out "four years" and insert "one year."

Page 52, line 13, strike out "four-year" and insert "one-year."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota.

The amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEPARABILITY OF PROVISIONS

SEC. 19. If any provision of this act, or the application of such provision to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the remainder of this act or the application of such provision to persons or circumstances other than those as to which it is held invalid, shall not be effected thereby.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 53, line 2, strike out "19" and insert "20."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MATHEWS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MATHEWS: On page 53, after section 20, insert the following new section:

"PERFORMANCE OF CERTAIN ACTS

"SEC. 21. Whenever by the provisions of this act any license is necessary, any act required or any act prohibited, which license cannot be procured or which act cannot reasonably be done or refrained from for the reason that the Commission is not fully organized, staffed, and functioning, then such license shall not be necessary, or such act required or prohibited until the President, by proclamation, shall declare that the Commission is fully organized, staffed, and functioning."

And renumber the last section to be section 22 accordingly.

Mr. MATHEWS. Mr. Chairman, I conceive this to be a most important and practical amendment. It takes care of the situation which I endeavored to point out to this committee day before yesterday, that the moment you pass the act and the President signs it, no one can do certain acts, possess certain materials or facilities without either the approval of, or a license issued by, the Commission. I pointed out at that time and I repeat emphatically that by the time the President appoints this Commission and it is confirmed by the Senate, and additionally, as I suggested the day before yesterday and as you have now put into this bill by amendment, there might properly be and now must be an investigation by the FBI of all the proposed personnel to be put in this bureau, it will be months and months or a year, perhaps, before this Commission is functioning and can give its approval to anything or issue its license for anything. What happens in the meantime to the people who have produced this atomic bomb and who are working on this thing?

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MATHEWS. As soon as I have explained the amendment.

Mr. MAY. The gentleman asked what happens in the meantime. I want to tell him what will happen.

Mr. MATHEWS. As soon as I finish my statement I will be glad to yield to the chairman of the committee.

How can these people proceed in an orderly fashion to keep abreast of the development of the uses of these things in industry, which is for the good of mankind, as explained by the proponents of the bill, if they have to have a license from a commission which does not exist or the approval of a commission which does not exist, to continue that very work which it is our purpose to keep up so that we may keep abreast of and, in fact, ahead of the rest of the world?

Perhaps the chairman has an answer, but to my mind if this bill is passed without such an amendment as this you are not only going to throw the industry engaged in this work into terrible confusion, so that they will not know what they can do or cannot do, but you will have subjected them to the punishment of fine and imprisonment for violation of the act. I think an amendment of this kind ought to and must be adopted if you are to save the very people who are developing this industry for you.

Now I yield to the chairman of the committee to answer that question.

Mr. MAY. The answer to the question is that in the interim covered by the gentleman's amendment it may be possible for large industries or small industries or anybody in the world to buy up and corner all the fissionable material in the country and then hold it for a fabulous price from the Government.

Mr. MATHEWS. That does not answer the question I have raised. What about legitimate people who are now using this in their business and who will continue to use it for the benefit of mankind? What about the situation spoken of by the gentleman from New York, the investigation and the possession of these materials in the meantime under contract with the Government? Yet this act, passed later than any other act, says they cannot do it without the approval of or a license from a commission which does not exist and will not exist for some time. You will create the greatest legal difficulties I ever saw, in my opinion, unless you adopt this amendment.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MATHEWS. I yield to the gentleman from Idaho.

Mr. WHITE. I wonder if the chairman of the committee knows that another committee of the House has reported out a bill to take possession of the ores in the ground wherever they exist?

Mr. MATHEWS. I would not know, but that might or might not be a practical proposition.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment and ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

There was no objection.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Mr. Chairman, if I may have the attention of the gentleman from North Carolina, I would like to give an answer to his question. At the same time, may I say that I am opposed to the amendment that was offered.

Any future inventions will be patterned on the preliminary work already done in the field of atomic research, which has been paid for by about $3,000,000,000 of the public's money. The situation is different than if all the work done so far, all the inventions made, and the applications used, had been developed by private industry, private researchers and inventors, using their own funds. The Government sponsored all atomic research and inventions, paid for it, assigned the personnel to do the work. There is no reason under the sun why private individuals and corporations should now get control through taking advantage of discoveries and research made possible by vast sums of money paid out by the taxpayers.

The bill provides just and adequate compensation for any development which may be contributed through private resources, but we want the public protected against such development being monopolized and withheld from public use until the individual or corporation responsible for the discovery decides it may be released and just how it may be released.

I cannot stress too strongly that since any future invention will be based on work which has already been done by the taxpayers' money that we are fully justified in demanding that the public's rights be fully protected.

Do not forget that no small company is ever going to be able to afford the research necessary for further development and application of atomic energy. Only the largest corporations with their untold funds will be able to indulge in this research. Unless we are very careful we are likely to encourage the development of private monopolies in atomic application just as we have permitted private monopoly in the development of and use of other public utilities.

Of course private industry wants complete control of the patents, and when I say private industry, I mean large private industry—not the small fry. For years there has been agitation to change our patent laws so that new devices and inventions can be made available to the public more readily. This fight over the patents brings to the front the real fight over this whole atomic energy issue. The insistence on military control under the guise that our secrets must be kept is merely a front for this fight on who will control the patents—private interests or the Government. If the private interests fail in this patent fight, they will depend on the military control angle, and the restriction of atomic energy development for military purposes only, in the hope that the development of atomic energy for civilian purposes will be postponed until such time as a more responsive Congress may enact legislation more suitable to their prime purpose of getting control of all new inventions and uses through the power of controlling the patents.

This Congress has a wonderful opportunity to see that this new power is really developed for and by the people. We were not mature enough as a nation to understand the potentialities of other God-given resources when we permitted private interests to step in and take control. The issue is, Will the atom be used for the profit and benefit of the people or will the benefits to the people be subordinate to the profits of private interests?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for two additional minutes.

Mr. ARENDS. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last five words.

Mr. Chairman, I have refrained from speaking on the bill during the time that we have debated it because there is evidently a great deal of confusion in the minds of many here as to the advisability of this legislation at all. On the other hand, there is no question about the fact that science is going to stop its experiments and research whether this legislation is passed or not. I am inclined to believe the Senate certainly must have had in mind the protection of the Nation and its natural resources and the dangers of this atomic energy if it were released promiscuously, when they passed this bill. On the contrary, we have amended the bill to such an extent that it is now in such a state that it is doubtful whether we all believe the things that we have added to the bill. One of the amendments which I am particularly concerned about which was adopted here a few moments ago on a voice vote, was the definition of nuclear fission. The gentleman who offered the amendment may have been sincere in his intentions, but the definition of nuclear fission in a bill passed by the Congress will carry a great deal of authority. If it is not properly defined, it is going to be a matter of ridiculousness in the minds of the public, or it is going to be looked upon as the correct definition of nuclear fission, whether it is correct or not. I recommend that this bill go to conference and that the conferees consider the definition of nuclear fission as defined in the Smythe report which is much more scientifically correct, if there is going to be any definition of nuclear fission in the bill at all.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield.

Mr. HINSHAW. I think the House should understand that my distinguished colleague from California is a chemical engineer. His words are of value at this time.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I thank the gentleman. I have spent years in chemistry, in metallurgy, in the manufacture of steel and aluminum, and in explosives in the manufacture of nitroglycerin, nitro-starch, and tetra-nitro-anilin before entering public service when atomic energy was revealed as an explosive. I became vitally interested in and have done considerable study on the subject. It is a highly scientific subject. It is difficult to legislate on. Scientific research and development should not be curtailed by legislation. It is an inherent characteristic of men and women of science to use their talent for the good of mankind, not for destructive purposes. Most of the progress we have made in extending life and making living more comfortable has come from scientific research and development.

I do not want to appear as an expert on atomic energy, although I appreciate the reference of my colleague because, although the revolution of atomic energy is new, in science it is as old as the hills. We have only discovered the uses of it. The defense that we are trying to protect against here is a defense for and from destructive purposes. We certainly should do nothing by legislation that would interfere with the development research and uses of atomic energy for the industries, the arts, and sciences.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield.

Mr. COOLEY. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM], in offering the amendment, confessed that he was not convinced that the definition was accurate, but he merely put it in the bill so that the conferees could discuss it later.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I appreciate that. I am only adding my contribution to it so that the conferees may have it before them. I believe the definition in the Smythe report is as accurate as you can define it. I think we have the framework of a good bill here and I do not think it should be thrown out altogether. It should go to conference. I doubt very much if the secret about which we are all talking—as a matter of fact there is no secret in the creation and formation of atomic energy. There is a secret with reference to the specific destructive force that it produces. No private corporation will get hold of that. They will not spend the amount of money necessary to develop it for that purpose. We are protecting that secret with as much security as we have in the Army and Navy and the FBI.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield.

Mr. DINGELL. The gentleman's idea of the Smythe suggestion is an excellent one, but let me ask the gentleman this question: Is there anything in this bill that will disclose the secret to anyone outside of these United States?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I may say to the gentleman, I am concerned about the broad powers that are given to the Commission, and the added personnel that would be developed under the Commission, and the fact that if you allow these things to go through too many minds, they are likely to leak out and get into the wrong channels. As it is now, I have every confidence the Army is protecting the secret.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

Mr. TIBBOTT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. TIBBOTT. Mr. Chairman, from the standpoint of my duty as a Member of this body and to justify my position on this bill, it is my conscientious belief that this measure should be returned to the committee for further study and consideration. While I realize that there are many who believe that the committee's bill on atomic energy should be adopted now, nevertheless, it seems to me that we are acting in too much haste. I have arrived at this conclusion after listening carefully to the arguments both for and against the bill. As the situation stands I cannot give the bill my support as there are so many confusing provisions in it that, to my way of believing, do not give our country the protection to which we are entitled. For the time being and until peace is restored throughout the world, I am of the firm belief that the secrets of the atomic bomb should be kept entirely within the confines of our own Nation. Until such time as the committee brings in additional evidence in support of their position, I am compelled to vote against the passage of the bill before us.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. ROBSION] is recognized.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, we have all watched with interest the efforts of our country to build a just and lasting peace and to set up an organization that would prevent aggression and the horrors and burden of wars in the future. But in that effort backed by our administration and the heart, soul, and mind of the American people we have seen our efforts frustrated from time to time so that we were unable to write a workable charter and we have been unable to bring the countries together to write or agree upon a treaty of peace. The country that has obstructed all the way, all the time, has been Russia. It has created a spirit of alarm in this country and we are continuing to draft teen-agers and keep and maintain 1,600,000 of our boys in foreign lands and in camps here and on the seven seas of the world, at great expense to our Nation. This year with a deficit facing the country the Congress has already voted the enormous sum of $12,000,000,000 for the Army and the Navy. This is one-half of the cost of World War I. The administration says all this is necessary. Why? They claim that there is danger. Russia is the threat. Now, if it is so necessary to draft our teen-agers and keep large armed forces throughout the world and spend $12,000,000,000 this year to strengthen our military and naval power, we must guard zealously our atomic secret today. We must not, while the world is in turmoil, make it possible for any potential enemy to obtain this war secret, the most powerful aggressive and defensive weapon the American people have? I have heard throughout this debate expressions of doubt as to how far we should go. The bill has been greatly amended and I think improved. But it is still not clear what type of men will be appointed on that Commission or the persons who will make up the large number of personnel. There could be a leak. Now, without a peace treaty, with a world still technically at war, shall we give away this mighty secret weapon? I am in favor of recommitting this bill and giving more time for study.

Russia is not surrendering any of her military secrets; she has rejected all plans submitted by us and other peace-loving nations. This secret—know-how—of the atomic bomb is in the safekeeping of our military with other secrets. This is the most priceless of all. We know and the world knows we are a peace-loving Nation and will not use it except in our own defense and to preserve the peace of the world, but what will happen if some other nations get possession of this secret before a treaty of peace is signed and there is still discord throughout the world.

This bill as amended sets up a Commission of civilians and one military man. They do not have the right to give away our atomic bomb secret. The Congress and the American people should be vigilant. Some delay until Congress meets next January would give time to determine if the world's problems can be solved in a peaceful way, and we can know more about Russia's attitude.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. FOLGER] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. FOLGER. Mr. Chairman, I can hardly understand what is going on in the House. It is the strangest situation from any point of view that the mind can conceive, if one has a mind, as to why a concerted, apparently well-developed campaign should be put on in this body to destroy this legislation. Is it politics? I would not make that accusation. I do not wish even to think that even in the inmost private recesses of my soul.

Mrs. LUCE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FOLGER. I yield.

Mrs. LUCE. I do not think anybody in this House would dream of accusing anybody in this House of jeopardizing millions of lives and perhaps civilization itself for political reasons. There is not a man that low in this House. If there were he should be shot.

Mr. FOLGER. The gentlewoman has stated about what I have stated, that not in the inmost recesses of my soul would I think such a thing. Then, is it due to the fact that many of us have failed to inform ourselves on this subject, when the President of the United States, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, the State Department, the scientists who discovered atomic energy have asked for this legislation? It was not an invention, it was a discovery, for nuclear energy has been here all the time. We just have discovered it and made ourselves able to apply it.

I want to read you a fine statement, and, as my opinion, the following:

The carefully considered measure for control of atomic energy passed by the Senate has now been warped beyond all recognition. The chance we may have if we subscribe to that view is that in the conference we may unwarp some of these things that have been, in my opinion, thoughtlessly injected into this legislation.

On the pretext of preserving secrecy, the House has voted to void the principle of civilian rule, as though Americans are not to be trusted simply because they do not wear a uniform. And then, by way of making ludicrous even its own pretenses, the House voted to make secrecy impossible by eliminating the Senate provision for a Government monopoly in the atomic field and providing, instead, for private patents to develop the most potent force the world has ever known. This vital legislation must not now be killed. The House has a positive obligation to act, however inadequately. If it does so, perhaps something that makes sense can be worked out in conference with the Senate. It it fails to act the Army will be left in the stultifying control which has already driven the men of science from the field. What is at stake is far too urgent, far too vital to the Nation and to the world, to be settled by craven default.

It is admitted that in this bill it is not expected we can pass a perfect piece of legislation and we may under necessity, from time to time, to offer and adopt amendments to it; but I suggest to the Members of the House that this bill, as it comes to us from the Senate, is as nearly a perfect answer to the obligation of the United States, to its own citizens and the rest of the world, as the mind of man can conceive under the circumstances. A postponement of this would be a likely disaster to the Nation and probably to the world. Men and women, I plead that you may not scuttle this important bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. MATHEWS].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MATHEWS) there were—ayes 32, noes 67.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SHORT TITLE

SEC. 20. This act may be cited as the "Atomic Energy Act of 1946."

With the following committee amendment:

Page 53, line 9, strike out "20" and insert "21."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mrs. LUCE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mrs. LUCE: On page 53, after line 10, insert the following:

"DURATION OF ACT

"SEC. 22. (a) Except as provided in subsection (b), the provisions of this act shall expire 7 years after the date of enactment of this act.

"(b) (1) The provisions of this section shall have no force or effect if, at the expiration of the 7-year period referred to in subsection (a), the United States is then engaged in war with any other nation.

"(2) One day prior to the expiration of this act all property owned by the Commission and described in paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 9 (a) shall be transferred to such agency of the Government as may be designated by act of Congress, and after such transfer no such property shall be disposed of by the agency so designated except pursuant to provisions of law enacted after the date of enactment of this act specifically authorizing such disposition."

Mrs. LUCE. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that there is little confusion about the character of the Senate bill before amendment. But many are confused about whether or not we should vote for it. We are torn between a distaste for the vast dictatorial domestic powers it confers on the five-man commission, and our fears that without it we shall endanger our national security in a troubled world.

When scientists read the debate on this floor they will no doubt be appalled by our ignorance of the subject of nuclear energy, and the silly unscientific things we have said about it. But when we read some of the things scientists say about the purpose and effect of domestic legislation, they also sound a little silly to us. We are ignoramuses in their field, but they are not exactly Daniel Websters in ours. If the world were at peace we could each stick to our own last. But it is not, unhappily. The threat of war has combined in this bill the scientists' field and ours. I apologize to the scientists for any of my scientific errors or malapropisms in this debate, which natural ignorance of the subject occasioned. But none of us owe any apology to the scientists for telling them that this bill is pure socialism. Indeed they should thank us for it, for of all men American scientists passionately love liberty. It is the liberty they have enjoyed in the past which has enabled us to grow great as a scientific nation. It is the business of a legislator to point out to them, and all the people, just what effect this law may have on their liberties, when peace comes. Moreover, I do not see why any Member should be criticized for stating a fact which the able Senator from Connecticut, a man of intellectual integrity, stated himself several times—that this bill is unprecedented, unique, and that it should never set a precedent for any other legislation. So, in saying that its unique and unprecedented aspect is precisely its totalitarian aspect, I am only repeating what Senator MCMAHON and his committee developed in their hearings, and in the few hours of debate the Senate had on the matter.

Is it wrong for a legislator to be honest with the people? I have been honest, in any case, about what I thought this bill signified for the Nation's future, if it stays on the books when the long international crisis that brought it into being is past. I have been equally honest in saying that I agree with the Senators, and I agree with our Members who think that although this is very bad medicine—socialistic medicine—indeed, the strongest dose of it that this Congress has ever been asked to take, for the world's ills and our own sins, we must nevertheless take it.

But I am now offering an amendment to this bill which will let it expire at the end of 7 years, in the event that we do not find ourselves in a war at that time with any foreign power.

Mr. Chairman, we need this bill, not to advance scientific research in time of peace, for we could continue to advance science as we have done during our whole history without it, under a free system. Remember, our scientists produced nuclear fission without any such bill as this. The reason we need the bill now, if we will be honest with ourselves, is that we are afraid of dangers from abroad, and need to safeguard and develop our supremacy in atomic weapons until that fear is passed.

Seven years is a very long time. In 7 years all of the questions that concern me, and have concerned the gentleman from California [Mr. VOORHIS], whose reasons for accepting this legislation are the same as I have repeatedly given—will be answered. We will know the answer to whether or not we will have a world authority to control atomic weapons, for example. We will know whether our hopes for peace are well founded, or whether war is inevitable.

Yes; I agree with all those who have said during this debate that they favor a large measure of civilian control while there is the threat of war, and even a certain measure of civilian control even in times of peace to guard against serious accidents in the industrial use of fissionable materials. We must have civilian control, so long as there is any possible threat of war, of raw materials, over-all production of facilities, and the means to induce scientists to continue research; and in peace we must prevent disastrous accidents to our people. But if the dangers of such wide legislation as this in peacetime are now clearly seen by this House, as the result of this debate, then let us give ourselves a chance to get the atomic commissariat we have created, because of our fears about a third world war, off our necks, if those fears should mercifully cease to materialize and peace should come.

Let us not, because of our temporary fears of foreign totalitarianism, plunk for permanent domestic totalitarianism ourselves, when those fears are passed.

We shall regret it if we wed ourselves permanently to this vast and mysterious socialistic enterprise.

Again, please remember why we are passing this bill—it is as a defense measure in a troubled world. When the world subsides into a creative peace we will not need it.

To keep it permanently on our books is to despair of peace in the next decade.

Have we no hope for the future? Do we really believe that war between ourselves and Russia is inevitable? Are we certain, beyond any hope, that the peoples of the world will all be hurling atomic bombs at one another in 5 or 10 years? Are we despairful of the efforts of our statesmen ever to make the UN a going concern, to achieve world control of armaments, or better still, a world in which no nation will desire armaments because they are free, contented, and prosperous?

Are we really committed in our hearts and minds to an unending bomb race? Do we really believe that there is no way out of the dreadful stalemate and impasse we find ourselves in but annihilation between the nations?

If we do believe all these things, if we can see nothing but certainty of war as a solution for the international problems that confront us, then there is a real excuse for making this legislation permanent. But if that is our belief, what you and I do here will not be long remembered, it will be soon forgotten. The very archives in which we place this bill, and this building itself will be destroyed in an atomic war. No, it will not much matter then what we say or do here today. Then those who have shined on this floor will shine in the Milky Way. And none of us will be able to say to the other, "I told you so." For we will all be atomized.

But, if there is a hope for peace—and I dare to believe there is a hope—then let us support this amendment, which would cross this measure off our books in peacetime and allow our people to return to the free development of all our energies, including our atomic energy.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentlewoman from Connecticut has expired.

Mrs. LUCE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for three additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Connecticut?

There was no objection.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. LUCE. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Does the gentlewoman believe that if atomic energy had been revealed to the world not as a destructive force there would be any necessity for this legislation?

Mrs. LUCE. I doubt if this legislation would ever have been proposed if this form of energy, which can be so very beneficial to humanity had been released in a nondestructive or industrial form. This legislation is the result of atomic energy having first been released before the public in the form of a decisive weapon and because, until our relations with Soviet Russia are free of mutual suspicions, we must take every precaution to safeguard that weapon, and, if need be, develop it.

Mr. McDONOUGH. And we wish to protect ourselves against the use of it on us for destructive purposes.

Mrs. LUCE. That is correct. We are scared of being destroyed by it if other nations get ahead of us in the development of it. The urgent need to prevent that is why I am for this bill.

Mr. McDONOUGH. The gentlewoman believes that is the principal need for this legislation?

Mrs. LUCE. That is the principal need for the bill. And when we are no longer faced with the threat of war, we will not need this bill. War with Russia is not inevitable. If we use half the brains that God gave us we will not have a war with Russia. We do not want a war with Russia. What the nations need is not so much atomic control as self-control. We would not need to worry over the destructive potentialities of nuclear fission if we all worried a little more over the destructive and evil ideas released by the minds and hearts of men. In the final analysis, if the peoples of the Nation will not seek the answers to atomic energy by consulting the authority of God, no world authority will ever be able to prevent its use for the mutual annihilation of nations. But I refuse to despair of the wisdom or piety of our statesmen. I refuse to despair of what may yet be done in the field of atomic and other disarmament in the United Nations organization, based on the achievement of a peace with justice. So, because I do not believe in the inevitability of war, and I do believe in the possibility of peace, I want to see an expiration date in this act.

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I do not exactly understand the gentlewoman's position in offering this amendment. She states that it is bad legislation, very bad. Still, she is offering an amendment here to make this legislation effective for seven long years. If this is bad legislation, it should not last for 7 years.

In this bill is a provision for a Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, with 11 members from this body and 11 members from the body at the other end of the Capitol. All matters pertaining to fissionable material, nuclear fission, and everything else that has to do with the manufacture of atomic energy, has to be referred to this committee for consideration. This committee can initiate legislation at any time it wants to. Congress is in session or will be in session every 2 years, for how long, we do not know. I feel it is unwise to enact this legislation for seven long years. The first part of the amendment I think is already the law. This spells it out, and there is no objection to it. But the latter part of it setting up the act for seven long years is what I object to.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. How long does it last under the bill?

Mr. DURHAM. There is no limit to it. The Congress always has the authority to repeal any act it sets up here at any time if they care to repeal it. The gentlewoman says that anyone who is opposed to this amendment either believes in war or believes in some kind of socialistic state. I think my record here will show that I voted for the security of my country on every measure affecting our security. I do not believe in a socialistic state. I hope we do not have a war. That is the reason I am here at the present time and why all during the consideration of this bill I have fought for it as the gentleman from California clearly stated a few minutes ago. I think he has presented one of the best reasons for adopting this measure and sending it to conference than any man who has taken the floor. There is not just one reason, gentlemen, for this measure. I do not like all features of this bill. You never get everything you like in these matters, but it is absolutely necessary, in my opinion. It is one of the ingredients of the prescription that we must hand out to the world in order to come to an agreement and peace. You are not going to get anywhere in the negotiations, in the United Nations organization or the Security Council, until we adopt some domestic program in regard to the atomic energy. I hope the House will send this bill to conference.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section, and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes, the last minute to be reserved for myself.

Mr. JUDD and Mr. LAFOLLETTE objected.

Mr. HAYS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, the gentlewoman from Connecticut needs no defense at my hands, but when it was pleasantly stated a while ago that she is confused it seems to me that statement does not conform to the nature of the debate in the last 2 or 3 days. I think the gentlewoman from Connecticut has made it very clear that she entertains a strong conviction on this question of our defense being involved in an assertion of policy at this critical hour. I follow her logical arguments. I am sorry she has emphasized the word "socialism" in referring to the bill, but that is incidental. I doubt it can be supported. But the gentlewoman from Connecticut is absolutely right when she implies and states in fact that it is an attitude of defeatism if we refuse to do anything at all about this tremendous new power that has been turned loose in the world. I, for one, am not going to have less faith in the scientists who uncovered this new force than they had in us when they said it was a good thing—weigh these words—that the thousands of people lost their lives at Hiroshima if as a result of that dramatic happening the people of America in their position of leadership would realize that action is necessary to keep this tremendous new power under control and thus save millions of lives. The scientists said they had faith in the people acting through their representatives to declare a policy on this question. Now, we do not declare a policy and we accomplish nothing if we leave it uncontrolled with no declaration at all on this question. If we believe that the military with no mandate from us are going to exercise some control over the holding of fissionable material, we are in my judgment deluding ourselves.

The first announcement of the discovery was made in an institution in this city, George Washington University. Except for the fact that a war followed in a short time after that, we would not be discussing this problem, and it would be a matter of concern only to those of high technical training.

I wonder if in all history a thing like that has happened; if contemporaneously with the discovery of a dangerous force the people were advised of the terror that its use involved.

So the point is, beginning here in George Washington University and then terminating by the destruction of 60,000 people, the question is, Will the Congress assert a policy and say that that power must be put to use for peace and industrial needs, and that they have faith in the scientists who will be appointed under this bill to properly use that power?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas has expired.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto do now close.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs LUCE].

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, may we again have the amendment reported?

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will again report the amendment.

There being no objection, the Clerk again reported the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. LUCE].

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. LUCE].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts) there were—ayes 49, noes 108.

So the amendment was rejected.

By unanimous consent, the pro forma amendments were withdrawn.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. MILLS, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee having had under consideration the bill (S. 1717) for the development and control of atomic energy, pursuant to House Resolution 708, he reported the same back to the House with sundry amendments adopted in the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and sixty-five Members are present, a quorum.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment?

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I demand a separate vote on the so-called Lanham amendment dealing with the section regarding patents.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on any other amendment? If not the Chair will put them en grosse.

The question is on the amendments.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were refused.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I demand a division.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. What are we voting on now?

The SPEAKER. The Chair stated twice that we are voting on the amendments en grosse except the Lanham amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MARCANTONIO) there were—ayes 116, noes 114.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I demand tellers.

Tellers were refused.

So the amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment upon which a separate vote has been demanded.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LANHAM: Pages 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40. Strike out all of the patent provisions commencing with line 5 on page 34 down to and including line 13 on page 40 and substitute in lieu thereof the following:

"SEC. 11. (a) The Commission is authorized to purchase, for the manufacture or use by or for the United States Government, any and all rights in and to any invention or discovery, or application for patent or patents thereon, relating to research on or the production of fissionable material or the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy.

"(b) The Commission is authorized to condemn, and to determine and make just compensation for, any and all rights in and to any invention or discovery relating to research on or the production of fissionable materials or the utilization of fissionable materials or atomic energy that affects the national defense and security: Provided, however, That upon the determination by the Commission that the national defense or security is no longer involved, any and all rights in and to such invention or discovery shall revert to the owner, subject to a nonexclusive, irrevocable and nontransferable license in favor of the Government.

"(c) When any person who has made an invention or discovery relating to research on or the production of fissionable material, or the utilization of fissionable materials or atomic energy and shall have filed an application for a patent thereon and shall have tendered his invention or discovery to the Government of the United States for its use, he shall, if and when he ultimately receives a patent, have the right to sue for compensation as provided for in this section, such right to compensation to begin from the date of any use of the invention by the Government: Provided, That the Commission is authorized to enter into and effect an agreement with said applicant in full settlement and compromise for the use of his invention by the Government.

"(d) If any person is dissatisfied with the determination of the Commission as to just compensation, he may have his remedy by filing a suit in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, if filed within 6 months after such determination; and such court, on notice to the Commission and other due procedures had, may thereupon determine the amount of the compensation to be paid such person, as the facts in the case may appear: Provided, That in any such suit the United States may avail itself of any and all defenses, general and special, that might be pleaded by a defendant in an action for infringement, as set forth in title 60 of the revised statutes, or otherwise. Any final judgment rendered against the Commission under any provision of this section shall have like force and effect as a money judgment rendered against the United States by the Court of Claims in a suit in respect of which the United States has expressly agreed to be sued; and the amount of any such final judgment shall be paid out of any appropriation applicable to the case, if any such there be; and when no such appropriation exists, said judgment shall be paid in the same manner as judgments rendered by the Court of Claims in cases under its general jurisdiction.

"(e) Any party aggrieved by any final judgment in a proceeding under this section may appeal therefrom to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, and upon such appeal said court shall have power to review said judgment and affirm, revoke, or modify the same as upon appeals in other actions at law.

"(f) Attorneys appointed by the Commission may appear for and represent the Commission before any Government agency or judicial tribunal with respect to any and all invention, patent, and research matters in which the Commission is involved.

"(g) Any person who has made, or hereafter makes any invention or discovery utilizing fissionable materials or atomic energy designed or specially adapted for use as or in a military weapon, shall file with the Commission a report containing a complete description thereof. The report covering any such invention or discovery shall be filed on or before whichever of the following is the latest: (1) The sixtieth day after the date of enactment of this act; (2) The sixtieth day after completion of such invention or discovery; or (3) the sixtieth day after such person first discovers, or first has reason to believe that such invention or discovery is specially useful as or in such a weapon."

Mr. LANHAM (interrupting reading of the amendment). Mr. Speaker, this is the amendment with reference to the patent provisions of this bill. It has been spoken on, it has been printed two different times in the RECORD, it is a rather lengthy amendment, and I therefore ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania) there were—ayes 151, noes 90.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were refused.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. SHORT. At this time I am, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. SHORT moves to recommit the bill (S. 1717) to the Committee on Military Affairs for further study.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the previous question is ordered.

There was no objection.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to recommit.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 146, nays 195, not voting 88, as follows:

[Roll No. 228]

YEAS—146

Abernethy	Church	Gillette
Allen, Ill.	Clevenger	Gillie
Andersen, H. Carl	Clippinger	Goodwin
	Cole, Mo.	Graham
Andresen, August H.	Cole, N. Y.	Grant, Ind.
	Cooley	Griffiths
Arends	Corbett	Gross
Arnold	Cunningham	Gwinn, N. Y.
Barden	Curtis	Gwynne, Iowa
Bates, Mass.	D'Ewart	Hagen
Beall	Dondero	Halleck
Bennett, Mo.	Dworshak	Hancock
Bishop	Eaton	Harness, Ind.
Blackney	Elliott	Hess
Bolton	Ellis	Hoeven
Brehm	Ellsworth	Hoffman, Mich.
Brown, Ohio	Elston	Hoffman, Pa.
Brumbaugh	Fellows	Holmes, Mass.
Buffett	Fenton	Horan
Butler	Fulton	Howell
Campbell	Gathings	Jenkins
Carlson	Gavin	Jennings
Case, S. Dak.	Gearhart	Jensen
Chenoweth	Gerlach	Johnson, Ill.
Chiperfield	Gifford	Johnson, Ind.
Jones	Phillips	Simpson, Pa.
Jonkman	Pickett	Smith, Ohio
Kean	Pittenger	Springer
Kelly, Ill.	Plumley	Stefan
Kinzer	Rankin	Stockman
Knutson	Reed, Ill.	Sumner, Ill.
Kunkel	Reed, N. Y.	Sundstrom
Landis	Rees, Kans.	Taber
Lanham	Rich	Talle
Latham	Rivers	Taylor
LeFevre	Rizley	Thomas, N. J.
Lemke	Robertson, N. Dak.	Tibbott
Lewis		Vursell
McConnell	Robsion, Ky.	Wadsworth
McCowen	Rockwell	Weichel
McKenzie	Rodgers, Pa.	White
Martin, Mass.	Roe, Md.	Whitten
Merrow	Rogers, Mass.	Wigglesworth
Miller, Nebr.	Schwabe, Mo.	Wilson
Mundt	Schwabe, Okla.	Winstead
Murray, Tenn.	Scrivner	Winter
Norblad	Shafer	Wolcott
O'Hara	Sharp	Wolverton, N. J.
Pace	Short	Woodruff
Philbin	Simpson, Ill.

NAYS—195

Almond	Gamble	Mills
Andrews, Ala.	Gardner	Monroney
Angell	Gary	Morgan
Auchincloss	Geelan	Morrison
Baldwin, N. Y.	Gordon	Murdock
Barrett, Pa.	Gore	Murray, Wis.
Barrett, Wyo.	Gorski	Neely
Barry	Granahan	Norrell
Bell	Granger	O'Brien, Ill
Bender	Grant, Ala.	O'Brien, Mich.
Biemiller	Green	O'Neal
Bland	Gregory	Outland
Bloom	Hale	Patman
Bonner	Hall, Leonard W.	Patterson
Bradley, Pa.		Peterson, Fla.
Brooks	Hand	Poage
Brown, Ga.	Harris	Pratt
Bryson	Havenner	Price, Fla.
Buchanan	Hays	Price, Ill.
Buck	Healy	Quinn, N. Y.
Buckley	Hedrick	Rabaut
Bulwinkle	Heffernan	Rabin
Byrne, N. Y.	Henry	Rains
Camp	Herter	Ramey
Canfield	Heselton	Randolph
Cannon, Mo.	Hill	Rayfiel
Carnahan	Hinshaw	Resa
Case, N. J.	Hobbs	Richards
Celler	Hoch	Riley
Chapman	Hook	Robertson, Va.
Chelf	Hope	Rogers, Fla.
Clark	Huber	Rogers, N. Y.
Clason	Hull	Rooney
Clements	Jackson	Rowan
Cole, Kans.	Jarman	Russell
Colmer	Johnson, Calif.	Ryter
Combs	Judd	Sabath
Crosser	Kearney	Sadowski
D'Alesandro	Kee	Sasscer
Davis	Keefe	Savage
Dawson	Kefauver	Sheppard
Delaney, James J.	Kelley, Pa.	Sikes
	King	Smith, Maine
Dingell	Kopplemann	Smith, Va.
Dirksen	LaFollette	Smith, Wis.
Dolliver	Lane	Somers, N. Y.
Doughton, N. C.	Lea	Spence
Douglas, Calif.	LeCompte	Starkey
Douglas, Ill.	Lesinski	Stevenson
Doyle	Link	Stigler
Drewry	Luce	Sullivan
Durham	Lyle	Sumners, Tex.
Eberharter	Lynch	Thom
Elsaesser	McCormack	Thomas, Tex.
Engle, Calif.	McDonough	Thomason
Ervin	McGlinchey	Towe
Fallon	McGregor	Trimble
Feighan	McMillen, Ill.	Voorhis, Calif.
Fernandez	Madden	Vorys, Ohio
Fisher	Maloney	Wasielewski
Flannagan	Manasco	Weaver
Flood	Marcantonio	Whittington
Fogarty	Martin, Iowa	Woodhouse
Folger	Mathews	Worley
Forand	May	Zimmerman
Gallagher	Michener

NOT VOTING—88

Adams	Boykin	Cravens
Allen, La.	Bradley, Mich.	Crawford
Anderson, Calif.	Bunker	Curley
Andrews, N. Y.	Byrnes, Wis.	Daughton, Va.
Bailey	Cannon, Fla.	De Lacy
Baldwin, Md.	Cochran	Delaney, John J.
Bates, Ky.	Coffee
Beckworth	Cooper	Domengeaux
Bennet, N. Y.	Courtney	Earthman
Boren	Cox	Engel, Mich.

Fuller	Kirwan	Priest
Gibson	Klein	Reece, Tenn.
Gillespie	Larcade	Robinson, Utah
Gossett	Ludlow	Roe, N. Y.
Hall, Edwin Arthur	McGehee	Sheridan
Hare	McMillan, S. C.	Slaughter
Harless, Ariz.	Mahon	Sparkman
Hart	Mankin	Stewart
Hartley	Mansfield, Mont.	Talbot
Hébert	Mansfield, Tex.	Tarver
Hendricks	Mason	Tolan
Holifield	Miller, Calif.	Torrens
Holmes, Wash.	Norton	Traynor
Izac	O'Konski	Vinson
Johnson, Okla.	O'Toole	Walter
Johnson, Tex.	Patrick	Welch
Keogh	Peterson, Ga.	West
Kerr	Pfeifer	Wickersham
Kilburn	Ploeser	Wolfenden, Pa.
Kilday	Powell	Wood

So the motion to recommit was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Ploeser for, with Mr. Bennet of New York against.

Mr. Fuller for, with Mr. Byrnes of Wisconsin against.

Mr. Mason for, with Mr. Johnson of Texas against.

Mr. Domengeaux for, with Mr. Walter against.

Mr. Kilburn for, with Mr. Bailey against.

Mr. Bradley of Michigan for, with Mr. Klein against.

Mr. Hartley for, with Mr. John J. Delaney against.

General pairs until further notice:

Mr. Hart with Mr. Talbot.

Mr. Keogh with Mr. Holmes of Washington.

Mr. Sheridan with Mr. Adams.

Mr. Hébert with Mr. Edwin Arthur Hall.

Mr. Pfeifer with Mr. Anderson of California.

Mr. Priest with Mr. Gillespie.

Mr. Izac with Mr. Engel of Michigan.

Mr. Holifield with Mr. Andrews of New York.

Mr. Coffee with Mr. Crawford.

Mrs. Norton with Mr. O'Konski.

Mr. Vinson with Mr. Reece of Tennessee.

Mr. Curley with Mr. Welch.

Mr. O'Toole with Mr. Wolfenden of Pennsylvania.

Mr. BUFFETT changed his vote from "nay" to "yea."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 265, nays 79, not voting 86, as follows:

[Roll No. 229]

YEAS—265

Allen, Ill.	Brown, Ga.	Clark
Almond	Brown, Ohio	Clason
Andrews, Ala.	Brumbaugh	Clements
Angell	Bryson	Cole, Kans.
Arends	Buchanan	Colmer
Auchincloss	Buck	Combs
Baldwin, N. Y.	Buckley	Corbett
Barrett, Pa.	Bulwinkle	Crosser
Barrett, Wyo.	Butler	Cunningham
Barry	Byrne, N. Y.	Curtis
Beall	Camp	D'Alesandro
Bell	Canfield	Davis
Bender	Cannon, Mo.	Dawson
Biemiller	Carlson	Delaney, James J.
Blackney	Carnahan
Bland	Case, N. J.	Dingell
Bloom	Case, S. Dak.	Dirksen
Bolton	Celler	Dolliver
Bonner	Chapman	Domengeaux
Bradley, Pa.	Chelf	Dondero
Brooks	Chenoweth	Doughton, N. C.
Douglas, Calif.	Horan	Price, Ill.
Douglas, Ill.	Howell	Quinn, N. Y.
Doyle	Huber	Rabaut
Drewry	Hull	Rabin
Durham	Jackson	Rains
Eaton	Jarman	Ramey
Eberharter	Jennings	Randolph
Elliott	Jensen	Rayfiel
Ellsworth	Johnson, Calif.	Rees, Kans.
Elsaesser	Judd	Resa
Engle, Calif.	Kearney	Richards
Ervin	Kee	Riley
Fallon	Keefe	Robertson, N. Dak.
Feighan	Kefauver
Fernandez	Kelley, Pa.	Robertson, Va.
Fisher	King	Robsion, Ky.
Flannagan	Kopplemann	Rockwell
Flood	Kunkel	Rodgers, Pa.
Fogarty	LaFollette	Roe, Md.
Folger	Lane	Rogers, Fla.
Forand	Latham	Rogers, N. Y.
Fulton	Lea	Rooney
Gallagher	LeCompte	Rowan
Gamble	LeFevre	Russell
Gardner	Lesinski	Ryter
Gary	Link	Sabath
Gathings	Luce	Sadowski
Gearhart	Lyle	Sasscer
Geelan	Lynch	Savage
Gerlach	McConnell	Sharp
Gifford	McCormack	Sheppard
Gillette	McDonough	Sheridan
Goodwin	McGlinchey	Short
Gordon	McGregor	Sikes
Gore	McKenzie	Smith, Maine
Gorski	McMillen, Ill.	Smith, Va.
Graham	Madden	Smith, Wis.
Granahan	Maloney	Somers, N. Y.
Granger	Manasco	Spence
Grant, Ala.	Marcantonio	Starkey
Green	Martin, Iowa	Stefan
Gregory	Martin, Mass.	Stevenson
Gwinn, N. Y.	Mathews	Stigler
Gwynne, Iowa	May	Stockman
Hale	Merrow	Sullivan
Hall, Edwin Arthur	Michener	Sumners, Tex.
Hall, Leonard W.	Miller, Nebr.	Talle
Halleck	Mills	Taylor
Hand	Monroney	Thom
Harris	Morgan	Thomas, Tex.
Havenner	Morrison	Thomason
Hays	Mundt	Tibbott
Healy	Murdock	Towe
Hedrick	Murray, Wis.	Trimble
Heffernan	Neely	Voorhis, Calif.
Henry	Norrell	Vorys, Ohio
Herter	O'Brien, Ill.	Vursell
Heselton	O'Brien, Mich.	Wadsworth
Hill	O'Hara	Wasielewski
Hinshaw	O'Neal	Weaver
Hobbs	Outland	White
Hoch	Patman	Whittington
Hoeven	Patterson	Wigglesworth
Hoffman, Pa.	Peterson, Fla.	Wolcott
Holmes, Mass.	Philbin	Wolverton, N. J.
Hook	Plumley	Woodhouse
Hope	Poage	Worley
	Pratt	Zimmerman
	Price, Fla.

NAYS—79

Abernethy	Gillie	Pickett
Andersen, H. Carl	Grant, Ind.	Pittenger
	Griffiths	Rankin
Andresen, August H.	Gross	Reed, Ill.
	Hagen	Reed, N. Y.
Arnold	Hancock	Rich
Barden	Harness, Ind.	Rivers
Bates, Mass.	Hess	Rizley
Bennett, Mo.	Hoffman, Mich.	Rogers, Mass.
Bishop	Jenkins	Schwabe, Mo.
Brehm	Johnson, Ill.	Schwabe, Okla.
Buffett	Johnson, Ind.	Scrivner
Campbell	Jones	Shafer
Chiperfield	Jonkman	Simpson, Ill.
Church	Kean	Simpson, Pa.
Clevenger	Kelly, Ill.	Smith, Ohio
Clippinger	Kinzer	Springer
Cole, Mo.	Knutson	Sumner, Ill.
Cole, N. Y.	Landis	Sundstrom
Cooley	Lanham	Taber
D'Ewart	Lemke	Thomas, N. J.
Dworshak	Lewis	Weichel
Ellis	McCowen	Whitten
Elston	Murray, Tenn.	Wilson
Fellows	Norblad	Winstead
Fenton	Pace	Winter
Gavin	Phillips	Woodruff

NOT VOTING—86

Adams	Bailey	Bennet, N. Y.
Allen, La.	Baldwin, Md.	Boren
Anderson, Calif.	Bates, Ky.	Boykin
Andrews, N. Y.	Beckworth	Bradley, Mich.
Bunker	Hendricks	Patrick
Byrnes, Wis.	Holifield	Peterson, Ga.
Cannon, Fla.	Holmes, Wash.	Pfeifer
Cochran	Izac	Ploeser
Coffee	Johnson, Okla.	Powell
Cooper	Johnson, Tex.	Priest
Courtney	Keogh	Reece, Tenn.
Cox	Kerr	Robinson, Utah
Cravens	Kilburn	Roe, N. Y.
Crawford	Kilday	Slaughter
Curley	Kirwan	Sparkman
Daughton, Va.	Klein	Stewart
De Lacy	Larcade	Talbot
Delaney, John J.	Ludlow	Tarver
	McGehee	Tolan
Earthman	McMillan, S. C.	Torrens
Engel, Mich.	Mahon	Traynor
Fuller	Mankin	Vinson
Gibson	Mansfield, Mont.	Walter
Gillespie		Welch
Gossett	Mansfield, Tex.	West
Hare	Mason	Wickersham
Harless, Ariz.	Miller, Calif.	Wolfenden, Pa.
Hart	Norton	Wood
Hartley	O'Konski
Hébert	O'Toole

So the bill was passed.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Bennet of New York for, with Mr. Ploeser against.

Mr. Byrnes of Wisconsin for, with Mr. Fuller against.

Mr. Johnson of Texas for with Mr. Mason against.

Mr. Bailey for, with Mr. Kilburn against.

Mr. Keogh for, with Mr. Bradley of Michigan against.

Mr. Pfeifer for, with Mr. Hartley against.

Additional general pairs:

Mr. Hart with Mr. Holmes of Washington.

Mr. Walter with Mr. Adams.

Mr. Hébert with Mr. Gillespie.

Mr. Izac with Mr. Anderson of California.

Mr. Wood with Mr. Engel of Michigan.

Mr. John J. Delaney with Mr. Crawford.

Mr. Vinson with Mr. Andrews of New York.

Mrs. Norton with Mr. O'Konski.

Mr.. Allen of Louisiana with Mr. Reece of Tennessee.

Mr. Klein with Mr. Welch.

Mr. Curley with Mr. Talbot.

Mr. Bunker with Mr. Wolfenden of Pennsylvania.

Mr. KNUTSON changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

Mr. CHURCH changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

Mr. LATHAM changed his vote from "nay" to "yea."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Clerk in engrossing the amendments be instructed to make the necessary corrections in section and subsection numbers and letters, and in cross-references, and on page 43 strike out lines 8 to 13, inclusive.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

GENERAL LEAVE TO EXTEND

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have five legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate by Mr. Koerber, its assistant enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6739) entitled "An act making appropriations for the Department of Labor, the Federal Security Agency, and related independent agencies, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes."

RETIREMENT FROM CONGRESS OF HON. JOHN J. COCHRAN

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON].

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I am certain the entire membership of the House shares the regret of the Missouri delegation over the announcement just released by JACK COCHRAN of his decision to retire from Congress. He has served since 1926—a fifth of a century—and a large part of that time has represented not only his own congressional district but the territory covered by Greater St. Louis and in fact, to a large degree, the entire State of Missouri. During that time no Member has spoken more authoritatively or more effectively in behalf of his constituency and his State. He is a legislator of indefatigable industry and application and of tireless vigilance. Like the keepers of Israel he neither slumbers nor sleeps when the interests of his people and his section are under consideration. Until his hospitalization he was in attendance upon every session of the House and his committees and the amount of money he saved the Government and the vast amount of bad legislation which he excluded from the statute books, will remain for all time a memorial of his long and distinguished service in this forum.

He is a Jeffersonian Democrat but never a partisan. He represents all parties and all classes in his constituency without distinction or discrimination. He is of inflexible integrity and any plea of expediency when weighed against the merits of a proposition falls on deaf ears. He will have none of it. His decision to retire at a time when he is rapidly returning to normal health, is a testimonial to his high ideal of service and its obligation on this floor. He could have with profit to himself continued his membership here in the next Congress. It was only necessary for him to announce and his nomination and election were assured. And no one values or enjoys the associations here more than he does. But his high standard of service would not permit him to accept renewed responsibility without conviction that he would throughout the coming term be able to fully discharge that responsibility. His letter addressed to his party chairman is an eloquent testimonial to his sense of duty and his determination to retire when there was any question of his ability to continue 100 percent his service to the congressional district and the country. Here is his letter:

DEAR MR. DWYER: With primary day rapidly approaching, I grow increasingly conscious of the fact that I must make a decision as to whether I will again seek election as the representative of the people of the Thirteenth Congressional District.

This decision has been hard to make. My heart is and has been in my work as a Member of Congress, and no written or spoken word of mine can adequately express my gratitude to the people of my district—Democrats as well as Republicans—for their manifestations of confidence in me and their affection for me.

My doctors are united in ordering me to take a complete rest until I have fully recovered from my present illness. The progress I have thus far made has been more rapid than they had hoped for but I realize that their advice is sound and should be taken.

I am not willing to render part-time service to my country as a Member of Congress in this critical period, nor am I willing to let my present illness interfere with full and complete service to my district.

From these declarations you and my good friends at home will understand why I have concluded to notify the secretary of the State of Missouri and the election board of St. Louis that I consider it to be my duty to withdraw my name from consideration in the August primary. This notice is being sent them today.

My withdrawal does not mean the cessation of my interest in the people of the Thirteenth Congressional District, from whose bounty I have received so many and such signal honors. The contrary is true. So true is it that my present great anxiety is to see my district represented by one who is known to me to be qualified in every way to carry on as I would were I well enough to remain in Congress.

With this in mind I requested by secretary, Frank M. Karsten, to file for the position I now hold. Knowing him as I do—his sincerity, his intelligence, and his uniform courtesy, his faithfulness to me and to the duties of his position—I not only give him my unqualified endorsement, but I urge every one who would have voted or worked for my election to do everything for him that they would have done for me.

This is no time to try experiments in the selection of men who must make important decisions in Washington. My secretary is not new to the problems confronting us and nothing will make me happier, as I retire from office, than the privilege of addressing my faithful friend and secretary as Congressman Karsten.

With assurance of my continued warm esteem for you, and asking you to remember me gratefully to all the members of your committee, I am

Most sincerely yours,

JOHN J. COCHRAN.

I have often said, and I am certain the Members here this morning will corroborate that opinion, that if a vote were to be taken as to which one Member of the House was the most popular with his colleagues, that distinction would go to JACK COCHRAN by an overwhelming majority. Friendship begets friendship and Jack had friends because he was a friend—in time of need or otherwise. No man ever turned to him for help or counsel but what he dropped for the time being every other consideration and gave to the problem of his friend his undivided time and attention. I could not personally recompense him for all the kindnesses he has shown me if I had from now to eternity in which to make restitution.

JACK COCHRAN, like many another Member, may be considered as one of the casualties of the war. Work in the House is man-killing at best and in his routine of daily high-speed devotion to his tasks during the extended war period the eventual failure of some part of the overburdened human machine was inevitable. Our regret at his retirement is tempered by the realization that he is entitled to a rest and that he is rapidly being restored to health and his old-time buoyancy and enthusiasm.

His retirement comes at an inopportune time—a time when men of experience and seasoned judgment are perhaps more urgently needed here than during the war. On that account it is particularly fortunate that he is in position to recommend as his successor, his secretary, Frank M. Karsten. Mr. Karsten has been with him for many years and is a man of exceptional ability. He is familiar with Missouri and St. Louis affairs, as well as departmental and congressional procedure. He is in many respects his great chief's alter ego.

But no one can take Jack's place, either in the service of the House or in the hearts of his colleagues, and so we say au revoir and not good-by. You have too deep an interest in the old Ship of State to actually quit us. We expect you to continue to stick around—and represent the forty-ninth State. You will exert a more profound influence around here out of Congress than a lot of us who are in Congress. But wherever you are our good wishes go with you. May you enjoy all the more, from your new position on the side lines, the rich fruition of American progress you have had so large a part in promoting.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, other Members of the House who desire to extend their remarks at this point in the RECORD on the service of Mr. JOHN J. COCHRAN, of Missouri, may do so.

There was no objection.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. Speaker, when the people of St. Louis think of the House of Representatives, they think of JACK COCHRAN. When they speak of Congress, they have JACK COCHRAN in mind. His long service in the House, his experience in the affairs of government, his promptness in answering his mail, his intense efforts to serve the humble, and his devotion to their interests earned him a special place in the affections of his fellow citizens. So great is the esteem in which he is held that he very likely would have been returned to the Eightieth Congress without opposition, as has happened in the past.

However, as the dean of the Missouri delegation, our colleague, Mr. CANNON, has announced to the House JOHN J. COCHRAN has withdrawn his candidacy. Because this is his life and his interest, it must have been a difficult decision to make, as he stated. But because of his interest in his district and his devotion to duty, he was unwilling to give anything but perfection in representation.

I know my colleagues will understand my feelings when I heard the news of his withdrawal. For many years I had the pleasure of being one of his constituents and supporting him. When I came to the Seventy-seventh Congress as a new Member, he was here to greet me. It was my privilege to serve with him. I had the benefit of his unusually active mind, his brilliant intellect, his highly developed legislative sense. Seldom did he miss the opening prayer for guidance in our deliberations.

JACK COCHRAN is the symbol of integrity in public office. Fearless, outspoken, fair, and honest, he has impressed his personality upon the people of Missouri, as well as those who served with him in the House. His courage in the face of his afflictions, I know has been an inspiration to others.

His unusual abilities would be very valuable as a Member of the Eightieth Congress. However, his interest will always lie in the House of Representatives, and his advice will be available to us.

JACK COCHRAN will always have a place in the prayers and affections of St. Louisans. He will always be a source of inspiration to those of us who served with him and seek to emulate him in the performance of a high public trust.

Mr. PRICE of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I join with the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON] and my colleague from across the river, Mr. SULLIVAN, in paying well-deserved tribute to the distinguished Representative from the great city of St. Louis who today has announced his retirement upon completion of his present service in this House, the Honorable JOHN J. COCHRAN.

There is sadness in this Chamber as we contemplate the passing from the active scene on Capitol Hill of so great a public servant. He is beloved by Members on both sides of the aisle, and his advice and counsel has been frequently sought by almost every Member of the House. In his many years of service in Washington, first as a secretary to Hon. William L. Igoe and later to Hon. Harry B. Hawes and Senator William J. Stone, and then as a Member of Congress in his own right, by the choice of a constituency that learned to love him, JACK COCHRAN built a reputation for honesty and integrity never excelled by anyone who has held public office.

The name of JACK COCHRAN was legend not only in the Thirteenth Congressional District of Missouri, but throughout his native State and throughout the neighboring State of Illinois. The name and work of Congressman COCHRAN was as well-known in my own congressional district, the Twenty-second Illinois District, as though he might have also represented the district. That's the way people thought of JACK COCHRAN—no matter in which district they may have resided they looked upon him as also being their Representative.

Congressman COCHRAN has been a special inspiration to those of us in this House who, as JACK COCHRAN himself did, began our service on Capitol Hill as secretaries. We have sought to follow his example and I know we all have benefited immensely by his wise counsel.

He demonstrated to his constituency and to his colleagues here the value of training a young man secures in a congressional office—and how that training can equip a man to be of invaluable service to his people back home.

Members of the House have been inspired through the past 3 years by the great courage of their colleague from Missouri—through the years he was beset by serious illness. No one will forget the tremendous ovation he received from his fellow Members when he returned to the floor after a long stay in the Naval Hospital. The welcome was spontaneous and came from the heart of every Member—just as the best wishes of the Members now are extended to him.

We do not like to see JACK COCHRAN leave—but we know the time has come for him to give some concern to his own health, after having given first concern to the welfare of others for so many years.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I regret that JOHN J. COCHRAN will retire from the House at the close of the present session. His retirement is a distinct loss, not only to Missouri, but to the House and to the country.

I count JACK COCHRAN among my most devoted friends. I esteem him for his integrity and dependability. He is one of the most industrious men who ever served in the House. I know of no Member who is more familiar with the departments of Government and with governmental agencies. He is thoroughly informed as to the proceedings of both the House and the Senate, and he is vigilant in protecting the Public Treasury. The city of St. Louis will miss him. He was efficient in behalf of the interests of the district that he represents.

JACK COCHRAN has endured much physical suffering in the past few years. He is a victim of overwork. I join with his many friends in trusting that he may be restored to health. The House will not be the same without JACK COCHRAN as a Member.

I know of no Member of Congress who has rendered more capable service than JACK COCHRAN. He is able, courageous, honest, and patriotic. He has devoted himself exclusively to the public service. He retires with the satisfaction and consciousness of having served his district and his country well and faithfully.

AMENDMENT OF NATIONAL SERVICE LIFE INSURANCE ACT

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 6371) to amend certain provisions of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert: "That (a) section 601 (f) of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940 is hereby amended effective as of October 8, 1940, to read as follows:

"'(f) The terms "parent", "father", and "mother" includes a father, mother, father through adoption, mother through adoption, persons who have stood in loco parentis to a member of the military or naval forces at any time prior to entry into active service for a period of not less than one year, and a stepparent, if designated as beneficiary by the insured.'

"(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) of this section to section 601 (f) of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended, shall not be construed (1) to require the discontinuance, for any period prior to the first day of the third calendar month following receipt of claim by or on behalf of a person brought within the permitted class of beneficiaries by such amendment, of any insurance award made prior to the date of enactment of this act, or (2) to require duplicate payments of benefits in any case.

"SEC. 2. Section 602 (c) of National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940 is hereby amended effective as of October 8, 1940, to read as follows:

"'(c) (1) Any person upon reenlistment or reentrance into or reemployment in active service and before discharge or resignation therefrom and any person in the active service upon discharge to accept a commission and before resignation therefrom, shall be granted such insurance upon application therefor in writing (made within 120 days following such reenlistment, reentrance, reemployment, or discharge to accept a commission), and upon payment of premiums and evidence satisfactory to the Administrator showing such person to be in good health at the time of such application.

"'(2) Subject to the provisions of the first proviso under the caption "Transfer of Appropriations" contained in title II of the First Supplemental Surplus Appropriation Rescission Act, 1946 (Public Law 301, 79th Cong.), any individual who has had active service between October 8, 1940, and September 2, 1945, both dates inclusive, shall be granted such insurance upon application therefor in writing and upon payment or authorization for deduction of premiums and evidence satisfactory to the Administrator showing such person to be in good health at the time of such application. In any case in which application for life or disability insurance or for reinstatement of such insurance is made prior to January 1, 1950, the Administrator shall not deny, for the purposes of this or any other section of this part, that the applicant is in good health because of any disability or disabilities, less than total in degree, resulting from or aggravated by such active service. In any case in which insurance is granted by reason of the immediately preceding sentence, the premiums paid on such insurance shall be credited directly to the national service life-insurance appropriation and any payments of benefits on such insurance shall be made directly from such appropriation. The maximum amount of insurance for which an individual is otherwise eligible to apply under this paragraph shall be decreased by the amount of any insurance which he may have surrendered for its cash-surrender value.

"'(3) Any person in the active service between October 8, 1940, and September 2, 1945, both dates inclusive, who, while in such service, made application in writing for insurance while performing full military or naval duty, which application was denied solely on account of his condition of health, and the applicant thereafter shall have incurred a total and permanent disability in line of duty or died in line of duty, shall be deemed to have applied for and to have been granted such insurance as of the date of such application and such insurance shall be deemed to be or to have been continued in force to the date of death of such person. In any case in which insurance deemed to have been granted under this paragraph matures or has matured, there shall be deducted from the proceeds of such insurance the premiums payable thereon from the date of application to the date of incurrence of total and permanent disability in line of duty or to the date of death, if permanent and total disability was not incurred. Any payments on such insurance shall be made directly from the national service life-insurance appropriation. The amount of insurance deemed to have been granted under this paragraph, when added to any other insurance in force under the War Risk Insurance Act, as amended, the World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended, or this part, shall not in the aggregate exceed $10,000.'

"SEC. 3. Section 602 (f) of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940 is hereby amended to read as follows:

"'(f) Such insurance shall be issued upon the 5 year level premium term plan, with the privilege of conversion as of the date when any premium becomes or has become due, or exchange as of the date of the original policy, upon payment of the difference in reserve, at any time after such policy has been in effect for 1 year and within the term period, to policies of insurance upon the following plans: Ordinary life, 20-payment life, 30-payment life, 20-year endowment, endowment at age 60, and endowment at age 65: Provided, That conversion to an endowment plan may not be made while the insured is totally disabled. All level premium term policies shall cease and terminate at the expiration of the term period. Provisions for cash, loan, paid-up, and extended values, dividends from gains and savings, refund of unearned premiums, and such other provisions as may be found to be reasonable and practicable may be provided for in the policy of insurance or from time to time by regulations promulgated by the Administrator.'

"SEC. 4. Section 602 (g) of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended, is hereby amended by substituting a colon for the period at the end thereof and adding the following: 'Provided, That the provisions of this subsection as to the restricted permitted class of beneficiaries shall not apply to any national service life-insurance policy maturing on or after the date of enactment of the Insurance Act of 1946.'

"SEC. 5. (a) So much of subsection (h) of section 602 of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended, as precedes paragraph (3) thereof is hereby amended to read as follows:

"'(h) Insurance maturing prior to the date of enactment of the Insurance Act of 1946 shall be payable in the following manner:

"'(1) If the beneficiary to whom payment is first made is under 30 years of age at the time of maturity, in 240 equal monthly installments: Provided, That the Administrator, under regulations to be promulgated by him, may include a provision in the insurance contract authorizing the insured or the beneficiary to elect in lieu of this mode of payment and prior to the commencement of payments, a refund life income in monthly installments payable for such period certain as may be required in order that the sum of the installments certain, including a last installment of such reduced amount as may be necessary, shall equal the face value of the contract, less any indebtedness, with such payments continuing throughout the lifetime of such beneficiary: Provided further, That in any case in which insurance benefit payments were commenced prior to September 30, 1944, the beneficiary, whether or not the first beneficiary, shall have the right to elect to receive a refund life income, as provided in such optional settlement, payable in monthly installments adjusted as of the date of the maturity of such policy, credit being allowed for payments previously made on the insurance. The right of election with respect to cases in which benefit payments were commenced prior to September 30, 1944, shall terminate 2 years after the date of enactment of the Insurance Act of 1946. The Administrator is directed to send, within 1 year after the date of enactment of the Insurance Act of 1946, to each beneficiary of insurance on which payments were commenced prior to September 30, 1944, a notice explaining the right of election. Any such notice shall be sent by registered mail addressed to the last known address of the addressee.

"'(2) If the beneficiary to whom payment is first made is 30 or more years of age at the time of maturity, in equal monthly installments for 120 months certain, with such payments continuing during the remaining lifetime of such beneficiary: Provided, That the Administrator, under regulations to be promulgated by him, may include a provision in the insurance contract authorizing the insured or the beneficiary to elect, in lieu of this mode of payment and prior to the commencement of payments, a refund life income in monthly installments payable for such period certain as may be required in order that the sum of the installments certain, including a last installment of such reduced amount as may be necessary, shall equal the face value of the contract, less any indebtedness, with such payments continuing throughout the lifetime of such beneficiary: Provided further, That such optional settlement shall not be available in any case in which such settlement would result in payments of installments over a shorter period than 120 months: Provided further, That in any case in which insurance benefit payments were commenced prior to September 30, 1944, the beneficiary, whether or not the first beneficiary, shall have the right to elect to receive a refund life income, as provided in such optional settlement, payable in monthly installments adjusted as of the date of the maturity of such policy, credit being allowed for payments previously made on the insurance. The right of election with respect to cases in which benefit payments were commenced prior to September 30, 1944, shall terminate 2 years after the date of enactment of the Insurance Act of 1946. The Administrator is directed to send, within 1 year after the date of enactment of the Insurance Act of 1946, to each beneficiary of insurance on which payments were commenced prior to September 30, 1944, a notice explaining the right of election. Any such notice shall be sent by registered mail addressed to the last known address of the addressee.'

"(b) Subsections (i), (j), and (k) of section 602 of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended, are amended by adding at the end of each of such subsections the following: 'The provisions of this subsection shall not be applicable to insurance maturing on or after the date of enactment of the Insurance Act of 1946.'

"SEC. 6. Section 602 (m) of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940 is hereby amended, effective as of October 8, 1940, to read as follows:

"'(m) (1) The Administrator shall, by regulations, prescribe the time and method of payment of the premiums on such insurance, but payments of premiums in advance shall not be required for periods of more than 1 month each, and may at the election of the insured be deducted from his active-service pay to be otherwise made: Provided, That an amount equal to the first premium due under a national service life-insurance policy may be advanced from current appropriations for active-service pay to any person in the active service in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard, which amount shall constitute a lien upon any service or other pay accruing to the person for whom such advance was made and shall be collected therefrom if not otherwise paid: Provided further, That no disbursing or certifying officer shall be responsible for any loss incurred by reason of the advance herein authorized: And provided further, That any amount so advanced in excess of available service or other pay shall constitute a lien on the policy within the provisions of section 5, Public Law No. 866, Seventy-sixth Congress, approved October 17, 1940.

"'(2) In any case in which the insured provided for the payment of premiums on his insurance by authorizing in writing the deduction of premiums from his service pay, such insurance shall be deemed not to have lapsed so long as he remained in active service prior to the date of enactment of the Insurance Act of 1946, notwithstanding the fact that deduction of premiums was discontinued because—

"'(A) the insured was discharged to accept a commission; or

"'(B) the insured was absent without leave, if restored to active duty; or

"'(C) the insured was sentenced by court martial, if he was restored to active duty, required to engage in combat, or killed in combat.

In any case in which the insured under any insurance continued in force by the provisions of this paragraph died while such insurance was so continued in force, any premiums due on such insurance shall be deducted from the proceeds of the insurance. Any premiums deducted or collected on any such insurance shall be credited to the national service life insurance appropriation and any payments of benefits on any such insurance shall be made directly from such appropriation.'

"SEC. 7. Section 602 (n) of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"'(n) Upon application by the insured and under such regulations as the Administrator may promulgate, payment of premiums on such insurance may be waived during the continuous total disability of the insured, which continues or has continued for six or more consecutive months, if such disability commenced (1) subsequent to the date of his application for insurance, (2) while the insurance was in force under premium-paying conditions, and (3) prior to the insured's sixtieth birthday: Provided, That upon application made within 1 year after the date of enactment of the Insurance Act of 1946 the Administrator shall grant waiver of any premium becoming due not more than 5 years prior to the date of enactment of such act which may be waived under the foregoing provisions of this subsection: Provided further, That the Administrator, upon any application made subsequent to 1 year after the date of enactment of the Insurance Act of 1946, shall not grant waiver of any premium becoming due more than 1 year prior to the receipt in the Veterans' Administration of application for the same, except as hereinafter provided. Any premiums paid for months during which waiver is effective shall be refunded. The Administrator shall provide by regulations for examination or reexamination of an insured claiming benefits under this subsection, and may deny benefits for failure to cooperate. In the event that it is found that an insured is no longer totally disabled, the waiver of premiums shall cease as of the date of such finding and the policy of insurance may be continued by payment of premiums as provided in said policy: Provided further, That in any case in which the Administrator finds that the insured's failure to make timely application for waiver of premiums or his failure to submit satisfactory evidence of the existence or continuance of total disability was due to circumstances beyond his control, the Administrator may grant waiver or continuance of waiver of premiums: And provided further, That in the event of death of the insured without filing application for waiver, the beneficiary, within 1 year after the death of the insured or the enactment of this amendment, whichever be the later, or, if the beneficiary be insane or a minor, within 1 year after removal of such legal disability, may file application for waiver with evidence of the insured's right to waiver under this section. Premium rates shall be calculated without charge for the cost of the waiver of premiums herein provided and no deduction from benefits otherwise payable shall be made on account thereof.'

"SEC. 8. Section 602 (p) of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"'(p) Such insurance may be made effective, as specified in the application, not later than the first day of the calendar month following the date of application therefor, but the United States shall not be liable thereunder for death occurring prior to such effective date. Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this subsection, in any case in which prior to the date of enactment of the Insurance Act of 1946 application was made for insurance to become effective subsequent to the date of application and the applicant died in line of duty prior to the date such insurance was to become effective, the United States shall be liable to the same extent as it would have been if such insurance had been in force on the date of death of the applicant. Any payments of benefits made as a result of the enactment of the preceding sentence shall be made directly from the national service life insurance appropriation.'

"SEC. 9. Section 602 of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended, is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"'(t) Insurance maturing on or subsequent to the date of enactment of the Insurance Act of 1946 shall be payable in accordance with the following optional modes of settlement:

"'(1) In one sum.

"'(2) In equal monthly installments of from 36 to 240 in number, in multiples of 12.

"'(3) In equal monthly installments for 120 months certain with such payments continuing during the remaining lifetime of the first beneficiary.

"'(4) As a refund life income in monthly installments payable for such period certain as may be required in order that the sum of the installments certain, including a last installment of such reduced amount as may be necessary, shall equal the face value of the contract, less any indebtedness, with such payments continuing throughout the lifetime of the first beneficiary: Provided, That such optional settlement shall not be available in any case in which such settlement would result in payments of installments over a shorter period than 120 months.'

"'Unless the insured elects some other mode of settlement, the insurance shall be payable to the designated beneficiary or beneficiaries in 36 equal monthly installments. The first beneficiary may elect to receive payment under any option which provides for payment over a longer period of time than the option elected by the insured, or if no option be designated by the insured, in excess of 36 months. If the option selected requires payment to any one beneficiary of monthly installments of less than $10, the amount payable to such beneficiary shall be paid in such maximum number of monthly installments as are a multiple of 12 as will provide a monthly installment of not less than $10. If the present value of the amount payable at the time any person initially becomes entitled to payment thereof is not sufficient to pay at least 12 monthly installments of not less than $10 each, such amount shall be payable in one sum. Options (3) and (4) shall not be available if any firm, corporation, legal entity (including the estate of the insured), or trustee is beneficiary, or in any case in which an endowment contract matures by reason of the completion of the endowment period.

"'(u) With respect to insurance maturing on or subsequent to the date of enactment of the Insurance Act of 1946, in any case in which the beneficiary is entitled to a lump-sum settlement but elects some other mode of settlement and dies before receiving all the benefits due and payable under such mode of settlement, the present value of the remaining unpaid amount shall be payable to the estate of the beneficiary; and in any case in which no beneficiary is designated by the insured, or the designated beneficiary does not survive the insured, or a designated beneficiary not entitled to choose a lump-sum settlement survives the insured, and dies before receiving all the benefits due and payable, the commuted value of the insurance remaining unpaid shall be paid in one sum to the estate of the insured: Provided, That in no event shall there by any payment to the estate of the insured or of the beneficiary of any sums unless it is shown that any sums paid will not escheat.

"'(v) (1) The Administrator is hereby authorized and directed, upon application by the insured and proof of good health satisfactory to the Administrator and payment of such extra premium as the Administrator shall prescribe, to include in any national service life-insurance policy on the life of the insured provisions whereby an insured who is shown to have become totally disabled for a period of six consecutive months or more commencing after the date of such application and before attaining the age of 60 and while the payment of any premium is not in default, shall be paid monthly disability benefits from the first day of the seventh consecutive month of and during the continuance of such total disability of $5 for each $1,000 of such insurance in effect when such benefits become payable: Provided, That in any case in which the applicant while not totally disabled and prior to January 1, 1950, furnishes proof satisfactory to the Administrator that his inability to furnish proof of good health is the result of an actually service-incurred injury or disability, the requirement of proof of good health shall be waived, but in such case the extra premium for disability coverage paid by any such insured shall be credited directly to the national service life-insurance appropriation and any disability payments made to such insured shall be made directly from the national service life-insurance appropriation: Provided further, That policies containing additional provisions for the payment of disability benefits may be separately classified for the purpose of dividend distribution from otherwise similar policies not containing such benefit.

"'(2) Whenever benefits under the total-disability provision authorized by section 602 (v) (1) hereof become, or have become, payable because of total disability of the insured as a result of disease or injury traceable to the extra hazard of the military or naval service, as such hazard may be determined by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, the liability shall be borne by the United States, and the Administrator is hereby authorized and directed to transfer from the national service life-insurance appropriation to the national service life-insurance fund from time to time any amounts which become, or have become, payable to the insured on account of such total disability, and to transfer from the national service life-insurance fund to the national service life-insurance appropriation the amount of the reserve held on account of the total-disability benefit. When a person receiving such payments on account of total disability recovers from such disability, and is then entitled to continue protection under the total-disability provision, the Administrator is hereby authorized and directed to transfer to the national service life-insurance fund a sum sufficient to set up the then required reserve on such total-disability benefit.

"'(w) Subject to the provisions of section 612 of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended, all contracts or policies of insurance heretofore or hereafter issued, reinstated, or converted shall be incontestable from the date of issue, reinstatement, or conversion except for fraud, nonpayment of premium, or on the ground that the applicant was not a member of the military or naval forces of the United States.

"'(x) When an optional mode of settlement of insurance heretofore or hereafter matured is available to a beneficiary who is a minor or incompetent, such option may be exercised by his fiduciary, person qualified under Public Law 373, Seventy-second Congress, February 25, 1933 (47 Stat. 907; 25 U. S. C. 14), or person recognized by the Administrator as having custody of the person or the estate of such beneficiary, and the obligation of the United States under the insurance contract shall be fully satisfied by payment of benefits in accordance with the mode of settlement so selected.

"'(y) (1) Any level premium term insurance which has lapsed may be reinstated within the term upon written application, payment of two monthly premiums, and evidence satisfactory to the Administrator that the applicant, subject to the provisions of the second sentence of section 602 (c) (2), supra, is in good health.

"'(2) Any level premium term insurance which has lapsed may be reinstated within the term upon written application, made within 6 months after the date of such lapse or within 6 months after the date of enactment of the Insurance Act of 1946, whichever is the later, and payment of two monthly premiums, provided such applicant is in as good health on the date of application and tender of premiums as he was on the due date of the premium in default and furnishes evidence thereof satisfactory to the Administrator: Provided, That when the insured makes inquiry prior to the expiration of the grace period disclosing a clear intent to continue insurance protection, an additional reasonable period not exceeding 60 days may be granted for payment of premiums due, but the premiums in any such case must be paid during the lifetime of the insured.'

"SEC. 10. Section 602 of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended, is hereby amended effective as of October 8, 1940, by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"'(z) Without prejudice to any other cause of disability, the permanent loss of the use of both feet, of both hands, or of both eyes, or of one foot and one hand, or of one foot and one eye, or of one hand and one eye, or the total loss of hearing of both ears, or the organic loss of speech, shall be deemed total disability for insurance purposes.'

"SEC. 11. Section 607 (b) of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended, is hereby amended effective as of October 8, 1940, by inserting after the first sentence thereof the following: 'Where life contingencies are involved in the calculation of the value of such benefits of insurance heretofore or hereafter matured, the calculation of such liability or liabilities shall be based upon such mortality table or tables as the Administrator may prescribe with interest at the rate of 3 percent per annum.'

"SEC. 12. Section 608 of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended, is hereby amended effective as of October 8, 1940, to read as follows:

" 'SEC. 608. The Administrator, subject to the general direction of the President, shall administer, execute, and enforce the provisions of this act, shall have power to make such rules and regulations, not inconsistent with the provisions of this act, as are necessary or appropriate to carry out its purposes, and shall decide all questions arising hereunder. All officers and employees of the Veterans' Administration shall perform such duties in connection with the administration of this act as may be assigned to them by the Administrator. All official acts performed by such officers and employees designated therefor by the Administrator shall have the same force and effect as though performed by the Administrator. Except in the event of suit as provided in section 617 hereof, or other appropriate court proceedings, all decisions rendered by the Administrator under the provisions of this act, or regulations properly issued pursuant thereto, shall be final and conclusive on all questions of law or fact, and no other official of the United States, except a judge or judges of United States courts, shall have jurisdiction to review any such decisions.'

"SEC. 13. Section 616 of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended, is hereby amended by substituting a colon for the period at the end thereof and adding the following: 'Provided, That assignments of all or any part of the beneficiary's interest may be made by a designated beneficiary to a widow, widower, child, father, mother, grandfather, grandmother, brother, or sister of the insured, when the designated contingent beneficiary, if any, joins the beneficiary in the assignment, and if the assignment is delivered to the Veterans' Administration before any payments of the insurance shall have been made to the beneficiary: Provided further, That an interest in an annuity, when assigned, shall be payable in equal monthly installments in such multiple of twelve as most nearly equals the number of installments certain under such annuity, or in 240 installments, whichever is the lesser.'

"SEC. 14. Section 617 of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended, is hereby amended effective as of October 8, 1940, to read as follows:

" 'SEC. 617. In the event of disagreement as to any claim arising under this act, suit may be brought in the same manner and subject to the same conditions and limitations as are applicable to the United States Government life (converted) insurance under the provisions of sections 19 and 500 of the World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended.'

"SEC. 15. The World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended, is hereby amended by adding thereto a new section 313, to read as follows:

" 'SEC. 313. Whenever benefits under the total disability provision authorized by section 311 become, or have become, payable because of total disability of the insured as a result of disease or injury traceable to the extra hazard of the military or naval service, as such hazard may be determined by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, the liability shall be borne by the United States, and the Administrator is hereby authorized and directed to transfer from the military and naval insurance appropriation to the United States Government life insurance fund from time to time any amounts which become or have become payable to the insured on account of such total disability, and to transfer from the United States Government life insurance fund to the military and naval insurance appropriation the amount of the reserve held on account of the total disability benefit. When a person receiving such payments on account of total disability recovers from such disability, and is then entitled to continued protection under the total disability provision, the Administrator is hereby authorized and directed to transfer to the United States Government life insurance fund a sum sufficient to set up the then required reserve on such total disability benefit.'

"SEC. 16. This act may be cited as the 'Insurance Act of 1946'."

Mr. RANKIN (interrupting the reading of the amendment). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment may be dispensed with.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object—and I shall not object to the consideration of this and the passage of it—may I say that the Senate has stricken some very important things for the veterans, but I am afraid if the matter goes to conference we may not reach an agreement and the bill will not pass. One thing has been accomplished, and that is the Senate has put in the right to a jury trial for the veterans. As it passed the House there was the right of jury trial for civilians but not for veterans.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to have the gentleman explain what provisions were stricken out of the House bill; and, in particular, will the gentleman advise me if the Senate struck out the provision which provided that the dependents of men who served on Bataan and who lost their lives there may have the benefit of insurance?

Mr. RANKIN. The Senate did not disturb that. Here are the five changes. I will outline the five changes made in the bill.

First. All reference to gratuitous insurance as passed by the House has been stricken by the Senate, including the elimination of existing law with reference to dependency on the part of parents as a basis of entitlement to such gratuitous benefits.

Secondly. A Senate amendment extends from 30 days to 1 year the time within which the Veterans' Administration must give notice to certain beneficiaries who wish to exercise the right of option as to refund life income originally limited to one choice.

The Senate amended subsection 602 (n) of the National Service Life Insurance Act to authorize within 1 year after the date of enactment of the bill application for waiver of any premium becoming due not more than 5 years prior to enactment of the bill. This provision was not contained in the House version.

Personally, I think it is a good provision.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Is it not true that the bill in its present form meets with the approval of all the major veterans' organizations?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes. I have also consulted with the Veterans' Administration and they are satisfied to have us concur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I was asking the gentleman with reference to insurance for men who had not applied but died over there in Bataan.

Mr. RANKIN. Let me read the other two changes. I have already read three changes. There are two more.

The Senate also amended subsection 602 (p) of the National Service Life Insurance Act to provide for the payment of insurance benefits in cases where applicants for insurance signed applications for such insurance to become effective in the future but died in line of duty prior to the dates on which the insurance policies were to become effective. This amendment was likewise not adopted by the House of Representatives though it was sponsored by the joint Veterans Organizations Committee.

I think that covers the individuals to whom the gentleman refers.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. In order to get the benefits of that automatic insurance of $5,000 for the type of boys I am referring to, the beneficiaries had to be dependent upon the veteran at the time when application was made and not at the time of death. I would like to know from the gentleman whether or not that change has been made and also whether or not that automatic insurance was left at the figure of $10,000 or was reduced to $5,000?

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman from California was chairman of the subcommittee and he probably can answer that.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. The Senate took that provision out and it is as it was before. There has to be dependency. It is very unfortunate that the Senate did that. The dependency provision is in there.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I am surprised that the House conferees would agree to a proposition of that kind.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, it is a question of whether you will have it or not.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I think the bill ought to go to conference so that at least that inequity can be straightened out.

Mr. RANKIN. You may not get it straightened out and, furthermore, you may lose some of the provisions that you now have in the bill.

Mr. ENGLE of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. ENGLE of California. We had that in the bill and the Senate took it out; in fact, they took out all reference to gratuities and retroactive insurance, and we decided that the best thing to do was to get this bill out before we lost it altogether, and there are so many things that are of vast interest to the veterans that we did not want to lose it.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DINGELL. Is it not true that if we insist on sending this bill back to conference we may get none of the benefits which the gentleman brought back to us?

Mr. RANKIN. We may lose the entire bill, as the gentleman from California has just stated.

Mr. SCRIVNER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. SCRIVNER. As has already been pointed out, the bill as it comes from the Senate contains so many favorable measures beneficial to the veteran that the recommendation of the chairman should be followed. I have studied the Senate bill carefully in detail and compared it to the bill as it passed the House, and while there are some features, possibly, with which we are not in absolute accord, the legislation as it now stands is so much better than existing law that I feel the veterans of this Nation will be vastly benefited by the enactment of this legislation.

Mr. RANKIN. I want to thank the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SCRIVNER], a member of the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation, who has worked very diligently on this legislation.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. It is my understanding that the veterans of World War II have a right of trial by jury.

Mr. RANKIN. That is right.

Mr. McCORMACK. I am very glad to know that fact.

Mr. RANKIN. I was going to refer to that section next.

The Senate amended section 617 of the National Service Life Insurance Act so as to authorize trial by jury in the event of denial of any claim for insurance benefits by the Veterans' Administration. It will be recalled that the bill as passed by the House contained a provision which eliminated or restricted trials in Federal court on insurance matter to judicatory review. The Senate has seen fit to restore the right of trial by jury, to which I am proposing that the House agree.

Mr. KEARNEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. KEARNEY. As a matter of fact, the bill that is now before us is a much better bill than has ever been on the statute books so far as it pertains to national life insurance.

Mr. RANKIN. It is a vast improvement on the present law, as the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. KEARNEY] has stated.

Mr. GRANT of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I have long been interested in these amendments to the National Service Life Insurance Act. The reasons for the enactment of these amendments have been stated several times and are known to all. There are many reasons for their adoption and none for their rejection.

National service life insurance needed to be liberalized to overcome several deficiencies and inadequacies in existing law, and in order that this insurance might be brought more nearly in line with the provisions of standard life insurance policies.

The House Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation is to be commended for getting this job done, as far as it goes. At least we will have this much of the law on the books, and I am certain that we can look forward to further study of the whole matter when Congress again convenes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have five legislative days to extend their remarks on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

GUSTAV BECKER MEMORIAL

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 4, authorizing the erection on public grounds in Springerville, Ariz., of a memorial to Gustav Becker.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain the joint resolution?

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, Senate Joint Resolution 4 would provide authority to set aside a plot of land federally owned in Springerville, Ariz., for the erection of a monument to Gustav Becker, a pioneer of that region. Gustav Becker was one of the founders of the new State of Arizona and a builder of our great West.

The bill requires no expenditure of money, as the funds for the monument have been raised by a citizens committee. It has the unanimous support of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. I have cleared it today with leaders of both sides.

Mr. MICHENER. I withdraw my reservation of objection, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Commissioner of Public Buildings is authorized and directed to select a suitable site on the grounds of the Federal building in Springerville, Ariz., and to grant permission to any association or committee organized for that purpose to erect upon such site at any time within 2 years after the date of approval of this joint resolution, as a gift to the people of the United States, a memorial to the late Gustav Becker: Provided, That the design of such memorial shall be approved by the Commissioner of Public Buildings, and that the United States shall be put to no expense in or by the erection of such memorial.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. KEEFE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD with reference to the Pearl Harbor investigation.

Mr. JENNINGS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in four instances and in three to include editorials.

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial concerning my good and able friend and colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SIMPSON].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday next, at the conclusion of the legislative program of the day and following any special orders heretofore entered, I may be permitted to address the House for 45 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

FIXING THE SALARIES OF CERTAIN JUDGES OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 920) to fix the salaries of certain judges of the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. RUSSELL. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, and I shall not object, I opposed this bill in the committee and filed a minority report. I think the bill is ill-timed and ill-advised, and should not be passed, taking into consideration our present financial condition. I still adhere to the views I expressed in my minority report on this measure. However, Mr. Speaker, I believe this House has the right to vote on any measure that is before it on the calendar, and I have no disposition to deprive the House of that right. I did object to the immediate consideration of the bill a few days ago when there were only a handful of Members present, because I thought there ought to be more. There are plenty of Members present now who understand the nature of the bill. Therefore I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 920) to fix the salaries of certain judges of the United States.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following salaries shall be paid to the several judges hereinafter mentioned in lieu of the salaries now provided by law, namely:

To the Chief Justice of the United States at the rate of $25,500 per year.

To each of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States at the rate of $25,000 per year.

To each of the judges of the several circuit courts of appeals, including the chief justice and the associate justices of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, at the rate of $17,500 per year.

To the presiding judge of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, and to each of the associate judges thereof, at the rate of $17,500 per year.

To the chief justice of the Court of Claims, and to each of the judges thereof, at the rate of $17,500 per year.

To each of the judges of the several district courts, including the associate justices of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia and the judges in Puerto Rico, Hawaii, the Virgin Islands, and Alaska exercising Federal jurisdiction, at the rate of $15,000 per year. To the chief justice of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia at the rate of $15,500 per year.

To each of the judges of the United States Customs Court at the rate of $15,000 per year.

To each of the judges of the Tax Court of the United States at the rate of $15,000 per year.

That all of said salaries shall be paid in monthly installments.

SEC. 2. It is authorized that there be appropriated annually such sums as are necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

If not, the question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The bill H. R. 2181 was laid on the table.

House Resolution 585 was laid on the table.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, I have no hesitancy in stating where I stand with reference to this bill. My reasons are brief. There is no function more important under our system of Government than that of the judicial. If competent lawyers are to be attracted to the bench, salaries should be attractive enough to draw and keep such men. It has been said, and rightly so in my judgment, that judges should be the intellectual equals of the ablest members of the bar who appear before them. To achieve that end, they must be well paid.

Most certainly, elevation to the bench is a great honor but very few men in these days can accept such an honor which, while great, restricts the accustomed living standards of their families and militates against the education of and provision for their children, and, indeed, precludes even adequate insurance provision for their dependents. Most certainly the Federal bench should not be faced with the necessity of drawing its members only from the wealthy; nor, on the other hand, should the emoluments of that high office be so low as to attract only the incompetent and unsuccessful of the bar.

The passage of this bill will rectify a grave injustice. It has been 20 years since judicial salaries have been increased. At the time of the last increase, in 1926, they were constitutionally tax free, but now they are subject not only to a Federal tax but local taxation as well. Indeed, the present net worth of the Federal judicial salary, and I am speaking of the year 1944, is approximately $7,600 for a district judge, $9,100 for a court of appeals judge, and $12,965 for a Supreme Court Justice. Taking State taxes out they amount to even less.

Some comparisons are important. New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts pay larger salaries to the State judiciary than are paid in the Federal system, while judges of the English courts are given salaries commensurate with the grave responsibility of judicial office and the important part it plays in the British governmental system.

From a dollar-and-cents point of view, our courts are not drones in the governmental hive. The entire cost of the judicial establishment for the year 1940 was approximately eleven million; for the legislative, twenty-three million; while that of the Department of Agriculture was approximately one and one-half billion, or, to be exact, $1,404,252,632.81; the Department of Commerce, approximately seventy-one million; Department of the Interior, a little over one hundred million; Department of Justice, approximately fifty-five million; Department of Labor, a little over nineteen million; Department of State, approximately twenty-one million. The total expenditure for the courts on a per capita basis for that year amounted to approximately 8⅓ cents and in 1944 a per capita cost of 9⁹⁄₁₀ cents. And further, by way of comparison, apart from the over-all figures mentioned, and to still more graphically emphasize the point, the per capita expenditure by the people of the State of New York in the year 1940 for their courts was approximately 31 cents.

Again, with reference to the costs of the courts there should be borne in mind the moneys brought into the Treasury through their activities. There is no doubt, and I readily concede, that factually such items are not relevant, strictly speaking, to the subject of judicial salaries, for the courts, being a fundamental branch of the Government and in the same category as the executive and legislative, must be adequately supported no matter what the cost. They are, however, pertinent in the sense that they indicate how moderate the actual cost of the judiciary is when you make comparisons, as I have just done, with other governmental branches. Indeed, it is to be noted that the revenues returned by the courts, if one is interested in outgo and income, exceeds the amounts paid in judicial salaries. Another important and vital consideration is this—the effect of the proposed $5,000 increase in the support of the Federal judiciary is minor. It touches less than 300 judgeships—I think the exact figure is 284. The additional annual gross expenditure would be less than $1,500,000 and that would result in a total annual gross expenditure for judicial salaries of a little over four and one-half million. On the basis of the 1940 census—for those who are interested in per capita apportionment of cost, this would amount to approximately one cent, and would make the total cost of judicial salaries, estimated on the basis of gross expenditure, approximately 3½ cents per capita.

There should be no serious question as to the passage of this bill. The reasons which dictate its passage I have sought to point out in as brief a way as possible. The President of the United States, the Attorney General, the American Bar Association, the Federal Bar Association, local bar groups, and organizations and civic bodies in no way related to the functions of the courts, and the press of the country generally, all realizing the importance of the judiciary as a coordinate branch of the Government, have given their support to the proposed increase.

While the proposed increase amounts to $5,000, the actual net increase is in reality less than three thousand, making the total actual expenditure approximately nine hundred thousand dollars—five hundred thousand being taken away at the source, or withheld, if you will, in taxes.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have five legislative days in which to extend their remarks on the bill just passed, and also that such Members as so desire may extend their remarks on the bill at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Speaker, the salaries now being paid to our Federal judges were fixed by statute in the Sixty-ninth Congress, nearly 20 years ago. For several years our judges have asked the Judiciary Committee of the House for legislation granting increases but we have been unwilling to accede to the request because we were opposed to a general salary increase and we feared that bigger salaries for the judiciary would result in an avalanche of demands for similar preferment by the other officials of the Government. But salaries and wages have increased all along the line both in and out of Government, and, as we all know, the cost of living has gone up substantially, and is still rising. The time has come to pay our judges salaries commensurate in some degree to their responsibilities and the dignity of the offices they hold.

In the rural sections of the country the $10,000 salary received by the district judges of the United States and by other Federal judges is regarded as a very large income. But most of our judges must reside in the big cities because that is where nearly all the business of the courts originates. After paying taxes a judge living in a metropolitan area must live frugally, if he has no independent income, to support and educate his family. It is against sound public policy to compel a judge to seek sources of income outside of his work on the bench. In any city, particularly in the North, a man qualified for the arduous and manifold duties of a Federal judge is capable of earning in private practice several times the amount of the salary which goes with the office.

In New York State we pay the up-State judges of our highest trial court, the supreme court, a salary of $15,000, plus $2,000 for expenses. In New York City they receive over $20,000. The judges of our appellate divisions of the supreme court receive $17,000 and reimbursement for expenses; the salary of the judges of our court of appeals is $22,000, and $3,000 is added for expenses. In my own home city of Syracuse we pay the police judge $10,000 and our municipal court judges get $12,000. And so to a New Yorker, the salaries paid to Federal judges seems grossly inadequate. Their work is fully as difficult, varied, and important as that of our State judges, and their character, legal training, and knowledge meet the standards of the State. Their salary should be comparable. The proposed $5,000 increase is not as generous as it might appear. In the case of judges now receiving $10,000, not less than $2,000 of the increase will be absorbed by higher income taxes.

I am glad to support this bill. I think it does simple justice, long deferred.

Mr. RIVERS. Mr. Speaker, we are today considering H. R. 2181, a bill recently reported from the Committee on the Judiciary to authorize an increase in the annual salary of each member of the Federal judiciary. This increase applies to 275 members of the lower courts, including the courts of appeals, and 9 members of the Supreme Court. Among the 275 members of the lower courts are included the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, the judges of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, of the Court of Claims, of the district courts, including the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, the United States Customs Court, and the district courts of Puerto Rico, Hawaii, and Alaska exercising Federal jurisdiction. This provision also applies in effect to the judge of the District Court of the Canal Zone, due to the fact that the law creating this judgeship states that the judge of the said court shall "receive the same salary" as is allowed to the United States district judges. This bill, however, does not apply to the judge of the District Court of the Virgin Islands, in that this judgeship was created by separate statute.

The Committee on the Judiciary is to be highly commended for its diligence in presenting this legislation to the House. This bill is the result of tremendous study and intelligent application by the members of this splendid committee. The report accompanying the bill now under consideration indicates that under Public Law 528, Sixty-ninth Congress, second session (44 Stat. 919), the present salaries of the Federal judiciary were established—more than 18 years ago.

I need not call to the attention of my colleagues the tremendous rise in the cost of living which has come about in the course of these two decades. Prior to 1926, under two decisions in keeping with article III, section 1 of the Constitution, it was held by the Supreme Court of the United States that the salaries of judges were not taxable due to the fact that to do so would constitute a diminution of their compensation during their tenure of office. However, in the 1926 Revenue Act the Congress provided that the salaries of judges appointed subsequent to the passage of the Revenue Act of 1926 would be subject to the provisions of the income-tax statutes. This provision is still in effect and today the salaries of almost all Federal judges are subject to the income-tax laws, and this figure is increasing due to retirements.

By increasing the salaries of Federal judges, as is suggested in the the report accompanying H. R. 2181, in the amount of $5,000 per annum, the amount left, after deduction of taxes at the 1944 income tax rates, would be $10,535 for district judges, $11,805 for circuit judges, and $15,015 for Associate Justices of the Supreme Court. Putting it another way, of the $5,000 increase, only $2,935 would actually be kept by the district judges, due to the fact that the balance of $2,065 would be withheld or paid back to the Treasury. In terms of percentages, the reduction of the salaries of district judges by taxation in 1944 amounts to 24 percent. When this is combined with the decline in the real value of their salaries through increased cost of living since 1933, the amount of total salary reduction is estimated to be in the neighborhood of 45 percent. Under the same estimated scale, the salaries of circuit judges would be 27 percent and the salaries of Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, 35 percent.

Mr. Chief Justice Marshall said:

> The judicial department comes home in its effects to every man's fireside. It passes on his property, his reputation, his life—his all.

Mr. Justice Sutherland said:

> If the political structure erected by the fathers rests upon any one pillar more securely than upon another, it is upon that which upholds the right of the individual to invoke the judgment of the civil courts of the land upon his conduct.

The judiciary protects and defends the rights of every individual in the Nation. It is a great tribute to a lawyer to wind up his legal career as a judge. It is the ambition of a great percentage of our members of the bar. It is the highest honor that can come to an individual at the hands of his Government.

A Federal judge reviews and construes in the courts many statutes affecting every segment of our economy. He is constantly called upon to place a restraining hand on the quasi-judicial bureaucrats who constantly threaten to invade the sacred sanctum of the Federal courts. He is constantly called upon to impede and hinder the insatiable tentacles of the myriads of Federal bureaus who at times endeavor to evade and circumvent the guaranties of the Constitution; all of which vitally touches the activities of individuals and of business enterprise throughout the country. He deals with criminal cases involving life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness of every single individual under our flag.

The successful administration of receiverships involving our colossal railroad systems rests with the Federal judge. The successful reorganization of public utilities depends upon his ability, honesty, and integrity. With him rests the determination of complicated and important patent litigation, frequently involving international cartels and universal monopolies. He is constantly called upon to pass upon alleged violations of the income-tax statutes. It therefore follows that the Federal judge should be of the highest caliber obtainable—of unimpeachable integrity and unquestioned legal ability. It further follows, as night the day, that the Federal judge should be paid a salary commensurate with the unparalleled responsibility reposed in him and with the astronomical versatility of the abilities required of him.

It is interesting to note that the Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, who compares with our Chief Justice, received approximately $40,000 a year. Of this, approximately $16,000 is applicable to his duties as Speaker of the House of Lords. The Lords of Appeal and Ordinary, who correspond with our Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, receive approximately $24,000 a year. The judges of the high court of justice, corresponding to our district courts, receive an annual salary of approximately $20,000. All of these officials have liberal retirement benefits and none of them is called upon to do the work required of the members of our Federal judiciary.

In our own country the highest appellate court of New York State pays its judge $22,500; Pennsylvania pays $20,000; Massachusetts pays $15,000.

The Congress, it seems to me, should have no hesitancy, with this information at hand, in increasing the annual salaries of our Federal judges in the amount of $5,000. When our Federal judges die their dependents receive no income unless the judge was appointed from an extremely lucrative law practice. It is humanly impossible for a Federal judge to accumulate sufficient money, from his salary alone, to leave his loved ones in good financial circumstances. Unless the Congress grants to our Federal judges proper living salaries, only the wealthy can afford to be Federal judges, thereby shutting the door upon many of unquestioned talent and of proper feeling for every class of American citizen. It is no answer to those who oppose this legislation to say that the Federal judge can always resign if his salary is inadequate. It is a true saying that once a lucrative law practice is abandoned, it is seldom, if ever regained—after a man has passed the prime of life.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the immediate passage of this legislation. There is no question of its need and its justification. There is no justice in depriving the splendid members of our judiciary of an adequate livlihood. Under our system of government, every man is worthy of his hire.

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. Speaker, the measure now being considered is certainly one which deserves the support of every Member of this body.

As pointed out by the Judiciary Committee in its report accompanying H. R. 2181, the companion to S. 920, adequate salaries are a necessary part of any plan to keep competent men in the courts. The increased cost of living and the added tax burdens have reduced the actual worth of judges' salaries to a low point. Judges, like all others, are obliged to provide for the support of dependents, the education of children, and the protection of the family in the event of death. The importance of judicial work is such that judges ought not to be forced to seek supplemental income in order to augment their salaries, but be in a position to devote their full time and talents to it.

The comparatively small over-all cost involved in granting this salary increase to Federal judges is far outweighed by the many beneficial effects which will be wrought.

As one sincerely convinced of the need for this measure, I urge its favorable consideration by every Member of Congress.

Mr. FELLOWS. Mr. Speaker, this legislation granting increases in the salaries of the Federal judiciary should pass.

Argument against it is that we must practice economy, and that by voting against this bill you will save the Federal Treasury in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 net. Economy is a fine thing practiced in the right place. Economy at the expense of a strong judiciary is the reverse of thrift.

The gross annual appropriation for the proposed salary increase for the 285 judgeships covered by the bill, in view of the taxes to be paid by the judges themselves, will be approximately $1,000,000—less than 1 cent per capita on the basis of the 1940 census. The total gross appropriation for the judicial salaries will be $4,538,000—approximately 3½ cents per capita. The cost of supporting the legislative establishment is $30,894,557. The Attorney General, the American Bar Association, the Federal Bar Association, many State, county, and city bar associations, civic bodies, and organizations, including labor organizations, and the press of the country have given their support to the proposed $5,000 increase. The President has recommended an increase of double this amount in the matter of district, circuit, and Supreme Court judges.

To deny this increase under the circumstances would be the reverse of economy. The ablest and the best of our citizens and those most learned in the law should be attracted to the bench as a permanent career. If the present scale is continued, appointment to the bench will have to be made either from among lawyers of independent means or from among those who have been so unsuccessful that even the present salaries will bear comparison with their earnings. Neither alternative is desirable for the public or the bench.

The future welfare of this country in a large degree will depend upon the ability and character of men who wear the robes of our Federal courts.

The following tabulation comparing judicial salaries in the Federal, English, New York, Pennsylvania, and Massachusetts courts shows Federal salaries the lowest:

	Federal	English	New York	Pennsylvania	Massachusetts
Highest	$20,500	£10,000 ($40,000)	$22,500	$20,000	$15,000
Appellate court	20,000	6,000 (24,000)	22,000	19,500	14,000
Intermediate court	12,500	6,000 (24,000)	17,500	18,500
		5,000 (20,000)	17,000	18,000
Trial court	10,000	8,000 (32,000)	14,000	9,000	13,000
		5,000 (20,000)		15,000	12,000

Mr. JENNINGS. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the House Judiciary Committee, I voted to favorably report this bill to the House for passage.

It is a meritorious measure. Especially are the present salaries of the district judges and the judges of the circuit courts of appeal inadequate. In view of the decreased purchasing power of the dollar, and the heavy income taxes the judges must pay to the Federal Government, the present salaries of the Federal judges are not commensurate with the onerous and exacting duties they are called upon to perform.

An able, conscientious, and fearless judiciary is absolutely necessary to the preservation of our free institutions and the protection of the lives, liberties, and property of our people.

The enactment of this measure will help to secure and make certain the appointment and service on the Federal bench of men of the ability, character, and learning that is demanded of our judges.

Mr. Speaker, I take pleasure in supporting and voting for this measure.

Mr. GRANT of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I am strongly in support of the pending proposal to increase by $5,000 the salaries of members of the Federal judiciary. This proposal has long been urged by leading members of the bar and by bar associations across the length and breadth of the land.

The existing salary schedule for Federal judges was fixed in 1926, some 19 years ago. In those 19 years the cost of living has greatly increased and, further than that, since the decision of the Supreme Court in O'Malley v. Woodrough (307 U. S. 277) the salaries of Federal judges have been subject to Federal income taxes under the express provisions of the Revenue Act of 1932.

The salaries paid to members of our Federal judiciary are far less than those paid to comparable judges in other English-speaking countries. In fact, our Federal judges receive much less than do the highest judges in the State courts in our more populous States.

As the report of the Judiciary Committee so well points out, adequate salaries are a necessary part of any plan to keep competent men in the courts. True, it is a high honor to sit on the Federal bench, but honor alone is not enough. There must be adequate compensation to attract the high caliber of men required.

If adequate compensation is not provided, then there is danger that appointments to the Federal bench must come from lawyers of independent means, or from the mediocre member of the bar to whom even the present salary schedule would be a great inducement. Neither of these do we want.

The importance of the judiciary in our Federal system could not be overemphasized. As our Federal Goverment has grown, the importance of the Federal courts in the daily lives of all of our people has grown in even greater proportion. We will perform a distinct service to the American system—a government of laws rather than of men—by supporting the pending resolution.

Mr. FISHER. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to the pending bill, H. R. 2181, which would increase the salaries of Federal judges by $5,000 a year. This appears to me to be an unreasonable increase at this time, especially in view of the fact that the terms of those judgeships are long and full-pay retirement privileges are already provided.

FOREIGN SERVICE OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 6967) to improve, strengthen, and expand the Foreign Service of the United States and to consolidate and revise the laws relating to its administration, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.—

TITLE I—SHORT TITLE, OBJECTIVES, AND DEFINITIONS

PART A—SHORT TITLE

SEC. 101. Titles I to X, inclusive, of this act may be cited as the "Foreign Service Act of 1946."

PART B—OBJECTIVES

SEC. 111. The Congress hereby declares that the objectives of this act are to develop and strengthen the Foreign Service of the United States so as—

(1) to enable the Foreign Service effectively to serve abroad the interests of the United States;

(2) to insure that the officers and employees of the Foreign Service are broadly representative of the American people and are aware of and fully informed in respect to current trends in American life;

(3) to enable the Foreign Service adequately to fulfill the functions devolving on it by reason of the transfer to the Department of State of functions heretofore performed by other Government agencies;

(4) to provide improvements in the recruitment and training of the personnel of the Foreign Service;

(5) to provide that promotions leading to positions of authority and responsibility shall be on the basis of merit and to insure the selection on an impartial basis of outstanding persons for such positions;

(6) to provide for the temporary appointment or assignment to the Foreign Service of representative and outstanding citizens of the United States possessing special skills and abilities;

(7) to provide salaries, allowances, and benefits that will permit the Foreign Service to draw its personnel from all walks of American life and to appoint persons to the highest positions in the Service solely on the basis of their demonstrated ability;

(8) to provide a flexible and comprehensive framework for the direction of the Foreign Service in accordance with modern practices in public administration; and

(9) to codify into one act all provisions of law relating to the administration of the Foreign Service.

PART C—DEFINITIONS

SEC. 121. When used in this act, the term—

(1) "Service" means the Foreign Service of the United States;

(2) "Secretary" means the Secretary of State;

(3) "Department" means the Department of State;

(4) "Government agency" means any executive department, board, bureau, commission, or other agency in the executive branch of the Federal Government, or any corporation wholly owned (either directly or through one or more corporations) by the United States;

(5) "Government" means the Government of the United States of America;

(6) "Continental United States" means the States and the District of Columbia;

(7) "Abroad" means all areas not included in the continental United States as defined in paragraph (6) of this section;

(8) "Principal officer" means the officer in charge of an embassy, legation, or other diplomatic mission or of a consulate general, consulate, or vice consulate of the United States; and

(9) "Chief of mission" means a principal officer appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to be in charge of an embassy or legation or other diplomatic mission of the United States, or any person assigned under the terms of this act to be minister resident, chargé d'affaires, commissioner, or diplomatic agent.

TITLE II—GOVERNING BODIES FOR THE DIRECTION OF THE SERVICE

PART A—OFFICERS

Director General

SEC. 201. The Service shall be administered by a Director General of the Foreign Service, hereinafter referred to as the Director General, who shall be appointed by the Secretary from among Foreign Service officers in the class of career minister or in class 1. Under the general supervision of the Secretary and the Assistant Secretary of State in charge of the administration of the Department, the Director General shall, in addition to administering the Service and performing the duties specifically vested in him by this or any other act, coordinate the activities of the Service with the needs of the Department and of other Government agencies and direct the performance by officers and employees of the Service of the duties imposed on them by the terms of any law or by any order or regulation issued pursuant to law or by any international agreement to which the United States is a party.

Deputy Director General

SEC. 202. The Director General shall be assisted by a Deputy Director General of the Foreign Service, herinafter referred to as the Deputy Director General, who shall be appointed by the Secretary. If he is a Foreign Service officer, he shall be selected from among officers in the class of career minister or in class 1. The Deputy Director General shall act in the place of the Director General in the event of his absence or incapacity.

PART B—BOARDS

Board of the Foreign Service

SEC. 211. (a) The Board of the Foreign Service shall be composed of the Assistant Secretary of State in charge of the administration of the Department, who shall be Chairman; two other Assistant Secretaries of State, designated by the Secretary to serve on the Board; the Director General; and one representative each, occupying positions with comparable responsibilities, from the Departments of Agriculture, Commerce, and Labor, designated, respectively, by the heads of such departments. The Secretary may request the head of any other Government department to designate a representative, occupying a position with comparable responsibilities, to attend meetings of the Board whenever matters affecting the interest of such department are under consideration.

(b) The Board of the Foreign Service shall make recommendations to the Secretary concerning the functions of the Service; the policies and procedures to govern the selection, assignment, rating, and promotion of Foreign Service officers; and the policies and procedures to govern the administration and personnel management of the Service; and shall perform such other duties as are vested in it by other sections of this act or by the terms of any other act.

The Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service

SEC. 212. (a) The Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service shall, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary and under the general supervision of the Board of the Foreign Service, provide for and supervise the conduct of such examinations as may be given to candidates for appointment as Foreign Service officers in accordance with the provisions of sections 516 and 517 or to any other person to whom an examination for admission to the Service shall be given in accordance with the provisions of this or any other act or any regulations issued pursuant thereto, and provide for such procedures as may be necessary to determine the loyalty of such persons to the United States and their attachment to the principles of the Constitution.

(b) The membership of he Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service, not more than half of which shall consist of Foreign Service officers, shall be constituted in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

TITLE III—DUTIES

PART A—GENERAL DUTIES

Compliance with terms of statutes, international agreements, and executive orders

SEC. 301. Officers and employees of the Service shall, under the direction of the Secretary, represent abroad the interests of the United States and shall perform the duties and comply with the obligations resulting from the nature of their appointments or assignments or imposed on them by the terms of any law or by any order or regulation issued pursuant to law or by any international agreement to which the United States is a party.

Duties for which regulations may be prescribed

SEC. 302. The Secretary shall, except in an instance where the authority is specifically vested in the President, have authority to prescribe regulations not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States in relation to the duties, functions, and obligations of officers and employees of the Service and the administration of the Service.

Delegation of authority to prescribe regulations

SEC. 303. In cases where authority to prescribe regulations relating to the Service or the duties and obligations of officers and employees of the Service is specifically vested in the President by the terms of this or any other act, the President may, nevertheless, authorize the Secretary to prescribe such regulations.

PART B—SERVICES FOR GOVERNMENT AGENCIES AND OTHER ESTABLISHMENTS OF THE GOVERNMENT

SEC. 311. The officers and employees of the Service shall, under such regulations as the President may prescribe, perform duties and functions in behalf of any Government agency or any other establishment of the Government requiring their services, including those in the legislative and judicial branches, but the absence of such regulations shall not preclude officers and employees of the Service from acting for and on behalf of any such Government agency or establishment whenever it shall, through the Department, request their services.

TITLE IV—CATEGORIES AND SALARIES OF PERSONNEL

PART A—CATEGORIES OF PERSONNEL

SEC. 401. The personnel of the Service shall consist of the following categories of officers and employees:

(1) Chiefs of mission, who shall be appointed or assigned in accordance with the provisions of section 501;

(2) Foreign Service officers, who shall be appointed in accordance with section 511, including those serving as chiefs of mission;

(3) Foreign Service Reserve officers, who shall be assigned to the Service on a temporary basis from Government agencies or appointed on a temporary basis from outside the Government in accordance with the provisions of section 522, in order to make available to the Service such specialized skills as may from time to time be required;

(4) Foreign Service staff officers and employees, who shall be appointed in accordance with the provisions of section 531 and who shall include all personnel who are citizens of the United States, not comprehended under paragraphs (1), (2), (3), and (6) of this section, and who shall occupy positions with technical, administrative, fiscal, clerical, or custodial responsibilities;

(5) Alien clerks and employees, who shall be appointed in accordance with the provisions of section 541; and

(6) Consular agents, who shall be appointed in accordance with the provisions of section 551.

PART B—SALARIES

Chiefs of mission

SEC. 411. The President shall for salary purposes classify into four classes the positions which are to be occupied by chiefs of mission. The per annum salaries of chiefs of mission within each class shall be as follows: Class 1, $25,000 per annum; class 2, $20,000; class 3, $17,500; and class 4, $15,000.

Foreign Service officers

SEC. 412. There shall be seven classes of Foreign Service officers, including the class of career minister. The per annum salary of a career minister shall be $13,500. The per annum salaries of Foreign Service officers within each of the other classes shall be as follows:

Class 1, $12,000, $12,400, $12,800, $13,200, $13,500;

Class 2, $10,000, $10,350, $10,700, $11,050, $11,400, $11,750 $11,900;

Class 3, $8,000, $8,300, $8,600, $8,900, $9,200, $9,500, $9,800, $9,900;

Class 4, $6,000, $6,300, $6,600, $6,900, $7,200, $7,500, $7,800, $7,900;

Class 5, $4,500, $4,700, $4,900, $5,100, $5,300, $5,500, $5,700, $5,900;

Class 6, $3,300, $3,500, $3,700, $3,900, $4,100, $4,300, $4,400.

Salaries at which Foreign Service officers may be appointed

SEC. 413. (a) A person appointed as a Foreign Service officer of class 6 shall receive salary at that one of the rates provided for that class by section 412 which the Secretary shall, taking into consideration his age, qualifications, and experience, determine to be appropriate for him to receive.

(b) A person appointed as a Foreign Service officer of classes 1 through 5, inclusive, shall receive salary at the minimum rate provided for the class to which he has been appointed.

Foreign Service Reserve officers

SEC. 414. (a) There shall be six classes of Foreign Service Reserve officers, referred to hereafter as Reserve officers, which classes shall correspond to classes 1 to 6 of Foreign Service officers.

(b) A Reserve officer shall receive salary at any one of the rates provided for the class to which he is appointed or assigned in accordance with the provisions of section 523.

(c) A person assigned as a Reserve officer from any Government agency shall receive his salary from appropriations provided for the Department during the period of his service as a Reserve officer.

Foreign Service staff officers and employees

SEC. 415. There shall be twenty-two classes of Foreign Service staff officers and employees, referred to hereafter as staff officers and employees. The per annum rates of salary of staff officers and employees within each class shall be as follows:

Class 1, $8,820, $9,120, $9,420, $9,720, $10,000;

Class 2, $8,100, $8,340, $8,580, $8,820, $9,120;

Class 3, $7,380, $7,620, $7,860, $8,100, $8,340;

Class 4, $6,660, $6,900, $7,140, $7,380, $7,620;

Class 5, $6,120, $6,300, $6,480, $6,660, $6,900, $7,140;

Class 6, $5,580, $5,760, $5,940, $6,120, $6,300, $6,480;

Class 7, $5,040, 5,200, $5,400, $5,580, $5,760, $5,940;

Class 8, $4,500, $4,680, $4,860, $5,040, $5,220, $5,400;

Class 9, $3,960, $4,140, $4,320, $4,500, $4,680, $4,860;

Class 10, $3,600, $3,720, $3,840, $3,960, $4,140, $4,320, $4,500;

Class 11, $3,240, $3,360, $3,480, $3,600, $3,720, $3,840, $3,960;

Class 12, $2,880, $3,000, $3,120, $3,240, $3,360, $3,480, $3,600;

Class 13, $2,520, $2,640, $2,760, $2,880, $3,000, $3,120, $3,240;

Class 14, $2,160, $2,280, $2,400, $2,520, $2,640, $2,760, $2,880;

Class 15, $1,980, $2,040, $2,100, $2,160, $2,280, $2,400, $2,520;

Class 16, $1,800, $1,860, $1,920, $1,980, $2,040, $2,100, $2,160;

Class 17, $1,620, $1,680, $1,740, $1,800, $1,860, $1,920, $1,980;

Class 18, $1,440, $1,500, $1,560, $1,620, $1,680, $1,740, $1,800;

Class 19, $1,260, $1,320, $1,380, $1,440, $1,500, $1,560, $1,620;

Class 20, $1,080, $1,140, $1,200, $2,260, $1,320, $1,380, $1,440;

Class 21, $900, $960, $1,020, $1,080, $1,140, $1,200, $1,260;

Class 22, $720, $780, $840, $900, $960, $1,020, $1,080.

Salaries at which Foreign Service staff officers and employees may be appointed

SEC. 416. A person appointed as a staff officer or employee shall receive salary at the minimum rate provided for the class to which appointed except as otherwise provided in accordance with the provisions of part E of this title.

Salaries of alien clerks and employees

SEC. 417. The salary or compensation of an alien clerk or employee shall be fixed by the Secretary in accordance with such regulations as he shall prescribe and, as soon as practicable, in accordance with the provisions of section 444 (b). The salary or compensation of an alien clerk or employee fixed on a per annum basis may, notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, be payable on a weekly or biweekly basis. When a one- or two-week pay period of such a clerk or employee begins in one fiscal year and ends in another, the gross amount of the earnings for such pay period may be regarded as a charge against the appropriation or allotment current at the end of such pay period.

Salaries of consular agents

SEC. 418. The salary or compensation of a consular agent shall be fixed by the Secretary in accordance with such regulations as he shall prescribe and, as soon as practicable, in accordance with the provisions of section 445.

PART C—SALARIES OF OFFICERS TEMPORARILY IN CHARGE

As chargés d'affaires ad interim

SEC. 421. For such time as any Foreign Service officer shall be authorized to act as chargé d'affaires ad interim at the post to which he is assigned, he shall receive, in addition to his basic salary as Foreign Service officer, compensation equal to that portion of the difference between such salary and the basic salary provided for the chief of mission as the Secretary may determine to be appropriate.

As officers in charge of consulates general or consulates

SEC. 422. For such time as any Foreign Service officer or any consul or vice consul who is not a Foreign Service officer is temporarily in charge of a consulate general or consulate during the absence or incapacity of the principal officer, he shall receive, in addition to his basic salary as Foreign Service officer or consul or vice consul, compensation equal to that portion which the Secretary shall determine to be appropriate of the difference between such salary and the basic salary provided for the principal officer, or, if there be none, of the former principal officer.

PART D—TIME OF RECEIVING SALARY

Chiefs of mission

SEC. 431. (a) Under such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe, a chief of mission may be entitled to receive salary from the effective date of his appointment to the date of marking his return to his place of residence at the conclusion of the period of his official service as chief of mission or the termination of time spent on authorized leave, whichever shall be later, but no chief of mission shall be entitled to receive salary while absent from his post whenever the Secretary shall find that such absence was without authorization or justification. If a chief of mission in one position is appointed as chief of mission in another position, he shall be entitled to receive the salary pertaining to the new position commencing on the effective date of the new appointment.

(b) The official services of a chief of mission shall not be deemed terminated by the appointment of a successor but shall continue until he has relinquished charge of the mission and has rendered such additional services to the Department as the Secretary may require him to render in the interests of the Government for a period not in excess of 30 days, exclusive of time spent in transit.

(c) During the service of a Foreign Service officer as chief of mission he shall receive, in addition to his salary as Foreign Service officer, compensation equal to the difference, if any, between such salary and the salary of the position to which he is appointed or assigned.

Other officers and employees

SEC. 432. (a) Under such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe, any officer or employee appointed to the Service may be entitled to receive salary from the effective date of his appointment to the date when he shall have returned to his place of residence at the conclusion of the period of his official service, or the termination of time spent on authorized leave, whichever shall be later, but no such officer or employee shall be entitled to receive salary while absent from his post whenever the Secretary shall find that such absence was without authorization or justification.

(b) A Foreign Service officer, appointed during a recess of the Senate, shall be paid salary from the effective date of his appointment until the end of the next session of the Senate, if he has not theretofore been confirmed by the Senate, or until his rejection by the Senate before the end of its next session.

(c) A Foreign Service officer promoted to a higher class shall receive salary at the rate prescribed in section 412 for the class to which he is promoted from the effective date of his appointment to such class. A Foreign Service officer promoted to a higher class during a recess of the Senate shall receive salary at the rate prescribed for the class to which he is promoted from the effective date of his appointment to such class until the end of the next session. If the Senate should reject or fail to confirm the promotion of such an officer during the session following the date of his promotion, the Foreign Service officer shall, unless he has become liable to separation in accordance with the provisions of section 633 or 634, be automatically reinstated in the class from which he was promoted and receive the salary he was receiving prior to his promotion, such reinstatement to be effective, in the event of rejection of the nomination, from the date of rejection; and in the event of the failure of the Senate to act on the nomination during the session following a promotion, from termination of that session.

PART E—CLASSIFICATION

Classification of positions in the Foreign Service

SEC. 441. Under such regulations as he may prescribe, the Secretary shall classify all positions in the Service, including those positions at foreign posts which may be held by career ministers, and shall allocate all positions occupied or to be occupied by staff officers or employees to classes and subclasses established by sections 415 and 442, respectively, and by alien employees and consular agents to such classes as may be established by regulation.

Administrative establishment of new groups of positions for Foreign Service staff officers and employees

SEC. 442. The Secretary may, whenever he deems such action to be in the interests of good administration and warranted by the nature of the duties and responsibilities of any group of positions occupied or to be occupied by staff officers and employees in comparison with other positions in the same class, establish by regulation for any such group of positions a minimum salary computed at any one of the rates of salary above the minimum for a given class but not in excess of the middle rate provided for that class in section 415. Such groups of positions shall, for the purposes of this act, be known as subclasses.

Administrative establishment of salary differentials

SEC. 443. Whenever the President shall find and declare that the rates of salary provided for Foreign Service staff officers and employees in section 415 are inadequate for any positions allocated to any particular class or subclass, he may, under such regulations as he may prescribe, establish necessary schedules of differentials in the rates of salary prescribed for such classes or subclasses, but the differential in salary of a person holding any such position shall not exceed 25 percent of the salary he would otherwise receive. Such differentials shall be granted only with respect to positions at posts at which extraordinarily difficult living conditions or excessive physical hardship prevail or at which notably unhealthful conditions exist. The Secretary shall prepare and maintain a list of such posts.

Classification of positions of alien clerks and employees

SEC. 444. (a) Upon the basis of the classification provided for in section 441, the Secretary shall, with the advice of the Board of the Foreign Service, from time to time prepare schedules of salaries for classes of positions of alien clerks and employees of the Service, which classes shall be established by regulation, and shall allocate all such positions to the appropriate classes.

(b) All alien employees in an area of comparatively uniform wage scales and standards of living, occupying positions of equal responsibility, shall receive equal pay except as there may be increases provided for length of service in accordance with uniform procedures.

Classification of consular agents

SEC. 445. Upon the basis of the classification provided for in section 441, the Secretary shall, with the advice of the Board of the Foreign Service, from time to time prepare schedules of salaries for classes of positions of consular agents, which classes shall be established by regulation, and shall allocate all such positions to the appropriate classes.

Exemption from the application of the Classification Act

SEC. 446. Title II of the act of November 26, 1940, entitled "An act extending the classified executive civil service of the United States" (54 Stat. 1212; 5 U. S. C. 681), is hereby further amended by deleting paragraph (vii) of section 3 (d) and by substituting in lieu of the present language of paragraph (vi) of section 3 (d) the following language: "Offices or position of officers and employees of the Foreign Service."

TITLE V—APPOINTMENTS AND ASSIGNMENTS

PART A—PRINCIPAL DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATIVES

Appointments

SEC. 501. (a) The President shall, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint ambassadors and ministers, including career ministers.

(b) The President may, in his discretion, assign any Foreign Service officer to serve as minister resident, chargé d'affaires, commissioner, or diplomatic agent for such period as the public interest may require.

Lists of Foreign Service officers qualified to be career ministers or chiefs of mission to be furnished to the President

SEC. 502. (a) The Secretary shall, on the basis of recommendations made by the Board of the Foreign Service, from time to time furnish the President with the names of Foreign Service officers qualified for appointment to the class of career minister together with pertinent information about such officers, but no person shall be appointed into the class of career minister who has not been appointed to serve as a chief of mission or appointed or assigned to serve in a position which, in the opinion of the Secretary, is of comparable importance. A list of such positions shall from time to time be published by the Secretary.

(b) The Secretary shall also, on the basis of recommendations made by the Board of the Foreign Service, from time to time furnish the President with the names of Foreign Service officers qualified for appointment or assignment as chief of mission, together with pertinent information about such officers, in order to assist the President in selecting qualified candidates for appointment or assignment in such capacity.

PART B—FOREIGN SERVICE OFFICERS

Appointments

SEC. 511. The President shall appoint Foreign Service officers by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. All appointments of Foreign Service officers shall be by appointment to a class and not to a particular post.

Commissions

SEC. 512. Foreign Service officers may be commissioned as diplomatic or consular officers or both and all official acts of such officers while serving under diplomatic or consular commissions shall be performed under their respective commissions as diplomatic or consular officers.

Limits of consular districts

SEC. 513. The Secretary shall define the limits of consular districts.

Assignments and transfers

SEC. 514. A Foreign Service officer, commissioned as a diplomatic or consular officer, may be assigned by the Secretary to serve in any diplomatic position other than that of chief of mission or in any consular position, and he may also be assigned to serve in any other capacity in which he is eligible to serve under the terms of this or any other act. He may be transferred from one post to another by order of the Secretary as the interests of the service may require.

Citizenship requirement

SEC. 515. No person shall be eligible for appointment as a Foreign Service officer unless he is a citizen of the United States and has been such for at least 10 years.

Admission to class 6

SEC. 516. No person shall be eligible for appointment as a Foreign Service officer of class 6 unless he has passed such written, oral, physical, and other examinations as the Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service may prescribe to determine his fitness and aptitude for the work of the Service and has demonstrated his loyalty to the Government of the United States and his attachment to the principles of the Constitution. The Secretary shall furnish the President with the names of those persons who have passed such examinations and are eligible for appointment as Foreign Service officers of class 6.

Admission to classes 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 without prior service in class 6

SEC. 517. A person who has not served in class 6 shall not be eligible for appointment as a Foreign Service officer of classes 1 to 5, inclusive, unless he has passed such written, oral, physical, and other examinations as the Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service may prescribe to determine his fitness and aptitude for the work of the Service; demonstrated his loyalty to the Government of the United States and his attachment to the principles of the Constitution; and rendered at least 4 years of actual service immediately prior to appointment in a position of responsibility in the Service or in the Department or both, except that, if he has reached the age of 31 years, the requirement as to service may be reduced to 3 years. The Secretary shall furnish the President with the names of those persons who shall have passed such examinations and are eligible for appointment as Foreign Service officers of classes 1 to 5, inclusive. The Secretary shall, taking into consideration the age, qualifications, and experience of each candidate for appointment, recommend the class to which he shall be appointed in accordance with the provisions of this section.

Admission to the class of career minister

SEC. 518. No person shall be eligible for appointment to the class of career minister who is not a Foreign Service officer.

Reassignment to Foreign Service of former ambassadors and ministers

SEC. 519. If, within 3 months of the date of the termination of his services as chief of mission and of any period of authorized leave, a Foreign Service officer has not again been appointed or assigned as chief of mission or assigned in accordance with the provisions of section 514, he shall be retired from the Service and receive retirement benefits in accordance with the provisions of section 821.

Reinstatement and recall of Foreign Service officers

SEC. 520. (a) The President may, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, reappoint to the Service a former Foreign Service officer who has been separated from the Service by reason of appointment to some other position in the Government service and who has served continuously in the Government up to the time of reinstatement. The Secretary shall, taking into consideration the qualifications and experience of each candidate for reappointment and the rank of his contemporaries in the Service, recommend the class to which he shall be reappointed in accordance with the provisions of this section.

(b) Whenever the Secretary shall determine an emergency to exist, the Secretary may recall any retired Foreign Service officer temporarily to active service.

PART C—FOREIGN SERVICE RESERVE OFFICERS

Establishment of Reserve

SEC. 521. In accordance with the terms of this act and under such regulations as the Secretary shall prescribe, there shall be organized and maintained a Foreign Service Reserve, referred to hereafter as the Reserve.

Appointments and assignments to the Reserve

SEC. 522. Whenever the services of a person who is a citizen of the United States and who has been such for at least 5 years are required by the Service, the Secretary may—

(1) appoint as a Reserve officer for nonconsecutive periods of not more than 4 years each, a person not in the employ of the Government whom the Board of the Foreign Service shall deem to have outstanding qualifications of a specialized character; and

(2) assign as a Reserve officer for nonconsecutive periods of not more than 4 years each a person regularly employed in any Government agency, subject, in the case of an employee of a Government agency other than the Department of State, to the consent of the head of the agency concerned.

Appointment or assignment to a class

SEC. 523. A Reserve officer, appointed or assigned to active duty, shall be appointed or assigned to a class and not to a particular post, and such an officer may be assigned to posts and may be transferred from one post to another by order of the Secretary as the interests of the Service may require. The class to which he shall be appointed or assigned shall depend on his age, qualifications, and experience.

Commissions

SEC. 524. Whenever the Secretary shall deem it in the interests of the Service that a Reserve officer shall serve in a diplomatic or consular capacity, he may recommend to the President that such officer be commissioned as a diplomatic or consular officer or both. The President may, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, commission such officer as a diplomatic or consular officer or both, and all official acts of such an officer while serving under a diplomatic or consular commission shall be performed under his commission as a diplomatic or consular officer. In all other cases, appropriate rank and status, analagous to that of Foreign Service officers engaged in work of comparable importance shall be provided to permit Reserve officers to carry out their duties effectively.

Active duty

SEC. 525. The Secretary shall by regulation define the period during which a Reserve officer shall be considered as being on active duty.

Benefits

SEC. 526. A Reserve officer shall, except as otherwise provided in regulations which the Secretary may prescribe, receive all the allowances, privileges, and benefits which Foreign Service officers are entitled to receive in accordance with the provisions of title IX.

Reappointment or reassignment of Reserve officers

SEC. 527. A person who has served as a Reserve officer may not be reappointed or reassigned to active duty until the expiration of a period of time equal to his preceding tour of duty or until the expiration of a year, whichever is the shorter.

Reinstatement of Reserve officers

SEC. 528. Upon the termination of the assignment of a Reserve officer assigned from any Government agency, such person shall be entitled to reinstatement in the Government agency by which he is regularly employed in the same position he occupied at the time of assignment, or in a corresponding or higher position. Upon reinstatement he shall receive the within-grade salary advancements he would have been entitled to receive had he remained in the position in which he is regularly employed under subsection (d), section 7, of the Classification Act of 923, as amended, or any corresponding provision of law applicable to the position in which he is serving. A certificate of the Secretary that such person has met the standards required for the efficient conduct of the work of the Foreign Service shall satisfy any requirements as to the holding of minimum ratings as a prerequisite to the receipt of such salary advancements.

PART D—FOREIGN SERVICE STAFF OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES

Appointments

SEC. 531. The Secretary shall appoint staff officers and employees under such regulations as he may prescribe and, as soon as practicable, in accordance with the provisions of sections 441, 442, and 443.

Assignments and transfers

SEC. 532. The Secretary may, in accordance with uniform procedures established in such regulations as he may prescribe, assign a staff officer or employee to a position at any post and transfer such a person from a position in one class to a vacant position within the same class, and from one post to another. Upon demonstration of ability to assume duties of greater responsibility, such person may, as provided in section 641, be promoted to a vacant position in a higher class at the same or at a higher rate of salary and he may be transferred from one post to another in connection with such promotion.

Commission as consul or vice consul

SEC. 533. On the recommendation of the Secretary, the President may, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, commission a staff officer or employee as consul. The Secretary may commission a staff officer or employee as vice consul. Official acts of staff officers or employees while serving under consular commissions in the Service shall be performed under their respective commissions as consular officers.

Citizenship requirement

SEC. 534. No person shall be eligible for appointment as staff officer or employee who is not a citizen of the United States at the time of his appointment.

PART E—ALIEN CLERKS AND EMPLOYEES

Appointments

SEC. 541. The Secretary shall appoint alien clerks and employees at posts abroad under such regulations as he may prescribe and, as soon as practicable in accordance with the provisions of section 444.

Assignments and transfers

SEC. 542. The Secretary may assign an alien clerk or employee to a position at any post, and any such clerk or employee may be transferred from a position at one post to a position at another as the interests of the Service may require.

PART F—CONSULAR AGENTS

SEC. 551. The Secretary may appoint consular agents under such regulations as he may prescribe, and as soon as practicable in accordance with the provisions of section 445.

PART G—ASSIGNMENT OF PERSONNEL BY THE WAR AND NAVY DEPARTMENTS

As couriers and inspectors of buildings

SEC. 561. The Secretaries of War and Navy are authorized, upon the request of the Secretary, to assign or detail military and naval personnel serving under their supervision for duty as inspectors of buildings owned or occupied abroad by the United States or as inspectors or supervisors of buildings under construction or repair abroad by or for the United States, or for duty as couriers of the Department; and when so assigned or detailed they may receive the same traveling expenses as are authorized for officers of the Service, payable from applicable appropriations of the Department. Such assignments or details may, in the discretion of the head of the department concerned, be made without reimbursement from the Department of State.

As custodians

SEC. 562. The Secretary of the Navy is authorized, upon request of the Secretary of State, to assign enlisted men of the Navy and the Marine Corps to serve as custodians under the supervision of the principal officer at an embassy, legation, or consulate.

PART H—ASSIGNMENT OF FOREIGN SERVICE PERSONNEL

Assignments to any Government agency

SEC. 571 (a) Any officer or employee of the Service may, in the discretion of the Director General, be assigned or detailed for duty in any Government agency, such an assignment or combination of assignments to be for a period of not more than 4 years. He may not again be assigned for duty in a Government agency until the expiration of a period of time equal to his proceeding tour of duty on such assignment or until the expiration of 2 years, whichever is the shorter.

(b) A Foreign Service officer may be appointed as Director General or Deputy Director General, notwithstanding the provisions of the last sentence of paragraph (a) of this section, but any such officer may not serve longer than 4 years in such position or positions and upon the completion of such service may not again be assigned to a position in the Department until the expiration of a period of time equal to his tour of duty as Director General or Deputy Director General, or until the expiration of 2 years, whichever is shorter.

(c) If a Foreign Service officer shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to a position in the Department, the period of his service in such capacity shall be construed as constituting an assignment for duty in the Department within the meaning of paragraph (a) of this section and such person shall not, by virtue of the acceptance of such an assignment, lose his status as a Foreign Service officer. Service in such a position shall not, however, be subject to the limitations concerning the duration of an assignment or concerning reassignment contained in that paragraph.

(d) If the basic minimum salary of the position to which an officer or employee of the Service is assigned pursuant to the terms of this section is higher than the salary such officer or employee is entitled to receive as an officer or employee of the Service, such officer or employee shall, during the period such difference in salary exists, receive the salary of the position in which he is serving in lieu of his salary as an officer or employee of the Service. Any salary paid under the provisions of this section shall be paid from appropriations made available for the payment of salaries of officers and employees of the Service and shall be the salary on the basis of which computations and payments shall be made in accordance with the provisions of title VIII.

Compulsory service of Foreign Service officers in the continental United States

SEC. 572. Every Foreign Service officer shall, during his first 15 years of service in such capacity, be assigned for duty in the continental United States in accordance with the provisions of section 571 for periods totaling not less than 3 years.

Assignment for consultation or instruction

SEC. 573. (a) Any officer or employee of the Service may, in the discretion of the Secretary, be assigned or detailed to any Government agency for consultation of specific instruction either at the commencement, during the course of, or at the close of the period of his official service; and any such detail or assignment, if not more than 4 months in duration, shall not be considered as an assignment within the meaning of section 571.

(b) Any officer or employee of the Service may be assigned or detailed for special instruction or training at or with public or private nonprofit institutions; trade, labor, agricultural, or scientific associations; or commercial firms.

Assignment to trade, labor, agricultural, scientific, or other conferences

SEC. 574. An officer or employee of the Service may, in the discretion of the Secretary, be assigned or detailed for duty with domestic or international trade, labor, agricultural, scientific, or other conferences, congresses, or gatherings, including those whose place of meeting is in the continental United States; or for other special duties, including temporary details under commission not at his post or in the Department.

Assignments to foreign governments

SEC. 575. The Secretary may, in his discretion, assign or detail an officer or employee of the Service for temporary service to or in cooperation with the government of another country in accordance with the provisions of the act of May 25, 1938, as amended (52 Stat. 442; 53 Stat. 652; 5 U. S. C. 118e).

Assignments to international organizations

SEC. 576. The Secretary may, in his discretion, assign or detail an officer or employee of the Service for temporary service to or in cooperation with an international organization in which the United States participates under the same conditions as those governing the assignment or detail of officers or employees of the Service to the government of another country in accordance with the provisions of the act of May 25, 1938, as amended (52 Stat. 442; 53 Stat. 652; 5 U. S. C. 118e).

Assignment or detail to the United States not to affect personnel ceilings

SEC. 577. An officer or employee of the Service assigned or detailed to the continental United States in accordance with the provisions of this act shall not be counted as a civilian employee within the meaning of section 607 of the Federal Employees' Pay Act of 1945, as amended by section 14 of the Federal Employees' Pay Act of 1946.

TITLE VI—PERSONNEL ADMINISTRATION

PART A—DEFINITIONS

SEC. 601. For the purposes of this title—

(1) "Efficiency record" is the term which describes those materials considered by the Director General to be pertinent to the preparation of an evaluation of the performance of an officer or employee of the Service.

(2) "Efficiency report" is the term which designates the analysis of the performance of an officer or employee made by his supervising officer or by a Foreign Service inspector in accordance with such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary.

PART B—EFFICIENCY RECORDS

Responsibility of the Director General for the keeping of efficiency records

SEC. 611. The Director General, acting under the general direction of the Board of the Foreign Service, shall be responsible for the keeping of accurate and impartial efficiency records. Under his direction there shall be assembled, recorded, and preserved all available information in regard to the character, ability, conduct, quality of work, industry, experience, dependability, and general usefulness of all officers and employees of the Service, including the reports of Foreign Service inspectors and the efficiency reports of supervising officers. The Director General shall undertake such statistical and other analyses as may be necessary to develop the validity and reliability of efficiency reporting forms and procedures.

To whom records shall be available

SEC. 612. The correspondence and records of the Department relating to the officers and employees of the Service, including efficiency records as defined in section 601 (1), but not including records pertaining to the receipt, disbursement, and accounting for public funds, shall be confidential and subject to inspection only by the President, the Secretary, the Under Secretary, the Counselor of the Department, the legislative and appropriations committees of the Congress charged with considering legislation and appropriations for the Service or representatives duly authorized by such committees, the members of the Board of the Foreign Service, the Director General, and such officers and employees of the Government as may be assigned by the Secretary to work on such records. Under such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe and in the interest of efficient personnel administration, the whole or any portion of an efficiency record shall, upon written request, be divulged to the officer or employee to whom such record relates.

PART C—PROMOTION OF FOREIGN SERVICE OFFICERS AND FOREIGN SERVICE RESERVE OFFICERS

Promotion of Foreign Service officers by selection

SEC. 621. All promotions of Foreign Service officers shall be made by the President, in accordance with such regulations as he may prescribe, by appointment to a higher class, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Promotion shall be by selection on the basis of merit.

Eligibility

SEC. 622. The Secretary shall, by regulation, determine the minimum period Foreign Service officers must serve in each class and a standard for performance for each class which they must meet in order to become eligible for promotion to a higher class. In event the Director General shall certify to the Foreign Service that a Foreign Service officer has rendered extraordinarily meritorious service, the Board of the Foreign Service may recommend to the Secretary that such officer shall not be required to serve such minimum period in class as a prerequisite to promotion, and the Secretary may exempt such officer from such requirement.

Recommendations for promotion

SEC. 623. The Secretary is authorized to establish, with the advice of the Board of the Foreign Service, selection boards to evaluate the performance of Foreign Service officers, and upon the basis of their findings the Secretary shall make recommendations to the President for the promotion of Foreign Service officers. No person assigned to serve on any such board shall serve in such capacity for any two consecutive years.

Promotion of Foreign Service Reserve officers

SEC. 624. Any Reserve officer may receive promotions from one class to a next higher class in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

In-class promotions of Foreign Service officers and Reserve officers

SEC. 625. Any Foreign Service officer or any Reserve officer, whose services meet the standards required for the efficient conduct of the work of the Foreign Service and who shall have been in a given class for a continuous period of 9 months or more, shall, on the first day of each fiscal year, receive an increase in salary to the next higher rate for the class in which he is serving. The Secretary is authorized to grant to a Foreign Service officer or a Reserve officer, in any class, additional increases in salary within the salary range established for the class in which he is serving, based upon especially meritorious service.

PART D—SEPARATION OF FOREIGN SERVICE OFFICERS FROM THE SERVICE

Foreign Service officers who are career ministers

SEC. 631. Any Foreign Service officer who is a career minister, other than one occupying a position as chief of mission, shall, upon reaching the age of 65, be retired from the Service and receive retirement benefits in accordance with the provisions of section 821, but whenever the Secretary shall determine an emergency to exist, he may, in the public interest, extend such an officer's service for a period not to exceed 5 years.

Foreign Service officers who are not career ministers

SEC. 632. Any Foreign Service officer who is not a career minister shall, upon reaching the age of 60, be retired from the Service and receive retirement benefits in accordance with the provisions of section 821 but when the Secretary shall determine an emergency to exist, he may, in the public interest, extend such an officer's service for a period not to exceed 5 years.

Foreign Service officers in classes 2 and 3

SEC. 633. The Secretary shall prescribe the maximum period during which Foreign Service officers in classes 2 or 3 shall be permitted to remain in such classes without promotion. Any officer who does not receive a promotion to a higher class within that period shall be retired from the Service and receive retirement benefits in accordance with the provisions of section 821.

Foreign Service officers in classes 4 and 5

SEC. 634. (a) The Secretary shall prescribe the maximum period during which Foreign Service officers in classes 4 or 5 shall be permitted to remain in such classes without promotion. Any officer who does not receive a promotion to a higher class within that period shall be retired from the Service and receive benefits as follows:

(1) One-twelfth of a year's salary at his then current salary rate for each year of service and proportionately for a fraction of a year, payable without interest, in three equal installments on the 1st day of January following the officer's retirement and on the two anniversaries of this date immediately following; and

(2) A refund of the contributions made to the Foreign Service Retirement and Disability Fund, with interest thereon at 4 percent, compounded annually, except that in lieu of such refund such officer may elect to receive retirement benefits on reaching the age of 62, in accordance with the provisions of section 821. In the event that an officer who was separated from class 4 and who has elected to receive retirement benefits dies before reaching the age of 62, his death shall be considered a death in service within the meaning of section 832. In the event that an officer who was separated from class 5 and who has elected to receive retirement benefits dies before reaching the age of 62, the total amount of his contributions made to the Foreign Service Retirement and Disability Fund, with interest thereon at 4 percent, compounded annually, shall be paid in accordance with the provisions of section 841.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 3477 of the Revised Statutes (31 U. S. C. 203) or the provisions of any other law, a Foreign Service officer who is retired in accordance with the provisions of this section shall have the right to assign to any person or corporation the whole or any part of the benefits receivable by him pursuant to paragraph (a) (1) of this section. Any such assignment shall be on a form approved by the Secretary of the Treasury and a copy thereof shall be deposited with the Secretary of the Treasury by the officer executing the assignment.

Foreign Service officers retired from class 6

SEC. 635. Any Foreign Service officer in class 6 shall occupy probationary status. The Secretary may terminate his service at any time.

Voluntary retirement

SEC. 636. Any Foreign Service officer who is at least 50 years of age and has rendered 20 years of service, including service within the meaning of section 853, may on his own application and with the consent of the Secretary be retired from the Service and receive benefits in accordance with the provisions of section 821.

Separation for unsatisfactory performance of duty

SEC. 637. (a) The Secretary may, under such regulations as he may prescribe, separate from the Service any Foreign Service officer above class 6 on account of the unsatisfactory performance of his duties; but no such officer shall be so separated from the Service until he shall have been granted a hearing by the Board of the Foreign Service and the unsatisfactory performance of his duties shall have been established at such hearing.

(b) Any Foreign Service officer over 45 years of age, separated from the Service in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (a) of this section, shall be retired upon an annuity computed in accordance with the provisions of section 821 but not in excess of 25 percent of his per annum salary at the time of his separation.

(c) Any Foreign Service officer under 45 years of age, separated from the Service in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (a) of this section, shall at the time of separation receive a payment equal to 1 year's salary or the refund of the contributions made by him to the Foreign Service retirement and disability fund, whichever shall be greater.

(d) Any payments made in accordance with the provisions of this section shall be made out of the Foreign Service retirement and disability fund.

Separation for misconduct or malfeasance

SEC. 638. The Secretary shall separate from the Service any Foreign Service officer or Reserve officer who shall be guilty of misconduct or malfeasance in office, but no such officer shall be so separated from the Service until he shall have been granted a hearing by the Board of the Foreign Service and his misconduct or malfeasance shall have been established at such hearing. Any officer separated from the Service in accordance with the provisions of this section shall not be eligible to receive the benefits provided by title VIII of this act, but his contributions to the Foreign Service retirement and disability fund shall be returned to him in accordance with the provisions of section 841 (a).

PART E—PROMOTION OF FOREIGN SERVICE STAFF OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES

Class promotion of staff personnel

SEC. 641. Any staff officer or employee may, in accordance with uniform procedures established in regulations prescribed by the Secretary, upon demonstration of ability to assume duties of greater responsibility, be promoted to a vacant position in a higher class at the same or at a higher rate of salary.

In-class promotions of staff officers and employees

SEC. 642. In-class promotions of staff officers and employees shall be granted in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

PART F—SEPARATION OF STAFF OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES

For unsatisfactory performance of duty

SEC. 651. The Secretary may, under such regulations as he may prescribe, separate from the Service any staff officer or employee on account of the unsatisfactory performance of his duties, but no such officer or employee shall be so separated from the Service until he shall have been granted a hearing by the Board of the Foreign Service and the unsatisfactory performance of his duties shall have been established at such hearing.

For misconduct or malfeasance

SEC. 652. The Secretary shall separate from the Service any staff officer or employee who shall be guilty of misconduct or malfeasance in office, but no such officer or employee shall be so separated from the Service until he shall have been granted a hearing by the Board of the Foreign Service and his misconduct or malfeasance shall have been established at such hearing.

PART G—PROMOTION AND SEPARATION OF ALIEN CLERKS AND EMPLOYEES

Promotion

SEC. 661. Alien clerks and employees shall receive promotions from one class to a higher class and in-class promotions in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

For unsatisfactory performance of duty

SEC. 662. The Secretary may, under such regulations as he may prescribe, separate from the Service any alien clerk or employee on account of the unsatisfactory performance of his duties.

Separation for misconduct or malfeasance

SEC. 663. The Secretary shall separate from the Service any alien clerk or employee who shall be found guilty of misconduct or malfeasance.

PART H—SEPARATION OF CONSULAR AGENTS

SEC. 671. The Secretary may, under such regulations as he may prescribe, separate any consular agent from the Service on account of—

(a) the unsatisfactory performance of his duties; or

(b) misconduct or malfeasance.

PART I—INSPECTIONS

SEC. 681. The Secretary shall assign or detail Foreign Service officers as Foreign Service inspectors to inspect in a substantially uniform manner and at least once every 2 years the work of the diplomatic and consular establishments of the United States. Whenever the Secretary has reason to believe that the business of a consulate is not being properly conducted and that it is necessary in the public interest, he may authorize any Foreign Service inspector to suspend the principal officer or any subordinate consular officer and to administer the office in the place of the principal officer for a period not exceeding 90 days. The Secretary may also authorize a Foreign Service inspector to suspend any diplomatic officer except a chief of mission. A Foreign Service inspector shall have the authority to suspend any other officer or employee of the Service.

TITLE VII—THE FOREIGN SERVICE INSTITUTE

Establishment of the Institute

SEC. 701. The Secretary shall, in order to furnish training and instruction to officers and employees of the Service and of the Department and to other officers and employees of the Government for whom training and instruction in the field of foreign relations is necessary, and in order to promote and foster programs of study incidental to such training, establish a Foreign Service Institute, hereinafter called the Institute.

The Director of the Institute—appointment, salary, and duties

SEC. 702. The head of the Institute, who shall be known as its Director, shall be appointed by the Secretary. The Director shall, under the general supervision of the Director General and under such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe, establish the basic procedures to be followed by the Institute; plan and provide for the general nature of the training and instruction to be furnished at the Institute; correlate the training and instruction to be furnished at the Institute with the training activities of the Department and other Government agencies and with courses given at private institutions that are designed or may serve to furnish training and instruction to officers and employees of the Service; encourage and foster such programs outside of the Institute as will be complementary to those of the Institute; and take such other action as may be required for the proper administration of the Institute.

Aid to nonprofit institutions

SEC. 703. The Secretary may, within the limits of such appropriations as may be made specifically therefor, make grants or furnish such other gratuitous assistance as he may deem necessary or advisable to nonprofit institutions cooperating with the Institute in any of the programs conducted by the Director by authority of this title.

Appointment, assignment, and detail to the Institute

SEC. 704. (a) The Secretary may appoint to the faculty or staff of the Institute on a full- or part-time basis such personnel as he may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this title in accordance with the provisions of the civil-service laws and regulations and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, except that, when deemed necessary by the Secretary for the effective administration of this title, personnel may be appointed without regard to such laws and regulations, but any person so appointed shall receive a salary at one of the rates provided by the Classification Act of 1923, as amended. All appointments to the faculty or staff of the Institute shall be made without regard to political affiliations and shall be made solely on the basis of demonstrated interest in, and capacity to promote, the purposes of the Institute.

(b) The Secretary may, under such regulations as he may prescribe and on a full- or part-time basis, assign or detail officers and employees of the Service to serve on the faculty or staff of the Institute or to receive training at the Institute.

(c) The Secretary may, under such regulations as he may prescribe and on a full- or part-time basis, assign or detail any officer or employee of the Department, and, with the consent of the head of the Government agency concerned, any other officer or employee of the Government, to serve on the faculty or staff of the Institute, or to receive training. During the period of his assignment or detail, such officer or employee shall be considered as remaining in the position from which assigned.

(d) It shall be the duty of the Director to make recommendations to the Secretary with regard to the appointment, assignment, or detail of persons to serve on the faculty or staff of the Institute, and the Secretary shall in each case take such recommendations into consideration in making such appointments, assignments, or details.

Instruction and education at other localities than the Institute

SEC. 705. The Secretary may, under such regulations as he may prescribe, pay the tuition and other expenses of officers and employees of the Service, assigned or detailed in accordance with the provisions of section 573 (b) for special instruction or training at or with public or private nonprofit institutions, trade, labor, agricultural, or scientific associations, or commercial firms.

Endowments and gifts to the Institute

SEC. 706. The Secretary may accept, receive, hold, and administer gifts, bequests, or devises of money, securities, or property made for the benefit of, or in connection with, the Foreign Service Institute in accordance with part C of title X.

Acquisition of real property for the Institute

SEC. 707. The Secretary may, in the name of the United States, acquire such real property as may be necessary for the operation and maintenance of the Institute and, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, such other property and equipment as may be necessary for its operation and maintenance.

TITLE VIII—THE FOREIGN SERVICE RETIREMENT AND DISABILITY SYSTEM

PART A—ESTABLISHMENT OF SYSTEM

Rules and regulations

SEC. 801. (a) The President may prescribe rules and regulations for the maintenance of a Foreign Service Retirement and Disability System, originally established by section 18 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 144), referred to hereafter as the System.

(b) The Secretary shall administer the System in accordance with such rules and regulations and with the principles established by this act.

Maintenance of fund

SEC. 802. The Secretary of the Treasury shall maintain the special fund, known as the Foreign Service retirement and disability fund, referred to hereafter as the fund, originally constituted by section 18 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 144).

Participants

SEC. 803. (a) The following persons, hereafter referred to as participants, shall be entitled to the benefits of the System:

(1) All Foreign Service officers;

(2) All other persons making contributions to the fund on the effective date of this act;

(3) Any chief of mission who is not otherwise entitled to be a participant and who fulfills the conditions of paragraph (b) of this section;

(b) A person to become a participant in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (a) (3) of this section must—

(1) have served as chief of mission for an aggregate period of 20 years of more, exclusive of extra service credit in accordance with the provisions of section 853; and

(2) have paid into the fund a special contribution equal to 5 percent of his basic salary for each year of such service with interest thereon to date of payment, compounded annually at 4 percent.

Annuitants

SEC. 804. Annuitants shall be persons who are receiving annuities from the fund on the effective date of this act, persons who shall become entitled to receive annuities in accordance with the provisions of sections 519, 631, 632, 633, 634, 636, 637, 831, 832, and 833, and all widows and beneficiaries of participants who are entitled to receive annuities in accordance with the terms of this title.

PART B—COMPULSORY CONTRIBUTIONS

SEC. 811. (a) Five percent of the basic salary of all participants shall be contributed to the fund, and the Secretary of the Treasury is directed to cause such deductions to be made and the sums transferred on the books of the Treasury Department to the credit of the fund for the payment of annuities, cash benefits, refunds, and allowances.

(b) All basic salaries in excess of $13,500 per annum shall be treated as $13,500 for the purposes of this title.

PART C—COMPUTATION OF ANNUITIES

SEC. 821. (a) The annuity of a participant shall be equal to 2 percent of his average basic salary, not exceeding $13,500 per annum, for the 5 years next preceding the date of his retirement multiplied by the number of years of service, not exceeding 30 years. In determining the aggregate period of service upon which the annuity is to be based, the fractional part of a month, if any, shall not be counted.

(b) At the time of his retirement, a participant, if the husband of a wife to whom he has been married for at least 3 years or who is the mother of issue by such marriage, may elect to receive a reduced annuity for himself and to provide for an annuity payable to his widow, commencing on the date following his death and continuing as long as she may live. The annuity payable to his widow shall in no case exceed 25 percent of his average basic salary for the 5 years next preceding his retirement or 66⅔ percent of his reduced annuity. If the age of the participant is less than the age of the wife or exceeds her age by not more than 8 years, the annuity of the participant will be reduced by an amount equal to one-half of the annuity which he elects to have paid to his widow. If the age of the participant exceeds the age of the wife by more than 8 years, the annuity of the participant will be reduced by an amount equal to one-half the annuity which he elects to have paid to his widow plus an additional reduction equal to 2 percent of such widow's annuity for each year, or fraction thereof, that the difference in age exceeds 8. The participant may at his option also elect to have his annuity reduced by an additional 5 percent of the amount which he elects to have paid to his widow, with a provision that, from and after the death of his wife, if the participant shall survive her, the annuity payable to the participant shall be that amount which would have been payable if no option had been elected.

(c) A participant who is not married at the time of his retirement or who is married to a wife who is not entitled to an annuity in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (b) of this section may elect to receive a reduced annuity for himself and to provide for an additional annuity payable after his death to a beneficiary whose name shall be notified in writing to the Secretary at the time of his retirement and who is acceptable to the Secretary. The annuity payments payable to such beneficiary shall be either equal to the deceased participant's reduced annuity payments or equal to 50 percent of such reduced annuity payments and upon the death of the surviving beneficiary all payments shall cease and no further annuity payments shall be due or payable. The combined actuarial value of the two annuities on the date of retirement as determined by the Secretary of the Treasury shall be the same as the actuarial value of the annuity provided by paragraph (a) of this section. No such election of a reduced annuity payable to a beneficiary other than a child of the participant shall be valid until the participant shall have satisfactorily passed a physical examination as prescribed by the Secretary. Annuity payments payable in accordance with the provisions of this section to a beneficiary who is a child of a participant shall cease when the beneficiary reaches the age of 21 years.

PART D—BENEFITS ACCRUING TO CERTAIN PARTICIPANTS

Retirement for disability or incapacity—Physical examination—Recovery

SEC. 831. (a) Any participant who, after serving for a total period of not less than 5 years, becomes totally disabled or incapacitated for useful and efficient service by reason of disease or injury incurred in the line of duty but not due to vicious habits, intemperance, or willful misconduct on his part, shall, upon his own application or upon order of the Secretary, be retired on an annuity computed as prescribed in section 821. If the disabled or incapacitated participant has had less than 20 years of service at the time he is retired, his annuity shall be computed on the assumption that he had had 20 years of service.

(b) In each case such disability shall be determined by the report of a duly qualified physician or surgeon, designated by the Secretary to conduct the examination. Unless the disability is permanent, a like examination shall be made annually until the annuitant has reached the retirement age as defined in sections 631 and 632, and the payment of the annuity shall cease from the date of a medical examination showing recovery. Fees for examinations under this provision, together with reasonable traveling and other expenses incurred in order to submit to examination, shall be paid out of the Fund.

(c) When the annuity is discontinued under this provision before the annuitant has received a sum equal to the total amount of his contributions, with accrued interest, the difference shall be paid to him or his legal representatives in the order of precedence prescribed in section 841.

Death in service

SEC. 832. In case a participant shall die without having established a valid claim for annuity, the total amount of his contributions with interest thereon at 4 percent per annum, compounded on June 30 of each year, except as provided in section 881 and as hereinafter provided in this section, shall be paid to his legal representatives in the order of precedence given under section 841 upon the establishment of a valid claim therefor. If the deceased participant rendered at least 5 years of service, and is survived by a widow to whom he was married for at least 3 years, or who is the mother of issue by such marriage, such widow shall be paid an annuity equal to the annuity which she would have been entitled to receive if her husband had been retired on the date of his death and had elected to receive a reduced joint and survivorship annuity, computed as prescribed in section 821, providing the maximum annuity for his widow, unless prior to the date of his death he shall have elected, in lieu of such widow's annuity, and with the approval of the Secretary, to have his deductions returned with interest as provided in the first sentence of this section covering participants dying without having established a valid claim for annuity. If the deceased participant had had less than 20 years of service at the time of his death, the annuity payable to his widow shall be computed on the assumption that he had had 20 years of service.

Retirement of persons who are participants under section 803 (a) (3)

SEC. 833. (a) Any person who is a participant, has at least 20 years of service to his credit, and has reached the age of fifty years, but is not a Foreign Service officer at the time he is retired in accordance with the provisions of law governing retirement in the position that he occupies, shall be entitled to an annuity computed as prescribed in section 821.

(b) Any person who is a participant in accordance with the provisions of section 803 (a) (3) shall be entitled to voluntary retirement to the same extent and subject to the same conditions as a Foreign Service officer.

PART E—DISPOSITION OF CONTRIBUTIONS AND INTEREST IN EXCESS OF BENEFITS RECEIVED

SEC. 841. (a) Whenever a participant becomes separated from the Service without becoming eligible for an annuity or a deferred annuity in accordance with the provisions of this act, the total amount of contributions from his salary with interest thereon at 4 percent per annum, compounded annually up to the date of such separation, except as provided in section 881, shall be returned to him.

(b) In the event that the total contributions of a retired participant, other than voluntary contributions made in accordance with the provisions of sections 881, with interest compounded annually at 4 percent added thereto, exceed the total amount returned to such participant or to an annuitant claiming through him, in the form of annuities, accumulated at the same rate of interest up to the date the annuity payments cease under the terms of the annuity, the excess of the accumulated contributions over the accumulated annuity payments shall be paid in the following order of precedence, upon the establishment of a valid claim therefor:

(1) To the beneficiary or beneficiaries designated by the retired participant in writing to the Secretary;

(2) If there be no such beneficiary, to the duly appointed executor or administrator of the estate of the retired participant;

(3) If there be no such beneficiary, or executor or administrator, payment may be made to such person or persons as may appear in the judgment of the Secretary to be legally entitled thereto, and such payment shall be a ban to recovery by any other person.

(c) No payment shall be made pursuant to paragraph (b) (3) of this section until after the expiration of 30 days from the death of the retired participant or his surviving annuitant.

PART F—PERIOD OF SERVICE FOR ANNUITIES

Computation of length of service

SEC. 851. For the purposes of this title, the period of service of a participant shall be computed from the effective date of appointment as Foreign Service officer, or, if appointed prior to July 1, 1924, as diplomatic secretary, consul general, consul, vice consul, deputy consul, consular assistant, consular agent, commercial agent, interpreter, or student interpreter, and shall include periods of service at different times as either a diplomatic or consular officer, or while on assignment to the Department, or while on special duty or service in another department or establishment of the Government, or while on any assignment in accordance with the provisions of part H of title V, but all periods of separation from the Service and so much of any leaves of absence as may exceed 6 months in the aggregate in any calendar year shall be excluded, except sick leaves of absence for illness or injury incurred in the line of duty, with or without pay, and leaves of absences granted participants while performing active military or naval service in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard of the United States.

Prior service credit

SEC. 852. (a) A participant may, subject to the provisions of this section, include in his period of service—

(1) service performed as a civilian officer or employee of the Government prior to becoming a participant; and

(2) active military or naval service in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard of the United States.

(b) A person may obtain credit for prior service by making a special contribution to the fund equal to 5 percent of his annual salary for each year of service for which credit is sought subsequent to July 1, 1924, with interest thereon to date of payment compounded annually at 4 percent. Any such participant may, under such conditions as may be determined in each instance by the Secretary, pay such special contributions in installments during the continuance of his service.

(c) Nothing in this act shall be construed so as to affect in any manner a participant's right to retired pay, pension, or compensation in addition to the annuities herein provided, but no participant may obtain prior service credit toward an annuity under the Foreign Service Retirement and Disability System for any period of service, whether in a civilian or military capacity, on the basis of which he is receiving or will in the future be entitled to receive any annuity, pension, or other retirement or disability payment or allowance.

Extra service credit for service at unhealthful posts

SEC. 853. The President may from time to time establish a list of places which by reason of climatic or other extreme conditions are to be classed as unhealthful posts, and each year of duty subsequent to January 1, 1900, at such posts inclusive of regular leaves of absence, of participants thereafter retired, shall be counted as one year and a half, and so on in like proportion in reckoning the length of service for the purpose of retirement, fractional months being considered as full months in computing such service. The President may at any time cancel the designation of any places as unhealthful without affecting any credit which has accrued for service at such posts prior to the date of the cancellation.

Credit for service while on military leave

SEC. 854. Contributions shall not be required covering periods of leave of absence from the service granted a participant while performing active military or naval service in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard of the United States.

PART G—MONEYS

Estimate of appropriations needed

SEC. 861. The Secretary of the Treasury shall prepare the estimates of the annual appropriations required to be made to the fund, and shall make actuarial valuations of such funds at intervals of 5 years, or oftener if deemed necessary by him. The Secretary of State may expend from money to the credit of the fund an amount not exceeding $5,000 per annum for the incidental expenses necessary in administering the provisions of this title, including actuarial advice.

Annual report to Congress

SEC. 862. The Secretary shall submit annually to the President and to the Congress a comparative report showing the condition of the fund and estimates of appropriations necessary to continue this title in full force.

Investment of moneys in the fund

SEC. 863. The Secretary of the Treasury shall invest from time to time in interest-bearing securities of the United States such portions of the fund as in his judgment may not be immediately required for the payment of annuities, cash benefits, refunds, and allowances, and the income derived from such investments shall constitute a part of such fund.

Attachment of moneys

SEC. 864. None of the moneys mentioned in this title shall be assignable either in law or equity, or be subject to execution, levy, attachment, garnishment, or other legal process, except as provided in section 634 (b).

PART H—OFFICERS REINSTATED IN THE SERVICE

SEC. 871. A Foreign Service officer, reinstated in the Service in accordance with the provisions of section 520 (b) shall, while so serving, be entitled in lieu of his retirement allowance to the full pay of the class in which he is temporarily serving. During such service, he shall make contributions to the fund in accordance with the provisions of section 811. If the annuity he was receiving prior to his reinstatement in the Service was based on less than 30 years of service credit, the amount of his annuity when he reverts to the retired list shall be recomputed on the basis of his total service credit.

PART I—VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTIONS

SEC. 881. (a) Any participant may, at his option and under such regulations as may be prescribed by the President, deposit additional sums in multiples of 1 percent of his basic salary, but not in excess of 10 percent of such salary, which amounts together with interest at 3 percent per annum, compounded on June 30 of each year shall, at the date of his retirement and at his election, be—

(1) returned to him in a lump sum; or

(2) used to purchase an additional life annuity; or

(3) used to purchase an additional life annuity for himself and to provide for a cash payment on his death to a beneficiary whose name shall be notified in writing to the Secretary by the participant; or

(4) used to purchase an additional life annuity for himself and a life annuity commencing on his death payable to a beneficiary whose name shall be notified in writing to the Secretary by the participant with a guaranteed return to the beneficiary or his legal representative of an amount equal to the cash payment referred to in paragraph 3.

(b) The benefits provided by subparagraph 2, 3, or 4 of paragraph (a) of this section shall be actuarially equivalent in value to the payment provided for by paragraph (a) (1) of this section and shall be calculated upon such tables of mortality as may be from time to time prescribed for this purpose by the Secretary of the Treasury.

(c) In case a participant shall become separated from the Service for any reason except retirement on an annuity, the amount of any additional deposits with interest at 3 percent per annum, compounded annually, made by him under the provisions of this paragraph shall be refunded in the manner provided in section 841 for the return of contributions and interest in the case of death or withdrawal from active service.

(d) Any benefits payable to an officer or to his beneficiary in respect to the additional deposits provided under this paragraph shall be in addition to the benefits otherwise provided under this title.

TITLE IX—ALLOWANCES AND BENEFITS

PART A—ALLOWANCES AND SPECIAL ALLOTMENTS

Quarters, cost of living, and representation allowances

SEC. 901. In accordance with such regulations as the President may prescribe and notwithstanding the provisions of section 1765 of the Revised Statutes (5 U. S. C. 70), the Secretary is authorized to grant to any officer or employee of the Service who is a citizen of the United States—

(1) allowances, wherever Government owned or rented quarters are not available, for living quarters, heat, light, fuel, gas, and electricity, including allowances for the cost of lodging at temporary quarters, incurred by an officer or employee of the Service and the members of his family upon first arrival at a new post, for a period not in excess of 3 months after such first arrival or until the occupation of residence quarters, whichever period shall be shorter, up to but not in excess of the aggregate amount of the per diem that would be allowable to such officer or employee for himself and the members of his family for such period if they were in travel status;

(2) cost-of-living allowances, whenever the Secretary shall determine—

(i) that the cost of living at a post abroad is proportionately so high that an allowance is necessary to enable an officer or employee of the Service at such post to carry on his work efficiently;

(ii) that extraordinary and necessary expenses, not otherwise compensated for, are incurred by an officer or employee of the Service incident to the establishment of his residence at his post of assignment;

(iii) that an allowance is necessary to assist an officer or employee of the Service who is compelled by reason of dangerous, notably unhealthful, or excessively adverse living conditions at his post abroad or for the convenience of the Government to meet the additional expense of maintaining his wife and minor children elsewhere than in the country of his assignment;

(3) allowances in order to provide for the proper representation of the United States by officers or employees of the Service.

Allotment for official residence of chief American Representative

SEC. 902. The Secretary may, under such regulations as he may prescribe, make an allotment of funds to any post to defray the unusual expenses incident to the operation and maintenance of an official residence suitable for the chief representative of the United States at that post.

Accounting for allowances

SEC. 903. All such allowances and allotments shall be accounted for to the Secretary in such manner and under such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe. The Secretary shall report all such expenditures annually to the Congress with the budget estimates of the Department.

PART B—TRAVEL AND RELATED EXPENSES

General provisions

SEC. 911. The Secretary may, under such regulations as he shall prescribe, pay—

(1) the travel expenses of officers and employees of the Service, including expenses incurred while traveling pursuant to orders issued by the Secretary in accordance with the provisions of section 933 with regard to the granting of home leave;

(2) the travel expenses of the members of the family of an officer or employee of the Service when proceeding to or returning from his post of duty; accompanying him on authorized home leave; or otherwise traveling in accordance with authority granted pursuant to the terms of this or any other Act;

(3) the cost of transporting the furniture and household and personal effects of an officer or employee of the Service to his successive posts of duty and, on the termination of his services, to the place where he will reside;

(4) the cost of storing the furniture and household and personal effects of an officer or employee of the Service who is absent under orders from his usual post of duty, or who is assigned to a post to which, because of emergency conditions, he cannot take or at which he is unable to use, his furniture and household and personal effects;

(5) the cost of storing the furniture and household and personal effects of an officer or employee of the Service on first arrival at a post for a period not in excess of 3 months after such first arrival at such post or until the establishment of residence quarters, whichever shall be shorter.

(6) the travel expenses of the members of the family and the cost of transporting the personal effects and automobile of an officer or employee of the Service, whenever the travel of such officer or employee is occasioned by changes in the seat of the government whose capital is his post;

(7) the travel expenses and transportation costs incident to the removal of the members of the family of an officer or employee of the Service and his furniture and household and personal effects, including automobiles, from a post at which, because of the prevalence of disturbed conditions, there is imminent danger to life and property, and the return of such persons, furniture, and effects to such post upon the cessation of such conditions; or to such other post as may in the meantime have become the post to which such officer or employee has been assigned;

(8) the cost of preparing and transporting to their former homes in the continental United States or to a place not more distant, the remains of an officer or employee of the Service who is a citizen of the United States and of the members of his family who may die abroad or while in travel status.

Loan of household equipment

SEC. 912. The Secretary may, if he shall find it in the interests of the Government to do so as a means of eliminating transportation costs, provide officers and employees of the Service with household equipment for use on a loan basis in personally owned or leased residences.

Transportation of automobiles

SEC. 913. The Secretary may, notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, transport for or on behalf of an officer or employee of the Service, a privately owned automobile in any case where he shall determine that water, rail, or air transportation of the automobile is necessary or expedient for any part or all the distance between points or origin and destination.

PART C—COMMISSARY SERVICE

SEC. 921. The Secretary may, under such regulations as he may prescribe, and pursuant to appropriations therefor, establish and maintain emergency commissary or mess services in such places abroad where, in his judgment, such services are necessary temporarily to insure the effective and efficient performance of the duties and responsibilities of the Service, such services to be available to the officers and employees of all Government agencies located in any such places abroad. Reimbursements incident to the maintenance and operation of commissary or mess service shall be at not less than cost as determined by the Secretary and shall be used as working funds: Provided, That each year an amount equal to the amount of the appropriation for such service shall be covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts not later than 6 months after the close of the fiscal year for which any such appropriation is made.

PART D—LEAVES OF ABSENCE

Annual leave

SEC. 931. (a) The Secretary may, in his discretion and in accordance with such regulations as he may prescribe, grant an officer or employee of the Service who is a citizen of the United States not to exceed sixty calendar days' annual leave of absence with pay.

(b) Where an officer or employee on leave returns to the continental United States, the leave of absence granted pursuant to the provisions of paragraph (a) of this section shall be exclusive of the time actually and necessarily occupied in going to and from the continental United States, and such time as may be necessarily occupied in awaiting sailing or flight.

(c) Any part of the 60 days' annual leave which an officer or employee may receive and which is not used in any 1 year shall be accumulated for succeeding years until it totals 180 days.

(d) The Secretary may in his discretion and subject to such regulations as he may prescribe, grant to an employee of the Service who is not a citizen of the United States thirty calendar days' annual leave with pay each calendar year. Any part of the 30 days' leave not used in any year shall be accumulated for succeeding years until it totals not exceeding 60 days.

Sick leave

SEC. 932. The Secretary may in his discretion and subject to such regulations as he may prescribe, grant an officer or employee of the Service sick leave with pay at the rate of fifteen calendar days each calendar year. Any part of the 15 days' sick leave not used or availed of in any year shall be accumulated for succeeding years until it totals 120 days.

Ordering return of personnel to United States on leaves of absence

SEC. 933. (a) The Secretary shall order to the continental United States on statutory leave of absence every officer and employee of the Service who is a citizen of the United States upon completion of 2 years' continuous service abroad or as soon as possible thereafter.

(b) While in the continental United States on leave, the service of any officer or employee shall be available for such work or duties in the Department or elsewhere as the Secretary may prescribe, but the time of such work or duties shall not be counted as leave.

Reserve officers assigned to the Service

SEC. 934. (a) A Reserve officer, assigned to the Service from any Government agency shall, notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, be granted annual leave of absence and sick leave of absence in accordance with the provisions of part D of this title during the period of his assignment.

(b) Under such regulations as the President may prescribe, a person assigned to the Service as a Reserve officer from any Government agency may, nothwithstanding the provisions of the act of December 21, 1944 (58 Stat. 845; 5 U. S. C. 61b), transfer to the Service any annual or sick leave of absence standing to his credit at the time of his assignment to the Service. On his return to the agency by which he is regularly employed, he may transfer the aggregate of his accumulated and current annual and sick leave to that agency but the amount of leave so transferred shall not exceed the maximum which an officer or employee of the agency to which he is returning may have to his credit on the date of his return.

Transfer of leave of absence

SEC. 935. Under such regulations as the President may prescribe an officer or employee of the Service who resigns from the Service in order to accept an appointment in any Government agency may transfer to such Government agency any annual or sick leave of absence standing to his credit at the time of his resignation from the Service and any officer or employee of any Government agency who resigns from such agency in order to accept an appointment to the Service may transfer to the Service any annual or sick leave of absence standing to his credit at the time of his resignation from the Government agency in which he was employed, but in no event shall the amount of annual or sick leave of absence so transferred exceed the maximum amount of the annual or sick leave of absence which may be accumulated in either the Service or the Government agency to which such person is appointed, as the case may be.

PART E—MEDICAL SERVICES

Expenses of treatment

SEC. 941. The Secretary may, in the event of illness or injury requiring hospitalization of an officer or employee of the Service who is a citizen of the United States, not the result of vicious habits, intemperance, or misconduct on his part, incurred in the line of duty while such person is assigned abroad, pay for the cost of the treatment of such illness or injury at a suitable hospital or clinic.

Transportation to approved hospitals

SEC. 942. (a) The Secretary may, in the event of illness or injury requiring the hospitalization of an officer or employee of the Service who is a citizen of the United States, not the result of vicious habits, intemperance, or misconduct on his part, incurred while on assignment abroad, in a locality where there does not exist a suitable hospital or clinic, pay the travel expenses of such officer or employee by whatever means he shall deem appropriate and without regard to the Standardized Government Travel Regulations and section 10 of the act of March 3, 1933 (47 Stat. 1516; 5 U. S. C. 73b), to the nearest locality where a suitable hospital or clinic exists and on his recovery pay for the travel expenses of his return to his post of duty. If the officer or employee is too ill to travel unattended, the Secretary may also pay the travel expenses of an attendant.

(b) The Secretary may establish a first-aid station and provide for the services of a nurse at a post at which, in his opinion, sufficient personnel is employed to warrant such a station.

Physical examinations and costs of inoculations

SEC. 943. The Secretary shall, under such regulations as he may prescribe, provide for the periodic physical examination of officers and employees of the Service who are citizens of the United States, including examinations necessary to establish disability or incapacity in accordance with the provisions of section 831, and for the cost of administering inoculations or vaccinations to such officers or employees.

TITLE X—MISCELLANEOUS

PART A—PROHIBITIONS

Against uniforms

SEC. 1001. An officer or employee of the Service holding a position of responsibility in the Service shall not wear any uniform except such as may be authorized by law or such as a military commander may require civilians to wear in a theater of military operations.

Against accepting presents

SEC. 1002. An officer or employee of the Service shall not ask or, without the consent of the Congress, receive, for himself or any other person, any present, emolument, pecuniary favor, office, or title from any foreign government. A chief of mission or other principal officer may, however, under such regulations as the President may prescribe, accept gifts made to the United States or to any political subdivision thereof by the government to which he is accredited or from which he holds an exequatur.

Against engaging in business abroad

SEC. 1003. An officer or employee of the Service shall not, while holding office, transact or be interested in any business or engage in any profession in the country or countries to which he is assigned abroad in his own name or in the name or through the agency of any other person, except as authorized by the Secretary.

Against correspondence on affairs of foreign governments

SEC. 1004. (a) An officer or employee of the Service shall not correspond in regard to the public affairs of any foreign government except with the proper officers of the United States, except as authorized by the Secretary.

(b) An officer or employee of the Service shall not recommend any person for employment in any position of trust or profit under the government of the country to which he is detailed or assigned, except as authorized by the Secretary.

Against political, racial, religious, or color discrimination

SEC. 1005. In carrying out the provisions of this act, no political test shall be required and none shall be taken into consideration, nor shall there be any discrimination against any person on account of race, creed, or color.

PART B—BONDS

SEC. 1011. Every secretary, consul general, consul, vice consul, Foreign Service officer, and Foreign Service Reserve officer, and, if required, any other officer or employee of the Service or of the Department before he enters upon the duties of his office shall give to the United States a bond in such form and in such penal sum as the Secretary shall prescribe, with such sureties as the Secretary shall approve, conditioned without division of penalty for the true and faithful performance of his duties, including (but not by way of limitation) certifying vouchers for payment, accounting for, paying over, and delivering up of all fees, moneys, goods, effects, books, records, papers, and other property that shall come to his hands or to the hands of any other person to his use as such officer or employee under any law now or hereafter enacted and for the true and faithful performance of all other duties now or hereafter lawfully imposed upon him as such officer or employee, and such bond shall be construed to be conditioned for the true and faithful performance of all official duties of whatever character now or hereafter lawfully imposed upon him, or by him assumed incident to his employment as an officer or employee of the Government. Notwithstanding any other provisions of law, upon approval of any bond given pursuant to this act, the principal shall not be required to give another separate bond conditioned for the true and faithful performance of only a part of the duties for which the bond given pursuant to this act is conditioned. The bond of an officer or employee of the Service shall be construed to be conditioned for the true and faithful performance of all acts of such officer incident to his office regardless of whether appointed or commissioned as diplomatic, consular, Foreign Service officer, or other officer of the Service. The bonds herein mentioned shall be deposited with the Secretary of the Treasury. Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to obviate the necessity of furnishing any bonds which may be required pursuant to the provisions of the Subsistence Expense Act of 1926, as amended (44 Stat. 688; 47 Stat. 405; 56 Stat. 39; 5 U. S. C. 821–823, 827–833).

PART C—GIFTS

SEC. 1021. (a) The Secretary may accept on behalf of the United States gifts made unconditionally by will or otherwise for the benefit of the Service or for the carrying out of any of its functions. Conditional gifts may be so accepted if recommended by the Director General, and the principal of and income from any such conditional gift shall be held, invested, reinvested, and used in accordance with its conditions, but no gift shall be accepted which is conditioned upon any expenditure not to be met therefrom or from the income thereof unless such expenditure has been approved by act of Congress.

(b) Any unconditional gift of money accepted pursuant to the authority granted in paragraph (a) of this section, the net proceeds from the liquidation (pursuant to paragraph (c) or paragraph (d) of this section) of any other property so accepted, and the proceeds of insurance on any such gift property not used for its restoration, shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States and are hereby appropriated and shall be held in trust by the Secretary of the Treasury for the benefit of the Service, and he may invest and reinvest such funds in interest-bearing obligations of the United States or in obligations guaranteed as to both principal and interest by the United States. Such gifts and the income from such investments shall be available for expenditure in the operation of the Service and the performance of its functions, subject to the same examination and audit as is provided for appropriations made for the Service by Congress.

(c) The evidences of any unconditional gift of intangible personal property, other than money, accepted pursuant to the authority granted in paragraph (a) of this section, shall be deposited with the Secretary of the Treasury and he, in his discretion, may hold them, or liquidate them except that they shall be liquidated upon the request of the Secretary whenever necessary to meet payments required in the operation of the Service or the performance of its functions.

The proceeds and income from any such property held by the Secretary of the Treasury shall be available for expenditure as is provided in paragraph (b) of this section.

(d) The Secretary shall hold any real property or any tangible personal property accepted unconditionally pursuant to the authority granted in paragraph (a) of this section and he shall permit such property to be used for the operation of the Service and the performance of its functions or he may lease or hire such property, and may insure such property, and deposit the income thereof with the Secretary of the Treasury to be available for expenditure as provided in paragraph (b) of this section. The income from any such real property or tangible personal property shall be available for expenditure in the discretion of the Secretary for the maintenance, preservation, or repair and insurance of such property and any proceeds from insurance may be used to restore the property insured. Any such property when not required for the operation of the Service or the performance of its functions may be liquidated by the Secretary, and the proceeds thereof deposited with the Secretary of the Treasury, whenever in his judgment the purposes of the gifts will be served thereby.

(e) For the purpose of Federal income, estate, and gift taxes, any gift, devise, or bequest accepted by the Secretary under authority of this act shall be deeemd to be a gift, devise, or bequest to or for the use of the United States.

PART D—AUTHORIZATION TO RETAIN ATTORNEYS

SEC. 1031. The Secretary may, without regard to sections 189 and 365 of the Revised Statutes (5 U. S. C. 49 and 314), authorize a principal officer to procure legal services whenever such services are required for the protection of the interests of the Government or to enable an officer or employee of the Service to carry on his work efficiently.

PART E—DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY

SEC. 1041. (a) The Secretary may delegate to officers or employees holding positions of responsibility in the Department or the Service or to such boards as he may continue or establish any of the powers conferred upon him by this act to the extent that he finds such delegation to be in the interests of the efficient administration of the Service.

(b) The Director General may delegate to officers or employees holding positions of responsibility in the Department or the Service any of the powers conferred upon him by this act to the extent that he finds such delegation to be in the interests of the efficient administration of the Service.

PART F—EXEMPTION FROM TAXATION

SEC. 1051. Section 116 of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended (53 Stat. 48; 53 Stat. 575; 56 Stat. 842; 58 Stat. 46; 26 U. S. C. 116), relative to exclusions from gross income, is further amended by adding at the end thereof a new subsection to read as follows:

"(k) In the case of an officer or employee of the Foreign Service of the United States, amounts received by such officer or employee as allowances or otherwise under the terms of title IX of the Foreign Service Act of 1946."

PART G—INTERPRETATION OF THE ACT

Liberal-construction clause

SEC. 1061. The provisions of this act shall be construed liberally in order to effectuate its purpose.

Provisions that may be held invalid

SEC. 1062. If any provision of this act or the application of any such provision to any person or circumstance shall be held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the act and the applicability of such provision to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

Headings of titles, parts, and sections

SEC. 1063. The headings descriptive of the various titles, parts, and sections of this act are inserted for convenience only and, in case of any conflict between any such heading and the substance of the title, part, or section to which it relates, the heading shall be disregarded.

Provisions of the act of July 3, 1946

SEC. 1064. Nothing in this act shall be construed to affect the provisions of sections 1, 2, 3, and 4 of the act of July 3, 1946 (Public Law 488, 79th Cong.). The "classified grades" within the meaning of that act shall, from and after the effective date of this act, be construed to mean classes 1 to 5, inclusive.

PART H—AUTHORIZATION FOR APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 1071. Appropriations to carry out the purposes of this act are hereby authorized.

TITLE XI—TEMPORARY PROVISIONS

PART A—TEMPORARY PROVISIONS CONCERNING APPOINTMENTS AND SALARIES OF OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES OF THE SERVICE

Reinstatement of chiefs of mission who are former Foreign Service officers

SEC. 1101. Any person who on the effective date of this act is a chief of mission and who has previously been a Foreign Service officer may be reinstated as a Foreign Service officer in the class of career minister.

Transfer of Foreign Service officers from old classes to new classes

SEC. 1102. (a) Foreign Service officers on active service on the effective date of this act shall, by virtue of this act, be transferred from the classes in which they are serving on such date to the new classes established by this act as follows: Officers of class I to the new class 1; officers of class II to the new class 2; officers of classes III and IV to the new class 3; officers of classes V and VI, to the new class 4; officers of classes VII and VIII, to the new class 5; officers in the unclassified grade, to the new class 6.

(b) Each officer so transferred shall under such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe receive that salary in the new class which shall as nearly as possible correspond to his relative standing in the Service.

(c) Whenever, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (a) of this section, the officers in a new class shall be officers who previously served in two former classes that were combined to form the new class, the period of minimum service in class for the purposes of determining eligibility for promotion in accordance with the provisions of section 622, shall commence to run from the date of their promotion to the lower of the two classes from which the new class is composed and from the date of their promotion to the higher of the two classes from which the new class is composed for the purposes of computing the minimum period an officer shall serve in a class before the commencement of the period during which he must obtain a promotion in order to prevent being retired. In all other cases, service in a former class shall be considered as constituting service in the new class for the purposes of section 622.

Transfer of other officers and employees of the Service from their present positions to new positions

SEC. 1103. The Secretary shall, under such regulations as he may prescribe, provide for the transfer of the personnel of the Service, other than persons occupying positions which under the terms of this act constitute them chiefs of mission and Foreign Service officers, to corresponding positions established by the terms of this act or by any regulations issued pursuant thereto.

In-class promotions

SEC. 1104. In making transfers of personnel in accordance with the provisions of sections 1102 and 1103, credit for time served in a previous class or position shall be given for the purpose of determining eligibility for in-class promotions in a new class in the same manner as if such time had been served in the new class.

Rules governing the making of salary determinations in carrying out an initial classification of the Service

SEC. 1105. In making the initial classification of the Service for Foreign Service staff officers and employees in accordance with the provisions of sections 441 and 442 the following rules shall apply:

(1) The principle of equal compensation for equal work, irrespective of sex, shall be followed.

(2) If an officer or employee is receiving basic salary at less than the minimum rate of the class or subclass to which the position he holds is allocated, his salary shall be increased to the lowest basic salary of that class or subclass.

(3) If an officer or employee is receiving a basic salary within the range provided for the class or subclass to which the position he holds is allocated, and at one of the rates within that range, no change shall be made in his basic salary; if his basic salary rate is within the range but does not correspond to any one of the rates prescribed for that range by section 415, his salary shall be adjusted by fixing it at the next higher rate above the rate which he is receiving.

(4) If an officer or employee is receiving basic salary at a rate in excess of the maximum basic salary rate provided by section 415 for the class or subclass to which the position he holds is allocated in accordance with the provisions of section 1103, he shall not suffer a diminution in salary as a consequence of the classification of the position which he holds so long as he continues to occupy that position, but if he is not receiving salary at one of the rates prescribed in section 415, his salary shall be adjusted by fixing it at the next higher rate above the rate which he is receiving.

PART B—TEMPORARY PROVISIONS CONCERNING RETIREMENT

Mandatory retirement

SEC. 1111. (a) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 632 regarding the retirement of Foreign Service officers at the age of 60 years, Foreign Service officers below the class of career minister shall, during the first year after the effective date of this act, be mandatorily retired for age upon reaching the age of 64 unless their services have been extended in accordance with the provisions of section 632; during the second year, at 63; during the third year, at age 62; during the fourth year, at age 61; and thereafter at age 60, but in no event shall any Foreign Service officer be mandatorily retired for age during such 4-year period until he has had 15 years of service.

(b) No Foreign Service officer shall be mandatorily retired in accordance with provisions of section 633 or 634 until 3 years after the effective date of this act.

Rate of annuities to be recomputed

SEC. 1112. The Secretary shall cause annuities of all persons who are receiving annuities from the Foreign Service Retirement and Disability Fund on the effective date of this act to be recomputed in accordance with the provisions of section 821 (a) and annuities payable to such persons shall, commencing on the effective date of this act, be paid at the rates so determined, but no such recomputation or any other action taken pursuant to this act shall operate to reduce the rate of the annuity received by any such person unless such person voluntarily elects to receive a reduced annuity as provided in section 821 (c).

PART C—MISCELLANEOUS TEMPORARY PROVISIONS

Bonds

SEC. 1121. The provisions of this act shall not operate to impair the validity of any existing bond furnished by any officer or employee of the Service.

Use of appropriations

SEC. 1122. Funds appropriated to the Department of State for the fiscal year 1947, under the caption "Foreign Service," are hereby made available for the purposes of this act in accordance with authority granted herein and such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe. The appropriation of such additional funds as may be required to carry out the provisions of this act is hereby authorized.

PART D—REPEAL CLAUSES

Repeal of particular statutes

SEC. 1131. The following statutes or parts of statutes are hereby repealed:

(1) Section 208 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by the act of May 29, 1928 (ch. 901, Public Law No. 611, 45 Stat. 987) (5 U. S. C. 163).

(2) Section 1674 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by section 6 of the act of February 5, 1915 (ch. 23, Public Law No. 242, 38 Stat. 806), and as further amended by that part of the act of July 1, 1916 (ch. 208, Public Law No. 131, 39 Stat. 252), which constitutes the second proviso under the heading "Salaries of Secretaries in the Diplomatic Service" (22 U. S. C. 40 and 51).

(3) Section 1675 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by the act of March 3, 1875 (ch. 153, 18 Stat. 483), and by that part of title I of the act of February 27, 1925 (ch. 364, Public Law No. 502, 43 Stat. 1015), under the heading "Diplomatic and Consular Service" and the subheading "Ambassadors and Ministers" (22 U. S. C. 32).

(4) Section 1685 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by schedule A of the act of March 2, 1909 (ch. 235, Public Law No. 292, 35 Stat. 673), and as further amended by section 3 of the act of February 5, 1915 (ch. 23, Public Law No. 242, 38 Stat. 805), section 17 of the act of May 24, 1924 (ch. 182, Public Law No. 135, 43 Stat. 143), hereinafter referred to as the act of May 24, 1924, and by that part of title I of the act of February 27, 1925 (ch. 364, Public Law No. 502, 43 Stat. 1016), which reads as follows: "Provided, That after June 30, 1924, vice consuls while in charge of a consulate general or consulate during the absence of the principal officer shall be entitled to additional compensation in the same manner and under the same conditions as Foreign Service officers as provided in section 17 of the act of May 24, 1924," renumbered as section 25 and further amended by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (ch. 276, Public Law No. 715, 46 Stat. 1210), hereinafter referred to as the act of February 23, 1931 (22 U. S. C. 20).

(5) Section 1686 of the Revised Statutes (22 U. S. C. 36).

(6) Section 1688 of the Revised Statutes (22 U. S. C. 39).

(7) Section 1695 of the Revised Statutes and section 3 of the act of April 5, 1906 (ch. 1366, Public Law No. 83, 34 Stat. 100), which reenacted certain parts of section 1695 of the Revised Statutes without specifically amending such section (22 U. S. C. 51a and 55).

(8) Section 1696 of the Revised Statutes (22 U. S. C. 58).

(9) Section 1712 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by the act of June 18, 1888 (ch. 393, 25 Stat. 186) (22 U. S. C. 80).

(10) Section 1713 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by the act of June 18, 1888 (ch. 393, 25 Stat. 186 (22 U. S. C. 82).

(11) Section 1714 of the Revised Statutes (22 U. S. C. 71).

(12) Section 1738 of the Revised Statutes (22 U. S. C. 105).

(13) Section 1740 of the Revised Statutes (22 U. S. C. 121).

(14) Section 1743 of the Revised Statutes (22 U. S. C. 125).

(15) Section 1744 of the Revised Statutes (22 U. S. C. 33).

(16) Section 1748 of the Revised Statutes (22 U. S. C. 129).

(17) Section 1749 of the Revised Statutes (22 U. S. C. 130).

(18) Section 1752 of the Revised Statutes (22 U. S. C. 132).

(19) That part of section 1 of the act of June 11, 1874 (ch. 275, 18 Stat. 67), which reads as follows: "And the Secretary of State is authorized to allow and pay to the secretary of legation and to the second secretary of legation and to the messenger of the legation in Paris, from the moneys collected at the legation for the transmission of consular invoices, an amount not to exceed in the aggregate $600 in any one year, to be divided and distributed as the Secretary of State may direct, provided that the surplus receipts are sufficient for that purpose" (22 U. S. C. 37).

(20) Section 4 of the act of June 11, 1874 (ch. 275, 18 Stat. 70) (22 U. S. C. 122).

(21) The act of June 17, 1874 (ch. 294, 18 Stat. 77) (22 U. S. C. 124 and 126).

(22) That part of the act of January 27, 1879 (ch. 28, 20 Stat. 273), which reads as follows: "And it shall be the duty of consuls to make to the Secretary of State a quarterly statement of exports from, and imports to, the different places to which they are accredited, giving, as near as may be, the market price of the various articles of exports and imports, the duty and port charges, if any, on articles imported and exported, together with such general information as they may be able to obtain as to how, where, and through what channels a market may be opened for American products and manufactures. In addition to the duties now imposed by law, it shall be the duty of consuls and commercial agents of the United States, annually, to procure and transmit to the Department of State, as far as practicable, information respecting the rate of wages paid for skilled and unskilled labor within their respective jurisdictions" (22 U. S. C. 81).

(23) That part of section 5 of the act of February 14, 1903 (ch. 552, Public Law No. 87, 32 Stat. 827), reading as follows: "And all consular officers of the United States, including consuls general, consuls, and commercial agents, are hereby required, and it is made a part of their duty, under the direction of the Secretary of State, to gather and compile, from time to time, useful and material information and statistics in respect to the subjects enumerated in section 3 of this act in the countries and places to which such consular officers are accredited, and to send under the direction of the Secretary of State, reports as required by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor of the information and statistics thus gathered and compiled, such reports to be transmitted through the Department of State to the Secretary of the Deparment of Commerce and Labor," as amended by section 3 of the act of April 5, 1906 (ch. 1366, Public Law No. 83, 34 Stat. 100); by the act of August 23, 1912 (ch. 350, Public Law No. 299, 37 Stat. 407); and by the act of March 4, 1913 (ch. 141, Public Law No. 426, 37 Stat. 736) (15 U. S. C. 175).

(24) Section 11 of the act of February 14, 1903 (ch. 552, Public Law No. 87, 32 Stat. 830) (5 U. S. C. 162).

(25) Section 4 of the act of April 5, 1906 (ch. 1366, Public Law No. 83, 34 Stat. 100), as amended by section 10 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 142), and renumbered as section 17 and further amended by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1209) (22 U. S. C. 9).

(26) That part of section 8 of the act of April 5, 1906 (ch. 1366, Public Law No. 83, 34 Stat. 101), reading as follows: "but this shall not apply to consular agents, who shall be paid by one-half of the fees received in their offices, up to a maximum sum of $1,000 in any one year, the other half being accounted for and paid into the Treasury of the United States" (22 U. S. C. 99).

(27) That part of schedule A of the act of March 2, 1909 (ch. 235, Public Law No. 292; 35 Stat. 672), which reads as follows: "And hereafter no new ambassadorship shall be created unless the same shall be provided for by act of Congress" (22 U. S. C. 31).

(28) Section 7 of the act of February 5, 1915 (ch. 23, Public Law No. 242, 38 Stat. 807), as amended by section 12 of the act of May 3, 1945 (ch. 105, Public Law No. 48; 59 Stat. 105, hereinafter referred to as the act of May 3, 1945) (22 U. S. C. 38).

(29) That part of the act of July 1, 1916, which, under the heading "Salaries of Secretaries in the Diplomatic Service," authorizes the President to designate and assign any secretary of class one as counselor of embassy or legation (39 Stat. 252), as amended by section 16 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 143), and renumbered as section 28 by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1210) (22 U. S. C. 18).

(30) The joint resolution of September 29, 1919 (ch. 72, Public Resolution No. 16, 41 Stat. 291) (22 U. S. C. 34).

(31) That part of the act of June 1, 1922 (ch. 204, Public Law No. 299, 42 Stat. 600), which under the heading "Diplomatic and Consular Service" and subheading "Ambassadors and Ministers" in title I authorizes the appointment of an envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Egypt (22 U. S. C. 34c).

(32) Section 1 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 140), renumbered as section 8 by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1207) (22 U. S. C. 1).

(33) Section 2 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 140), renumbered as section 9 and amended by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1207) (22 U. S. C. 2).

(34) Section 3 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 140), renumbered as section 10 and amended by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1207), and as further amended by section 2 of the act of April 24, 1939 (ch. 84, Public Law No. 40, 53 Stat. 583), and by sections 4 and 5 of the act of May 3, 1945 (59 Stat. 102, 103) (22 U. S. C. 3).

(35) Section 4 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 140), renumbered as section 11 and amended by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1215), and as further amended by the act of June 29, 1935 (ch. 337, Public Law No. 181, 49 Stat. 436) (22 U. S. C. 4).

(36) Section 5 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 141), renumbered as section 12 and amended by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1208) (22 U. S. C. 5 and 6).

(37) Section 6 of the act of May 24, 1924 renumbered as sections 13 and 14, and amended by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931, and as further amended by section 6 of the act of May 3, 1945 (59 Stat. 103) (22 U. S. C. 7).

(38) Section 9 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 142), renumbered as section 16 and amended by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1208), and further amended by section 7 of the act of May 3, 1945 (59 Stat. 103) (22 U. S. C. 11).

(39) Section 12 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 142), renumbered as section 19 and amended by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1209), and further amended by section 8 of the act of May 3, 1945 (59 Stat. 104) (22 U. S. C. 12).

(40) Section 13 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 143), renumbered as section 20 and amended by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1209) (22 U. S. C. 14).

(41) Section 14 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 143), renumbered as section 21 and amended by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1209), and further amended by section 9 of the act of May 3, 1945 (59 Stat. 104) (22 U. S. C. 15 and 16).

(42) Section 15 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 143), renumbered as section 22 and amended by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1210), and further amended by the act of March 17, 1941 (ch. 20, Public Law No. 17, 55 Stat. 44) (22 U. S. C. 17 and 17a).

(43) Paragraph 1 of section 17 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 143), renumbered as section 24 and amended by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1210) (22 U. S. C. 19).

(44) Section 18 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 144), as amended by section 1 of the act of July 3, 1926 (ch. 798, Public Law No. 519, 44 Stat. 902), renumbered as section 26 and amended by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1211), further amended by section 3 of the act of April 24, 1939 (ch. 84, Public Law No. 40, 53 Stat. 584), by the act of July 19, 1939 (ch. 330, Public Law No. 197, 53 Stat. 1067), by the act of August 5, 1939 (ch. 441, Public Law No. 277, 53 Stat. 1208), by section 1 of the act of April 20, 1940 (ch. 118, Public Law No. 464, 54 Stat. 143), by section 4 of the act of October 14, 1940 (ch. 859, Public Law No. 846, 54 Stat. 1118), and by section 1 of the act of May 13, 1941 (ch. 115, Public Law No. 69, 55 Stat. 189) (22 U. S. C. 21).

(45) Section 19 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 146), renumbered as section 27 by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1213) (22 U. S. C. 22).

(46) Section 20 of the act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 146), renumbered as section 28 and amended by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1213) (22 U. S. C. 23).

(47) Section 31 of the act of May 24, 1924, as added to that act by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1214), and as amended by section 10 of the act of May 3, 1945 (59 Stat. 105) (22 U. S. C. 23f and 23g).

(48) Section 32 of the act of May 24, 1924, as added to that act by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1214), and as amended by section 5 of the act of July 3, 1946 (Public Law 488, 79th Cong.) (22 U. S. C. 23h).

(49) Section 33 of the act of May 24, 1924, as added to that act by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1215), and as amended by section 4 of the act of April 24, 1939 (ch. 84, Public Law No. 40, 53 Stat. 588) (22 U. S. C. 3a and 23i).

(50) Section 34 of the act of May 24, 1924, as added to that act by section 7 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1216) (22 U. S. C. 23j).

(51) That part of the act of February 27, 1925 (ch. 364, Public Law No. 502, 43 Stat. 1017), which under the heading "Diplomatic and consular service" and the subheading "Allowance for clerk hire at United States consulates" reads as follows: "Clerks, whenever hereafter appointed, shall so far as possible, be appointed under civil-service rules and regulations", and similar provisions in later acts (22 U. S. C. 56).

(52) That part of the act of February 27, 1925 (ch. 364, Public Law No. 502, 43 Stat. 1016), which under the heading "Diplomatic Service" and the subheading "Clerks at Embassies and Legations", reads as follows: "who (clerks at the Embassies and Legations) whenever hereafter appointed shall be citizens of the United States • • • and so far as practicable shall be appointed under civil-service rules and regulations", and similar provisions in later acts (22 U. S. C. 35).

(53) Section 2 of the act of July 3, 1926 (ch. 798, Public Law No. 519, 44 Stat. 903) (22 U. S. C. 21a).

(54) Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 7 of the act of March 3, 1927 (ch. 365, Public Law No. 768, 44 Stat. 1394), as amended by the act of April 12, 1930 (ch. 142, Public Law No. 122, 46 Stat 163) (15 U. S. C. 197–197d and 197f).

(55) The joint resolution of January 22, 1930 (ch. 22, Public Res. No. 32, 46 Stat. 57) (22 U. S. C. 34a).

(56) The act of June 5, 1930 (ch. 399, Public Law No. 304, 46 Stat. 497–499) (7 U. S. C. 541–545).

(57) The joint resolution of June 5, 1930 (ch. 404, Public Res. No. 81, 46 Stat. 502) (22 U. S. C. 34b).

(58) The act of January 21, 1931 (ch. 42, Public Law No. 569, 46 Stat. 1040) (22 U. S. C. 32a).

(59) Section 1 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1207), as amended by section 2 of the act of May 3, 1945 (59 Stat. 102) (22 U. S. C. 23a).

(60) Section 2 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1207) (22 U. S. C. 23b).

(61) Section 3 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1207), as amended by section 1 of the act of April 24, 1939 (ch. 84, Public Law No. 40, 53 Stat. 583), and as further amended by section 3 of the act of May 3, 1945 (59 Stat. 102) (22 U. S. C. 23c).

(62) Section 4 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1207) (22 U. S. C. 23d).

(63) Section 5 of the act of February 23, 1931 (46 Stat. 1207) (22 U. S. C. 23e).

(64) That part of section 209 of the act of June 30, 1932 (ch 314, Public Law No. 212, 47 Stat. 405), as amended, which was added to that act by the act of April 30, 1940 (ch. 172, Public Law No. 499, 54 Stat. 174) (5 U. S. C. 823a).

(65) That part of Reorganization Plan No. II, made effective July 1, 1939, by the act of June 7, 1939 (ch. 193, Public Res. No. 20, 53 Stat. 813), designated as subparagraphs (a), (b), and (c) under section 1 of part 1 (53 Stat. 1431) (note under 5 U. S. C. 133t).

(66) Section 1 of the act of May 3, 1945 (59 Stat. 102) (22 U. S. C. 1a).

(67) Section 12 of the act of May 3, 1945 (59 Stat. 105) (22 U. S. C. 24).

General repeal or amendment provision

SEC. 1132. Any statute that is not repealed by section 1131 but which is inconsistent with any of the provisions of this act shall be considered as having been amended or superseded by such provisions.

Rights and liabilities under statutes that are repealed

SEC. 1133. The repeal of the several statutes or parts of statutes accomplished by section 1131 shall not affect any act done or right accruing or accrued, or any suit or proceeding had or commenced in any civil cause, before such repeal, but all rights and liabilities under the statutes or parts thereof so repealed shall continue, and may be enforced in the same manner as if such repeal had not been made; subject, however, to the provisions of section 1134.

Statutes previously repealed by implication

SEC. 1134. The repeal of the several statutes or parts of statutes accomplished by section 1131 shall not be construed as a revival, up to the effective date of this act, of any statute or part of a statute that may have previously been repealed by implication.

Continuance in force of existing rules, regulations, and executive orders

SEC. 1135. Notwithstanding the provisions of this act, existing rules, regulations of or applicable to the Service, and Executive orders shall remain in effect until revoked or rescinded or until modified or superseded by regulations made in accordance with the provisions of this act, unless clearly inconsistent with the provisions of this act.

PART E—EFFECTIVE DATE OF ACT

SEC. 1141. The effective date of this act shall be 3 months following the date of its enactment.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, the legislation we are bringing up now under suspension has been considered for a great number of months. A report made by the subcommittee has been presented to you. That subcommittee consisted of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. KEE], the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. RICHARDS], and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS]. They worked very hard on this legislation. It is something that is necessary. I compliment the members of the subcommittee for the great work they have done.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BLOOM. I am very pleased to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. TABER. Were those items which the gentleman from Michigan and I called to the attention of the committee corrected as we understood they were to be corrected?

Mr. BLOOM. All of the suggestions made of amendments to perfect this bill by the gentleman from New York, the gentleman from Michigan, the General Accounting Office, the Bureau of the Budget, and everyone who brought anything to us which would be of help to our subcommittee of the Committee on Foreign Affairs were incorporated in the bill and I believe now you have a perfect bill. I thank the gentleman from New York for calling that to our attention.

Mr. Speaker, I now yield the balance of the time to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. KEE].

Mr. KEE. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill for the reorganization of the Foreign Service of the State Department. The bill is long overdue. There has been no reorganization of that department since the year 1924. During that year a bill was introduced in the House by the then Representative Rogers, the husband of the distinguished Representative from Massachusetts, who is today a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. That bill was the first attempt to properly organize the Foreign Service. Since that time there has been no attempt at reorganization, and the Service has been working under the provisions of the Rogers bill for 22 years. There has been much legislation in respect to the operation of the Service, but the legislation made no changes in the classification. There has also been no change in the salaries of those employees, with the exception of the raise recently accorded generally to all Federal employees.

This bill is not the result of the work of one man. No man can take pride of authorship in it because it was drafted within the State Department after long weeks of study and effort of able and experienced men. It might be well for me to here explain why the bill is brought so quickly to the floor of the House after its introduction on July 8. As a matter of fact, a full and complete draft of this bill was brought to the Committee on Foreign Affairs in the early part of April, before its introduction in the House. This draft of the proposed legislation was considered by the Committee on Foreign Affairs. Because of the great importance of the proposed measure it was determined to refer it to a subcommittee.

The chairman of that full committee thereupon appointed a subcommittee consisting of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS], the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. RICHARDS], and myself to take over and examine, with the representatives of the State Department, the full and complete draft of the bill. We started early in April, and worked several weeks with five representatives of the State Department. We examined this bill very carefully, word by word, sentence by sentence, and section by section during eight extensive conferences. Together with these five representatives of the State Department, the subcommittee went through the bill with extreme care, and we made something like 100 changes in the proposed measures. Some of those changes were major and some of them were minor, but they all met with the approval of the State Department.

Early in this month we made our report to the Foreign Affairs Committee, showing the amendments which we had made during the course of our examination of the measure. The Foreign Affairs Committee immediately took up the bill and reported it favorably by a unanimous vote. Incidentally, I might remark here that this same bill, after it was reported from the Foreign Affairs Committee, was introduced in the Senate by Senator CONNALLY, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of that body, and has been reported out by that committee.

It is unfortunate, of course, that we do not have sufficient time for a complete and thorough examination of the bill. But I want to say that this committee was furnished by the State Department with all the information that we asked. We were furnished with full and complete reports in every respect. We were given every possible assistance. We went over the measure with them carefully. After we had reported it back to the Foreign Affairs Committee, and after it was introduced in the House, the matter was taken up with all the departments of this Government who had any interest in the measure. It was taken up with the Department of Labor, the Department of Commerce, and the Department of Agriculture, all of those departments being interested in the measure. Each of those departments, I believe suggested some changes in the bill, which changes the committee carefully considered. These suggestions were called to the attention of the representatives of the State Department, and they agreed to such changes and modifications as the other departments suggested. The matter has also been thoroughly discussed with the chairmen and the ranking members of various committees of this House who are interested in the legislation, notably with the chairman of the Subcommittee on Appropriations, the gentleman from Michigan

[Mr. RABAUT], whose committee handles the appropriations for the Foreign Service of the State Department. It has also been discussed with every Member of this body who mentioned the matter to us and announced his interest in foreign affairs. Changes were made wherever necessary to perfect the bill. To the best of my knowledge I believe everyone is satisfied with the bill as it is now presented.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEE. I yield.

Mr. SABATH. This is the State Department reorganization bill for which the gentleman applied for a rule before the Rules Committee?

Mr. KEE. It is.

Mr. SABATH. I wish to say that a rule was granted by unanimous vote of the Committee on Rules. Having heard the statement of the gentleman from West Virginia and other members of his committee I express the hope that this bill passes under suspension, for it will save a great deal of the time of the House.

Mr. KEE. I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEE. I yield.

Mr. RABAUT. I wish to say to the membership of the House that the distinguished gentleman from West Virginia has cooperated about this bill in every possible way and manner. He was most anxious that everybody who knew about State Department matters should be informed as to what was in the bill. He came to our committee and took counsel with us about appropriations for the State Department and talked with us about different provisions in the bill. I can really say that the gentleman from West Virginia is to be highly complimented for the fine manner in which he handled this highly important legislation.

It is true that it was thought some changes should be made. I know the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] and I thought there should be a change with respect to the 10 percent transferability of funds clause, and that provision is now out of the bill. Several amendments were agreed to and are incorporated in the bill as it is presented under a suspension of the rules.

I commend the gentleman from West Virginia on the fine statesmanlike manner in which he has handled the whole matter.

Mr. KEE. I thank the gentleman and wish to advise him that the changes suggested by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. RABAUT] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] have been made, and I am sure the bill is now satisfactory.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEE. I yield.

Mr. COLMER. I also would like to pay my respects and compliments to the gentleman from West Virginia and his subcommittee for the splendid work they have done on this bill. As I recall it, a subcommittee of my Committee on Postwar Economic Policy and Planning made a mission for the Congress last fall, visited some 14 of these embassies located in these various foreign countries, particularly in Europe, and recommended that this subject be handled pretty largely in the manner in which it is being handled here at this time.

On behalf of my committee, I wish to express our appreciation to the gentleman and his committee for their work.

Mr. KEE. On behalf of the members of the committee and myself, I express to the gentleman our appreciation of his remarks.

Mr. JARMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEE. I gladly yield to my colleague from Alabama, a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Mr. JARMAN. While I have no authority to speak for the membership of the Foreign Affairs Committee, I can speak personally. I believe every member of the Foreign Affairs Committee will agree with me when I express the opinion to the gentleman that he and the members of his subcommittee have done a magnificent job on this bill. I know he and they worked diligently for weeks and months and took a great load from the full committee. As a member of the committee, I appreciate it very much and wish to thank sincerely the gentleman and the members of his subcommittee. They have done an excellent job indeed for the Foreign Affairs Committee, for the Foreign Service, and especially for the country.

Mr KEE. I thank the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEE. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. I strongly favor this legislation. I wish to join with the others in congratulating the able chairman of this subcommittee for the wonderful job he has done on this measure.

Mr. KEE. I thank the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEE. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Speaker, for a year or more I have had the pleasure of serving on the Foreign Affairs Committee with the distinguished gentleman from West Virginia now addressing the House, and chairman of the subcommittee handling this bill. Although I am now serving on the Appropriations Committee, I can assure the gentleman that I would look with favor upon even a renewal of further interest in this bill at the proper time. I think the subcommittee should be complimented. The Subcommittee on Appropriations having jurisdiction of this matter knows it is a very deserving measure, and I am only too pleased to add my comment to what my colleagues have presented so far.

Mr. KEE. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, I regret exceedingly that time will not permit a full explanation of the bill; however, we made a full and voluminous report, in which we included explanation in respect to every phase of the legislation. It is my sincere hope that the bill may have the support of every member of this body.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, the subcommittee which considered this matter deserves a great deal of credit for the tireless work that it did in preparing this reorganization bill. Personally, I am sorry that we do not have a longer time to consider the bill, that it is brought up in the closing days of the Congress, because there are certain things I would like to have changed. I do not believe we can change them at this late hour.

Mr. Speaker, all of the changes made in this bill in connection with the reorganization of the Foreign Service will be useless if the Foreign Service officers who go out into the field are not given information as to the policy of whatever administration is in power, if they are not given instructions by the Department of State as to what is expected of them.

In 1944, during the war, I visited four countries and everywhere I found the same condition to exist, namely, that the Foreign Service officers in the various countries did not know what was expected of them. They did not know the policy of the State Department and, if they went ahead themselves and took any initiative they were punished. The legislation now before us will not cure that evil.

I have offered legislation that I hope will be passed which provides for the forming of a permanent secretariat, such as England has, a secretariat to the Cabinet, so that a record of the meetings of the Cabinet may be kept and the State Department, the War Department, the Navy Department, or any other department will know exactly what the policy of the Cabinet is and could go ahead and act accordingly.

A member of the British Embassy told me that during the early days of the British loan they did not want to call back a high representative from England regarding it. They did not know what they should do, so they sent for the minutes of the cabinet meeting. Those minutes came to this country and they then went ahead without making a great stir in England and in the United States by calling a high dignitary back from England. If we had a system such as that I think our Foreign Service and our State Department would be infinitely stronger. Briefly the principal features of the Foreign Service Act of 1946 are:

First. A new Board of the Foreign Service is established to advise the Secretary of State on the administration of the Service. It provides for representation of the Departments of Commerce, Labor, and Agriculture, in planning and development, and for participation by other Government agencies.

Second. Posts held by ambassadors and ministers are classified in 4 grades depending upon their importance. Salaries of ambassadors and ministers, fixed in 1855 at $17,500 and $10,000 respectively, are raised to range from $15,000 to $25,000. These salaries, together with adequate allowances, will bring compensation closer to that of representatives of other countries.

Third. The number of classes of Foreign Service officers which since 1924 has been 11 is reduced to 6 to increase administrative efficiency. Salaries will range from $3,300 to $13,500 instead of from $3,271.80 to $10,000 as at present.

Fourth. A new class of career minister is established. A Foreign Service officer will enter this class when appointed to one of a group of key positions designated by the Secretary of State. Thus a Foreign Service officer can become a minister while still remaining in the Service instead of resigning at present.

Fifth. A Foreign Service Reserve Officer Corps is established to provide a means of gaining the services of specialists in all fields. Rank, pay, titles, and status will be the same as for Foreign Service officers. These men, who will be drawn both from the Government and from outside it, will serve up to 4 years and will be eligible for transfer to the permanent Service.

Sixth. A Foreign Service Staff Corps is established to include the present American fiscal, administrative and clerical, and auxiliary personnel and some specialists. Salaries will range up to $10,000 instead of to $7,102.20 as at present.

Seventh. The bill provides for the appointment of officers in limited numbers to the middle and upper ranks after examination. Such officers must have had service in the Department of State or the Staff Corps or as a Foreign Service Reserve officer.

Eighth. The "promotion-up or selection-out" system of the United States Navy is adapted to the Service. Foreign Service officers who fail to win promotion within a stipulated period of time will be retired.

Ninth. The retirement system is improved and modified to fit the new promotion system; age of mandatory retirement is 60 instead of 65; voluntary retirement is 50 after 20 years of service.

Tenth. A "Foreign Service Institute" is established, comparable to the Army and Navy Command and for naval staff schools. He will furnish in-service training in all phases of Foreign Service work to officers and employees throughout their careers.

Eleventh. Foreign Service officers are required to serve at least three of their first 15 years of service in the United States and are entitled to home leave in this country after every 2 years abroad. This will permit them to renew their knowledge of the United States.

Twelfth. Existing legislation is codified to increase efficiency in administering the Service.

I do not want to take up any more time because the members of the subcommittee who worked so hard on the legislation want to be heard. I am delighted that there will be this change in the Foreign Service, although I am not satisfied with the salaries or with some other provisions of the bill. They are not large enough or, perhaps, I should say the allowances are not sufficient. If the salaries are made higher, the income tax will eat the increases up.

Mr. Speaker, this is no time to criticize the Foreign Service or make fun of it. By and large our Foreign Service with many handicaps did a fine job during the war in war-torn countries. The criticism of them and lack of appreciation has caused some of the ablest of our Foreign Service officers to resign. It is regrettable and even alarming the reorganization bill will not cure that situation. The men who administer it must be men of character and of vision.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HINSHAW. I would like to know what the salary and allowances are that are provided for the ambassadors and ministers from the United States.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Posts held by ambassadors and ministers are classified in four grades depending upon their importance. Salaries of ambassadors and ministers, fixed in 1855 at $17,500 and $10,000, respectively, are raised to range from $15,000 to $25,000. These salaries, together with adequate allowances, will bring compensation closer to that of representatives of other countries.

I think one reason the salaries were not raised and made higher was because, as I repeated before, the income taxes would be higher and the salaries would not be of much value. So, this bill increases the allowance.

Mr. Speaker, I know that the members of the subcommittee who have worked so hard on this bill want to be heard.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. STEFAN. I want to ask the gentlewoman this question. She is talking about increasing the salaries. I think the membership of this House should know that this 106-page bill reorganizing the Department of State is one of the most important bills ever brought before this House.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I realize that, and that is why I am extremely sorry that it is brought up in this way.

Mr. STEFAN. We are given only 40 minutes' debate, without the possibility of reading this bill under the 5-minute rule, and here you are going to increase salaries for Ambassadors from $17,500 to $25,000. In addition, you are giving them considerable increase in allowances.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I will say to the gentleman that I do not begrudge those salaries in the least. There are some other provisions in the bill I am not satisfied with.

Mr. STEFAN. The bill should be debated.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I agree with the gentlemen. Foreign Service officers have been underpaid. I am glad of their pay increase. There are other things in the bill that I would like to debate other than that, but the time is so short. When the Rogers Act for the reorganization bill passed in 1945 there was long debate upon it. For obvious reasons no one is more interested than I in having a strong and effective Foreign Service.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. JONKMAN].

Mr. JONKMAN. Mr. Speaker, it is my purpose to support this bill. Our position in foreign affairs, especially as compared with our prewar status, makes this legislation imperative.

However, I feel that I owe a duty to the House to disclose the results of an investigation made by me in recent weeks.

This is a bill to improve, strengthen, and expand the Foreign Service of the United States. At the hearings on the bill I called the attention of Under Secretary Acheson, who appeared as a witness, to a speech made on the floor of the House by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. COX]—see CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, May 2, 1946, page 4350—intimating that under a free hand given the Secretary of State by the President the FBI had been called in and hundreds of the personnel had been screened out and that they were going out daily under investigation and test of loyalty to our form of government and institutions.

I asked Under Secretary Acheson if the State Department was really being improved and strengthened in this way. He denied the assertion, stating that these hundreds "were let go for economy reasons," that "of all the lists submitted by Members of Congress, and other persons, raising the Communist issue—at another point he referred to this as affiliation with progressive organizations—against various permanent Department personnel" he said, "accusations against but one employee have been substantiated, and this person has been discharged."

Shortly after that I was appointed as a subcommittee of one by the Committee on Foreign Affairs to make an investigation of the real facts of the matter.

I have made such an investigation and find that the Under Secretary was much nearer the real facts than was the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox].

It is my well-founded opinion that not a single person has been separated from the Department of State exclusively because of doubts of his loyalty to our Government and its principles. This, notwithstanding that examination of the files in the Security Committee, charged with screening such persons, separation of such persons from the Department was positively recommended in many cases. Some of these held key positions, where they have access to top secret information. The reasons for such recommendation ran all the way from "overt acts on behalf of a Soviet espionage organization" to "belonging to Communist Front organizations and distributing Communist literature."

The machinery for the screening process is found in the Office for Administration, under Assistant Secretary Donald S. Russell. All applicants for positions are first submitted to Chief Special Agent Thomas F. Fitch. The answers to a comprehensive questionnaire concerning education, previous positions and affiliations are carefully checked with the help of various subagencies, as well as other agencies all over the United States. If nothing is found against the applicant in this branch, he is cleared. However, if anything is found, the Chief Special Agent turns the file over to the Security Committee.

This is a committee consisting of 6 persons, chosen from within the Department of State. They make a further, I think it is called a horizontal check, with the FBI, the G–2, the ONI, the House Committee to Investigate Un-American Activities, and similar sources of information. After examination and consideration of the evidence in the record, this committee makes a written report in each case and recommends separation from the Department if the facts warrant such action.

Up to this point the machinery works excellently. I find that personnel of this committee is sincere and efficient. But right at this point the machinery breaks down completely for want of a definite policy in the Department. In other words, after this "jury" has found a "just and fair verdict," there seems to be no one to pronounce judgment and render execution. And this is true only in these cases involving loyalty and the consequent danger to the interests of the United States.

I was informed that most of these troubles for the Department came in October 1945 after the Presidential decree covering some 4,000 employees from the OWI, the OSS, the FEA, and the Enemy Branch into the Department. Of these some 3,000 have been screened, resulting in 285 adverse reports, of which 79 have been separated from the Department. But when I asked to be shown even one file in which one of these 79 was shown to have been separated for disloyalty only, none could be found.

On the other hand I had secured from other sources outside the Department a list of persons considered to have or have had Communist affiliations, and in nearly every instance I found that the file recommended their dismissal. When I asked for more cases I was readily shown some not on my list, although I was not able to obtain an estimate of their total number so recommended for separation.

It seems to me that the recommendation of the security committee in these cases should be automatically carried into effect by some official in the Department under a definite policy and written directives for such policy. It would seem also that whereas I find that heretofore the security committee has resolved doubts in favor of the employee or prospective employee, all doubt should be resolved in favor of the security of the United States. The vulnerability of the State Department in this respect makes such a rule imperative.

It seems to me that Congress intended such a policy and made its implementation simple by the so-called McCarran rider, included in Public Law No. 490, Seventy-ninth Congress, approved July 5, 1946, which provides:

> Notwithstanding the provisions of section 6 of the act of August 24, 1912 (37 Stat. 555), or the provisions of any other law, the Secretary of State may, in his absolute discretion, on or before June 30, 1947, terminate the employment of any officer or employee of the Department of State or of the Foreign Service of the United States whenever he shall deem such termination necessary or advisable in the interests of the United States, but such termination shall not affect the right of such officer or employee to seek or accept employment in any other department or agency of the Government if declared eligible for such employment by the United States Civil Service Commission.

Under date of July 18 last I wrote Secretary Byrnes of my findings, substantially as aforesaid, and inquired whether such policy and directives were in existence and if not would he favor such a policy? Unfortunately, Mr. Byrnes was out of the city and my letter did not reach him, but last evening he reached me by telephone. Mr. Byrnes informed me that he was not familiar with the issues having been, as we all know, abroad most of the time, but he assured me that he would, upon his return Monday, immediately examine the before-mentioned files, the facts, and the McCarran rider, and assured me that he would favor and do what is necessary to establish a policy definitely separating disloyal persons from the Department.

I sincerely hope so and again wish to state that in the investigation I found no evidence of any suspicion against personnel in the Foreign Service. It concerns rather the permanent departmental personnel. Nevertheless I felt I owed this statement to the House.

Mr. KEE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONKMAN. I yield to the gentleman from West Virginia.

Mr. KEE. Did not the gentleman discover from his examination that the Foreign Service is singularly free from any accusation of association with communism?

Mr. JONKMAN. Yes. I may say to the gentleman that it was stated at the committee meeting that only one employee had been discharged from the Foreign Service for what might be called Communist affiliations, but I was not able in the records and files of the Security Department to find that one. As far as my report is concerned, it is really collateral to this bill, but the investigation was stimulated by it and I still feel that I owe it to the Members of the House to acquaint them with the investigation I made.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONKMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. REES of Kansas. I am deeply interested in this particular subject matter. The fact of the matter is that the whole thing ought to be more carefully examined, and the examination should go into the whole problem of the investigation of personnel throughout the Government. I call the gentleman's attention to a supplementary report that is being filed today by me as a member of a subcommittee of the House Committee on the Civil Service with respect to this problem. The whole problem ought to be carefully examined. I am interested in the gentleman's statement.

Mr. JONKMAN. I quite agree with the gentleman from Kansas. The Department of State because of its vulnerability has been kept more free from this infiltration of subversive influences than other departments of the Government. This is shown by the fact that its real troubles began when the President covered the agencies I have mentioned into the State Department in October 1945. If such an agency as the Security Committee above-mentioned were operating in several of the other agencies of the Government the American people would be amazed at the extent to which Communist personnel is operating in our governmental machinery. It is also true that the screening should be done thoroughly before they enter Government employ because it is far more difficult to dislodge them once they become intrenched in a Government office.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS].

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, if we had a perfect Foreign Service, or the best possible Foreign Service, this bill would not be needed. Our Foreign Service was caught with its striped pants in the wrong place by World War II. This bill is an attempt to correct the situation; it is based on the idea that from now on we must wage peace with the determined skill that we waged war, and that takes career professionals, not political amateurs.

Under President Coolidge, in 1924, the career Foreign Service on a merit basis was started by the Rogers Act. Since then a lot of things have happened. What do we expect from our Foreign Service? Well, in over 300 posts in 58 countries they must win friends and influence people for the U. S. A. They must look after our interests, and our people, away from home. They must tell the State Department what is going on, and they must be informed by the State Department what is coming off. Our foreign policy is simply the best course for this country in view of the situation here and abroad. The reason many people are saying we have no foreign policy is because what we do seems to ignore part of our situation at home, or to ignore the facts of life abroad. For years the Foreign Service was constantly bypassed by a President who was his own State Department. We know that voluminous reports from Foreign Service officers have laid around the State Department unread; that officers in foreign lands have waited in vain for instructions on our policy. Perhaps, as some say, these officers were not worth listening to; they were certainly worth instructing. At any rate, this bill reflects a determination that from now on we will have a Foreign Service worth using in the determination and execution of our foreign policy.

This bill is a reorganization of the Foreign Service, which is practically a separate branch of the Government. Do not confuse this with reorganization of the State Department, which has been reorganized regularly, and irregularly, every few months in recent years. There have been four different Assistant Secretaries over the Foreign Service in a little over a year. The present one, Mr. Russell, is cooperating 100 percent in this Foreign Service reorganization, but the main man is Selden Chapin, Director of the Foreign Service, a career man, and an excellent one, with a splendid staff. This is no overnight plan. It has been intensively studied for over 2 years. Criticism from inside and outside the Service has been solicited, and every critical thing I have said is reflected in self-criticism from inside the Service. Our subcommittee of three started to study their proposals back in April. This was not all new to us. Our Foreign Affairs Committee had been studying this situation for years; a number of bills from our committee improving the Service have become law in the past few years. All of us were familiar with the work and problems of our Foreign Service abroad from personal experience in other countries. We knew a general overhaul job was needed. We spent days at it and made over 100 changes.

We were going over this bill before it had cleared the Budget Office. We reviewed their suggestions along with those from the State Department. In general, the Budget wanted a streamlined bill, with broad powers given the Secretary to do things by regulations. In general, we insisted upon a detailed bill, spelling out precisely just who was to do what, and when. The bill is drafted our way. That is one reason why it is so long—106 pages. We felt the bill should not be introduced at all until we could have practically a clean bill. That is why it was introduced so late. Additional last-minute changes account for the other amendments we are proposing. They do not change the principles involved in the bill. It is not perfect; time and experience will dictate changes; it still contains discretionary powers that can be abused, as my colleague the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. RICHARDS] wisely observed, while we were working on it: "John, you can't pass a law to repeal human nature." I believe, however, that it gets a reorganized Foreign Service off to a flying start. I want to pay my respects to the able and courteous and studious chairman of our subcommittee, Judge KEE. His vast experience and his legal mind were invaluable in our work. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. RICHARDS], with experience in foreign affairs, legal acumen, and strong common sense, was equally helpful in this long job. I appreciate the attitude of the full committee in the 2 days going-over they gave to our work.

Here is what the bill does:

It makes the Foreign Service hard to get in, and hard to stay in. It provides salaries, allowances, and retirement that should attract and hold good men and keep the diplomatic service from being a rich man's side line. It eliminates political influence in the selection, assignment, and promotion of Foreign Service officers, as thoroughly as this can be done on paper. It provides for continuous training of these officers during their service by a Foreign Service institute. It provides for their re-Americanization by sending them home regularly. It reorganizes the Foreign Service into six classes approximating military and naval ranks. It creates a new class, career ministers, whose main job will be to do the professional work under a noncareer ambassador at, for instance, London or Moscow. It provides that a career man does not have to resign in order to be appointed an ambassador or minister. At present, our law on this is as silly as if a colonel had to resign from the Army in order to be a general. Appointments of ambassadors and ministers are left to the President, as is required by the Constitution, and of course he may appoint Jimmy Cromwells or Ed Flynns, but a very good list of available career men is provided for him by this bill, in case he wants to use it.

The second major arm of the Service is the staff branch, numbering about 3,600, which corresponds roughly to Foreign Service officers, who number just over 800, as would staff specialists and technicians to line officers in the Army or Navy. Congress rewrote the pay and perquisites of this group last year. Their status is still further improved by this bill which creates long overdue incentives and opportunities for this group.

The third branch of the Service is set up as the Foreign Service Reserve. We have had about 640 in the wartime auxiliary which roughly corresponds to the Reserve and which is being liquidated. These are specialists and technical men, either from other departments of the Government or from civil life, who are brought in for not more than 4 years at a time. There will be about 150 of them. Scientists, journalists, businessmen are going to be needed in our missions abroad. They will bring in new ideas to our diplomats, and when they go back to their regular jobs they will take an understanding of our foreign affairs with them. They will ordinarily be working in their specialized lines but provision is made so that those who are "naturals" for the diplomatic service may become Foreign Service officers, upon passing proper examinations. Thus the Foreign Service will obtain new blood from the side as well as from the bottom. This will also create a little bad blood. There will be a little rivalry between the Regulars and the Reserves, and this will be good for the whole organization.

It is possible that the Reserve could be used, by getting around the letter of the new law, to take care of unqualified political favorites of the party in power. If this happens, Congress in general, and certainly this Member in particular, if he is still in Congress, will clear up the situaton with a legislative meat cleaver.

In this bill, aliens in our Foreign Service are transferred to a separate corps for administration. There are about 3,000 of them all over the world, clerks, couriers, interpreters, porters.

In addition to these changes there are many corrections of abuses or red-tape annoyances that have been in our laws for years; and the repeal of a lot of archaic laws that had been almost forgotten until they were dug up by the thoroughgoing research that was part of the preparation of this bill. This is another reason why the bill is so long.

Salaries of ambassadors and ministers have been $17,500 and $10,000, since 1855. This bill increases them to $25,000 tapering down to $15,000. In the six classes of the Foreign Service the top bracket is raised $3,500 to $13,500 and the lowest bracket only $28.20 to $3,300. The reason for this is that we are not considering bare subsistence pay, but pay to attract and hold outstanding men. If the pay and the work in the years ahead is attractive, good men can be obtained at the bottom for $3,500.

Maintenance allowances for our chief representatives are not specified by law, but should range from $25,000 down to $3,000 depending upon the post. Representation allowances are not specified, but should be generous. A traveling salesman has to spend money for entertainment; our representatives abroad have similar expenses, if they are to sell America all over the world.

In general, the whole plan of allowances for dangerous, unhealthy posts, for inflated currency, for travel or other purposes, is to put a man abroad in the same financial position he would be in at home, so that he does not sacrifice financially by his foreign service. In this way, any able Foreign Service officer can afford to take any foreign post, and our Government will not be forced to the un-American expedient of hunting a man with sufficient private income to pay the expense of serving his country.

The additional cost of all of this, the whole bill, is estimated at $4,960,914. This would be about a 9-percent increase in the Foreign Service appropriation of $52,805,900. The biggest increase, $970,000, is in home-leave expense, to get these people back oftener and get them acquainted with their own country, particularly since many of them are overdue under existing law. No. 8 from the top increase is Foreign Service officers' salaries, $312,000. No. 9 from the top is $292,000 for increases in salaries of ambassadors and ministers. The item is small because the numbers involved are few.

The value of these increases, compared with the cost, can be very large. We want these representatives of ours, far from home, to know they are appreciated; we want them working hard to represent us, reporting accurately and intelligently on what is going on; and we want their reports to be considered, receiving instructions on our policies, and we want them instructed—in difficult, dangerous, unhealthy posts, lonesome, homesick at times—and we want them homesick for we want them to know and love their homeland; worried for fear they will not be promoted up, but selected out; and we want them to worry about that; confident that political finagling against them is not going on behind their backs; and we want them to feel that way; inspired that they represent the greatest, best country on earth; we want them that way, too. We want better men to want to join them. We want to hold the good ones, get rid of the bad ones and the mediocre ones. In the difficult, exciting days that lie ahead, full of worldwide trouble, and problems and opportunities for America, we can secure better service from our Foreign Service under this bill. We need such a service today.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. STEFAN. The gentleman should tell the House, however, that while these salaries of ambassadors and ministers have not been raised in a long while you have made a very liberal jump in their salaries. You increase the salary of a man getting $17,000 up to $25,000 and you give them $25,000 a year representation allowance, which is very liberal. In the class 1 officers, you jump a man from $10,000 to $13,500. That is quite a jump, is it not?

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. That is right.

Mr. STEFAN. The House should know what you are doing in this 106-page bill.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. That is right. I want the House to know. It has been publicized as much as we could publicize it. I think the gentleman would agree with me, having traveled all over the world, that if we had a perfect Foreign Service and the finest officers available we would not need this. It is because we have to compete with business and industry to attract and hold the best men possible that we must increase salaries. Remember, too, that our Foreign Service must compete with the smartest men other countries can secure for this work, and they are well financed. Lord Halifax had a tax-free allowance of $70,000 for representing his country here, when Ambassador Winant was receiving $31,000 above taxes to represent us in England.

Mr. STEFAN. The time will come when the committee of which I am a member must make an appropriation of this $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 which you are increasing here. My argument is that you should have more time to debate an important bill like this. I agree with the gentleman that there should be some increases in salaries in the Foreign Service. You say this bill has been considered very carefully. With reference to the misconduct item, I think you have overlooked a point there.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. I will be very glad to discuss that with the gentleman.

Mr. STEFAN. In one section you say that a Foreign Service officer who is found guilty of some misconduct will be discharged and lose his entire pension.

Under present legislation he does at least get his pension.

Mr. VORYS or Ohio. The provision we have there was the recommendation of the Foreign Service officers themselves, from all over the world, as are all of such provisions, rewritten only by our subcommittee.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. RICHARDS. I just want to add that I served on this subcommittee with the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. KEE] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS]. I never saw two men work harder on any bill considered by a committee of this House upon which I served. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS], himself, was dissatisfied with some of the provisions of the bill at first, and to my knowledge he proposed about 40-odd different amendments. We on the Democratic side of the House of Representatives, and of the State Department, got together with him and satisfied him as to his objections. He did great work.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. I want to say this about our work. On this committee I was the lone Republican. Our distinguished chairman, the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. KEE], and my beloved friend from South Carolina [Mr. RICHARDS] were Democrats. I want to say that we did not avoid politics. We discussed politics from every angle, and how politics might penetrate the administration of the Foreign Service. Every time there was a practical, workable way to keep politics out of the Foreign Service, all three of us voted to keep the politics out. I want to pay tribute to the other members of this subcommittee.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. BLOOM. I would like to state to the Members why you were selected on this committee of three. If you do not do it, I would like to have permission to do it.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Very well, you may state it.

Mr. BLOOM. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS] was the principal objector at all times when this bill was under consideration. So, when a subcommittee was appointed to consider this bill, the Chair suggested Mr. KEE and Mr. RICHARDS, and then thought it would be a good idea, so as to be sure to have the right kind of a bill, properly written, everything considered, to place the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS] on there to represent the kickers.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. I did more than just kick. Republicans have done more than just kick about our Foreign Service. This idea of a career Foreign Service started in 1924 under President Coolidge when Congressman Rogers, the distinguished husband of our colleague the gentlewoman from Massachusetts [Mrs. ROGERS], put through a bill which has been the cornerstone of the career service. Time and experience have shown the necessity for these changes, which have been studied for 2 years, and reviewed and amended by unanimous action of our subcommittee.

I hope the House accepts our handiwork.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

All time has expired.

The question is, Will the House suspend the rules and pass the bill as amended.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended, and the bill was passed.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, House Resolution 715, providing for the consideration of H. R. 6967, a bill to improve, strengthen, and expand the Foreign Service of the United States and to consolidate and revise the laws relating to its administration, will be laid upon the table.

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. REED of New York asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial.

INCREASE IN ANNUAL PAY FOR DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA SCHOOL TEACHERS

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I have discussed with the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FEIGHAN] the prospective annual pay raise of $450 for District of Columbia school teachers which has been unanimously approved by the House District Committee; but I am not satisfied that this horizontal increase in itself meets the situation beyond what might be termed pressing and temporary need, and I suggested when this proposal becomes law that a further and comprehensive plan be presented to the Congress which would be all inclusive and which would make of the District of Columbia school system a model for the entire Nation to follow. It should provide further and substantial increases in pay for all classes of teachers. The amount of increase should be commensurate with the service rendered. There should be established by law a progressive and automatic schedule of promotions and rate of pay. The teaching profession in all its aspects should be made worth while and attractive as a career. Toward that end, remuneration for service in itself is insufficient. We must, I insist, provide generously for retirement. I am one who believes too that provision should be made for health insurance and for ample retirement of disabled teachers.

To this we must add ample provision for the physical plant and equipment of the school system of the District of Columbia. In other words, for the construction and maintenance of healthful and sanitary buildings to house our children during their formative years. When we have attained this objective, we will have provided an educational pattern for the rest of the country to follow. I have always advocated this same course in the city of Detroit and in the State of Michigan. I am not satisfied with our system there. We have not fulfilled our obligation to our children and to those who are giving their lives to their education. I feel that anything we can do here in Washington will aid in a corrective way the manifest deficiencies in Detroit and elsewhere. Mind you, we are not the worst off, but we are far from what I believe is the necessary level for the welfare of the country.

INTERCHANGE OF PERSONS, KNOWLEDGE, AND SKILLS BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND OTHER COUNTRIES

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 4982) to enable the Department of State more effectively to carry out its responsibilities in the foreign field by means of (a) public dissemination abroad of information about the United States, its people, and its policies, and (b) promotion of the interchange of persons, knowledge, and skills between the people of the United States and the peoples of other countries, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purpose of promoting that mutual understanding between peoples which is one of the essential foundations for durable peace and recognizing that such understanding requires the continuing interchange of persons, knowledge, and skills, and in order that all present and future activities of departments, agencies, and independent establishments of the Government directed to these ends may be most effectively planned and integrated, the Secretary of State (hereinafter called the Secretary) is authorized to develop, maintain, and carry into effect, programs for the interchange of persons, knowledge, and skills between the people of the United States and the peoples of other countries, including the Commonwealth of the Philippines, subject to the limitations contained in the following sections.

SEC. 2. The Secretary is authorized, when he finds it appropriate, to provide for the preparation, and dissemination abroad, of information about the United States, its people and its policies, through press, publications, radio, motion pictures, and other information media, and through information centers supervised by United States missions and consulates abroad. For this purpose, the Secretary is authorized to purchase, rent, construct, improve, maintain, and operate facilities for radio transmission and reception, including the leasing of real property both within and without the continental limits of the United States for periods not to exceed 10 years. In approving international information activities as authorized by this act, it is the sense of the Congress: (1) that the Secretary of State shall promote by appropriate means the dissemination abroad of information about the United States by private American individuals and agencies, shall supplement such private information dissemination where necessary, and shall reduce such Government information activities whenever corresponding private information dissemination is found to be adequate; (2) that nothing in this act shall be construed to give the Department of State a monopoly in the production or sponsorship on the air of shortwave broadcasting programs, or a monopoly in any other medium of information; (3) that the Department of State shall invite outstanding private leaders in American cultural and informational fields to review and advise on the Government's international information activities; and (4) that all printed matter, films, broadcasts, and other materials in the fields of mass media shall, when disseminated by the Government, be identified as to Government or private source.

SEC. 3. The Secretary is authorized, when he finds it appropriate, and within the limitations of such appropriations as the Congress may provide, to make grants of money, services, or property to governmental institutions, public or private nonprofit organizations, and individuals, both in the United States and in other countries, so as to provide for (a) interchanges of students, professors, and outstanding persons in the fields of press, radio, motion pictures, education, science, the arts, agriculture, public health, and other leaders of national affairs; and orientation lectures and services for such students, professors, and persons upon their arrival in the United States; (b) technical projects undertaken and jointly financed by the United States and another government, or by the United States and a private nonprofit organization, for the common benefit of the United States and another country; (c) preparation and dissemination of informational materials abroad; (d) preparation, distribution, and interchange of educational materials; (e) development and demonstration of better methods for teaching the English language abroad; and (f) assistance to American-founded, American-affiliated, and American-sponsored schools, libraries, and community centers abroad: Provided, That the Department of State shall exercise no control over the educational policies of schools receiving such grants: And provided further, That in making grants of money for libraries, and community centers under subsection (f) of this section, the Secretary shall require that the grantee, during the effective period of the grant, enter into no rental or lease of real property for a period longer than 1 year without prior approval of the Secretary, and in no event shall such lease or rental be for a term exceeding 5 years in duration. The Secretary is also authorized, at his discretion, to furnish, sell, or rent, by contract or otherwise, educational and informational materials and equipment.

SEC. 4. The act of May 25, 1938, entitled "An act authorizing the temporary detail of United States employees, possessing special qualifications, to governments of American Republics and the Philippines, and for other purposes," as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"The Secretary is authorized, when the government of another country is desirous of obtaining the services of a person having special scientific or other technical or professional qualifications, from time to time to detail or authorize the detail for temporary service, to or in cooperation with such government, any person in the employ or service of the Government of the United States who has such qualifications, with the approval of the department, agency, or independent establishment in which such person is employed or serving: Provided, That nothing in this act shall authorize the detail of officers or enlisted men of the United States Army, Navy, or Marine Corps for service relating to the organization, training, operation, development, or combat equipment of the armed forces of a foreign government. Any person, while detailed to another government under the authority of this act, shall be considered, for the purpose of preserving his rights and privileges as such, an officer or employee of the Government of the United States and of the department, agency, or independent establishment from which detailed and shall continue to receive therefrom compensation, and, under such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe, he may receive additional compensation from such department, agency, or independent establishment not to exceed 50 percent of the compensation he was receiving as an officer or employee of the United States at the time of detail and allowances and travel and related expenses which a Foreign Service officer or employee of comparable salary is authorized to receive: Provided, That the amount of extra compensation shall not exceed the amount which the Secretary determines to be necessary to compensate such individuals for additional expenses resulting from the detail, and not otherwise reimbursed by this Government: And provided further, That any such person, while so detailed, may, at the discretion of his department, agency, or independent establishment, and under such rules and regulations as it may prescribe, accept an office under the government to which he is detailed if the acceptance of such an office, in the opinion of such department, agency, or independent establishment, is necessary to permit the effective performance of duties for which he was detailed, or if he performs no duties of such an office other than making or approving on behalf of such foreign government disbursement of funds provided by such government, or receiving from such foreign government funds for deposit and disbursement on behalf of such government, in carrying out programs undertaken pursuant to this act. The authorization of additional compensation, allowances, and travel and related expenses contained in this section and the payment thereof out of any appropriations available therefor, shall be considered as meeting all the requirements of section 1765 of the Revised Statutes."

SEC. 5. In carrying out the purposes of this act, as stated in sections 1 through 4, the Secretary is authorized, in addition to and not in limitation of the authority otherwise vested in him—

(a) To utilize, with their approval, the services, facilities, and personnel of the departments, agencies, and independent establishments of the United States Government, and of State and local governments, and the services, facilities, and personnel of other governments and political subdivisions thereof, of intergovernmental organizations of which the United States is a member, and of private agencies, and the assistance of private individuals.

(b) To furnish for citizens and subjects of other countries such entertainment as the Secretary determines to be advisable for the achievement of the purposes of this act, both in the United States and in other countries.

(c) To establish and maintain in the United States reception centers for foreign students and for visitors representative of the fields listed in subsection 3 (a) above.

(d) To provide for, and pay the expenses of, attendance at meetings or conventions of societies and associations concerned with furthering the purposes of this act.

(e) To provide for printing and binding outside the continental limits of the United States, without regard to section 11 of the act of March 1, 1919, entitled "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, and for other purposes" (which prohibits printing and binding, except by the Government Printing Office without advance authority of the Joint Committee on Printing).

(f) To employ aliens within the United States for services related to the translation or narration of colloquial speech in foreign languages; and to employ persons, including aliens, without regard to the civil-service laws and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, when such employment is on a temporary basis for periods not exceeding 90 days in duration.

(g) To create such advisory committees as in his judgment may be of assistance in carrying out the purposes of this act, but no committee member shall be allowed any salary or other compensation for services: Provided, however, That he may be paid his actual transportation expenses, and not to exceed $10 per diem in lieu of subsistence and other expenses, while away from his home in attendance upon meetings within the United States or in consultation with the Department of State under instructions.

SEC. 6. (a) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such amounts as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this act.

(b) The Secretary may authorize the transfer to other departments, agencies, and independent establishments of the Government for expenditure in the United States and in other countries, in order to carry out the purposes of this act, any part of any appropriations available to the Department of State for carrying out the purposes of this act, for direct expenditure or as a working fund, and any such expenditures may be made under the specific authority contained in this act or under the authority governing the activities of the department, agency, or independent establishment to which a part of any such appropriation is transferred.

SEC. 7. In carrying on activities which further the purposes of this act, subject to approval of such activities by the Secretary, the departments, agencies, and independent establishments of the Government are authorized—

(a) To place orders and make purchases and rentals of materials and equipment;

(b) To place orders or make contracts with governmental agencies, foreign or domestic, and intergovernmental organizations of which the United States is a member, and private agencies and individuals, including aliens, for services, without regard to the civil-service laws and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, and, with respect to contracts for services entered into in foreign countries, without regard to section 3741 of the Revised Statutes (requiring that contracts contain a clause that United States Congressmen are prohibited from receiving benefits from a Government contract);

(c) To perform technical services, for the government of another country desirous of obtaining such services, as are within the scope of the established functions of the department, agency, or independent establishment, and upon terms and conditions which are satisfactory to the head of the department, agency, or independent establishment, when it is determined by the Secretary that such services will contribute to the purposes of this act: Provided, That nothing in this act shall authorize the performance of services relating to the organization, training, operation, development, or combat equipment of the armed forces of a foreign government and Provided, further, that nothing in this act shall authorize the performance at the expense of the other government of technical services requiring substantial United States staff which private United States firms are competent and available to perform, as determined by the Secretary, unless the Secretary determines it to be in the national interest that such services be performed by this Government;

(d) Under such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe, to pay the transportation expenses, and not to exceed $10 per diem in lieu of subsistence and other expenses, of citizens or subjects of other countries, without regard to the Standardized Government Travel Regulations and the Subsistence Expense Act of 1926 as amended;

(e) Under such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe, without regard to the Standardized Government Travel Regulations and the Subsistence Expense Act of 1926, as amended, to provide for planned travel itineraries within the United States by groups of citizens or subjects of other countries, to pay the expenses of such travel, and to detail as escorts of such groups, officers and employees of the Government, whose expenses may be paid out of the general expenses of the itineraries;

(f) To make grants and to pay expenses incident to training and study; and

(g) To defray the expenses of preparing and transporting to their former homes the remains of persons not employed by the United States Government who may die while away from home under the authority of this act.

SEC. 8. (a) The Secretary is authorized, when he finds it in the public interest, to request and accept reimbursement from any cooperating governmental, intergovernmental, or private source for all or part of the expenses of any portion of the program undertaken hereunder, and the amounts so received shall be credited, as determined by the Secretary, to appropriations of the department, agency, or independent establishment which defrayed such expenses, available at the time such amounts are received for carrying out the purposes of this act, and such amounts shall be available for the purposes of the appropriations to which credited.

(b) If any governmental, intergovernmental, or private source shall express the desire to provide funds or other property to be used by this Government, in whole or in part, for the expenses of any part of the program undertaken pursuant to this act, the Secretary is authorized, when he finds it in the public interest, to accept such funds or property, and the funds so received may be established as a trust fund or special deposit account in the Treasury of the United States, to be available for reimbursement of appropriations or direct expenditure for the purposes and under the provisions of this act, any unexpended balance of the trust fund or special deposit account and other property received under this subsection and no longer required for the purposes for which provided to be returned to the government, organization, or person providing the funds or property.

SEC. 9. The Secretary may delegate, to such officers of the Government as the Secretary determines to be appropriate, any of the powers conferred upon him by this act to the extent that he finds such delegation to be in the interest of the purposes expressed in this act and the efficient administration of the programs undertaken pursuant to this act.

SEC. 10. Nothing in this act shall authorize the disclosure of any information or knowledge in any case in which such disclosure is prohibited by any other law of the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. BLOOM. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, this bill is designed to promote relations between the people of the United States and the peoples of other countries, in order to build the kind of understanding on which permanent peace must be assured.

This bill has been very carefully considered and the suggestions for amendments made to the committee have all been considered and are embodied in the bill. Every consideration has been given to the amendments, and we consider it now a perfect piece of legislation. Although it is a complicated bill, its purposes can be stated in a very few words.

Ever since George Washington sent Benjamin Franklin to Europe as an Ambassador of the United States, our Government has been carrying on diplomatic relations with other governments. These are government-to-government relationships. Our diplomats deal with foreign offices. They are sometimes criticized for dealing too little with peoples. In the nineteenth century that was the traditional way—in fact, the only way—for conducting international affairs.

But now there is a new concept in diplomacy, a broader approach in the twentieth century. Peoples are taking a growing part in foreign affairs, and in many countries the people exert a very real influence in the making of foreign policy. That is a development which has been supported by your Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Any Member of this House who reviews his mail for the past month will recall letters from constituents about the British loan, about Palestine, Spain, the Paris Peace Conference, about the Soviet Union, atomic energy, and many other international issues.

Throughout most of the world peoples are becoming more concerned about foreign relations, and particularly about the policies of the United States, because decisions made here in Washington—in fact, speeches made here today on the floor of Congress—are of concern to peoples thousands of miles away.

No wonder, therefore, that our twentieth century foreign relations are reaching out not only to governments but also to peoples. Our State Department is concerned not only with the attitudes of kings, and presidents, and foreign offices but also with the man in the street of many foreign countries.

That brings me to the purpose of this bill. This bill is designed to promote relations between the people of the United States and the peoples of other countries, in order to build the kind of understanding on which permanent peace must be based.

This bill would authorize the exchange of students and professors between the United States and other countries, the loan of American technicians to other governments, the training of foreign technicians in this country, and the translation of American scientific books into foreign languages. These are examples of the program.

Let me emphasize that this is not a give-away program. The bill provides that other governments can share in the cost of this program. In Latin America last year, for example, this Government spent about $4,000,000 on this program, and the Latin-American governments contributed more than $6,000,000. In other words, the other governments have contributed $3 to every $2 put up by the United States.

There is one other important aspect of this bill. Our committee believes that peoples cannot understand each other better unless they have accurate information about each other. Accordingly we have written into this bill authority for the dissemination abroad of information about the United States and its policies.

Our committee has written into this bill many amendments proposed by the minority members of the committee, and at the present time I know of no request for an amendment other than those submitted by the committee.

This is an important bill. The United States is the last of the great nations of the world to provide for a permanent program of relations with other peoples. It is a democratic idea. It is characteristically American to believe in the free flow of ideas between nations. That is what this bill is designed to support. It deserves the bipartisan support of this House.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, I demanded a second not because I expect to oppose the legislation, for I shall support it and I hope the House will approve it by the required two-thirds vote. However, if the House is to do that there must be some word of explanation concerning the purpose of the bill and concerning the history of the bill, because it has been before us and before the public through the press for many many months.

When the bill was first reported from the committee last year it was reported on a motion which I made recommending that the bill do pass and at that time it passed the committee almost unanimously, but not quite. During December of last year the gentlewoman from Ohio [Mrs. BOLTON] and I, and I believe the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS] appeared before the Rules Committee requesting that a rule be granted. Due to the fact that we were nearing the holiday recess, the Rules Committee in its wisdom did not grant a rule at that time.

Between then and the time the bill was again brought before the Committee on Rules, spokesmen for the Associated Press and the United Press engaged in a newspaper debate with Assistant Secretary of State William Benton as to whether this was actually a cultural relations bill or whether it was some kind of propaganda bill in which it was proposed to turn over the dissemination of news to the State Department instead of leaving it with the established news services. That debate in the newspapers lasted some time.

In a desire to arrive at an understanding of the true facts in the case some of us who had been for this rule appeared before the Rules Committee again and then asked the Rules Committee not to grant the rule on the bill until there was an opportunity for the various factions to get together so that the world at large would know that Congress was passing a cultural relations program aimed at peace and not a propaganda bill devised to create and sustain a propaganda war.

I want to express my appreciation personally to the Rules Committee which stood fast at three different times, I think, when we appeared before them, asking that they not grant a rule until we had an opportunity to iron out these differences. As a result of that resistive wall of reason on the part of the Rules Committee we finally reopened the hearings in the House Committee on Foreign Affairs and brought down representatives of the United Press and the Associated Press, and other spokesmen. They appeared before our committee and finally we were able to perfect an amendment which adjusted the small area of disagreement which existed between the proponents of the bill, the State Department and its opponents in the press and radio. I believe the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS] will read that amendment into the RECORD during the course of my remarks.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. I wonder if the gentleman would not like to have the amendment read now.

Mr. MUNDT. Yes; I wish the gentleman would read it at this point.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. This is the amendment which I have prepared with the active cooperation of the Department and Mr. Benton and our colleague in the past few days. This is what we made the long fight for and it provides, you will note, for the prohibition of any Government monopoly in propaganda and provides for the separate identification of Government propaganda and private information, which is the principle for which leaders in radio and the press have been contending.

I will read it:

In approving international information activities as authorized by this act, it is the sense of the Congress: (1) that the Secretary of State shall promote by appropriate means the dissemination abroad of information about the United States by private American individuals and agencies, shall supplement such private information dissemination where necessary, and shall reduce such Government information activities whenever corresponding private information dissemination is found to be adequate; (2) that nothing in this act shall be construed to give the Department of State a monopoly in the production or sponsorship on the air of shortwave broadcasting programs, or a monopoly in any other medium of information; (3) that the Department of State shall invite outstanding private leaders in American cultural and informational fields to review and advise on the Government's international information activities; and (4) that all printed matter, films, broadcasts, and other materials in the fields of mass media shall, when disseminated by the Government, be identified as to Government or private source.

Let me say, Mr. Speaker, that No. 4 is a paraphrase of a resolution of the American Society of Newspaper Editors which they are attempting to promote throughout the world, and it is very proper that we make this a part of the fundamental law of our own land. Of course, there are loopholes in this amendment, and much discretion is still left to the Government, but this amendment establishes the fundamental principles we want followed. If the discretion granted is abused, Congress can act to end the abuses.

Mr. MUNDT. I may say that this amendment has been introduced in this legislation with the unanimous support of our committee. We shall also interest ourselves in guarding against its abuse.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MUNDT. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. CURTIS. Has the Rules Committee granted a rule on this matter?

Mr. MUNDT. Yes; under the stipulations the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS] and I have just discussed. This is being brought up under suspension of the rules, however.

Mr. CURTIS. I understand that. What will this legislation cost?

Mr. STEFAN. I can answer that question. We passed a bill here some time ago appropriating money to carry out this program in the amount of $19,000,000. The bill as it left the House carried $10,000,000. The Senate added $9,000,000, making a total of $19,000,000. This is a program for which the State Department already has authority, in my opinion.

Mr. MUNDT. I may say that this legislation spells out the purposes for which the appropriation can be used rather than giving the State Department a blank check.

Mr. STEFAN. With the amendment of the committee, in addition to the amendment inserted in the appropriation bill regarding short-wave broadcasts, it will leave the matter open to all broadcasts, in my opinion. This is satisfactory to the news-gathering organizations of our country, it is satisfactory to the private low-wave broadcasters, and it is satisfactory to Assistant Secretary Benton of the State Department, who has always been endeavoring to reach such an agreement. I think this amendment is a good compromise and that the bill should pass.

Mr. MUNDT. The Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. Benton, has always been very cooperative in that direction and apparently he is satisfied with this legislation. In all events it now incorporates the principles for which a minority of us on the committee have fought for so long.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MUNDT. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. JUDD. As I heard the amendment read it says nothing shall be interpreted to authorize the State Department to conduct a monopoly in foreign broadcasts, and so forth. There is nothing in it that will authorize the State Department to censor broadcasts or the dissemination of information by private agencies; is there?

Mr. MUNDT. No.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MUNDT. I yield to the gentlewoman from Massachusetts.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. In effect, when the Appropriations Committee presented and the House passed the appropriation for this purpose it was legislation on an appropriation bill?

Mr. MUNDT. It was really a blank check. The language of the Appropriations Committee was very inadequate and did not measure up to a proper legislative standard.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I am worried about certain provisions of the bill. I think the operation of it must be watched extremely carefully.

Mr. MUNDT. That is one of the functions of our committee. We will watch it.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MUNDT. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Here the United States is going to try to tell the American story to the world; we are going to try to have an accurate picture of our country put in the minds of people in many parts of the world who at the moment are being bombarded with plenty of information coming from other sources. We are eager to present our side of the picture.

Mr. MUNDT. That is a very important part of this bill. We also hope to bring people from other countries to the United States for educational and observation purposes.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Yes.

Mr. MUNDT. We want to tell the American story without propaganda because we believe the American story will be convincing in itself. Incidentally, when our subcommittee was overseas studying the various conditions abroad and we found that in places like Athens, and Baghdad, and Cairo, we now have little American workshops with libraries and pictures where the citizens in those areas had the opportunity to learn something about the American spirit.

This makes that type of program universal, expands it, and makes it available to additional countries.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MUNDT. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I am seeking information concerning section 2 in which it states:

> The Secretary is authorized to rent, utilize, or lease and operate existing facilities for preparation or dissemination of information, and to purchase, rent, construct, improve, maintain, and operate facilities for radio transmission and reception, including the leasing of real property both within and without the continental limits of the United States for periods not to exceed 10 years.

Does that mean that the effect of this will terminate in 10 years?

Mr. MUNDT. No; that is simply a form of contract.

Mr. McDONOUGH. But he cannot lease these facilities for more than 10 years at a time.

Mr. MUNDT. That is correct.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Another point of information. Since the gentleman says that these facilities are already in these foreign countries to inform the citizens there, why do we need legislation to do that? It is already there.

Mr. MUNDT. The existing program is purely on a tentative basis, a carryover and reformation of the OWI, and it is being continued by appropriations without sustaining legislation. This is legislation which will determine and spell out the manner in which that appropriation is to be spent and which creates and defines a permanent cultural relations program.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MUNDT. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. CURTIS. On page 2 of the bill it says that for this purpose the Secretary is authorized to rent, utilize, or lease or operate existing facilities for preparation or dissemination of information and to purchase, rent, construct, improve, maintain, and operate facilities for radio transmission and reception, including the leasing of property, and so on.

How are you going to build radio stations and do all of these things for $19,000,000 a year, and where do they propose to build these radio stations?

Mr. MUNDT. I yield to the gentleman's colleague from Nebraska to answer that.

Mr. STEFAN. We have already voted for the appropriation to carry out the authorization. The money has been appropriated and is already being spent, and the moment that the amendment is approved and this legislation is then passed it will clarify that entire situation. It eliminates all Government monopoly. This $19,000,000 does not only buy radio time, but it also has to do with cultural relations.

Mr. MUNDT. I just want to say in conclusion that I think this is a highly constructive piece of legislation. We, who believe in the American system, want other people in other sections of the world to know something about its benefits and its advantages. We have no desire to sell it to them or to propagandize them, but we have a desire to make a true story of America available. In so many portions of the world the only information people get from America comes from its enemies instead of its friends. This enables the friends of freedom to tell the true story of the American system.

Mr. CURTIS. I have some fear in setting up in the State Department another big bureau, and the gentleman knows our experience with bureaus for disseminating information, how they deteriorate into pure propagandists. I presume, at least, that this bill guards against that.

Mr. MUNDT. We feel that it does, with the amendment which was read by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS] and which should be acceptable to the House. We feel we have established every safeguard that we can at the moment. Our committee intends to follow the development of this legislation, and if additional safeguards are necessary in the future we shall be here asking for those safeguards.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MUNDT. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HINSHAW. I am very happy that the gentleman and his committee have brought in the bill increasing the pay schedules and allowances for Foreign Service. It is true that our representatives abroad have not had adequate salaries and have had to be wealthy people possessing private resources to accept those positions.

Mr. MUNDT. I thank the gentleman, and I agree with him. That is why I supported the new Foreign Service legislation which the House has just approved while we were writing it and revising it in committee.

I am now urging the House to approve this cultural relations program with an equally substantial majority vote. I feel it to be tremendously important that we begin offsetting some of the detrimental anti-American propaganda which is circulating abroad by making available to people everywhere the true story of our American character, our American freedoms, our American constitutional processes, and our real American zeal to make friends with all peoples and to engage in a nondiscriminatory program of preserving the peace and promoting the prosperity of the world.

Several years ago I introduced in this House legislation designed to carry out many of the features of this legislation insofar as our South American neighbors are concerned. I am delighted that the program has been expanded and that it has been made applicable to every area of the world. America hides behind no iron curtain. We have nothing to conceal. We are proud of our achievements and our ideals. We encourage and welcome inspection trips and visits from every country in the world. We invite students from abroad to attend our colleges and universities. We urge statesmen to study our institutions of government. There is no patent and there is no copyright on the processes of government which have made America great.

This legislation is designed to help others help themselves by becoming better acquainted with the fundamental concepts freedom and equity which have contributed so greatly to the success of freemen in this Republic. It merits your approval. I hope it will have your support. It is just one additional link in the chain of positive and nondiscriminatory steps which America is taking and which it can take to create better understanding among the peoples of the world to the end that a universal political and economic climate may be developed in which wars and intolerance will be things of the past and in which peace and equity shall be the keynotes of both the present and the future. I urge you to vote for this constructive proposal.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House suspend the rules and pass the bill as amended?

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended, and the bill was passed.

House Resolution 669 was laid on the table.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, in order to make it certain, may I ask if the measure as passed includes the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio?

The SPEAKER. It included whatever amendments were included in the motion. The Chair assumes the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio was included in the motion. The Chair put the question on the motion as it was made, and the bill passed with amendments.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, all the amendments are in the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York says all the amendments were included in the motion that was made.

Mr. BLOOM. I repeat, Mr. Speaker, all the amendments are in the bill.

Mr. STEFAN. The gentleman is satisfied that the amendments are in the bill?

Mr. BLOOM. Yes.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentlewoman will state it.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, would it be proper to ask that the amendments be read at this time?

The SPEAKER. No. The bill has been passed with amendments.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Would it be proper for a Member, such as myself, who had an amendment, to state that he has examined the bill and that the amendment is in there? That is the fact.

ESTABLISHING THE OFFICE OF UNDER SECRETARY OF STATE FOR ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 6646) to establish the Office of Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby established in the Department of State for a period of 2 years, following the enactment and approval of this legislation by the President, the Office of Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, which shall be filled by appointment by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs shall receive compensation at the rate of $10,000 a year and shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by the Secretary of State. The Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs shall serve subject to the direction of the Secretary of State and the Under Secretary of State.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, with the successful conclusion of the war there were transferred to the Department of State many of the functions of the war agencies related to the foreign economic activities of the Government. To the already numerous responsibilities with which the Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs had been charged, were added additional responsibilities relating to the settlement of the lend-lease accounts with foreign governments, the disposal of surplus property abroad, the settlement of numerous claims between the United States and other countries, the granting of credits to foreign governments and the determination of the Government's economic policy with respect to Germany and Japan.

The United Nations Organization has been created, and soon the economic and social council will be in full operation. The Bretton Woods agreements have been signed by the required number of countries and the International Monetary Fund and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development have been established. The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization has been created, and in the fields of aviation, shipping, and telecommunication further international agreements and conferences are in prospect. Only recently this Government published proposals for an international conference on trade and employment.

All of these activities acquired new prominence and importance when the fighting stopped and we were free to turn our best efforts to the building of a lasting peace. With all of them, the present Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs has a close association and attendant heavy responsibilities.

During the next 2 years, the duties now performed by the Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs will be of the greatest significance in the conduct of our foreign relations, and those duties will require the most thoughtful attention to the problems which confront us and the most careful search for appropriate solutions. I believe that the scope of the work requires the complete attention of more than one principal officer of the Department. The task is beyond the capacity or endurance of any single individual. It therefore seems to me proper that there should be created in the Department of State, for a period of 2 years, as provided in H. R. 6646, the office of Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs.

With the creation of this office, the functions and duties now assigned to the Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs could be transferred to the office of the Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, and that officer would perform such additional functions and duties as might be assigned to it by the Secretary of State. The present office of the Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs and such other assistants to the Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs and such other assistants could then share the burden of the work which now falls too heavily on one officer.

The provisions of the bill which has been introduced will serve to increase the effectiveness of the Department of State in the conduct of foreign relations during the 2 years immediately ahead.

This Under Secretary for 2 years will principally have charge of these different departments and agencies which I have mentioned. It is absolutely necessary at this time to have this legislation.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I yield.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Who in the State Department has been performing these services heretofore?

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Will Clayton is now. But he cannot do it any more. His health will not allow it. He cannot do that and do all the other work he has to do.

Mr. McDONOUGH. In other words, it is necessary to pass this bill in order to create the position?

Mr. BLOOM. Yes.

Mr. McDONOUGH. He could not assign those duties to one of his subordinates?

Mr. BLOOM. No. You have to have another Under Secretary of State to take care of this. May I say to the gentleman in dealing with these different countries you have to have someone of a certain rank who has some standing. He will give up his position as Assistant Secretary of State and there will be appointed another Assistant Secretary to take over some of the work he is doing now.

Mr. McDONOUGH. These duties have not been neglected in the past because an Under Secretary has not been appointed?

Mr. BLOOM. No; I do not think Mr. Clayton would neglect anything.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Will the service of the State Department be augmented if position is created?

Mr. BLOOM. Yes.

Mr. McDONOUGH. The service will be increased?

Mr. BLOOM. Exactly.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I yield.

Mr. TABER. Is there anything in this bill which provides for the position to be eliminated after 2 years if the work is over?

Mr. BLOOM. Yes; it is limited to 2 years. It specifically states that.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I have absolutely no objection to this bill. In fact, I think it is necessary. I do feel very strongly that the House is entitled to know something about it. The creation of this position is important, especially when he happens to be in foreign countries to handle various matters at conferences. He is working with persons of high rank in other countries. They will have a lot more respect for him if he is an Under Secretary. There are certain duties he can perform as Under Secretary when Mr. Acheson is in Washington. He will be Under Secretary in his own right when Mr. Acheson is away. I think it is very important to have this position created. I think we need an Under Secretary to do the work he is now doing. I can see no objection to it and I approve heartily of the measure. It is important to have an Under Secretary when both Mr. Byrnes and Mr. Acheson are away to act as Secretary of State.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. JENKINS. How many Under Secretaries of State do we have now?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. There is one Under Secretary of State and six Assistant Secretaries of State.

Mr. JENKINS. This bill provides for the appointment of one more Under Secretary of State?

Mr. BLOOM. That is correct.

Mr. JENKINS. But we say that one individual shall perform such duties as may be prescribed for him by the Secretary of State. I assume that the Assistant Secretaries of State already appointed have regular duties and are assigned to regular departments.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Yes. That is correct.

Mr. JENKINS. The Under Secretary of State is Mr. Acheson?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. JENKINS. And Mr. Will Clayton is Assistant Secretary of State?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. He is now an Assistant Secretary of State. He will be an Under Secretary of State under this bill. Another man will hold his position of Assistant Secretary.

Mr. JENKINS. Then when we pass this bill we will have two Under Secretaries?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Yes; that is correct. Mr. Clayton will be appointed an Under Secretary of State.

Mr. JENKINS. I think we have scrambled this egg worse than ever. It is a new departure and sounds a little fantastic, but I think it will work.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. When Mr. Clayton goes abroad and works with people with titles, I think he is entitled to have a good title himself, because foreigners respect position. He can fight for our interests better if he has rank. I also think he needs an assistant secretary to do some of the work he is now doing. He is greatly overworked.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. McDONOUGH. This bill provides for this position for 2 years.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. That is correct.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Is not a position of Under Secretary for Foreign and Economic Affairs of enough importance to last for more than 2 years?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Some members of the Foreign Affairs Committee thought so also, but we can easily legislate after 2 years, to make it permanent if it is satisfactory. I think it is better to have it for 2 years now.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. DWORSHAK].

Mr. DWORSHAK. Mr. Speaker, the House, under suspension of the rules, just passed the resolution reorganizing the Foreign Service. I sought to get some time to ask a question as to whether this authorization would permit the expansion of personnel in the Foreign Service. These are only authorization bills, but they will all later be reflected in the appropriation measures which will come before this Congress or the succeeding Congress.

I checked up some figures, and I find there was an increase of 2,000 in the personnel in the State Department from prewar years up to the present time. The President of the United States declares we are going to balance the budget in the current fiscal year; that we are going to cut down civilian personnel from 2,400,000 to 1,600,000—and yet virtually every piece of legislation coming before this body gives specific authority to the Appropriations Committee, at the request of the Bureau of the Budget, to bring in additional appropriations. So with one hand we are legislating authority to build a more extensive personnel and to increase appropriation bills, while with the other hand we are attempting to cooperate with the Chief Executive, who is telling the taxpayers of this Nation that we are going to balance the budget in the current fiscal year. I ask you, my colleagues, how that is going to be accomplished. We seek an alibi by saying that these are merely authorization bills, and yet we have to implement every piece of legislation with an appropriation bill. I wonder how we can consistently claim we are traveling in two opposite directions, and that we are going to get greater efficiency and economy in the Federal Government while we continue to approve expansion of bureaus and their activities.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I would answer the gentleman by saying that it was brought out by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. STEFAN] when he stated that the money was appropriated previously for the information bill that we just passed. That was an instance of an authorization for an appropriation in a legislative bill. The Appropriations Committee is constantly doing that. I think the gentleman is a very poor one to criticize us for bringing out an authorization, when a great many authorizations have gone through on appropriation bills.

Mr. DWORSHAK. On several occasions, as a member of the Appropriations Committee, I have made points of order against the inclusion of legislative authority in our appropriation bills, because I think that responsibility devolves upon the legislative committees of the House.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I withdraw my remarks about the gentleman, but I can use them relative to the Appropriations Committee.

The SPEAKER. All time has expired.

The question is, Will the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H. R. 6646, with amendments?

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended, and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

House Resolution 660 was laid on the table.

CANCER CONTROL

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 4502) to authorize and request the President to undertake to mobilize at some convenient place in the United States an adequate number of the world's outstanding experts, and coordinate and utilize their services in a supreme endeavor to discover means of curing and preventing cancer.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. BLOOM. Will not the gentleman withhold his objection in order that the author of the bill, the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] may make a short statement about it?

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BULWINKLE. I yield.

Mr. NEELY. How much time does the gentleman yield?

Mr. BULWINKLE. For a short statement.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. Speaker, 17,000,000 people now living in the United States have been branded for death by cancer, the most irresistible, loathsome and agonizing monster that has ever stalked this earth.

The celebrated Charles Dickens, in his thrilling romance "A Tale of Two Cities," says of what, in the days of the author, was the most efficacious mechanical destroyer of human life that brutal and bloodthirsty man had ever invented:

> All the insatiate and devouring monsters imagined since imagination could record itself are fused in the realization—guillotine.

Yet through all the years that have passed away the victims of the guillotine have numbered but a few hundred thousands of the people of France and her neighboring nations. The monster, cancer, is more insatiate than the guillotine. It has been more destructive to life and health and happiness than all the wars that have ever been waged; it has been more irresistible than the mightiest armies that have ever marched to battle; it has invaded and still invades every country; it has preyed and still preys upon every nation; it has fed and feasted and fattened and still feeds and feasts and fattens on the flesh and blood and brains and bones of men and women and children in every land. The shrieks that it has extorted from perishing humanity would, if they were tangible things, make another Rocky Mountain range. The tears that it has wrung from tortured women's eyes would make another ocean. The blood that it has shed would redden every wave that rolls on every sea.

Medical science has conquered yellow fever, diphtheria, typhoid, smallpox, and many other dire afflictions. Medical science has even robbed leprosy and tuberculosis of their terror. But notwithstanding all that physicians, surgeons, chemists, biologists, and numberless other scientists have amazingly accomplished, cancer is still the unconquered, unconquerable and defiant foe of the human race. Surgery, radium, and X-ray are the only means of combating this frightful destroyer that are generally approved by the medical profession. Every passing year adds to the alarming demonstrations that cancer cannot be eradicated by these or any other means now known, and that it is impossible, with existing facilities and methods, even to check the progressive increase of cancer's appalling destruction.

A recent authority says that in England and Wales the death rate from this dire affliction has increased more than 990 percent in 97 years. Hoffman, one of the great American authorities on mortality from cancer, says in his comprehensive work, which was published a quarter of a century ago, that the death rate from cancer has doubled in the United States in the short space of 40 years.

In May 1928, I passed through the Senate the first bill for the exclusive purpose of authorizing the Government to help solve the cancer problem that was ever approved by either House of Congress. In that year cancer killed 100,558 of our people who were 40 years of age or older.

In 1943, the last year for which I have been able to obtain relevant accurate data, cancer killed, of the people of this country who had passed their fortieth birthday, 156,505—which means an increase of more than 55 percent in fifteen years. In the United States in 1944 cancer sent 171,171 of its victims to the dissolution of the grave. Every 5 minutes and 30 seconds of the year 1928 cancer killed one of our people. Last year every time the clock "ticked off" 3 minutes cancer sent one of this Nation's fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, husbands, wives or children in unspeakable agony from the alluring land of the living into the silent land of the dead.

It is a distressing fact that the more deadly types of cancer, in their later stages, inflict upon their wretched victims torture more excruciating than any other known to man. And, without fatal consequences, it is impossible to administer anesthetics to these pitiful sufferers in sufficient quantities to render them oblivicus of their agony.

At the moment there are approximately a hundred Members of the House on the floor. If the general death rate should prevail at the expense of the membership of this body, 12 of those before me and around me are doomed to extermination by this frightful scourge, which if it continues to increase in the future as it has in the past, will eventually depopulate the world.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Is the gentleman about through?

Mr. NEELY. Mr. Speaker, I have just begun. But since it was possible for me to obtain the floor in existing parliamentary circumstances only through the courtesy of the gentleman from North Carolina, I shall drastically curtail what I should like to say.

For fear that someone may join the gentleman to whom I am beholding for my time in opposing the pending bill on the ground that the $100,000,000 which it authorizes to be expended for the exterminating and preventing of cancer is excessive, let me invite attention to the fact that Dr. Luis I. Dublin, noted statistician for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., pointed out 19 years ago that the total loss sustained by the American people from cancer in 1927 was $800,000,000.

According to Dr. Dublin, the cost of the average necessary medicine and care alone for each patient who dies of this abomination is at least a thousand dollars. Upon this basis, cancer, in 1944, cost the people of the United States for care and medicine more than $171,000,000. When this sum is added to that of the estimated economic value of those who were destroyed, it appears that, year before last, cancer, the absolute monarch of brutal killers and insatiate despoilers, inflicted upon the people of this Nation the staggering financial loss of more than $1,229,000,000.

The average legislator who votes for this bill will, of course, do so for purely humanitarian reasons. But if anyone present should be inclined to listen to the siren voice of economy in this important matter, please let him remember that the hundred million dollars mentioned in the bill will, if appropriated, greatly increase the probabilities of solving the cancer problem and of thereby saving hundreds of millions of dollars to the people of the United States every year until the end of time.

I have been informed that the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BULWINKLE] objects to the suspension of the rules and the passage of the bill, on the ground that it should have been referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce instead of to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. BULWINKLE. That inference is wrong.

Mr. NEELY. If the gentleman says it is wrong, his word on that point is sufficient so far as I am concerned. But I nevertheless venture most respectfully and earnestly to entreat him not to assume the responsibility of preventing the passage of this humanitarian measure.

Of course, no one can guarantee that the expenditure of $100,000,000 or any other particular sum will certainly result in the discovery or invention of a cure or preventive of cancer. But everyone should realize that, since all known methods of attack on this scourge have utterly failed to check its terrifying, deadly advance, some new means as revolutionary as the atomic bomb itself must be devised to destroy this all-devouring foe, or that it will ultimately strip the earth of the last vestige of human life.

In order that this Congress may not adjourn without having made some specific and substantial contribution to the present vigorous, Nation-wide effort to save the 500,000 who are now known to be afflicted with cancer and rescue those who are perishing in unspeakable anguish at the rate of twenty every hour, I entreat the gentleman from North Carolina not to oppose the bill which has the enthusiastic support of the American Cancer Society, the sponsors of Government action against cancer, prominent men and women of every religious denomination, spokesmen for the various veterans' organizations, eminent officials of all legitimate labor unions, spokesmen for various agricultural organizations and other important groups too numerous to mention. And last, but by no means least, according to a recent Gallup poll 87 percent of the people of the Nation are for the bill.

It is my fervent hope that the decisive action that will be taken here in a few moments will be such that no Member of this body will in days to come have reason to feel or fear that he has even one drop of a cancer victim's blood upon his hands, or the sin of having failed to help rescue the perishing of the world from cancer's hideous curse upon his soul. I entreat the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BULWINKLE], not to object.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from North Carolina yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. BULWINKLE. I yield.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. HINSHAW. Is the gentleman from West Virginia going to talk much longer on this subject?

Mr. BULWINKLE. No.

Mr. HINSHAW. Because if he is we are going to be compelled to demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina has the floor under a reservation of objection and he can yield whatever time he desires.

Mr. NEELY. Will the gentleman yield me 5 minutes?

Mr. BULWINKLE. I decline to yield further time, Mr. Speaker.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BULWINKLE. I yield to the gentlewoman from Massachusetts.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I wonder if the gentleman objects because it will take work away from the Public Health Service? I myself was against this bill originally but I am tremendously interested in cancer control, as the gentleman from North Carolina knows.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I yielded to the gentlewoman for a question.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Does the gentleman feel like answering the question?

Mr. BULWINKLE. What question?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I asked the gentleman the reason he is objecting.

Mr. BULWINKLE. The gentleman from North Carolina is not stating his objections at this time.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BULWINKLE. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HINSHAW. I think if the gentlewoman from Massachusetts and the Committee on Foreign Affairs would refer to title IV of the Public Health Act of the Seventy-eighth Congress, Public Law 410, which sets up a National Cancer Institute, they will find it makes full provision for all these researches.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I decline to yield further.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 4502) to authorize and request the President to undertake to mobilize at some convenient place in the United States an adequate number of the world's outstanding experts, and to coordinate and utilize their services in a supreme endeavor to discover means of curing and preventing cancer.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my motion.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the point of order.

MEMBERSHIP AND PARTICIPATION BY THE UNITED STATES IN UNITED NATIONS EDUCATIONAL, SCIENTIFIC, AND CULTURAL ORGANIZATION

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk House Joint Resolution 305, a joint resolution providing for membership and participation by the United States in the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization, and authorizing an appropriation therefor, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. BLOOM, KEE, and MERROW.

SITE ACQUISITION AND DESIGN OF FEDERAL BUILDINGS

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 6917) to provide for site acquisition and design of Federal buildings, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman give us a thorough explanation of this bill? It is quite a big one.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, judging from the inquiries that have been made of me, perhaps more Members of this body are interested in this particular measure than any other which has come to my notice. It is well known to all of you that there has been no Federal construction, except that relating to our war effort, since before the war began. Federal construction of many kinds is needed, such as post offices and other structures, to carry on the work of the Government.

It is realized that at this time such construction may not be had because it is precluded by the scarcity of materials, by the high cost of labor, and by the desire to use all available material in the construction of homes. However, before any of this Federal construction can begin, it is necessary to have the preliminary work done by drawing the plans and specifications and selecting, insofar as it is practicable and economical to do so, sites for such construction to the extent that they have not been selected.

This measure comes from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds with a unanimous report. It was assigned to the calendar for consideration this week, and the Committee on Rules has granted a rule for its consideration. The bill does not provide for the construction of these various buildings, but it does provide for the preliminary preparation of the plans and specifications and the acquisition of necessary sites so that when construction can be begun it can go forward forthwith.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANHAM. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. PACE. Does it cover new post office buildings?

Mr. LANHAM. New post office buildings, which will be distributed to the extent possible in the district of each Member of this body.

Mr. PACE. What other type of building construction is covered?

Mr. LANHAM. It is somewhat conjectural, of course, to just what extent further Federal construction will be required. There will be some Federal office buildings necessary in some places where their construction will practically be paid for in a few years by obviating the present high rental costs. For instance, there are buildings in the District of Columbia on which the total rentals we have paid are considerably more than the appraised value of the buildings themselves. It is the economical thing for the Federal Government to have its own construction and obviate these enormous sums of rent.

In addition to that, the bill provides for certain procedural matters which I think are not controversial, and one or two of the items are such items of procedure as are carried annually in appropriation bills, and here we simply make them a matter of law.

Let me, before proceeding further, say that the other feature of the bill, with reference to title II, is to take care of an intolerable situation in this city with reference to our United States district court and the court of appeals, merely from the standpoint of getting the plans ready. The land is owned by the Government, and it will be perhaps a year and a half before any of this construction will begin. But it is important to be ready to proceed with it when the economic conditions in the country are such that it can be done.

With reference to title II and the necessity for this court building, I may say that we have had what in a lawyer's term would be a jury view of the situation that exists, and it is absolutely intolerable. The committee inspected that situation very thoroughly.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANHAM. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. JENKINS. I see that the bill is divided into two titles and that specific improvements are mentioned. For instance, the gentleman referred to the construction of customhouse buildings, courthouse buildings, and other buildings. I do not find any place here where special reference is made to post-office buildings. Where is that?

Mr. LANHAM. I will say to the gentleman that there is no special reference to post-office buildings because under existing law particular projects are not mentioned except those in the District of Columbia and vicinity, which are carrying on the operations here in Washington. But the first section of the bill provides the funds for preparing the drawings and the plans and the specifications and the acquisition of sites for these post-office buildings and other needed Federal structures out in the country generally. That is the primary and principal appropriation authorized by this measure.

Mr. JENKINS. Does this bill give anybody authority to state which post-office buildings will be constructed, or has there been any previous legislation with reference to that? Has any authority been given so that any Congressman can say, "I feel sure from this legislation a certain number of post-office buildings will be constructed in my district"?

Mr. LANHAM. Let me say in that regard, and I am glad to say this, that I do not believe there is a more able or a more fair public servant operating with the Government than Mr. W. E. Reynolds, the Commissioner of the Public Buildings Administration, who even when before our committee will make statements to his own disadvantage from the standpoint of his operations if it is truthful to make those statements. Naturally each and every Member of the Congress can confer with him, and I can assure you that you will get fair treatment that will meet with your approval.

Mr. JENKINS. I agree with everything the gentleman says about Mr. Reynolds, but at the same time I am sure that no law has been passed giving Mr. Reynolds the power to designate where a post office will be built.

Mr. LANHAM. It is done with the collaboration of the Post Office Department and Mr. Reynolds under the existing law.

Mr. JENKINS. I take it then that they must have certain criteria, such as population, postal receipts, and so forth, that will not only guide them but compel them to make their decisions according to their formula.

Mr. LANHAM. They will naturally take the cases that are most urgent in the judgment of the Members of the Congress, and furthermore they will try to construct these buildings at a time when employment may be slack in the respective districts, and it would thus be doubly advantageous to have these buildings constructed.

Mr. McGREGOR. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, there is nothing in this bill that would guarantee the construction of post offices, as I understand. If there is, I certainly am opposed to it.

Mr. LANHAM. There is nothing in the bill that permits the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to specify these places.

Mr. McGREGOR. Is not this simply a bill to give authorization in the District of Columbia and without the District of Columbia to prepare plans and specifications and acquire sites for such construction, not post offices? If post offices are in it, I am bitterly opposed to it, because I am one who believes we should build veterans' houses first and let the post offices come last.

Mr. LANHAM. The provision in the first section is for needed Federal construction outside of the District of Columbia. We do not specify those places, and under existing law we have no authority to specify them. And this construction will not be done at a time or in a way to interfere with housing for veterans.

Mr. HOLMES of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I think this confusion in connection with title I has created the impression that we are authorizing the construction of post offices. That is not true. We are providing here authorization for an appropriation to acquire sites and to prepare plans for future authorizations. It will probably be a year and a half or 2 years before any of this construction will take place.

Mr. PRICE of Illinois. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, the explanation the gentleman has just made is along the line of what I wanted to take up with the gentleman from Texas. I believe it would be helpful to the House if he would point out that this would in no way conflict with any veterans' housing program. It is a future program.

Mr. LANHAM. Not only that, but may I say to the gentleman further that we have held this in abeyance in order that there may be no interruption of housing for the people of this country and for the veterans and the servicemen and their families in particular.

We had before our committee and held 3 weeks of hearings on the bill H. R. 4276, a general Federal buildings bill, that would have authorized very large appropriations for construction. We are not recommending those appropriations here. We are simply trying to provide for the preliminary work to be done in order that when it is feasible and practical and economical to construct these buildings these plans will be ready.

Mr. PRICE of Illinois. I understand that very thoroughly, but I wanted the gentleman to bring it out in his remarks for the information of the House and the public in general.

Mr. LANHAM. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. TABER. As I understand it, this bill authorizes an appropriation for about $30,000,000 to buy land and do other things and lay out a building program?

Mr. LANHAM. That is correct.

Mr. TABER. That is, with the idea that the work will begin 2 years from now. How will we know now what land we ought to buy to build on 2 years from now? That sounds to me as if we were getting ourselves out on a limb. We might buy a lot of sites that would not be desirable. Is that not correct?

Mr. LANHAM. As a matter of fact, it may not be 2 years. It may not be a year and a half. One thing is certain, that this preliminary work must be done before this construction can be carried on. There will be this very practical man in charge, who has been so efficient in his administration of the laws we have passed with reference to Federal building, and no foolhardy mistakes will be made. He is a very sensible, experienced, and forward-looking man in the matter of determining what should be done. He is always endeavoring to be thoroughly practical and save the Government as much money as possible. I have great confidence in him, and so has our committee—to such an extent that after due consideration the committee without a dissenting voice reported this bill.

Mr. MUNDT. There seems to be a lot of confusion still about the impact of this legislation on the future post-office building program in our various districts. Can you in a few words dedicated to that particular part of the legislation clarify that for the Members of the House?

Mr. LANHAM. If I understand the gentleman correctly, he asks if a part of the funds authorized here will be used for the construction of post offices?

Mr. MUNDT. For the purchase of land and the making of plans for post offices.

Mr. LANHAM. That is correct. Part of the funds will be so used.

Mr. MUNDT. How will it be determined as to which particular communities are going to have land purchased in their communities and plans made for potential buildings?

Mr. LANHAM. That will be determined, of course, with reference to the urgencies of the cases, the need of employment, and after conference with each individual Member of Congress who ought to be familiar with the situation in his district.

Mr. RANDOLPH. The approval of this legislation would in no wise change the condition or considerations which have been active in the past in connection with this type of program. Is that not correct?

Mr. LANHAM. To be sure. This is merely a program. We are not asking the appropriation here for construction. We are simply trying to get ready so that when the housing situation is better settled and when materials are more available and contractors may be had at reasonable prices to carry on the work, we will be ready to go forward, because when that time comes, unless we have some such legislation as this, we are still going to have to wait and wait and wait until this necessary Federal planning can be completed.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM]?

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 6917) to provide for site, acquisition, and design of Federal buildings, and for other purposes, as reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, with the amendments as set forth in the bill.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from New York withhold his point of no quorum?

Mr. BUCK. Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The Chair suggests to the gentleman from Texas that since the House has other business to consider this afternoon it might be best to withdraw his motion.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, in spite of the fact that this bill was on the calendar for consideration this week and that there is a rule on the bill for its consideration, certainly at the request of the Speaker I will withdraw the motion at this time. I was simply trying to conserve the time of the House so that next week the calendar might not be so crowded.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the point of order of no quorum.

REORGANIZATION PLAN NO. 1

Mr. MANASCO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House Joint Resolution 382, providing for the taking effect of Reorganization Plan No. 1 of 1946, except certain parts thereof.

The Clerk read the title of the House joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, I take this time to ask the chairman of the committee to explain this resolution.

Mr. MANASCO. Mr. Speaker, this resolution puts all of Reorganization Plan Numbered 1 of the President, transmitted to Congress on May 16, into effect, except part V dealing with the National Housing Agency. There was no objection in our committee to any of the rest of the plan. I have discussed the matter with all members of the committee and there is no objection to the consideration.

Mr. JUDD. In effect, this amounts to our initiating steps to carry out those parts of Reorganization Plan Numbered 1, except part V?

Mr. MANASCO. That is correct. The Congress itself does the reorganizing here. It must pass both Houses and be passed by the President.

Mr. JUDD. I hope the House accepts this. We have removed the objectionable part. Surely we should support efforts initiated by ourselves to carry out reorganization.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JUDD. I yield.

Mr. CHURCH. If this bill is passed, then the President's three plans are adopted, except Plan Numbered 1, and it does not include part V?

Mr. MANASCO. That is right.

Mr. CHURCH. I hope the resolution will be passed.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JUDD. I yield.

Mr. HENRY. I hope this resolution is passed, because I spoke for the reorganization bill which we considered some months ago. I was objecting to that portion that was voted down, and since that is the only portion to which there was objection on our committee I certainly hope that this measure does pass.

Mr. JUDD. Is it not also true that our passing this resolution today does not put this plan into effect, but we are merely starting the legislative procedure which must be carried through by the Senate and then the bill signed by the President?

Mr. MANASCO. That is correct.

Mr. JUDD. We are beginning with the Congress?

Mr. MANASCO. That is right. The committee objected to that part of the resolution dealing with the National Housing Agency. That does not appear here and cannot appear here.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do not think this should be brought up at this time. Perhaps I would not object to it on Monday but a this time I shall have to object.

Mr. MANASCO. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the request.

LEWISTON ORCHARDS PROJECT, IDAHO

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 2372) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to construct the Lewiston Orchards project, Idaho, in accordance with the Federal reclamation laws.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understand this is that little Idaho project where we are building water mains out of the reclamation fund.

Mr. MURDOCK. That is correct. It is the Lewiston Orchards project in Idaho.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. It is supposed to be able to earn its way?

Mr. MURDOCK. It is. Like other reclamation projects by the Government, it is reimbursable. It has been passed unanimously by the House committee as well as the Senate committee, and it has been cleared by the leadership on both sides. It is a worthy measure.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I think the legislation is very good, and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purposes of irrigating lands and for purposes incidental thereto, there is hereby authorized to be constructed, operated, and maintained the Lewiston Orchards project, Idaho, substantially in accordance with the recommendations of the regional director of the Bureau of Reclamation, region numbered I, in his report dated December 3, 1945, as concurred in by the Commissioner of Reclamation and the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That, notwithstanding any recommendations to the contrary contained in said report, all costs of said project allocated to irrigation and all costs of said project allocated to municipal water supply shall be reimbursable under the Federal reclamation laws but within repayment periods to be fixed by the Secretary of the Interior and not to exceed 50 years.

SEC. 2. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be required for the purposes of this act.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF TIME FOR FILING PATENTS

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 5223) to extend temporarily the time for filing applications for patents, for taking action in the United States Patent Office with respect thereto, for preventing proof of acts abroad with respect to the making of an invention, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. BOYKIN, LANHAM, and HARTLEY.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Mr. Speaker, I had two bills I desired to ask consent to consider, but the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. HOPE], ranking minority member of the committee is not present, and I shall not submit the requests.

PROGRAM FOR WEEK OF JULY 22

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I take this time to find out from the distinguished majority leader as to the program for Monday. I realize that perhaps he cannot give the program for the week because of changing conditions.

Mr. McCORMACK. Monday is District Day and there are five bills:

S. 223, the hospital center;

S. 1426, the slum clearance bill;

S. 2142, relating to headquarters, I think, for the Department of Military Science and Tactics;

S. 2352, the school-teacher salary increase bill; and

H. R. 5756, the retirement of public-school teachers.

The Reed bill, as it is generally known, the railroad reorganization bill, will be called up on Monday.

Tuesday we will take up the OPA conference report if one has been agreed to.

I cannot give the program for the whole week with any certainty and will have to ask the indulgence of the House for some degree of flexibility because we are doing everything we can to try and get away from here as soon as we can.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. The OPA bill will have right-of-way on Tuesday?

Mr. McCORMACK. Yes. In connection with the railroad reorganization bill and District Day, any roll call in connection with any of the District bills on Monday will, of course, be had; and if a roll call should develop on the rule providing for consideration of the railroad bill that, of course, will be had. If the bill reaches the point of final passage and a roll call should be demanded on final passage either on the ground that a quorum was not present or on an ordering of the yeas and nays, that particular vote will come on Tuesday.

If the railroad reorganization bill is not disposed of on Monday, it will, of course, be the continuing order of business on Tuesday.

The social security bill from the Ways and Means Committee may be called up on Tuesday.

Wednesday of next week I have put down for Calendar Wednesday.

Thursday: I shall ask that it be in order to call the Consent Calendar and Private Calendar on Thursday. Then there is the La Follette-Monroney bill, the legislative reorganization bill. I understand a rule was reported out on that bill today allowing for 2 hours of general debate. We will bring that up next week.

The RFC: A bill extending the life of the RFC and probably giving it some additional borrowing power, but in any event relating to the RFC, will come up next week.

Then a bill authorizing three Assistant Secretaries of Commerce will probably be called up. I do not know what day I can assign to that bill.

There are a number of other bills, but I can definitely give Monday as District Day and the Reed bill; Tuesday the OPA conference report.

I can definitely state that unless action is taken by the House otherwise, Wednesday of next week will be Calendar Wednesday.

Thursday will be the Consent Calendar and the Private Calendar.

We will meet at 12 o'clock on Monday and I may ask the indulgence of the House to meet at 10 o'clock the rest of the week, but in connection with that, as usual, I will confer with the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN].

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentlewoman from Massachusetts.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman if we can keep Congress in session some days longer so that the amputee bill might be reported. I deplore that it is necessary to place a petition on the Speaker's desk to bring this bill out. Of course, I realize it is late in the session. There are 164 signatures on the petition and 180 have been promised. Various members of the press and representatives of different periodicals have asked me why it is necessary to have a petition in connection with such a worthy cause. This is a matter of rehabilitation, and it is tragic to me that these amputees have to come to the House and the Senate. They appeared before the Senate Finance Committee today because the House has not passed legislation.

Would the gentleman consider remaining in session some days longer if that bill does not come out of the committee?

Mr. McCORMACK. I am very strongly in favor of the bill, and I hope the committee will report it out. If so, I will bring it up as soon as possible. Of course, so far as adjournment of the House is concerned, that rests with the majority of the Members of the House. I am sure that the good lady can make a very effective argument with the membership of the House on that proposition.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. It is a question of the amputees. I have argued and argued for the bill. I wish I had the power to get it through. I would give anything if I had. If the Members are not moved by the necessity of rehabilitating the combat injured, nothing will move them. Those who have signed the petition have proved they are the friends of the amputees. They proved that.

The plight of the amputees should be enough for the Congress. We have given $4,000,000,000 to Great Britain and billions to other countries and now it is time to consider our own.

Mr. McCORMACK. I may say also that on some day next week, after conference with the Speaker and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN] I shall ask unanimous consent that it be in order for the Speaker to recognize Members under suspension of the rules. We will be able to take care of a number of bills in that way that are not controversial.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Perhaps we could bring up the amputee bill under suspension.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will not be committed on what bills Members will be recognized on at this time.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. PACE. The gentleman has announced that two reorganization bills will come up for consideration next week, one for the railroads and one for the Congress. He has given the railroad bill the right-of-way on Monday. It would appear to me that from the standpoint of the Nation as a whole the bill involving reorganization of the Congress would be the more important of the two. I wonder if it would not be possible to take up the bill having to do with reorganization of the Congress on Monday and let the Reed bill take its chance in the shuffle rather than the reorganization of the Congress bill.

Mr. McCORMACK. The Reed bill has been on the program for some time and I feel obligated to keep the Reed bill in its place. Furthermore, a rule has been reported out longer than seven legislative days and any member of the Rules Committee as a matter of high privilege can call the bill up any time they want to. There is at least one member of the Rules Committee who is very deeply interested in having the bill called up. He has been very considerate and tolerant. So I am constrained to keep the Reed bill in its present position.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota?

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, in considering the calendar for the rest of the week the gentleman said that Tuesday was still in a definitely fluid state. I hope the gentleman will keep in mind H. R. 6024, which was scheduled for action today, but due to the pressure of other activities and the long time it took to dispose of the atom energy bill, it was impossible to take up, and refer to the stream pollution bill.

Mr. McCORMACK. I have it in mind, but if we are ever going to adjourn we will have to make haste.

Mr. MUNDT. I think we can act on that pretty quickly.

Mr. McCORMACK. It came up on Calendar Wednesday and there was a double filibuster.

Mr. MUNDT. During the filibuster we got rid of 2 hours of general debate.

Mr. McCORMACK. No. We would have to start all over again. As I understand it, we would have to start all over again as if it were a new matter.

CONSENT CALENDAR AND PRIVATE CALENDAR TO BE CALLED THURSDAY, JULY 25

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it may be in order on Thursday of next week to call the Consent Calendar and the Private Calendar.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

LOYALTY OF FEDERAL WORKERS AND EMPLOYMENT PROCEDURES OF GOVERNMENT AGENCIES

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, on July 2 your House Committee on the Civil Service approved a study and investigation of loyalty among Federal workers and employment practices within Government agencies. I appointed, as chairman, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. COMBS], the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. FALLON], and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. REES] to check and report to our committee before the recess. Persons not loyal to the United States Government should not be employed by it, and those now on the Federal pay roll should be removed. We have received a report from that committee, as well as a supplemental report.

Mr. Speaker, believing that this is an important matter for the Members of the House to study, I ask unanimous consent to file in the RECORD at this point those two reports submitted.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANDOLPH. The reports are as follows:

Mr. COMBS, chairman of the subcommittee of the Civil Service Committee, submitted the following report:

The Civil Service Committee was authorized by H. R. 66, January 8, 1945, to, among other things, conduct thorough studies and investigations of the policies and practices relating to civilian employment in the departments and agencies of the Government, including Government-owned corporations.

Pursuant to this authority, the Committee on Civil Service, authorized the creation of a subcommittee "to make such investigation as it may deem proper with respect to employee loyalty and employment policies and practices in the Government of the United States, and to make a report to this committee of its investigation prior to the recess or adjournment, together with such recommendations as it deems advisable."

Pursuant to that authority the chairman appointed a subcommittee of three, consisting of J. M. COMBS as chairman, Mr. GEORGE H. FALLON, and Mr. EDWARD R. REES. The subcommittee limited the scope of the investigation to an inquiry into the practices, procedures, and standards that have been and are now employed by the various departments in screening and investigating the loyalty of employees of the Government. These hearings were concluded July 16, 1946. It heard witnesses from the Civil Service Commission, War Assets Administration, and the State Department, and took statements from certain other departments and agencies concerning the matters under inquiry. It is upon this that the report is based.

The length of the committee's hearing prevented it from making a thorough and exhaustive inquiry into the problems presented by hearing and investigation. The hearing and investigation was, however, of sufficient duration to permit the committee to realize the seriousness and magnitude of the problem and the many facets thereof that require further study and attention. For this reason this report will not attempt an exhaustive analysis of all techniques, standards, and procedures employed by the various agencies of the executive branch of the Government but will only attempt a brief historical statement of the problem and pose certain questions for further study and investigation.

Prior to 1939 the various agencies and departments of the Government did not make inquiry into the question of loyalty. The scope of these investigations was limited to questions of character and general suitability. It was felt, for example, that the Civil Service Commission could not legally inquire into any question concerning the political opinions of any applicant for employment. In 1939 the Congress passed the original Hatch Act which made it unlawful for any person employed in any capacity by any agency of the Federal Government to have membership in any political party or organization which advocates the overthrow of our constitutional form of government.

Beginning with the fiscal year 1942, Congress added to all appropriation bills a provision providing that no part of any appropriation shall be used to pay the salary or wages of any person who advocates or who is a member of an organization that advocates the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence. Following the passage of these acts, the Civil Service Commission began loyalty investigations and found no difficulty in holding persons that actively associated with groups or organizations whose primary loyalty was to the Nazi, Fascist, or Japanese Government or who were members of the Communist Party were persons who came within these prohibitions. The power of the Civil Service Commission applied only to applicants for a position or person appointed subject to investigation. It did not include those employees whose initial employment to the Federal services may have been approved, in some instances years ago, and concerning whom some question is now raised as to their loyalty to the Government. The reason for adopting this point of view was that after an employee's qualifications for initial employment were cleared it is a recognized and accepted principle of law that the head of a department or agency is the only person who can effectuate removal. (See Myers v. U. S. (272 U. S. 52, 30, Op. Atty. Gen. 79, 83).)

To fill this gap the Attorney General in October 1941 directed the Federal Bureau of Investigation to investigate complaints which had been made against several thousand permanent employees. The Federal Bureau of Investigation conducted the necessary investigations and reported to the agency in which the employee was working. The reports of the Federal Bureau of Investigation contained no recommendation. Some of the departments to which these reports were sent indicated a desire to receive from a central source some advice in the handling of these reports. In response to this need the Attorney General set up in April 1942, an interdepartmental committee on investigations.

This committee distributed information to the departments and agencies regarding the procedures followed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the nature and purpose of its reports and the necessity for establishing sound procedures within the departments and agencies for reaching decisions relative to employees on whom reports were submitted.

On February 5, 1943, the Interdepartmental Committee was replaced by a new Interdepartmental Committee "to consider cases of subversive action on the part of employees" which was set up by President Roosevelt under Executive Order 9300.

This Executive order is still in effect and still provides the legal basis for handling complaints relative to the loyalty of employees now on Federal pay rolls who are no longer subject to the jurisdiction of the Civil Service Commission.

It should be borne in mind that prior to 1939 the executive branch of the Government as a whole was not familiar with nor had any occasion to promulgate standards for testing the loyalty of applicants or employees to their Government. It is now clearly understood that persons who advocate or who belong to organizations advocating the overthrow of our Government work in many subtle ways. It has been extremely difficult to prepare standards that would protect both the Government and the employee. Very few individuals openly advocate the overthrow of our Government by force or violence or belong to organizations that so advocate. If membership exists, it is extremely difficult to prove. For this reason, the Civil Service Commission, for example, in regard to the Communist cause placed primary emphasis on an investigation in determining whether or not the appointee or applicant followed the Communist Party line through one or more of its recent changes from 1919 to and after June 22, 1941, the date of the attack on Russia by Germany.

In considering applicants and employees appointed subject to investigation, the Civil Service Commission used the following general procedure up to 1944:

1. When an individual is authorized for placement in one of the positions to which appointments are subject to investigation, the case is then assigned for investigation. The job of the investigators was to get information; they were not permitted to make recommendations.

2. If derogatory information bearing on loyalty was developed, the regional office having control of the case called in the appointee to permit him to present his side of the case. The case was then referred to a rating unit composed of persons who had no connection with the investigation. These persons studied the evidence and made recommendations which were eventually passed on by the members of the Civil Service Commission.

3. If the decision was to declare the appointee ineligible, the agency was directed to terminate his services.

4. An appeal was permitted to the Commission's Board of Appeals and Review.

5. Following the appeal, the Commissioners acted on the recommendation of the Board of Appeals.

In the spring of 1944 the Commission created a full-time Loyalty Rating Board and put into effect new procedures. The principal difference in the new procedure was that if derogatory information was developed bearing on loyalty, the Civil Service regional office immediately referred the case to the Loyalty Rating Board. The Loyalty Rating Board then analyzed the evidence and prepared a series of interrogatories addressed to the person under investigation which served to acquaint this person with the derogatory information and to permit him, by replying to the questions in writing, and under oath, to present his side of the case to the Commission. The person being investigated was also permitted to appear before the Loyalty Rating Board if he so desired. The Loyalty Rating Board then made recommendations to the Commission.

The Commission has been subjected to certain criticism concerning the above procedure (see CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 90, pt. 3, p. 3196). However, the Commission feels, and the committee agrees, that it would not be administratively feasible to endeavor to apply standard judicial procedure to a consideration of loyalty cases. Unless it is possible to obtain information under a pledge that the source of information will not be divulged, the Government will not be given adequate protection.

In considering the standards applied by the Civil Service Commission and the standards applied by the Interdepartmental Committee in determining the question of a person's loyalty to his Government, several difficult problems were presented. The Interdepartmental Committee deals only with so-called permanent employees, i. e., those who have passed their provisional period and have been granted permanent tenure. For this reason the Interdepartmental Committee confines itself to enforcement of the statutory provisions of the applicable congressional acts dealing with this problem. The Interdepartmental Committee regards an employee as subject to removal only if it is established that the employee was (1) a member of an organization advocating the overthrow of the Government by force or violence, or (2) personally so advocates the overthrow of the Government by force or violence.

It is thus apparent that the Interdepartmental Committee is using a different and more technical standard than that employed by the Civil Service Commission. The Civil Service Commission, under its regulations, holds employees unqualified for Federal employment if there is "reasonable doubt as to his loyalty to the Government." The Interdepartmental Committee points out that the standard it uses is the one required by existing legislation. It is not authorized to go beyond that standard.

The Interdepartmental Committee is purely an advisory body and has no authority to enforce its findings on any department or agency. The final authority and final decision upon whether to retain an employee or release him is left by existing law to the employing agency (Myers v. United States, supra). Not all of the agencies have adopted the recommendations made by the committee as to the desirable procedures to be followed. Some agencies continue to regard a loyalty proceeding as a criminal trial and give to it all the protective principles and procedural requirements of the criminal law. Others go to the other extreme and decide cases on the basis of rumor and suspicion with little procedural safeguard for the person affected. There also appears to be a substantial duplication of effort under the existing law. Cases investigated and forwarded by the Interdepartmental Committee are often reinvestigated upon transfers or promotions and redecided by the Civil Service Commission and vice versa. This duplication of effort is apparently an unavoidable consequence of the present division of responsibility.

The foregoing is a brief analysis of the problem and the treatment thereof up to the present time.

Consideration should now be given to what the situation will be during the fiscal year 1947.

The Civil Service Commission appropriation for the fiscal year 1947 will make it possible to maintain only approximately 100 investigators. Many of these investigators will be busy in conducting postmaster investigations, investigations growing out of appeals filed by veterans under section 14 of the Veterans' Preference Act of 1944, and investigations growing out of alleged violations of civil-service rules.

The Civil Service Commission estimates that it will be possible to make only 1,400 character and suitability investigations during this fiscal year.

At the same time the Commission estimates that during the present fiscal year approximately 790,000 placements will be made in the Federal service.

Recognizing the impossibility of adequately protecting the Government from the infiltration of persons whose primary loyalty is to other governments, the Commission has been developing instructions to be issued to departments and agencies designed to utilize to the maximum the resources of such departments and agencies.

Under these proposed instructions, provision was made to have all departments and agencies submit fingerprints and names of appointees to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for the purpose of having the Bureau check the fingerprints against the Bureau fingerprint files and the names against the Bureau investigative index. Finally, provision was made for having the employee's name checked against the Civil Service Commission's own investigative files.

Under these proposed instructions, if the checks brought to light derogatory information, the department or agency concerned, if it had sufficient resources, could conduct its own investigations. At the outset the Federal Bureau of Investigation advised that such a name-check program would involve approximately 90,000 name checks per month. In view of the fact that the Bureau's budget for the fiscal year 1947 made necessary a reduction of 423 employees it was impossible for the Bureau to render name-check service to the Civil Service Commission and various other agencies. The Bureau further pointed out (and the Civil Service Commission concurred) that, as a result of the reduction in the appropriations for the Civil Service Commission, the requirement that each individual Government agency send fingerprints of persons whom they consider for employment was greatly defective because when responsibility is scattered through many Government agencies, complete compliance cannot be secured. It is further pointed out by both the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Civil Service Commission that while fingerprint and name checks afford some protection to the Government, the protection cannot be adequate since many individuals who are disloyal to the Government do not have criminal records and often operate under assumed names.

It is obvious to this committee that the only way to afford complete protection to our Government is to require all persons who apply for positions to be thoroughly investigated and fingerprinted in advance of employment. This, of course, during the war period was not possible. It is not now possible due to lack of personnel and funds.

On the basis of the preliminary study of the problems presented, the committee believes it is of vital importance to our country that those employed in all departments of Federal service be of high integrity and unquestioned loyalty to our Government. Employment in the Government of the United States is and should be regarded as a high privilege. It is likewise of the greatest importance to the employee that he shall not have suspicion cast upon him, or that he be unjustly accused in regard to so grave a matter as disloyalty to his country, and the greatest possible safeguard must be provided to avoid this.

Testimony submitted during the hearings is sufficient to indicate the immediate necessity for certain action and to warrant further study and inquiry into the entire problem. A consistent and uniform policy among the agencies of the Federal Government with respect to investigating and removing employees who are known to be disloyal should be placed into effect as soon as possible. Techniques and procedures must be devised that will not permit persons rejected by one agency on loyalty grounds from being accepted in another. The Civil Service Commission, within the limits of its funds and personnel, should speed up its procedures concerning post appointive investigation and action. The lack of funds, together with the tremendous work load placed on the Civil Service Commission during the war years, has caused the Commission to hold loyalty cases in abeyance for long periods of time. This condition should be studied and remedied at the earliest possible time. The reason for comparatively few decisions of eligibility on loyalty grounds resulting in the actual removal of employees from Government service should be given study and the reason therefor clearly stated.

There are many conditions called to the committee's attention that cannot be remedied by mere changes in techniques or by issuances of directives. Adequate protective measures must be adopted to see that persons of questioned loyalty are not permitted to enter into the Federal service. These protective measures should, of course, be absolutely fair and impartial, but doubts must, in the nature of things, be resolved in favor of the Government.

The further study of this problem must consider centralization of ultimate responsibility for employing persons of questioned loyalty, or permitting such persons to remain in the employ of the Government. To permit them to remain is unfair to the hundreds of thousands of loyal, patriotic employees in our Government, and seriously endangers the security of our country.

In this connection the committee believes that the question of giving a single agency the power to investigate the loyalty of Government employees, including both applicants and employees having tenure of office, should be considered. The designation of a single existing agency to review investigative reports, without instigating investigations, concerning Government employees should also be given consideration. This would tend to avoid the present duplication of effort. Your committee also believes that all proceedings for preferring charges against and removing disloyal employees should follow the same standards and rules of procedure and should be decided on the same legal principles. Whether, to achieve this uniformity, it is necessary to take away the power of removal from the respective agencies and place it in a single agency or whether it would be sufficient merely to authorize a single agency to adopt standards and rules of procedure which would be binding on all employing agencies is a matter which requires further study. The legal and practical problems involved in taking from a department head his right to remove employees and vest it in another agency are serious and substantial. Your committee has also considered the question as to whether a single standard of loyalty should be followed for all employees, including both applicants and employees appointed subject to investigation and permanent employeees. Whether a single standard is feasible and what that standard should be are also matters which your committee believes require further study. Such study should include consideration of the rights of permanent employees as well as a more detailed study of experience under the existing standards than your committee has had an opportunity to make.

The existing inadequacies of protection afforded to this Government from disloyal persons employed or to be employed cannot be attributed to any one branch of the Government or to any one cause. Rather it is a series of causes and events.

Congress has not thoroughly studied the problem or provided well-directed and adequate legislation. It has not provided adequate funds, nor has the Bureau of the Budget been willing to approve such funds, to permit the Civil Service Commission, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and other agencies to conduct full pre-employment investigations.

The tremendous increase and immediate need for individuals in the Government service during the critical war period made it impossible for the executive branch to do more than investigate employees within certain categories. The principal fault of the Executive Department, which can be understood during the recent emergency, was the lack of uniform action together with the presence of certain duplications of effort. It is primary for this reason that the following recommendations are made.

Your committee therefore recommends that a commission be established to be composed of an official of the Department of Justice, the War Department, the Navy Department, the State Department, the Treasury Department, and the Civil Service Commission; these being the departments with the most adequate, experienced investigative staffs. That this commission make a thorough study of existing laws and the adequacy of existing legislation; that it study the problems raised by this report concerning the standards, procedures, techniques, needed funds, and personnel necessary to protect this Government from disloyal employees or prospective employees and present to the Congress at the earliest time practicable and not later than the convening of the Eightieth Congress a complete and unified program that will give adequate protection to our Government against individuals whose primary loyalty is to governments other than our own. In considering this program the commission should firmly keep in mind that no matter how adequate such a program may be, it will always be necessary for the departments and agencies to have an effective internal security program.

In addition to the recommended study, the Commission should be directed to immediately review existing internal security measures, and cause the adoption of effective regulations in all agencies of the Government.

The task of this Commission will not be easy. It must devise methods that will give the Government complete protection and yet protect the employee with reference to our cherished and traditional freedom of conscience and belief. We believe the problem is urgent and therefore suggest prompt and effective action.

Your committee further recommends that the Congress immediately appropriate sufficient funds to permit the Civil Service Commission and the Federal Bureau of Investigation to make fingerprint checks and name checks of all individuals employed by the Government.

Respectfully submitted.

J. M. COMBS.
GEORGE H. FALLON.

SUPPLEMENTAL REPORT BY THE HON. EDWARD H. REES (REPUBLICAN), KANSAS, A MEMBER OF THE SUBCOMMITTEE ON CIVIL SERVICE

I have no objection to the general statements contained in the report submitted by the majority members of the Subcommittee on Civil Service. I did not sign the report for the reason that I do not think it extends far enough into the problem and for the particular reason that I do not think the recommendations therein are sufficient to deal with the serious problem involved.

I, therefore, submit my supplemental report.

I submit the following supplemental report, being pursuant to authority granted July 2, 1946:

The subcommittee did not have sufficient time to give the problem as careful study as ought to have been done.

It is of vital importance to our country that those employed in all departments of the Federal service be of high integrity and unquestioned loyalty to our Government. Employment in the Government of the United States is and should be regarded and respected as a high privilege.

The people of this country are deeply concerned and disturbed when they are informed that we have employees in many departments of the Federal Government, especially in responsible positions, whose loyalty is open to serious questioning. Equally important is the fact that so little is being done about it.

Testimony submitted during the hearings is sufficient to warrant further investigation and inquiry with respect to the following:

1. There is no consistent or uniform policy among the agencies in Federal Government with respect to investigating and removing the employees who are known to be disloyal. In numerous cases persons rejected on loyalty grounds in one agency are accepted in another.

2. The Civil Service Commission is responsible for permitting hundreds of employees to remain on the pay roll for long periods of time after their loyalties have been challenged. In many cases the Commission has not strictly adhered to the principle of "reasonable doubt" on questions of loyalty.

3. In numerous instances the Civil Service Commission has held loyalty cases in abeyance for many months, and in some cases 2, 3, or 4 years, before final decisions are made.

4. There appears to be susceptibility and too much attention given to outside influence in the Civil Service Commission, as well as in some of the other agencies of Government, in completing investigations and making decisions with respect to the fitness of many employees.

5. In a number of cases, employees have been placed on the pay roll subject to investigation when at the time they were employed there was reason to believe there was grave question with regard to loyalty. A number of them are in Federal employment now.

6. Although an array of statistics was presented to the subcommittee by the Civil Service Commission, the fact remains that comparatively few decisions of ineligibility on loyalty grounds have resulted in the actual removal of employees from Government employment by the Commission. The records will also show cases of rejection in cases of employees in one agency and their being employed in another.

This brief statement only scratches the surface. Conditions that are inexcusable, brought to the attention of the subcommittee, that exist in our Government at the present time and especially in a number of important cases, will not be cured entirely by mere changes in technique or issuance of directives. Immediate and thorough housecleaning of all those of doubtful loyalty is what is needed. Of course, we should be absolutely fair, but reasonable doubt as to loyalty to our country must at all times be resolved in favor of the Government.

There must be a determination as to who is responsible for allowing persons of questionable loyalty to remain on the pay roll of our Government. To permit such employees to remain is unfair to the hundreds of thousands of upstanding, patriotic employees in our Government. In the interest of national security it is imperative we follow the policy outlined herein.

In view of the testimony presented to the subcommittee during the past week and considering the importance of the problem involved, I recommend that a full and complete investigation be conducted and further hearings be held under the direction of the House Civil Service Committee, (1) to study the standards, the directives and the methods, and the policies of the Civil Service Commission and other agencies with respect to the question of loyalty in Government and to recommend uniform policies and standards with regard thereto; (2) to study more fully the problem of loyalty among the employees now on the Federal pay roll; (3) to devise by legislation or otherwise, ways and means of eliminating without delay employees in every department or agency of Government where there is reasonable doubt concerning their loyalty.

The problem is a serious one—it is imminent. Congress, through the House Civil Service Committee, should take action and should do it soon.

Respectfully submitted.

BOXCAR SHORTAGE

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska?

There was no objection.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, for some weeks Representatives and Senators from Nebraska and Kansas and other States have been trying to get more boxcars so that the railroads can move the wheat. A United Press report this week carried the following statement:

> Elevators, granaries, barns, and even chicken houses in the two big wheat-producing States were full to overflowing. The grain left over was being dumped on the ground, and there was some danger of spoilage, particularly in Kansas.

On checking into this matter I am authoritatively told that the boxcar shortage is due, in part at least, to the 5-day week in industry during the reconversion period, material shortages, and trouble with the Office of Price Administration.

Mr. Speaker, if food for a starving world is to be produced and saved, it is necessary that industry and Government work as long and as diligently as the farmers who produce this food. Although the harvest will soon be over, it is highly important that more boxcars be rushed to the area.

PREEMPLOYMENT INVESTIGATION OF FEDERAL EMPLOYEES

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota?

There was no objection.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, I am glad to hear the report of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH] that the Civil Service Committee of the House is filing in the RECORD today a report on the loyalty conditions in the civil-service employment rolls. In that connection, I hope the Members will also read, starting at page 9389 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for July 18, a report which I filed at that time showing the conditions existing in the preemployment investigative service of Government.

Due to the recommendations of the Bureau of the Budget, that investigative service has been virtually scuttled; so much so, Mr. Speaker, that only 1,400 complete investigations can be made next year of potential employees of the Federal Government, despite the fact that 700,000 new placements in civil service are expected to be certified. This reflects a condition which should be corrected before Congress adjourns for the summer.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. PHILLIPS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances; to include in one a letter he received from his colleague, the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. ELLSWORTH], and in the other an editorial.

Mrs. DOUGLAS of California asked and was given permission to extend her remarks in the RECORD in five instances.

Mr. KEFAUVER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances, and in one to include two editorials.

Mr. WASIELEWSKI asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial appearing in the Milwaukee Journal.

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mrs. DOUGLAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Thursday next, at the conclusion of the legislative program of the day and following any special orders heretofore entered, I may be permitted to address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from California?

There was no objection.

VETERANS' HOUSING

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Speaker, I received information from my district yesterday that some 30,000 veterans are without decent shelter and that the Wyatt housing program has bogged down in California to such an extent that practically no advance is being made in providing homes for veterans. Not only are the priorities being given to nonhousing projects but in addition to that they are not giving priorities to veterans for the purpose of building their own homes. I think this requires more than just casual comment; that it requires congressional investigation, and if the other Members of the House have had the same experience as I have had it is about time that somebody find out what Mr. Wyatt is doing with the authority we granted him and why it is not being used by him for the purpose of building homes for veterans as the bill we passed recently provided. He was given ample authority and ample subsidies to do the job. Why is it not being done?

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a recent address by his excellency, Archbishop Cushing, of Boston.

Mr. GILLIE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial.

COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE THE PEARL HARBOR ATTACK

Mr. CLARK. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the special committee appointed to investigate the disaster at Pearl Harbor, I file the report of that committee.

The SPEAKER. The report will be referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union and ordered printed.

COMMITTEE ON RULES

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Rules may have until midnight tonight to file two privileged reports.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED

Mr. ROGERS of New York, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 247. An act for the relief of E. D. Williams;

H. R. 271. An act for the relief of Eleanor McCloskey, also known as Evelyn Mary Mikalauskas;

H. R. 844. An act for the relief of John P. Hayes, postmaster, and the estate of Edward P. McCormack, former postmaster, at Albany, N. Y.;

H. R. 1322. An act for the relief of the Marine Engine Works and Shipbuilding Corporation, of Tarpon Springs, Fla.;

H. R. 1331. An act for the relief of the Hatheway Patterson Corp.;

H. R. 1345. An act for the relief of David M. Matteson;

H. R. 1469. An act for the relief of Cox Bros.;

H. R. 1480. An act for the relief of the S. G. Loeffler Operating Co., of Washington D. C., and for other purposes;

H. R. 1498. An act to correct the naval record of former members of the crews of the revenue cutters Algonquin and Onondaga;

H. R. 1673. An act for the relief of the Superior Coach Corp;

H. R. 1797. An act for the relief of Arcadio Saldaña Agosto;

H. R. 1850. An act for the relief of Louise Zerweck;

H. R. 1957. An act for the relief of the Ohio Valley General Hospital, Wheeling Clinic, Rosetta Snyder, Virginia Barron, Dr. Paul H. Cope, and Dr. J. E. Ricketts;

H. R. 2130. An act for the relief of Daniel S. Bagley, Jr., and Daniel S. Bagley, Sr.;

H. R. 2243. An act for the relief of Arthur A. Guarino;

H. R. 2269. An act for the relief of Dr. William A. Schumacher and Magdalen M. Schumacher;

H. R. 2287. An act for the relief of Susan S. Wiseman;

H. R. 2319. An act for the relief of J. B. Shropshire;

H. R. 2423. An act to authorize the exchange of lands acquired by the United States for the Silver Creek recreational demonstration project, Oregon, for the purpose of consolidating holdings therein, and for other purposes;

H. R. 2489. An act for the relief of Gaylon Dhu;

H. R. 2962. An act for the relief of Justin P. Hopkins;

H. R. 3065. An act for the relief of Standard Dredging Corp.;

H. R. 3145. An act for the relief of A. C. McMeans;

H. R. 3158. An act for the relief of Leonard J. Fox and Milford G. Fox, a partnership, doing business as Fox Co.;

H. R. 3341. An act for the relief of J. E. and Minerva Mitchell, and Rosie Monroe;

H. R. 3360. An act for the relief of Mrs. W. H. (Agnes) Holmes;

H. R. 3397. An act for the relief of Claude S. Crouse;

H. R. 3400. An act for the relief of Herbert W. Rogers;

H. R. 3420. An act to provide for refunds to railroad employees in certain cases, so as to place the various States on an equal basis, under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, with respect to contributions of employees;

H. R. 3455. An act for the relief of Chatham M. Towers;

H. R. 3480. An act for the relief of Miss Ruth Lois Cummings;

H. R. 3484. An act for the relief of the Poultry Producers of Central California;

H. R. 3492. An act to amend further the Civil Service Retirement Act, approved May 29, 1930, as amended;

H. R. 3533. An act to authorize revisions in the boundary of the Hopewell Village National Historic Site, Pennsylvania, and for other purposes;

H. R. 3623. An act for the relief of William A. Pixley;

H. R. 3821. An act to amend sections 4 and 8 of the act of September 2, 1937, as amended;

H. R. 3827. An act for the relief of Fred W. Grant;

H. R. 3848. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Johnnie Pollock, a minor;

H. R. 3857. An act for the relief of Warren H. Thompson and Madeline Parent;

H. R. 3988. An act for the relief of Decatur County in the State of Indiana;

H. R. 3993. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to sell and convey to the Southern Pacific Railroad Co. a right-of-way and easement for railroad purposes across a portion of Camp Cooke Military Reservation, Calif.;

H. R. 4090. An act for the relief of Roy Hesselmeyer;

H. R. 4180. An act to amend the law relating to larceny in interstate or foreign commerce;

H. R. 4215. An act for the relief of Jane O'Malley;

H. R. 4247. An act for the relief of Jesús Lassalle and Mrs. America Bonet Medina;

H. R. 4357. An act for the relief of the estate of the late Alberto Lopez Ramos;

H. R. 4458. An act for the relief of Rosella J. Masters;

H. R. 4484. An act relating to the construction and maintenance of building and improvements for banking purposes on the Fort Ord Military Reservation, Calif.;

H. R. 4486. An act to abolish the Santa Rosa Island National Monument and to provide for the conveyance to Escambia County, State of Florida, of that portion of Santa Rosa Island which is under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior;

H. R. 4492. An act for the relief of Charles Marvin Smith;

H. R. 4577. An act for the relief of Dolores Joyce;

H. R. 4651. An act to amend section 6 of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended;

H. R. 4660. An act for the relief of Mrs. Georgia Lanser and Ensign Joseph Lanser;

H. R. 4673. An act for the relief of Mrs. Minnie Jenkins Ward;

H. R. 4701. An act granting the consent of Congress to the States of Utah, Idaho, and Wyoming to negotiate and enter into a compact for the division of the waters of the Bear River and its tributaries;

H. R. 4834. An act for the relief of the estate of Katherine Delores Booth and Agnes Jane True;

H. R. 4862. An act for the relief of Walter R. Newcomb, Sr., Corbin A. Newcomb, and Walter R. Newcomb, Jr.;

H. R. 4917. An act for the relief of the Western Union Telegraph Co.;

H. R. 4919. An act for the relief of Archibald J. Alcorn;

H. R. 4996. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Joan Esther Hedin, a minor;

H. R. 5026. An act for the relief of the estate of Drury Lee Jordan;

H. R. 5030. An act for the relief of Mrs. Lim Shee Chang;

H. R. 5112. An act to authorize the city of Anchorage, Alaska, to issue bonds in a sum not to exceed $5,000,000 for the purpose of constructing, reconstructing, improving, extending, bettering, repairing, equipping, or acquiring public works of a permanent character, and to provide for the payment thereof, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5178. An act for the relief of Marian Antoinette McCloud;

H. R. 5228. An act for the relief of Stephen Lisay;

H. R. 5324. An act for the relief of Mrs. Mary Francoline and Mrs. Rose Wallace;

H. R. 5351. An act for the relief of Charles Booker;

H. R. 5352. An act for the relief of Joseph Ippolito;

H. R. 5398. An act for the relief of Walter J. Barnes Electric Co. and Maritime Electric Co., Inc.;

H. R. 5452. An act making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5510. An act for the relief of Newton William Lowery;

H. R. 5538. An act for the relief of Mae Maxine Stone;

H. R. 5539. An act for the relief of Andrew M. Halvorsen;

H. R. 5541. An act for the relief of F. B. Sweat;

H. R. 5640. An act to reestablish the status of funds of the midshipmen's store, barber shop, cobbler shop, and tailor shop at the United States Naval Academy, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5722. An act for the relief of Charles L. Cannon;

H. R. 5739. An act for the relief of Frances Fitzgerald;

H. R. 5792. An act for the relief of certain postmasters;

H. R. 5800. An act to authorize school districts in Alaska to issue bonds for school construction, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5806. An act for the relief of Etta Yoakam;

H. R. 5820. An act relating to mail service on Lake Winnepesaukee, N. H.;

H. R. 5831. An act to include the heads of executive departments and independent agencies within the purview of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930;

H. R. 5840. An act to authorize an exchange of land in Eagle County, Colo.;

H. R. 5872. An act for the relief of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Keaton;

H. R. 5878. An act for the relief of Elsie Elmhorst;

H. R. 5884. An act for the relief of Frances Krzys;

H. R. 5958. An act to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended;

H. R. 6041. An act authorizing the State of Indiana to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Wabash River at or near Montezuma, Ind.;

H. R. 6065. An act authorizing the Indiana State Toll Bridge Commission to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge or a free bridge across the Ohio River at or near Cannelton, Ind.;

H. R. 6081. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Iowa State Highway Commission to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Des Moines River at or near the town of Eddyville, Iowa;

H. R. 6213. An act for the relief of Brevet First Lt. Margaret Utinsky;

H. R. 6222. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Calcasieu River at or near Lake Charles, La.;

H. R. 6324. An act to amend and supplement the Federal-Aid Road Act of July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, to provide for the design and construction of dams so that they will serve as foundations for highway bridges, to provide for the design and construction of highway bridges upon and across such dams, to authorize the granting of easements and rights-of-way in connection therewith, and for other purposes;

H. R. 6442. An act for the relief of Mrs. Elizabeth J. Patterson, Joy Patterson, and Roberta Patterson;

H. R. 6459. An act to extend the period within which the Secretary of Agriculture may carry out the purposes of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act by making payments to agricultural producers;

H. R. 6472. An act for the relief of John E. Peterson, James M. Hiler, Vivian Langemo, Floy Sibrie, and Ross Lee Brown;

H. R. 6486. An act to authorize an appropriation for the establishment of a geophysical institute at the University of Alaska;

H. R. 6515. An act to amend the act entitled "An act authorizing the Nebraska-Iowa Bridge Corp., a Delaware corporation, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Missouri River between Washington County, Nebraska, and Harrison County, Iowa", approved March 6, 1928;

H. R. 6627. An act for the acquisition of buildings and grounds in foreign countries for the use of the Government of the United States of America;

H. R. 6673. An act to amend section 6 of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended;

H. R. 6689. An act to extend, for an additional year, the provisions of the Sugar Act, as amended, and the taxes with respect to sugar;

H. R. 6751. An act authorizing Gus A. Guerra, his heirs, legal representatives, and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Rio Grande, at or near Rio Grande City, Tex.;

H. R. 6889. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a toll bridge across the St. Louis River between the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin, and for other purposes;

H. R. 6903. An act to provide benefits for certain employees of the United States who are veterans of World War II and lost opportunity for probational civil-service appointments by reason of their service in the armed forces of the United States;

H. J. Res. 321. Joint resolution to authorize the making of settlement on account of certain currency destroyed at Fort Mills, Philippine Islands, and for other purposes;

H. J. Res. 336. Joint resolution relating to marketing quotas under the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended;

H. J. Res. 359. Joint resolution relating to peanut marketing quotas under the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended; and

H. J. Res. 364. Joint resolution to provide for the establishment of an international animal quarantine station on Swan Island, and to permit the entry therein of animals from any country and the subsequent importation of such animals into other parts of the United States, and for other purposes.

BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. ROGERS of New York, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on the following dates present to the President, for his approval, bills of the House of the following titles:

On July 19, 1946:

H. R. 6777. An act making appropriations for Government corporations and independent executive agencies for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes.

On July 20, 1946:

H. R. 5452. An act making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 3 o'clock and 56 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Monday, July 22, 1946, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE MEETING

COMMITTEE ON WORLD WAR VETERANS' LEGISLATION

There will be a meeting of the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation, in executive session, on Monday, July 22, 1946, at 10:30 a. m., in committee room 356, House Office Building.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1471. A letter from the Attorney General, transmitting a request for withdrawal of the case of Constantine Dimitrius Dintchos from those 42 cases referred to in his letter of April 1, 1946, involving suspension of deportation; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

1472. A letter from the Archivist of the United States, transmitting a report on records proposed for disposal by various Government agencies; to the Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. MANSFIELD of Texas: Committee on Rivers and Harbors. House Resolution 716. Resolution directing that the board of engineers for Rivers and Harbors prepare a revised edition of a compilation of all preliminary examination and survey and review reports transmitted to Congress prior to July 31, 1946; without amendment (Rept. No. 2599). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. MAY: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 2020. An act granting a right-of-way at a revised location to the West Shore Railroad Co., the New York Central Railroad Co., lessee, across a portion of the military reservation at West Point; without amendment (Rept. No. 2600). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. MAY: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 2306. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to grant to the Georgia Power Co., a 100-foot perpetual easement across Fort Benning in the State of Georgia; with amendments (Rept. No. 2601). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. MAY: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 2375. An act to change the name of the Chemical Warfare Service to the Chemical Corps; without amendment (Rept. 2602). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 717. Resolution providing for the consideration of S. 2177, a bill to provide for increased efficiency in the legislative branch of the Government; without amendment (Rept. No. 2614). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. COLMER: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 718. Resolution providing for the consideration of S. 191, a bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to authorize grants to the States for surveying their hospitals and public health centers and for planning construction of additional facilities, and to authorize grants to assist in such construction; without amendment (Rept. No. 2615). Referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. JENNINGS: Committee on Claims. S. 162. An act for the relief of Walter S. Faulkner; without amendment (Rept. No. 2588). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. STIGLER: Committee on Claims. S. 1880. An act for the relief of the Crosby Yacht Building & Storage Co., Inc.; without amendment (Rept. No. 2589). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. CASE of New Jersey: Committee on Claims. H. R. 3209. A bill for the relief of Edward A. Mason; with amendment (Rept. No. 2590). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. CASE of New Jersey: Committee on Claims. H. R. 5050. A bill for the relief of Minnie P. Shorey; with amendment (Rept. No. 2591). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. CASE of New Jersey: Committee on Claims. H. R. 5134. A bill for the relief of Clarence W. Ohm; without amendment (Rept. No. 2592). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. CASE of New Jersey: Committee on Claims. H. R. 5469. A bill for the relief of Bertha Lillian Robbins and Charles Robbins; with amendment (Rept. No. 2593). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. CHENOWETH: Committee on Claims. H. R. 5603. A bill for the relief of Wilford B. Brown; with amendments (Rept. No. 2594). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. CASE of New Jersey: Committee on Claims. H. R. 5849. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Grace A. Phillips; with amendment (Rept. No. 2595). Referred to the Commitee of the Whole House.

Mr. CHENOWETH: Committee on Claims. H. R. 5851. A bill for the relief of Second Lt. Francis W. Anderson; with amendment (Rept. No. 2596). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. STIGLER: Committee on Claims. H. R. 6012. A bill for the relief of Lippert Bros.; with amendment (Rept. No. 2597). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. CASE of New Jersey: Committee on Claims. H. R. 6161. A bill for the relief of the legal guardian of Samuel Roscoe Thompson, a minor; with amendment (Rept. No. 2598). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. CHENOWETH: Committee on Claims. H. R. 5093. A bill to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of Albert Whilden; with amendments (Rept. No. 2603). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. PITTENGER: Committee on Claims. H. R. 6423. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Ivan B. Hofman; without amendment (Rept. No. 2604). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House

Mr. PITTENGER: Committee on Claims. S. 357. An act for the relief of the Forward Columbus Fund, of Columbus, Nebr.; without amendment (Rept. No. 2605). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. COMBS: Committee on Claims. S. 1277. An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of William S. Brown; without amendment (Rept. No. 2606). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. COMBS: Committee on Claims. S. 1549. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Duane N. Thompson, a minor; without amendment (Rept. No. 2607). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. PITTENGER: Committee on Claims. S. 1573. An act for the relief of James H. Wilkinson; without amendment (Rept. No. 2608). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. COMBS: Committee on Claims. S. 1674. An act for the relief of Michael Joseph Bennett, a minor; without amendment (Rept. No. 2609). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. PITTENGER: Committee on Claims. S. 1731. An act for the relief of Lester A. Dessez; without amendment (Rept. No. 2610). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. PITTENGER: Committee on Claims. S. 1733. An act for the relief of Desmark Wright; the estates of Alberta Wright, Desmark Wright, Jr., and Harold Evans; and the legal guardians of Bobby Dennis Wright and Irvin Lee Wright, minors; without amendment (Rept. No. 2611). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. COMBS: Committee on Claims. S. 1751. An act for the relief of Wayne Parker; without amendment (Rept. No. 2612). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. COMBS: Committee on Claims. S. 1910. An act for the relief of George D. King; without amendment (Rept. No. 2613). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. GEARHART:

H. R. 7091. A bill to provide for the incorporation of the National Woman's Relief Corps, Auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic, organized 1883, 62 years old; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. PLOESER:

H. R. 7092. A bill for the refund of income taxes paid by members of the armed forces dying while in active service; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FLANNAGAN:

H R. 7093. A bill to promote the agriculture of the United States by acquiring and diffusing useful information regarding agriculture in the foreign field, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. PITTENGER:

H. R. 7094. A bill to repeal the Reorganization Act of 1945; to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

By Mr. LEMKE:

H. R. 7095. A bill to provide assignment of a section of the 50-megacycle band of radio frequencies for frequency modulation (FM); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HESS:

H. R. 7096. A bill declaring August 14 of each year a legal holiday; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. DOUGHTON of North Carolina:

H. R. 7097. A bill for the relief of Robert E. Ridenhour, Jr.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. NORBLAD:

H. R. 7098. A bill for the relief of John K. Jackson; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2112. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the City Council of the City of Chicago, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to the reduction of personnel of the Chicago Operating Base of the Coast Guard; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

2113. Also, petition of the national affairs committee of the National Republican Club, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to request for cessation of price controls except for control of rents in those States where there is no State rent control; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

SENATE

MONDAY, JULY 22, 1946

(Legislative day of Friday, July 5, 1946)

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m., on the expiration of the recess.

Rev. Frederick E. Reissig, D. D., executive secretary, Washington Federation of Churches, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

Thou God of all the yesterdays, of all the tomorrows, and the God of this present day and hour, we pause in this moment of time and history to acknowledge Thee as our God and Father. To remember Thee is to live; to forget Thee is to perish. As the branch cannot bear fruit by itself without remaining on the vine, neither can we except we remain in Thee. Except Thou, O Lord, build the house, the nation, the new world, they labor in vain that build.

Upon the perplexing problems that come to this Hill, shed Thou the light of Thine own wisdom. Add Thou to our limited knowledge, judgment, and understanding some of Thine own unlimited resources. Use Thou us as best Thou canst to bring order out of confusion, harmony out of discord, peace out of strife, understanding and fellowship out of distrust and fear.

Made humble by our responsibilities and dependent on Thee by our impossible tasks, we unashamedly confess today that for the needs of this hour we have no other place to go but to Thee. And we do not pray for lesser tasks, but that Thou wouldst grant us insights, courage, and strength to match them. In the faith that they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength, we face another day of service to Thee and our fellow men.

Hear our prayer in the name of Him who is the way, the truth, and the life. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. HAYDEN, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Saturday, July 20, 1946, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed, without amendment, the following bills and joint resolution of the Senate:

S. 920. An act to fix the salaries of certain judges of the United States;

S. 2372. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to construct the Lewiston Orchards project, Idaho, in accordance with the Federal reclamation laws; and

S. J. Res. 4. Joint resolution authorizing the erection on public grounds in Springerville, Ariz., of a memorial to Gustav Becker.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1717) for the development and control of atomic energy, with amendments in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6371) to amend certain provisions of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5223) to extend temporarily the time for filing applications for patents, for taking action in the United States Patent Office with respect thereto, for preventing proof of acts abroad with respect to the making of an invention, and for other purposes; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. BOYKIN, Mr. LANHAM, and Mr. HARTLEY were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 305) providing for membership and participation by the United States in the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization, and authorizing an appropriation therefor; asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. BLOOM, Mr. KEE, and Mr. MERROW were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 4982. An act to enable the Department of State more effectively to carry out its responsibilities in the foreign field by means of (a) public dissemination abroad of information about the United States, its people, and its policies, and (b) promotion of the interchange of persons, knowledge, and skills between the people of the United States and the peoples of other countries;

H. R. 6646. An act to establish the Office of Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs; and

H. R. 6967. An act to improve, strengthen, and expand the Foreign Service of the United States and to consolidate and revise the laws relating to its administration.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. HAYDEN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hart	Pepper
Andrews	Hawkes	Radcliffe
Ball	Hayden	Reed
Barkley	Hill	Revercomb
Bilbo	Hoey	Robertson
Brewster	Huffman	Russell
Brooks	Johnson, Colo.	Shipstead
Buck	Knowland	Smith
Burch	La Follette	Stanfill
Bushfield	Langer	Swift
Byrd	Lucas	Taft
Capehart	McCarran	Taylor
Capper	McClellan	Thomas, Okla.
Carville	McKellar	Thomas, Utah
Chavez	McMahon	Tobey
Connally	Magnuson	Tunnell
Cordon	Maybank	Vandenberg
Donnell	Mead	Wagner
Downey	Millikin	Walsh
Eastland	Mitchell	Wherry
Ferguson	Moore	White
Fulbright	Morse	Wiley
George	Murdock	Willis
Gerry	Murray	Wilson
Green	Myers	Young
Guffey	O'Daniel
Gurney	Overton

Mr. HILL. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. GOSSETT] are absent because of illness.

The Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] is absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] is necessarily absent.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. BRIGGS], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSTON], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KILGORE], the Senator from Arizona [Mr. MCFARLAND], and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. STEWART] are detained on public business.

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are absent on official business, having been appointed to the Commission on the part of the Senate to participate in the Philippine independence ceremonies.

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a member of the Special Committee on Atomic Energy.

The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BUTLER] is absent on official business, being a member of the Commission appointed to attend the Philippine independence ceremonies.

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN] and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Seventy-nine Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

PRESENTATION OF GAVEL TO THE SENATE BY KIWANIS CLUB OF WESTMINSTER, MD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a letter from the Kiwanis Club of Westminster, Md., signed by a committee of distinguished members, presenting to the Senate, through the President pro tempore, a gavel. The Chair asks to have the letter printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

KIWANIS CLUB OF WESTMINSTER, MD.,
July 22, 1946.

The UNITED STATES SENATE,
Washington, D. C.
(Attention Hon. Senator MCKELLAR.)

GENTLEMEN: The Westminster Kiwanis Club wishes to present to the United States Senate, through its president, Senator MCKELLAR, this unique gavel. We call it the Francis Scott Key Gavel. It is made of walnut wood which grew on the farm called Terra Rubra, the birthplace of Francis Scott Key, the author of our National Anthem, the Star-Spangled Banner.

After the British raided the city of Washington and burned our National Capitol, they departed for Baltimore. There a similar raid was frustrated by the alertness of the Maryland Militia and the spirited defense of Fort McHenry before the city on September 12, 1814. It was the sight of our flag still waving on the ramparts of Fort McHenry, after a night's bombardment, that inspired Francis Scott Key to write his immortal words.

Terra Rubra is a beautiful farm in Carroll County, Md., near Westminster, the county seat. It is situated about 6 miles southwest of Taneytown, a town supposed to be named after Chief Justice Taney. The roots that nourished this wood grew in patriotic soil, that lies just 15 miles south of the great Gettysburg battlefield, and the same soil that is called home by thousands of lads who fought, some of them giving their lives, in Europe in 1918, and again in Europe and the Pacific in 1941–45.

When the Senate comes to order at the sound of this gavel may those within its legislative halls be reminded of the noble words of Francis Scott Key:

"Oh, thus be it ever when freemen shall stand
Between their loved homes and the war's desolation!
Blest with victory and peace, may the heaven rescued land
Praise the Power that hath made and preserved us a Nation!
Then conquer we must, when our cause it is just,
And this be our motto: 'In God is our trust!'
And the Star-Spangled Banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!"

And, may they also be reminded of the loyal sons of Carroll who, today, extend their hand of fellowship and wish for you as they do for all Americans an enduring peace and a lasting good will among all the nations of the world.

Sincerely yours,

JOHN R. BROWN,
M. S. REIFOUYDER,
ED. B. MANCHA,
H. R. HOLLINGER,
JOHN R. BYERS,
The Committee, Kiwanis Club of Westminster.

REPORT OF A COMMITTEE FILED DURING THE RECESS

Under authority of the order of the Senate on the 20th instant,

Mr. MAYBANK, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 1974) to provide for the selection for elimination and retirement of officers of the Regular Army, for the equalization of retirement benefits for members of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes, reported it on July 20, 1946, with an amendment, and submitted a report (No. 1767) thereon.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. THOMAS of Utah, from the Committee on Military Affairs:

S. 2460. A bill to provide additional inducements to citizens of the United States to make a career of the United States military or naval service, and for other purposes; with an amendment (Rept. No. 1768).

By Mr. DOWNEY, from the Committee on Civil Service:

H. R. 2523. A bill to provide for lump-sum payment of compensation for accumulated annual leave and current accrued annual leave to certain officers and employees, and authorizing the appropriation of funds for that purpose; without amendment (Rept. No. 1769).

By Mr. HUFFMAN, from the Committee on Claims:

H. R. 2222. A bill for the relief of J. L. Harris; without amendment (Rept. No. 1770);

H. R. 2663. A bill for the relief of W. C. Jones, Myrtle M. Jones, and W. W. Tilghman; without amendment (Rept. No. 1771); and

H. R. 3833. A bill for the relief of Viola McKinney; without amendment (Rept. No. 1772).

By Mr. O'DANIEL, from the Committee on Claims:

H. R. 1070. A bill for the relief of Elmer C. Hadlen; without amendment (Rept. No. 1773);

H. R. 1570. A bill for the relief of Edward Pittwood; without amendment (Rept. No. 1774);

H. R. 1788. A bill for the relief of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Newman; without amendment (Rept. No. 1775);

H. R. 4406. A bill for the relief of Loyal F. Willis; without amendment (Rept. No. 1776);

H. R. 4686. A bill for the relief of the estate of Harry Wright; without amendment (Rept. No. 1777);

H. R. 5198. A bill for the relief of Marjorie B. Marable; without amendment (Rept. No. 1778);

H. R. 5261. A bill for the relief of David Weiss; without amendment (Rept. No. 1779);

H. R. 6248. A bill for the relief of Capital Office Equipment Co.; without amendment (Rept. No. 1780); and

H. R. 6642. A bill for the relief of certain postmasters; without amendment (Rept. No. 1781).

By Mr. O'DANIEL (for Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina), from the Committee on Claims:

S. 2147. A bill for the relief of Howard A. Yeager; without amendment (Rept. No. 1782);

S. 2370. A bill for the relief of Edgar F. Russell; Lillian V. Russell, his wife; and Bessie R. Ward; without amendment (Rept. No. 1783);

S. 2440. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Martha P. Matthews; without amendment (Rept. No. 1784);

H. R. 3099. A bill for the relief of Coy C. Brown; without amendment (Rept. No. 1785);

H. R. 4341. A bill for the relief of James B. McGoldrick; without amendment (Rept. No. 1786);

H. R. 5368. A bill for the relief of W. G. Magruder; without amendment (Rept. No. 1787);

H. R. 5414. A bill for the relief of Marie Gorak; without amendment (Rept. No. 1788); and

H. R. 6307. A bill for the relief of Francesco D'Emilio; without amendment (Rept. No. 1789).

By Mr. McMAHON, from the Committee on Claims;

H. R. 1351. A bill for the relief of the estate of Estelle Daniel Boyle, deceased, and E. B. Rosegarten; without amendment (Rept. No. 1790);

H. R. 3197. A bill for the relief of William F. Patchell, Jr.; without amendment (Rept. No. 1791); and

H. R. 6593. A bill for the relief of Milton A. Johnson, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1792).

By Mr. MORSE, from the Committee on Claims:

H. R. 3742. A bill for the relief of Burgess C. Moore, as administrator of the estate of Lela May Tomlinson, deceased, and as legal guardian of Kay Tomlinson and Larry Max Tomlinson, minors; without amendment (Rept. No. 1793);

H. R. 4375. A bill for the relief of Charles Martin; without amendment (Rept. No. 1794);

H. R. 5372. A bill for the relief of Jessie Wolfington; without amendment (Rept. No. 1795); and

H. R. 5874. A bill for the relief of Joseph Maezer; without amendment (Rept. No. 1796).

By Mr. WILSON, from the Committee on Claims:

H. R. 1631. A bill for the relief William Tolar Smith; without amendment (Rept. No. 1797);

H. R. 2850. A bill for the relief of Felix Napiorkowski; without amendment (Rept. No. 1798);

H. R. 4947. A bill for the relief of Ethel Guenther; without amendment (Rept. No. 1799);

H. R. 5725. A bill for the relief of Sadie Frey and the estate of Marie Hviding; without amendment (Rept. No. 1800);

H. R. 6231. A bill for the relief of Frank A. Gorman; without amendment (Rept. No. 1801); and

H. R. 6536. A bill for the relief of Southeastern Sand & Gravel Co.; without amendment (Rept. No. 1802).

By Mr. BILBO, from the Committee on the District of Columbia:

S. 2408. A bill to amend the act of February 9, 1907, as amended, with respect to certain fees; without amendment (Rept. No. 1803);

H. R. 4410. A bill to amend the act entitled "An act to authorize the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to make regulations to prevent and control the spread of communicable and preventable diseases," approved August 11, 1939; without amendment (Rept. No. 1804);

H. R. 5928. A bill to name the bridge located on New Hampshire Avenue, Washington, D. C., over the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks the Charles A. Langley Bridge; without amendment (Rept. No. 1805);

H. R. 5970. A bill to permit the members and stockholders of charitable, educational, and religious associations incorporated in the District of Columbia to vote by proxy or by mail; without amendment (Rept. No. 1806); and

H. R. 6859. A bill to amend section 121 of the act entitled "An act to establish a code of law for the District of Columbia," approved March 3, 1901, as amended, to authorize the appointment of three additional deputies for the register of wills; without amendment (Rept. No. 1807).

By Mr. TUNNELL, from the Committee on Pensions:

H. R. 3908. A bill to provide increased pensions to members of the Regular Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard who become disabled by reason of their service therein during other than a period of war; without amendment (Rept. No. 1808); and

H. R. 6900. A bill to grant increased service pensions in certain Spanish-American War cases not included in recent legislation providing increases to other Spanish-American War veterans and their dependents, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1809).

BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

A bill and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado:

S. 2467. A bill to amend the National Housing Act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. GEORGE:

S. J. Res. 180. Joint resolution granting permission to Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the Public Health Service; Rolla E. Dyer, Assistant Surgeon General, Public Health Service; Howard F. Smith, Assistant Surgeon General, Public Health Service; Herbert A. Spencer, medical director, Public Health Service; Vance B. Murray, medical director, Public Health Service; and Gilbert L. Dunnahoo, medical director, Public Health Service, to accept and wear certain decorations bestowed upon them by France, Cuba, Mexico, Chile, Finland, and Luang-Prabang; to the Committee on Finance.

EXTENSION OF MATURITY FOR MORTGAGES OF PROPERTY OF WORLD WAR II VETERANS UNDER NATIONAL HOUSING ACT—AMENDMENT

Mr. PEPPER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2459) to extend the maturity for mortgages under the National Housing Act in the case of property owned by veterans of World War II, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency and ordered to be printed.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED OR ORDERED TO BE PLACED ON THE CALENDAR

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles and referred or ordered to be placed on the calendar, as indicated:

H. R. 4982. An act to enable the Department of State more effectively to carry out its responsibilities in the foreign field by means of (a) public dissemination abroad of information about the United States, its people and its policies, and (b) promotion of the interchange of persons, knowledge, and skills between the people of the United States and the peoples of other countries; and

H. R. 6967. An act to improve, strengthen, and expand the Foreign Service of the United States and to consolidate and revise the laws relating to its administration; ordered to be placed on the calendar.

H. R. 6646. An act to establish the Office of Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

PARTICIPATION BY UNITED STATES IN UNITED NATIONS EDUCATIONAL, SCIENTIFIC, AND CULTURAL ORGANIZATION

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives announcing its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 305) providing for membership and participation by the United States in the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization, and authorizing an appropriation therefor, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. MURRAY. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the President pro tempore appointed Mr. MURRAY, Mr. TUNNELL, and Mr. BRIDGES conferees on the part of the Senate.

DEVELOPMENT AND CONTROL OF ATOMIC ENERGY

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1717) for the development and control of atomic energy, which were, on page 3, line 19, after the word "members" where it occurs the first time, to insert a comma and "at least one of whom shall be a member of the armed forces"; on page 5, line 23, after "annum.", insert "The Director of the Division of Military Application shall be a member of the armed forces."; on page 8, after line 2, to insert:

"(d) Appointment of Army and Navy officers: Notwithstanding the provisions of section 1222 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., 1940 edition, title 10, sec. 576), section 212 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the Legislative Branch of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, and for other purposes," approved June 30, 1932, as amended (U. S. C., 1940 edition, title 5, sec. 59a), section 2 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes," approved July 31, 1894, as amended (U. S. C., 1940 edition, title 5, sec. 62), or any other law, not to exceed two active or retired officers of the Army or the Navy may serve at the same time as members of the Commission, and any active or retired officer of the Army or the Navy may serve as Director of the Division of Military Application established by subsection (a) (4) (B) of this section, without prejudice to their commissioned status as such officers. Any such officer serving as a member of the Commission or as Director of the Division of Military Application shall receive, in addition to his pay from the United States as such officer, an amount equal to the difference between such pay and the compensation prescribed in paragraph (2) or (4) (B), as the case may be, of subsection (a) of this section."

On page 8, line 12, to strike out "grants-in-aid,"; on page 10, line 16, after "Commission", insert a comma and "as agent of and on behalf of the United States,"; on page 11, line 18, after "contract", to insert "except as authorized by the Commission,"; on page 12, line 17, strike out "is" and insert "and persons lawfully producing or utilizing fissionable material are"; on page 14, line 20, after "material", to insert "owned by it"; on page 16, line 21, to strike out all after "deliver" down to and including "to" in line 22, and insert a comma and "receive possession of or title to, or export from the United States"; on page 18, line 25, to strike out all after "States" over to and including "enjoy" in line 5 of page 19, and insert "subject to valid claims existing on the date of the enactment of this act"; on page 19, line 6, to strike out "person" and insert "individual"; on page 19, line 10, to strike out "person" and insert "individual"; on page 19, line 11, after "project", to insert "unless first authorized so to do by the Commission"; on page 21, to strike out lines 17 to 20, inclusive, and insert:

(1) The Commission shall not—

(A) Distribute any fissionable material to (i) any person for a use which is not under or within the jurisdiction of the United States, (ii) any foreign government, or (iii) any person within the United States if, in the opinion of the Commission, the distribution of such fissionable material to such person would be inimical to the common defense and security.

(B) License any person to transfer or deliver, receive possession of or title to, or export from the United States any source material if, in the opinion of the Commission, the issuance of a license to such person for such purpose would be inimical to the common defense and security.

On page 21, to strike out all after line 20, over to and including line 5 on page 22; on page 22, line 20, after "Commission", to insert "(1)"; on page 22, line 21, after "of", to insert "fissionable materials or"; on page 22, line 23, after "defense" to insert "or (2) to authorize the armed forces to manufacture, produce, or acquire any equipment or device utilizing fissionable material or atomic energy as a military weapon"; on page 22, lines 24 and 25, after "person" to insert a comma and "except as provided in section 6 (a)"; on page 25, line 12, to strike out "to exceed" and insert "less than"; on page 26, line 4, to strike out "States or" and insert "States,"; on page 26, lines 4 and 5, after "government" to insert a comma and "or to any person within the United States if, in the opinion of the Commission, the issuance of a license to such person would be inimical to the common defense and security"; on page 26, line 14, after "agreement" to insert "hereafter"; on page 28, to strike out all after line 22 over to and including line 4 on page 29; on page 29, line 5, to strike out "(2)"; on page 29, strike out lines 10 to 14, inclusive; on page 29, line 15, to strike out "(c)" and insert "(b)"; on page 29, line 20, after "Commission" to insert "by unanimous vote"; on page 30, line 8, after "by" to insert "death, or by"; on page 30, line 9, after "not" to insert "less than ten years or"; on page 30, line 23, after "by" to insert "death, or by"; on page 30, line 23, after "not" where it occurs the second time to insert "less than ten years or"; on page 31, line 10, after "by" to insert "death, or by"; on page 31, line 11, after "not" to insert "less than ten years or"; on page 31, to strike out lines 12 to 15, inclusive, and insert:

(5) The Commission shall make no contract under sections 3 or 4; shall issue no license to any person nor employ any person until the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall have first made an investigation of the character and associations of such person and certified that the character of such contractor licensee or employee is such as not to endanger the common defense or security.

On page 31, line 20, to strike out "(d)" and insert "(c)"; on page 32, to strike out all after line 8 over to and including line 25 on page 38 and insert:

SEC. 11. (a) The Commission is authorized to purchase, for the manufacture or use by or for the United States Government, any and all rights in and to any invention or discovery, or application for patent or patent thereon, relating to research on or the production of fissionable material or the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy.

(b) The Commission is authorized to condemn, and to determine and make just compensation for, any and all rights in and to any invention or discovery relating to research on or the production of fissionable materials or the utilization of fissionable materials or atomic energy that affects the national defense and security: Provided, however, That upon the determination by the Commission that the national defense or security is no longer involved, any and all rights in and to such invention or discovery shall revert to the owner, subject to a nonexclusive, irrevocable, and nontransferable license in favor of the Government.

(c) When any person who has made an invention or discovery relating to research on or the production of fissionable material, or the utilization of fissionable materials or atomic energy, and shall have filed an application for a patent thereon and shall have tendered his invention or discovery to the Government of the United States for its use, he shall, if and when he ultimately receives a patent, have the right to sue for compensation as provided for in subsections (d) and (e) of section 11 hereof, such right to compensation to begin from the date of any use of the invention by the Government: Provided, That the Commission is authorized to enter into and effect an agreement with said applicant in full settlement and compromise for the use of his invention by the Government.

(d) If any person is dissatisfied with the determination of the Commission as to just compensation, he may have his remedy by filing a suit in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, if filed within 6 months after such determination; and such court, on notice to the Commission and other due procedures had, may thereupon determine the amount of the compensation to be paid such person, as the facts in the case may appear: Provided, That in any such suit the United States may avail itself of any and all defenses, general and special, that might be pleaded by a defendant in an action for infringement, as set forth in title 60 of the Revised Statutes, or otherwise. Any final judgment rendered against the Commission under any provision of this section shall have like force and effect as a money judgment rendered against the United States by the Court of Claims in a suit in respect of which the United States has expressly agreed to be sued; and the amount of any such final judgment shall be paid out of any appropriation applicable to the case, if any such there be; and when no such appropriation exists said judgment shall be paid in the same manner as judgments rendered by the Court of Claims in cases under its general jurisdiction.

(e) Any party aggrieved by any final judgment in a proceeding under this section may appeal therefrom to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, and upon such appeal said court shall have power to review said judgment and affirm, revoke, or modify the same as upon appeals in other actions at law.

(f) Attorneys appointed by the Commission may appear for and represent the Commission before any Government agency or judicial tribunal with respect to any and all invention, patent, and research matters in which the Commission is involved.

(g) Any person who has made, or hereafter makes, any invention or discovery utilizing fissionable materials or atomic energy designed or especially adapted for use as or in a military weapon, shall file with the Commission a report containing a complete description thereof. The report covering any such invention or discovery shall be filed on or before whichever of the following is the latest: (1) The sixtieth day after the date of enactment of this act; (2) the sixtieth day after completion of such invention or discovery; or (3) the sixtieth day after such person first discovers, or first has reason to believe that such invention or discovery is specially useful as or in such a weapon.

On page 40, line 16, to strike out all after "laws." down to and including "court." in line 19; on page 41, line 14, to strike out all after "this" down to and including all of line 20, and insert "Act; and"; on page 41, line 21, to strike out "(9)" and insert "(8)"; on page 43, after line 18 to insert:

JUDICIAL REVIEW AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEDURE

SEC. 14. (a) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 12 of the Administrative Procedure Act (Public Law 404, 79th Cong., approved June 11, 1946) which provide when such act shall take effect, section 10 of such act (relating to judicial review) shall be applicable, upon the enactment of this act, to any agency action under the authority of this act or by any agency created by or under the provisions of this act.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (a), no provision of this act shall be held to supersede or modify the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act.

(c) As used in this section the terms "agency action" and "agency" shall have the same meaning as is assigned to such terms in the Administrative Procedure Act.

On page 43, line 20, to strike out "14" and insert "15"; on page 43, line 21, to strike out "nine" and insert "eleven"; on page 43, line 23, to strike out "nine" and insert "eleven"; on page 44, line 1, to strike out "five" and insert "six"; on page 46, line 2, to strike out "15" and insert "16"; on page 46, line 4, to strike out "or 6 (b)" and insert "6 (b), or 11 (g)"; on page 46, line 10, after "by" where it appears the first time to insert "death or by"; on page 46, line 11, after "not" to insert "less than ten years or"; on page 46, line 15, to strike out "(c)" and insert "(b)"; on page 46, line 15, to strike out all after "(c)" down to and including "(2)" in line 16; on page 46, line 22, after "by" to insert "death, or by"; on page 46, line 23, after "not" to insert "less than ten years or"; on page 47, line 9, strike out "shall" and insert "may"; on page 47, line 9, to strike out "without bond"; on page 47, after line 18, to insert:

(e) All persons associated in any capacity, with the development and control of atomic energy, under the Commission and all violations of this act, shall be investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice.

On page 47, line 20, to strike out "16" and insert "17"; on page 48, line 4, to strike out "17" and insert "18"; on page 48, after line 7, insert:

(b) The term "nuclear fission" shall be construed to mean that process which takes place in nuclei wherein the nucleus is split into fragments, at least two of which contain a substantial fraction of the mass of the original nucleus.

On page 48, line 8, to strike out "(b)" and insert "(c)"; on page 48, line 15, to strike out "(c)" and insert "(d)"; on page 48, line 24, to strike out "(d)" and insert "(e)"; on page 49, line 2, after "States" to insert "and the Canal Zone"; on page 49, line 3, to strike out "(e)" and insert "(f)"; on page 49, line 10, to strike out "(f)" and insert "(g)"; on page 49, line 17, to strike out "(g)" and insert "(h)"; on page 49, line 19, after "device", to insert "peculiarly adapted for and"; on page 49, line 23, to strike out "18. (a)" and insert "19."; on page 50, to strike out lines 11 to 16, inclusive; on page 50, line 18, to strike out "19" and insert "20"; and on page 51, line 2, to strike out "20" and insert "21".

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, I move that the Senate disagree to the amendments of the House; ask a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the President pro tempore appointed Mr. McMAHON, Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado, Mr. RUSSELL, Mr. VANDENBERG, and Mr. AUSTIN conferees on the part of the Senate at the conference.

Mr. McMAHON subsequently said: Mr. President, earlier in the day the Chair appointed the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN] as one of the conferees on Senate bill 1717. I am informed that the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN] will find it impossible to be present tomorrow and Wednesday. In view of the exigencies of the situation and the necessity for speedy action, I desire to obtain unanimous consent to have the Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN] appointed as one of the conferees, in place of the Senator from Vermont.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request of the Senator from Connecticut to have the Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN] substituted for the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN] as one of the conferees on the part of the Senate in regard to the measure pertaining to the control of atomic energy? The Chair hears none, and, without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent to have the bill printed showing the House amendments numbered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

DEATH OF WILLIAM STANLEY, FORMER ASSISTANT TO THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, on Saturday last William Stanley, a beloved son of Maryland, was called to final rest. Bill Stanley, as he was affectionately known, had the priceless gift of friendship. His splendid family is today joined by hundreds of people, high and low, in mourning his passing.

I first met Bill Stanley when I went to work for the Department of Justice in 1933. I became his assistant. His was the strong right arm of a great Attorney General, Homer Cummings, in the reorganization of the Department of Justice during the exciting years 1933–1935. The Department at that time was suddenly called upon to meet the changed conditions of the times, and no one gave more valiant and valuable service to his immediate superior, the Attorney General, and to the President, in that work than Mr. Stanley in the post of the Assistant to the Attorney General.

Mr. President, we are now inclined to forget that prior to 1933 the Federal Bureau of Investigation was a comparatively small and unknown division of the Department of Justice. Its agents did not have the power of arrest nor the right to bear arms, and until the Congress defined, at the request of Mr. Cummings, an entirely new area of Federal jurisdiction over criminals who plied their trade across State lines, the Nation was sorely beset with gangs of kidnapers, bank robbers, and bandits who roamed the country, looting and murdering it seemed almost at will. These were the days of the Dillingers and the Van Meters, of the Baby Face Nelsons and the Pretty Boy Floyds, and dozens of others of like ilk.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation, under the efficient and intelligent direction of its leader, Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, brought these criminals to book after the Attorney General had so brilliantly marked and laid out the course and after Bill Stanley had acted as the liaison officer with the Congress in securing the necessary legislative authority. This great unit of the Department of Justice, as did all other units of the Department of Justice, functioned well under the skilled supervision of Mr. Stanley, and the results so splendidly achieved will forever stand as a monument to his memory.

The Assistant to the Attorney General fills a most responsible post. His is the post of general superintendent of the Department of Justice, answerable only to the Attorney General. His is the responsibility for maintaining liaison with the Congress. It was because of this part of his duties that he came into such close and intimate contact with so many Members of this body who learned to respect his ability, fairness, and integrity.

His friendly nature and capacity for service to his country won him the affection of scores of the Members of the Senate.

In 1935 he resigned from the Department of Justice to resume the practice of his profession here in Washington. His fine talents inevitably drew a large clientele. After his beloved chief retired in 1939 as Attorney General it was entirely appropriate and natural that they should form a partnership, which they did under the name of Cummings & Stanley. Their firm has become one of the leading law firms of the country.

And now in the prime of his life, Bill Stanley has left us. His wife and children and his partners and associates will be joined by his ex-fellow workers in the Department of Justice and his hundreds of friends, leaders in the Nation's business and political life, in grief because of his untimely death.

His was a life illuminated by kindness to his fellow men and service to his country.

May his soul rest in peace.

Mr. RADCLIFFE. Mr. President, I have listened with a feeling of deep appreciation to the eloquent tribute paid by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. McMAHON] to a very distinguished Marylander, Mr. William Stanley, whose friendship I enjoyed throughout his life. Mr. Stanley's years were all too few in number, but they were busy, useful ones. He succeeded in accomplishing in a brilliant manner many things which were most assuredly worth while. The commanding Nation-wide position which he held at the bar and in the confidence and affections of people of our country was in natural recognition of his integrity, his ability, and of the important and highly constructive role which he played in the State of Maryland and in the Nation. His loss is indeed a very serious one.

GENERAL EISENHOWER'S REVIEW OF ACTION OF SUPREME HEADQUARTERS SUSPENDING PRESS CREDENTIAL OF EDWARD KENNEDY

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, I should like to make a matter of record the latest developments in a case which has been a subject of great interest to the public and especially to the newspaper world. I refer to an Associated Press dispatch sent from France by Edward Kennedy on May 7, 1945, which gave the American people the news of the unconditional surrender of Germany.

I requested General Eisenhower to review the action of Supreme Headquarters in suspending the press credential of Mr. Kennedy, which was done on the grounds that he dispatched this news before its sending was authorized. General Eisenhower agreed to do so and I am now happy to have the opportunity to announce that he has removed any bar which might prevent Mr. Kennedy from working with the War Department and the Army in his profession as a writer.

General Eisenhower's action, as I understand it, does not rescind the decision of Supreme Headquarters in the case, which the War Department still believes was justified, but, nevertheless, restores to Mr. Kennedy the opportunity of resuming, without prejudice, his work as a military correspondent should he desire to do so in the future. General Eisenhower also has told me that he wishes Mr. Kennedy every success.

To further clarify the case, I would like to submit for the RECORD several documents some of which have not been previously made public. These are:

First. The text of the official German announcement of the unconditional surrender, broadcast publicly by the Doenitz government over the radio at Flensburg, Denmark, as monitored and distributed for immediate publication by the British Ministry of Information.

Second. A War Department memorandum in which Lt. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, who was chief of staff at Supreme Headquarters at the time of the surrender, states that the Flensburg announcement was "made pursuant to orders from Supreme Headquarters that the German troops were to be informed by every possible means of the surrender and directed to cease resistance."

Third. A letter from the War Department's Bureau of Public Relations to Representative ALBERT GORE establishing the fact that the Flensburg announcement was made 1 hour and 54 minutes before the Kennedy story of the surrender appeared on the news wire.

Fourth. A statement by Relman Morin, a member of Kennedy's staff in Paris, that he was present at a conference at which Kennedy informed the chief American censor at Supreme Headquarters that since the surrender had already been made public by the Germans, he considered the story released and intended to send his dispatch.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there may be printed in the RECORD, following my statement, the documents to which I have referred.

There being no objection, the documents were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TEXT OF VON KROSIGK STATEMENT; PLEDGES RESPECT FOR TREATIES

LONDON, May 7.—Following is the text of the broadcast of the German Foreign Minister Ludwig Schwerin von Krosigk as recorded by the British Ministry of Information:

"German men and women: The high command of the armed forces has today at the order of Grand Admiral Doenitz declared the unconditional surrender of all fighting German troops.

"As the leading minister of the Reich Government which the Admiral of the Fleet (Doenitz) has appointed for the winding up of all military tasks, I turn at this tragic moment of our history to the German Nation.

"GERMANY HAS SUCCUMBED

"After a heroic fight of almost 6 years of incomparable hardness Germany has succumbed to the overwhelming power of her enemies. To continue the war would only mean senseless bloodshed and a futile disintegration.

"A government which has a feeling of responsibility for the future of its nation was compelled to act on the collapse of all physical and material forces and to demand of the enemy the cessation of hostilities.

"It was the noblest task of admiral of the fleet and of the government supporting him—after the terrible sacrifices which the war demanded—to save in the last phase of the war the lives of a maximum number of fellow countrymen. That the war was not ended immediately, simultaneously in the west and in the east, is to be explained by this reason alone.

"We end this gravest hour of the German Nation and its Reich.

"GERMANS MUST FACE FATE

"In this gravest hour of the German Nation and its Reich we bow in deep reverence before the dead of this war. Their sacrifices place the highest obligations on us. Our sympathy goes first to our soldiers. It goes out above all to the wounded, the bereaved, and to all on whom this struggle has inflicted blows.

"No one must be under any illusions about the severity of the terms to be imposed on the German people by our enemies. We must now face our fate squarely and unquestionably. Nobody can be in any doubt that the future will be difficult for each one of us and will exact sacrifices from us in every sphere.

"We must accept this burden and stand loyally by the obligations we have undertaken. But we must not despair and fall into mute resignation. Once again we must set ourselves to stride along the path through the dark future. These are the factors guaranteeing the best state: unity, justice, and liberty.

"URGES RECOGNITION OF LAW

"From the collapse of the past let us preserve and save one thing—unity, the ideas of the national community, which in the years of war have found their highest expression in the spirit of comradeship at the front and readiness to help one another in all the distress which has inflicted the homeland.

"Shall we retain this unity and not again split up under the stress? We must make right the basis of our nation. In our nation justice shall be the supreme law and the guiding principle.

"We must also recognize law as the basis of all relations between the nations: we must recognize it and respect it from inner conviction.

"TREATIES TO BE SACRED

"Respect for concluded treaties will be as sacred as the aim of our nation to belong to the European family of nations as a member of which we want to mobilize all human, moral, and material forces in order to heal the dreadful wounds which the war has caused.

"Then we may hope that the atmosphere of hatred which today surrounds Germany all over the world will give place to a spirit of reconciliation among the nations, without which the world cannot recover.

"Then we hope that we will again receive the freedom without which no nation can lead a bearable and dignified existence. Let us devote the future of our nation to the meditation of the innermost and best forces of the German spirit, which has given the world lasting achievements and values.

"To our pride in the heroic struggle of our nation let us link (several words missing) of the Christian western civilization to make to the honest work of peace a contribution which shall be worthy of the best traditions of our nation.

"May God not leave us in our efforts. May He bless our difficult task."

At the conclusion the announcer said: "We will now observe 3 minutes of silence."

The following memorandum was dictated by Lt. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith just before his departure for Moscow in reply to several questions asked by an editor interested in the case.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
WAR DEPARTMENT GENERAL STAFF,
Washington, D. C., March 14, 1946.

Memorandum for Lieutenant Colonel Root.
Subject: German broadcast of surrender.

1. Ludwig Schwerin von Krosigk did officially announce the unconditional surrender of Germany in a broadcast to the German people and to the world from Flensburg. I believe that this announcement was made on May 7. The so-called Doenitz government had not at this time been taken into custody and this announcement was made pursuant to orders from Supreme Headquarters that the German troops were to be informed by every possible means of the surrender and directed to cease resistance, which amounted to a great deal more than "isolated German pockets." At least two German armies were continuing strongly to resist the Russians at the time, and one army commander had indicated that he would not accept the order for surrender. We were surprised at the Krosigk broadcast since we had expected that any such announcement would be made either by a military commander such as Keitel or by Doenitz.

2. I do not know what Mr. McCreary means by disciplinary action. We were much too concerned with disarming and taking into custody as prisoners of war a couple of million German soldiers to pay much attention to individuals. We simply arrested the entire Doenitz government at the first suitable opportunity.

W. B. S.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
BUREAU OF PUBLIC RELATIONS,
Washington, March 15, 1946.

Hon. ALBERT GORE,
United States House of Representatives.

DEAR MR. GORE: In the absence of General Parks, who is at present on a trip overseas, I am replying to your letter relative to the Flensburg surrender broadcast.

Our records reveal the following information:

Count von Krosigk broadcast the surrender announcement from Flensburg, Denmark, on May 7, 1945, at 8:03 a. m. eastern war time. The AP dispatch appeared on the wire on May 7, 1945, at 9:57 a. m. eastern war time.

I have been unable to find any indication that Allied military authorities authorized the broadcast. Although it is the impression here the broadcast was made without the consent of the Allies, I have queried the theater for further information on this point. It may be quite difficult, if not impossible, to obtain accurate information from German military authorities.

If I obtain any additional information from the theater, I shall forward it to you immediately.

Sincerely yours,

JOSEPH F. BATTLEY,
Brigadier General, G. S. C., Acting Director.

STATEMENT OF RELMAN MORIN, A MEMBER OF THE PARIS STAFF OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS, TO EDWARD KENNEDY

The first indication that we had that the story might break came at noon on Monday when you returned from Rheims. A French correspondent told me he had heard that de Gaulle was going to make an important speech at 3 o'clock, that the speech was already being written, and that it was generally understood it was about the armistice.

It was about 2:30 or 2:45 when you and I returned to the office together. Gudebrod was on the telephone as we came in. He said: "The office (meaning the office in the Incoming Service) has just had a flash from the Flensburg radio about the armistice." He was then getting the transcript of the message. He said: "The German Government has broadcast the fact of the armistice to all its armed forces everywhere, telling them to cease operations and ordering submarines and shipping to the nearest allied ports to surrender."

It was then that you attempted to telephone General Allen at his office and to reach Colonel Warden in his office. Both attempts were unsuccessful.

You then went downstairs to the office of Lt. Col. R. H. Merrick, American chief censor. I stayed in the office until Gudebrod had finished writing down the text of the Flensburg broadcast. I then came downstairs and found you talking to Merrick in his office. I handed Merrick the written text of the German broadcast.

He read it and as I remember his reply, he said: "I can't help it, who is announcing the armistice and when. The SHAEF release date still stands. There is nothing I can do about it." You replied: "But how can there be any longer question of military security, since the Germans themselves have announced it?" He said: "That may or may not be true, but there is nothing we can do about it."

You then said: "All right, but I give you warning now I am going to release the story, I see no further reason for SHAEF to withhold it."

I don't remember exactly Merrick's reply, but it was something to the effect: "You do as you please."

Merrick later told me that he believed you had already transmitted all or part of the story before you ever came down there, and I assured him that that was not so, that it was only after hearing the Flensburg broadcast and after trying to get in touch with General Allen and Colonel Warden that you had come down to see him, not a word had gone before that time.

We then came upstairs again and you began telephoning.

RELMAN MORIN.

SIDNEY HILLMAN—ARTICLE FROM THE ADVANCE

[Mr. MEAD asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "Labor Statesman," printed in the July 15, 1946, edition of the publication the Advance, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE PEARL HARBOR REPORT—EDITORIAL COMMENT

[Mr. LUCAS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD the following editorials commenting on the Pearl Harbor report: An editorial entitled "The Last Word," published in the New York Herald Tribune of July 22, 1946; an editorial entitled "Pearl Harbor Findings," published in the Washington Evening Star of July 21, 1946; an editorial entitled "The Congressional Finding on the Pearl Harbor Disaster," published in the Baltimore Sun of July 22, 1946; and an editorial entitled "The Pearl Harbor Report," published in the New York Times of July 21, 1946, which appear in the Appendix.]

FINANCIAL OPERATIONS OF THE WAR SHIPPING ADMINISTRATION — EDITORIAL FROM ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

[Mr. AIKEN asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "WSA's Floundering Figures," published in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of July 19, 1946, which appears in the Appendix.]

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States submitting a nomination was communicated to the Senate by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed without amendment the following bills of the Senate:

S. 2142. An act to provide for two heads of departments of military science and tactics in the public schools of the District of Columbia; and

S. 2352. An act to authorize increases in the salary rates of teachers, school officers, and other employees of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia whose pay is fixed and regulated by the District of Columbia Teachers' Salary Act of 1945, as amended.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2192) for the relief of Andre Dacharry.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3543) for the relief of the legal guardian of James Thompson, a minor.

The message also announced that the House insisted upon its amendments to the bill (S. 1236) to amend the Mineral Leasing Act of February 25, 1920, as amended, in order to promote the development of oil and gas on the public domain, and for other purposes, disagreed to by the Senate; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. PETERSON of Florida, Mr. WHITE, Mr. FERNANDEZ, Mr. LECOMPTE, and Mr. BARRETT of Wyoming were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message further announced that the House insisted upon its amendments to the bill (S. 1717) for the development and control of atomic energy, disagreed to by the Senate; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. MAY, Mr. THOMASON, Mr. BROOKS, Mr. CLASON, and Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

TITLE TO LANDS BENEATH TIDAL AND NAVIGABLE WATERS

The Senate resumed consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 225) to quiet the titles of the respective States, and others, to lands beneath tidewaters and lands beneath navigable waters within the boundaries of such States and to prevent further clouding of such titles.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. At this point the Chair reads the following unanimous-consent agreement:

Ordered, That on Monday, July 22, 1946, at not later than 3 o'clock p. m., the Senate proceed, without further debate, to vote upon any amendments that may be pending or that may be proposed and upon the final passage of House Joint Resolution 225, the so-called tidewater land resolution, and that the time for debate be equally divided, to be controlled respectively by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN] for the proponents, and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] for the opponents of the measure.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President——

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, from now on until 3 o'clock the time is under the control of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN] and myself.

Mr. WILEY. The Senator from Nevada has yielded me 15 minutes.

Mr. BARKLEY. Very well. The time from now on is charged to someone.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wisconsin is recognized.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, should the Congress take affirmative action in accordance with the joint resolution reported out by the Judiciary Committee, as amended?

My answer is "Yes."

Why?

(A) By passing this joint resolution we are defining a policy which is a legislative matter. Congress has never hesitated to do that.

(B) We are acting upon the petition of a majority of the States in this country, represented by their duly elected officers—in my case, the governor, the attorney general, and officials of the city of Milwaukee.

(C) We are restating in this policy the law of this land which, in my opinion, for over a century has been the accepted and the declared policy of the United States, and upon which the action now in the Supreme Court operates as a trespass.

(D) By passing the joint resolution we are doing away with a multiplicity of litigation. A decision in this case by the Supreme Court would be no more determinative than the decision in the Oregon case of Shively v. Bowlby (152 U. S. 1), though in my opinion the résumé of the law in that case is applicable to the pending case and states the law of the land.

(E) By declaring this policy we are giving the green light not only to California, but to municipalities and States which have been affected by this cloud upon the titles of reclaimed land and tidal lands.

Until the oil issue came up, neither this Government nor any officer thereof ever made any claim or took any action that indicated that the Federal Government had any title to tidal lands. In fact, in 34 cases the Federal Government dealt with the State of California for land that it needed just as it has done with other States along our entire seacoast.

While the action pending involves the State of California and the Federal Government, it is clear that this is the first attack upon a well-settled policy, and therefore it calls for the action of the policy-making branch of the Government—the legislature.

We should bear in mind that Secretary Ickes stated that if the Government won, the royalty it would charge would be substantially the same as that which the State now gets, so there is no advantage or disadvantage to any oil companies. That takes oil out of the picture. California's royalties amount to approximately $4,000,000 a year.

I repeat, that until oil was found on the land, or until the oil question came up and the Government took the oil, there was never any question throughout our long decades of American Government as to the right of Government in tidal lands.

Montesquieu said:

> The deterioration of every government begins with the decay of the principles upon which it was founded.

The principles involved in this case are stated in Shively v. Bowlby (152 U. S. 1). That case involved tidal lands in Oregon, not California. The supreme court of Oregon held, as stated on page 52:

> In the case at bar, the lands in controversy are below high-water mark of the Columbia River where the tide ebbs and flows.

Upon the admission of the State into the Union, the tidal lands became the property of the State and subject to its jurisdiction and disposal.

The Supreme Court of the United States, after reviewing every case that it thought had application, summed up its conclusions as follows:

Lands under the tidewaters are incapable of cultivation or improvement in the manner of lands above high-water mark. They are of great value to the public for the purposes of commerce, navigation, and fisheries. We could add oil. Their improvement by individuals, when permitted, is incidental or subordinate to the public use and right. Therefore the title and the control of them are vested in the sovereign for the benefit of the whole people.

At common law, the title and the dominion in lands flowed by the tide were in the king for the benefit of the nation. Upon the settlement of the Colonies, like rights passed to the grantees in the royal charters, in trust for the communities to be established. Upon the American Revolution, these rights charged with a like trust, were vested in the original States within their respective borders, subject to the rights surrendered by the Constitution to the United States.

Upon the acquisition of a Territory by the United States, whether by cession from one of the States, or by treaty with a foreign country, or by discovery and settlement, the same title and dominion passed to the United States, for the benefit of the whole people, and in trust for the several States to be ultimately created out of the Territory.

The new States admitted into the Union since the adoption of the Constitution have the same rights as the original States in the tidewaters, and in the lands under them, within their respective jurisdictions. The title and rights of riparian or littoral proprietors in the soil below high-water mark, therefore, are governed by the laws of the several States, subject to the right granted to the United States by the Constitution.

The United States, while they hold the counry as a Territory, having all the powers both of a national and of municipal government, may grant, for appropriate purposes, titles or rights in the soil below high-water mark of tidewaters. But they have never done so by general laws; and, unless in some case of international duty or public exigency, have acted upon the policy, as most in accordance with the interest of the people and with the object for which the Territories were acquired, of leaving the administration and disposition of the sovereign rights in navigable waters, and in the soil under them, to the control of the States, respectively, when organized and admitted into the Union.

Grants by Congress of portions of the public lands within a Territory to settlers thereon, though bordering on or bounded by navigable waters, convey, of their own force, no title or right below high-water mark, and do not impair the title and dominion of the future State when created; but leave the question of the use of the shores by the owners of uplands to the soverign control of each State, subject only to the rights vested by the Constitution in the United States.

Mr. President, applying these particular laws to this case, the Court continues as follows:

The donation land claim, bounded by the Columbia River, upon which the plaintiff in error relies, includes no title or right in the land below high-water mark; and the statutes of Oregon, under which the defendants in error hold, are a constitutional and legal exercise by the State of Oregon of its dominion over the lands under navigable waters. (Shively v. Bowlby (152 U. S. 1) p. 57–58).

Mr. President, in the Shively case, from which I have quoted quite extensively, question arose as to who had the title—the person who got it from the Federal Government when Oregon was a Territory, or the one who got it from the State after it became a State. The Court met that issue squarely, and said that beginning at the point where the tide ebbs and flows, the person who got title from the Government got title to that which was beyond that point, but that the man who got title from the State got title to that which was from that point on in.

Mr. President, as a legislator in an independent branch of this Government, I have no hesitancy in standing by these principles and restating them in this joint resolution—redefining and restating the policy that has obtained in this country for over 100 years. In so doing, I shall be performing one of my legislative functions.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, last week we had some discussion relative to the question of title to the land off the shores of California. I stated then, and I reiterate today, that ever since their admission into statehood on September 9, 1850, the people of California have believed that they had as clear a title to the shore lands on out to the 3-mile limit as they had over the great central valleys of the Sacramento and the San Joaquin.

I wish to read from the Constitution of California of 1849 a provision which subsequently was adopted in a later constitution of the State. The constitution of 1849 was the one which furnished a part of the compact between the people of California and the people of the United States, as represented by the Federal Government, at the time when California was admitted to the Union on a coequal basis with every other State of the Union up to that time, including the Original Thirteen States. I quote from the Constitution of California, article XII, section 1:

SEC. 1. The boundary of the State of California shall be as follows:

Commencing at the point of intersection of 42nd degree of north latitude with the 120th degree of longitude west from Greenwich, and running south on the line of said 120th degree of west longitude until it intersects the 39th degree of north latitude; thence running in a straight line in a southeasterly direction to the River Colorado, at a point where it intersects the 35th degree of north latitude; thence down the middle of the channel of said river to the boundary line between the United States and Mexico, as established by the treaty of May 30, 1848—

Mr. President, I call attention at this point to the following language:

thence running west and along said boundary line, to the Pacific Ocean, and extending therein 3 English miles; thence, running in a northwesterly direction and following the direction of the Pacific coast, to the 42nd degree of north latitude; thence, on the line of said 42nd degree of north latitude, to the place of beginning. Also the islands, harbors, and bays along and adjacent to the coast.

There is simply no question of doubt whatsoever, Mr. President, but that this compact relative to the boundaries of the State of California included the coastal area of California 3 miles out into the ocean.

Now, after almost 100 years of our existence as a State of this Union, for the first time an administrative official of the Government brings up a doctrine claiming title to our tideland. This action not only affects the sovereignty of California but affects the sovereignty of every other State of the Union. It is something which should not be countenanced by this policy-determining body of the Government of the United States.

Mr. President, let me say that the ownership of the submerged lands beneath the sea within the territorial boundaries of the States is far more than an academic question to the people of the coastal States.

The public interest and welfare of the communities along the seacoast demand jurisdiction over, and control of, the subsoil and sea bed adjacent to their shores.

The regulation and use of that property right is a local affair, so directly affecting the coastal communities that it cannot in any conscience be separated from them. By State constitutions and statutes their interest and control are recognized in innumerable cases.

The doctrine advanced by certain Federal officials would create an intolerable situation. Every coastal community has ordinances controlling the use of its ocean front. Millions of dollars have been spent in development of beaches, recreation centers, parks, highways, and other facilities on the ocean shores for the convenience and enjoyment of their citizens.

It is intolerable to believe that, under strange legal principles, the Federal Government could nullify all the interests of the seaboard communities.

The interests and needs of the local community cannot be regulated from Washington. Time after time it has been argued on the floor of this Senate that the question of local community affairs should not and cannot be controlled by centralized Federal bureaus.

In dozens of coastal States and communities, highways, breakwaters, parks, airports, and other developments have been constructed seaward of the line of low-water mark. Shall those properties, essential to the welfare of the people of the coastal communities and States, be taken over by the Federal Government without compensation?

The great inland States know the vital importance of controlling their water fronts. Those bordering on the Great Lakes—New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Minnesota—insist, and properly so, that they own the bed of the lake out to the center of the lake, or to the international boundary line.

Would Cleveland, Buffalo, Chicago, Detroit, or Milwaukee consent to Federal control of their immediate water fronts? Or would those great cities say that questions of health, sanitation, recreation, commerce, and industry demanded their control, not alone of their immediate ports, but of the waters in front of them?

Would Chicago agree that it should be stripped of its great water front, of its Outer Drive, of Grant Park, and of other areas, because they were constructed beyond the original shore line? Would Chicago agree that the Federal Government should have control of those waters, and the unrestricted right to erect in them any structures it saw fit, without regard to zoning or other laws—structures which might entirely nullify the local uses and needs?

In California, the people, through their legislature, have prohibited drilling for oil from derricks erected on piers over the open sea, claiming that those structures were unsightly, and that oil seeping from them polluted the beaches. Should California be deprived of the right to control such activity as this in the waters immediately adjacent to its coast?

No, Mr. President; the control of the subsoil and sea bed immediately adjacent to the shores of Atlantic City is as important to that community as the control of the bed of the Hudson River is to New York State—and to the city of Albany.

Mr. President, we do not live under a dictatorship where the will of the central power is the only law. We live in a representative republic, a land in which the common needs of the people have for centuries guided and developed the law itself. Our great commonwealth grows directly out of those needs.

The ownership of the submerged lands beneath navigable waters, salt or fresh, is not an accident; it does not grow out of a whim of some departmental executive.

I repeat, Mr. President, that the people of California, the Governor, the legislature, both United States Senators, California's entire delegation in the United States House of Representatives, every municipal body of California, every port authority, and all civic groups up and down the State resent this attack upon her sovereignty just as much as they would resent an attempt to come into the State and seize one of California's great central valleys.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield in order that I may make an inquiry?

Mr. KNOWLAND. I yield.

Mr. DONNELL. Immediately before the State of California was admitted to the Union, in whom, in the Senator's opinion, was the title to the 3-mile area sea coastwise along the shore of what is now California?

Mr. KNOWLAND. Prior to the time California was seized from Mexico during the Mexican War I assume that the area to which the Senator refers belong to the people of the State, or the Government of Mexico, depending on the constitutional provisions. The question which the Senator has propounded is a legal one and I may say, frankly, that I would not care to try to answer it at this time.

Mr. DONNELL. In the interim between seizure from Mexico and the admission of the State of California to the Union, does the Senator know whether or not the United States Government exercised jurisdiction over what is now the State of California?

Mr. KNOWLAND. It most certainly did.

Mr. DONNELL. Is the Senator at this moment prepared to express an opinion as to whether or not the title to the 3-mile strip coastwise along California, during the interim between the acquisition from Mexico by the United States and the admission of California into the Union, was in the United States Government?

Mr. KNOWLAND. I am not prepared to answer the question. I assume that title was in the United States Government.

Mr. DONNELL. California was admitted to the Union in 1850, was it not?

Mr. KNOWLAND. It was admitted on September 9, 1850.

Mr. DONNELL. By an act of Congress, California was admitted into the Union on September 9, 1850, and approved on that date. I invite the attention of the Senator to the following language which I believe to be a correct statement of the contents of the enabling act.

> Whereas the people of California have presented a constitution and asked admission into the Union, which constitution was submitted to Congress by the President of the United States, by a message dated February 13, 1950, and which, on due examination, is found to be republican in its form of government:
>
> Be it enacted, etc., That the State of California shall be one, and is hereby declared to be one of the United States of America, and admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States in all respects whatever—

Mr. KNOWLAND. I wonder if the Senator will permit me to interrupt him right there. In other words, according to the language which the Senator has read, I would assume that California came into the Union on an equal basis with all the rest of the States, including the original 13 States.

Mr. DONNELL. I appreciate the Senator's point, and I desire to invite his further attention to the act of admission, from which I read:

> SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That until the Representatives in Congress shall be apportioned according to an actual enumeration of the inhabitants of the United States, the State of California shall be entitled to two Representatives in Congress.
>
> SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the said State of California is admitted into the Union upon the express condition that the people of the said State, through their legislature or otherwise, shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the public lands within its limits, and shall pass no law and do no act whereby the title of the United States to, and right to dispose of, the same shall be impaired or questioned.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Does the Senator maintain that there are any court decisions which hold that public lands, or the public domain as such, are lands under navigable streams or under tidewaters?

Mr. DONNELL. I am not in position to answer the Senator's question with regard to that point. I cannot say whether the courts have so held. But, to my mind, the language of the section which I have read raises immediately the question of whether or not, when California was admitted on an equal footing with the original States in all respects, she was at the same time so admitted upon a further subsequent express condition mentioned in the act, namely, "that the people of the said State * * * shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the public lands within its limits, and shall pass no law, and do no act whereby the title of the United States to, and right to dispose of, the same shall be impaired or questioned."

